"A Subscriber's" request has been anticipated the whole of the alterations affecting assurances occasioned by the recent Stamp Act are treated upon in the last part of Mr. Hughes's Concise Precedents, which is now going through the press

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1852

LAW TIMES OFFICE,
Friday Night

THE NEW MINISTRY.

The loss of Lord St. Leonards will be deeply regretted by the whole Profession, irrespective of politics and party. An abler Judge, a more industrious Legislator, a more upright Chancellor, England has never seen and is not like to see.

In the ranks of the Opposition there is one man only who, as an accomplished Lawyer, as a Whig and Liberal Law Reformer, as a mind well disciplined by years and acuteness, is fitted to succeed the great man by whom the woolsack has been vacated—that man is Mr. Bethell. Indeed, there is scarcely a conflicting claim to produce a moment's hesitation.

Sir A. Cockburn will, of course, resume his place as Attorney-General.

But there is the Peel party to be provided for. Will Mr. Roundell Palmer be selected as their Solicitor-General? He has the best title.

RESULTS OF RECENT REFORMS.

The results of the recent Reforms in the Practice of the Law are daily becoming more manifest; and experience has proved that our anticipations of their practical effects upon the Profession were not far wrong.

The first great fact that appears is a considerable increase in the number of suits, and a considerable decrease in the number of trials This seeming anomaly is readily accounted for.

Three causes are operating to increase the number of suits.

First. The diminished costs.

Second. The increased facilities for procuring judgment by means of the specially-indorsed writs.

Third. The preference which is now so widely given to the Superior Courts over the County Courts for the recovery of debts and undisputed demands

Two causes are operating to diminish the number of trials.

First. The almost total abolition of technical objections.

Second The improved law of evidence, which insures the facts of a case being laid before the jury, and thus destroys all hope of a fight without merits.

The practical effect of these three considerations is in almost all cases, to induce a settlement without the cost of a trial. Formerly, the great majority of cases were determined on some other point than their merits. So many were the pitfalls laid for suitors by the perplexities of pleading, and the absurdities of the law of evidence, that it was often worth while to fight even with a bad cause, upon the chance of a victory in some one of the many skirmishes which preceded the trial, or the technical objections that might be raised to evidence at the trial. We remember well the time when the art of an Advocate consisted in dexterously shutting out evidence by objections to its admissibility, and when the issue of a trial almost always turned, not upon the true merits of the case itself, but upon the success with which the actual facts were intercepted before they could reach the jury. Of course this was a great encouragement to litigants to proceed to trial, each hoping to trip up the other by dexterity during some part of the tedious processes, that were capable of almost indefinite extension.

It is not so now. Litigants know that there is no chance of success by stratagem; that if they proceed to trial it must be upon the strength of their facts—and that they must stand or fall by the merits of their case. But if men differ only upon facts, they and their Attorneys know that the truth may be almost as well ascertained by a friendly interview between the Attorneys, or by the intervention of an arbitrator, as by incurring the cost of a judge and jury, so there is a compromise or a settlement somehow, and there is an end of the action.

It is a most false imputation upon the Attorneys that they encourage litigation. On the contrary, it is well known to all who have ever been in the secrets of an Attorney's office, or who have had any intercourse with them professionally, that, with the rarest exceptions, they are extremely averse to litigation. Ninety-nine Attorneys out of a hundred would not carry any case into court if they could help it: they do not like the responsibility and anxiety, for which the small profits to be gained by it do not remunerate them. If the Attorneys had their own way, and it were not for the obstinacy of their clients, we believe that, instead of a diminution only of trials, there would be a cessation of them altogether. Every case would be settled out of court.

Hence we anticipate a continued increase in the number of writs issued, and a continued decrease in the number of causes to be tried.

And the practical operation of this upon the business is, and will more and more become, that which we ventured to prophesy. The Attorneys will greatly benefit, the Bar will be greatly injured. In every case there must be an Attorney: a Barrister will be wanted only in those that go to trial. The increase in the former will more than compensate to the Attorney for any diminution in particular fees; the decrease in the latter will decrease the demand for Barristers.

And not only does the loss of the Bar arise from fewer trials, but simplified procedure has made the help of Counsel unnecessary in the processes that precede trial. In all ordinary cases the Attorney will now prepare his own pleadings. The only occasions on which Counsel will be required will be to advise on evidence, and to conduct the case at the trial. But the number whom this will employ must be few, as the Advocates in every Court are few, and this is the work of the Advocate only.

Therefore we see no reason, in the practical experience of the reformed procedure, so far as the experiment has been tried, to modify the opinion we formerly expressed that the Bar is in a state of decline, and that it will no longer afford a maintenance for a tenth part of its present members. What its future is like to be is a curious and interesting speculation, on which, perhaps, we may adventure shortly.

LEGAL DISTRESS.

Our respected contemporary, the Legal Observer, asserts that, notwithstanding the great increase in the number of writs issued, the Attorneys will suffer much from the changes in the law.

Our remarks as to the effect of these changes upon the two branches of the Profession were made with reference chiefly to the Attorneys in the country, and to those in London not connected with agency business. Undoubtedly all the agency offices have suffered most severely, and must yet suffer more from the changes made, and to be made The tendency of every reform is to diminish the work to be done in London, and increase the work to be done in the country. If law is simplified, the country Attorney advises without the aid of Counsel. If procedure is simplified, he draws his own pleadings, and conducts his own action. If he goes to the County Court, he pockets all the profit of the business, such as it is. Many country Attorneys now avail themselves of the railways to do their own work in London, and save agency. Others are doing the little they have to do through the post-office. From these and other causes there is an immense and growing decline in agency business. But we suspect that the total sum of business transacted in all the country offices is greater than ever it was, and we are confident that it will increase, for the reasons that we have set forth in another article.

THE ATTORNEYS' TAX.

There is nothing like a little agitation. In taxation it is notorious that those who make the most complaint—in fact, who are most troublesome to the Government- are the first to obtain relief.

Thus it is, even when the grumbling tax-payers have nothing more to groan over than a burden borne in common with the rest of their countrymen.

But when a tax is undeniably partial and unjust; when it is inflicted upon a small class, and there is not to be found a shadow of an argument to support that infliction, agitation becomes a duty.

Still more, when the finance minister has declared in the House of Commons that the time has come when taxation should cease to have reference to classes, but that all burdens should be equally shared by all, according to their means. He has himself invited the oppressed classes to revolt against the wrong, and challenged them to bring to bear upon him the pressure from without, to compel him to carry out his own principles.

That is precisely the present position of the Attorneys' Tax. Mr. DISRAELI has pronounced against all class taxation. Ours is peculiarly a class tax. He is bound by his own declarations to give us relief. Certainly, we are bound to demand it of him in the loudest and most emphatic tone. He can no longer deny the justice of our claim; he can only plead his own incapacity to yield it, and that is a question of figures.

But, according to all probable prospect there will be no such incapacity as there appeared to be at first. It is tolerably certain (we write on Thursday) that, whatever the division, the Budget, as it is, cannot be carried. The needless sacrifice of two millions and a half to the brewers will be abandoned, and so will the increased house-tax. There will then remain a very considerable surplus which Mr. DISRAELI, or his successor will be enabled to apply to much more extended and beneficial purposes, and to the removal of many unjust and vexatious taxes. With that surplus in his hand, he will be able to repeal the Attorneys' Tax. According to its own declared principle, Parliament is bound to do so, if it has the ability, and the business of the Attorneys will now be to remind it of that duty.

We have reason to believe that the history of the Budget is this:—Mr. DISRAELI was desirous of making a popular one, by repealing a long list of petty but vexatious burdens, instead of dealing with malt and hops, and doubling the House Tax. But he was overborne by his colleagues, who insisted upon the malt duty being conceded to the agricultural interests. Among the rest, Mr. DISRAELI desired to repeal the Attorneys' Tax, but he was outvoted, and the unlucky Budget we have was substituted for his more popular, and, as the event has proved, more judicious one. It will be fortunate for all if the opposition shewn to the present scheme should end, as we suspect it will, in the substitution of Mr. DISRAELI's original scheme.

But, in the present dubious state of parties, the Attorneys must rely upon themselves alone. Let them keep their case steadily before Parliament, and any Government will be compelled to take it into consideration. Lord ROBERT GROSVENOR, we hear, purposes to reintroduce his twice-triumphant Bill before the House rises for the Christmas holidays. The recess must be occupied with an universal movement of the Attorneys, in the shape of petitions from towns and from individuals.

We shall watch with much curiosity the votes of honourable members now they have changed seats in the House. We suspect that many who opposed us before will be found voting for us, and not a few of those who were such good friends when the vote was against a government of their opponents will change their minds when called upon to vote against their own ministry.

We beg to suggest a different form of petition, adapted to present circumstances:—

To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled.

The humble petition of the practising Attorneys of the town of A. in the county of B.

Sheweth,

That your Petitioners are subject to a grievous tax, called the Certificate Duty, which they are required to pay in addition to the taxes which they pay in common with their fellow subjects.

That it has been declared by your Honourable House that class taxation ought to cease with class legislation.

Your Petitioners therefore pray your Honourable House to remove from them this unjust and partial tax.

AN ACTION AT LAW UNDER THE NEW PRACTICE. (a)

ARTICLE V.

PROCEEDINGS ON NON-APPEARANCE.

THE provision in the Common Law Procedure Act, giving to the plaintiff, in general terms, power to proceed in the action on the defendant's non-appearance, has been mentioned; but to enable him to do so, it is necessary that the indorsement of service of the writ (ante, p. 123) should have been made, otherwise he is not at liberty, in case of non-appearance, to proceed under the Act; and every affidavit of service of the writ must mention the day on which such indorsement was made. (Sec. 15.)

In addition to the general provision, however, the modes of proceeding on non-appearance are more specifically described by the recent Act. Before referring to the proceedings which follow when a writ, according to the form No. 1, 2, or 3, has been used, it will be more convenient to consider those which follow when the writ had the special indorsement on it.

1. TO WRIT SPECIALLY INDORSED.

In case of non-appearance by the defendant where the form of writ No. 4 has been used, the plaintiff may, on filing an affidavit of personal service of the writ of summons, or a Judge's order for leave to proceed under the Common Law Procedure Act, and a copy of the writ of summons, at once sign final judgment in the form contained in the schedule of that Act (on which judgment no proceeding in error will lie) for any sum not exceeding the sum indorsed on the writ, together with interest at the rate specified, if any, to the date of the judgment, and a sum for costs (to be fixed by the Masters of the Superior Courts, subject to the approval of the Judges thereof), unless the plaintiff claim more than such fixed sum; in which case the costs are to be taxed in the ordinary way; and the plaintiff may, upon such judgment, issue execution at the expiration of eight days from the last day for appearance, and not before. (Sec. 27.)

The affidavit of personal service may be in this form:—

In the Queen's Bench.

Between A. B. plaintiff, and C. D. defendant.

J. K. of (or J. K. clerk to E. F. gentleman, attorney for the above-named plaintiff), maketh oath and saith that he did, on the day of instant (or last), personally serve C. D. the above-named defendant, with a writ of summons which appeared to this deponent to have been regularly issued out of and under the seal of this honourable Court, at the suit of the above-named plaintiff, against the above-named defendant, and dated the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and , by delivering to the said C. D. a true copy of the said writ; to which said writ and the said copy a memorandum was subscribed, and due indorsements were made on each of them pursuant to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, and a true copy of which said writ, with the said memorandum and indorsements, is hereunto annexed, marked (A). And this deponent further saith that he did, pursuant to the said Act, on the day of instant (or last), indorse on the said writ the day of the month and week of the service thereof.

Sworn, &c.

There is a slight restriction as to the persons before whom this and similar affidavits may be made, for no affidavit of the service of process will be deemed sufficient, if made before the plaintiff's own attorney or his clerk (R. G. H. T. 2 Wm. 4, r. 3), and where an agent in town or attorney in the country is the attorney on the record, an affidavit sworn before the attorney in the country will not be received; and an affidavit sworn before an attorney's clerk will not be received in cases where it would not be receivable if sworn before the attorney himself; but this rule does not extend to affidavits to hold to bail. (Ib. r. 6.)

(a) By George Taylor, esq. Barrister-at-Law.

The order for leave to proceed is that made (under sec. 17, ante, p. 114) in cases where the defendant cannot be served personally with the writ.

It is not necessary, in articles like these, to state the minutiæ of taxing costs and signing judgment; it is sufficient to say that costs are taxed by a Master of the Court (the Masters are, in common parlance, often called Taxing Masters), and that signing final judgment means registering the judgment with the Master, and obtaining his memorandum on a piece of parchment, called the judgment-roll, and on a paper called the judgment-paper. Though from the language of the above section, it may perhaps be contended that final judgment may be signed immediately the time for appearance has expired, still, in cases where it is intended to tax the costs, probably it will be held that the judgment is not completely signed until they have been taxed, and the amount inserted by the Master. (Pierce v. Derry, 4 Q.B. 635).

The form in which the judgment is be entered is this:—

In the Queen's Bench.

On the day of A.D. 185 . (Day of signing judgment.)

England, } A. B. in his own person (or by his attorney) sued out a writ of summons against C.D. indorsed according to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, as follows:

(Here copy special indorsement.)

And the said C. D. has not appeared; therefore it is considered that the said A. B. recover against the said C. D. £ together with £ for costs of suit.

But though the judgment may be signed at once on non-appearance, execution cannot be issued until the expiration of eight days from the last day for appearance; this limit seems to be fixed, so that defendants may not be induced to appear, in order to gain the time allowed for pleading when they would not otherwise have appeared. The subject of execution will receive separate consideration afterwards.

Where a writ according to the form No. 4 has been issued against two or more defendants, if one or more of such defendants only appear, and another or others of them do not appear, the plaintiff may sign judgment against such defendant or defendants only as have not appeared, and before declaration against the other defendant or defendants, issue execution thereupon, in which case he is taken to have abandoned his action against the defendant or defendants who have appeared; or the plaintiff may, before issuing such execution, declare against such defendant or defendants as have appeared, stating, by way of suggestion, the judgment obtained against the other defendant or defendants who have not appeared, in which case the judgment so obtained against the defendant or defendants who have not appeared will operate and take effect in like manner as a judgment by default obtained against one or more of the several defendants in an action of debt before the Common Law Procedure Act (sj. 33).

The judgment signed under this section seems to be merely an interlocutory judgment (so called because it is given between certain proceedings in the action, and is not the final determination of the action), as was the judgment by default against one of several defendants in an action of debt before the new procedure. (Porter v. Harris, 2 Lovinz, 63.) This being so, the plaintiff will be unable to tax his costs and sign final judgment until he obtains judgment against the other defendants, and therefore the judgment on non-appearance will be useless if he failed in obtaining judgment against the other defendants.

The declaration will be more conveniently considered when the pleadings come to be mentioned as a whole.

The judgment and execution on non-appearance to writs specially indorsed is a new provision, and is, as it were, a summary mode of proceeding in addition to the ordinary one, which obtains when either the plaintiff does not issue the writ in the form No. 4, or the defendant appears to the writ, whichever form may have been used.

2. TO WRIT NOT SPECIALLY INDORSED.

To return, then, to the proceedings on writs in the forms Nos. 1, 2, and 3. In case of non-appearance by the defendant to either of these, the plaintiff may, on filing an affidavit of personal service of the writ of summons or a Judge's order for leave to proceed under the Common Law Procedure Act, and a copy of the writ of summons, file a declaration indorsed with a notice to plead in eight days, and may sign judgment by default at the expiration of the time to plead so indorsed; and in the event of no plea being delivered, where the cause of action mentioned in the declaration is for any of the claims for which a writ No. 4 might have been issued, and the amount claimed is indorsed on the writ, the judgment will be final, and execution may issue for an amount not exceeding the amount indorsed on the writ, with interest at the rate specified, if any, and the sum fixed by the Masters for costs as above mentioned, unless the plaintiff claim more, in which case the costs will be taxed in the ordinary way: but in such case the plaintiff will not be entitled to more costs than if he had issued a writ No. 4, and signed judgment upon non-appearance. (Sec. 28.)

It will be observed, that this section relates to two classes of cases; one, those in which the writ No. 4 might have been issued, and in these the judgment is to be final; the other including all cases in which the writ No. 4 could not have been issued.

In all these cases the form of affidavit of personal service above given will require very slight alteration according to the circumstances.

The order for leave to proceed mentioned, seems to be that made where the defendant cannot be served personally (under sec. 17); but in all cases where the defendant is out of the jurisdiction (writs Nos. 2 and 3), a judge's order or rule of Court must be obtained before any proceeding can be taken, directing that the plaintiff shall be at liberty to proceed in the action (secs. 18 and 19, ante, p. 115), and such conditions as may be imposed on the plaintiff by the order or rule must be strictly complied with.

The declaration itself will be considered afterwards. In cases previous to the recent Act, where the defendant had not himself appeared, but the plaintiff, on filing an affidavit of personal service of the writ, had appeared for him, the plaintiff thereupon filed a declaration, and he had to serve a notice of the declaration on the defendant, and with the notice he had generally to deliver particulars of his demand. Probably, however, it is not now necessary to deliver either notice or particulars of demand in case of non-appearance, though the contrary may, perhaps, be argued.

As to the notice to plead, there is a provision that, in cases where the defendant is within the jurisdiction, a notice requiring the defendant to plead thereto in eight days, otherwise judgment may, whether the declaration be delivered or filed, be indorsed upon the declaration or delivered separately (sec. 63); nevertheless, it will probably be requisite, in order to sign judgment under sec. 28, that the notice to plead be indorsed on the declaration.

Where the form of writ No. 1 has been issued, and No. 4 might have been used, the judgment by default is for an amount not exceeding the amount indorsed on the writ, the interest, and such costs as would have been incurred if the writ No. 4 had been issued. In these cases, and in all actions where the plaintiff seeks to recover a debt or liquidated demand in money, judgment by default is final. (Sec. 93.) But where the form of writ No. 1 has been used to recover, not a debt or liquidated demand in money, but damages, and also where either of the writs Nos. 2 or 3 (defendant being out of the jurisdiction) has been used, an additional proceeding is requisite before final judgment can be signed.

When the defendant has failed to plead to a declaration claiming, not a debt or liquidated demand in money, but damages, it becomes necessary that the amount of damages suffered by the plaintiff should be ascertained by some means, and therefore the judgment given by the Court, and entered on the record in such a case, is, that the plaintiff ought to recover against the defendant his damages; but because it is unknown to the Court what damages he has sustained, the sheriff is commanded that, by the oath of twelve good and lawful men, he diligently inquire what damages the plaintiff has sustained, and that he return the inquisition (as it is called) into Court. This judgment, like the one mentioned above, is an interlocutory judgment. A writ is thereupon directed to the sheriff, called from its purpose a Writ of Inquiry. The plaintiff is required to give a written notice of executing the writ of inquiry to the defendant,—now ten days' notice in all cases (sec. 97),—and the sheriff in obedience to the writ summons the jury. In the execution of it, the sheriff or his deputy sits as judge, and the jury assess the amount of damages, the course of proceeding being very similar to that on a trial at Nisi Prius, which will be afterwards mentioned. This writ of inquiry is simply a proceeding to inform the conscience of the Court, who may, if they please, and the plaintiff consent, themselves assess the damages, and thereupon give final judgment. (Holdipp v. Otway, 2 Saund. 106, n. 2.) When the sheriff has returned the inquisition to the Court, final judgment is signed for the amount of damages assessed. This judgment is, in supposition of law, the act of the Court, which only sits during Term, and therefore before 1 Wm. 4, c. 7, it could have been obtained then only, and all writs of inquiry must have been returnable during term. But by sec. 1 of that statute, writs of inquiry may be made returnable on any day in term or vacation, and thereupon, at the return thereof, costs may be taxed, final judgment signed, and execution issued forthwith, unless the sheriff or other officer before whom the same may be executed shall certify under his hand upon such writ that judgment ought not to be signed until the defendant shall have had an opportunity to apply to the Court to set aside the execution of such writ, or one of the Judges of the Superior Courts shall think fit to order the judgment to be stayed until a day to be named in such order. However, by sec. 4 of that statute, notwithstanding that the judgment has been signed and execution issued, the Court may afterwards order such judgment to be vacated and execution to be stayed or set aside, and grant a new writ of inquiry as justice may appear to require, and thereupon the party affected by such writ of execution shall be restored to all that he may have lost thereby.

In some cases before the Common Law Procedure Act, in which, though the form of action was for damages, yet it was easy to compute precisely to what sum they amounted, as in actions on bills of exchange, promissory notes, or bankers' cheques, the plaintiff made application to the Court for a rule to compute, as it was called, referring the matter to one of the Masters, for him to assess the damages. A rule nisi was granted in the first instance, which, in default of the defendant's shewing sufficient cause against it, was made absolute, and a copy of each of these had to be served on the defendant. The Master, thereupon, made the computation at a time appointed. Now, however, on judgment by default, no rule to compute is necessary, or can be used (sec. 92); but in actions in which it appears to the Court or a Judge that the amount of damages sought to be recovered by the plaintiff is substantially a matter of calculation, it is not necessary to issue a writ of inquiry; but the Court or a Judge may direct that the amount for which final judgment is to be signed shall be ascertained by one of the Masters of the said Court, and the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents before such Master may be compelled by subpœna in the same manner as before a jury upon a writ of inquiry; and such Master may adjourn the inquiry from time to time as occasion may require; and the Master will indorse upon the rule or order for referring the amount of damages to him, the amount found by him, and will deliver the rule or order with such indorsement to the plaintiff; and such and the like proceedings may thereupon be had as to taxation of costs, signing judgment, and otherwise, as upon the finding of a jury upon a writ of inquiry. (Sec. 94.) Before this provision no evidence viva voce could be received by the Master without special authority in the rule to compute (Noy v. Reynolds, 2 A. & E. 461); but probably it may now be received by him without special authority.

One or other of the two last-mentioned proceedings must be adopted in all actions commenced by either of the forms of writ, Nos. 2 or 3 (where defendant is out of the jurisdiction), for in such actions the plaintiff is required to prove the amount of the debt or damages claimed by him, either before a jury upon a writ of inquiry, or before one of the Masters in the manner above mentioned, according to the nature of the case, as the Court or a Judge may direct; and the making such proof is a condition precedent to his obtaining judgment. (Sec. 18.)

By one of these modes of proceeding which have now been stated the plaintiff obtains judgment in cases where the defendant has not appeared to the writ of summons, and in all actions where the plaintiff recovers a sum of money, the amount to which he is entitled may be awarded to him by the judgment generally without any distinction being therein made as to whether such sum is recovered by way of a debt or damages. (Sec. 95.)

The subject of execution (as has been mentioned) will be separately considered afterwards.

THE ATTORNEY; (a)
HIS EDUCATION, PRACTICE, AND DUTIES.

ARTICLE XXVIII.

Bringing an Action (continued).

Before you begin to draw the brief, satisfy yourself that you have procured all the evidence necessary to support your case. This may be done thus:—

Take a sheet of paper with a very broad margin, and write out a narrative of the case, with the facts you will be required to prove, stated succinctly in separate paragraphs.

Then take the evidence you have collected, witness by witness, and set down in the margin the name of the witness against each of the facts in your narrative to which his evidence relates. When you have thus analysed the evidence you have obtained, you will be enabled to see at a glance what portion of your case is not provided for, and where it is weakest, as well as where it is sufficiently strong; and then you will apply yourself to supply the deficiencies you may have discovered. The papers thus prepared will be of great further utility to you when you come to draw your brief.

In taking down the evidence of the witnesses, you must be very careful not to put thoughts into their minds or words into their mouths. Usually, they will need no prompting; but, on the contrary, you will find them too apt in the supply of defects in their testimony: all will be inclined to imagine much, many to invent much—for this you must make a reasonable allowance in your estimate of their value. If you have reason to suspect gross exaggeration on the part of any witness, it is an excellent plan to take his evidence verbatim, with as little suggestion on your part as possible, and on some subsequent day examine him again, with a repetition of his story. If much of it be an invention, he is not likely to repeat it as on the first occasion; he will vary in his account of portions, at least, of that which has been invented, and you will thus be enabled to detect and prepare your Counsel for the weak points of his story, that he may be dealt with accordingly in the witness-box, or commented upon in the speech.

Make a list of the documentary evidence you will require, and, as you obtain it, set down in the margin of the list the manner of the proof of each, to be sure that they are in all respects admissible; as, that they are properly stamped, if they are originals or copies, if duly executed and attested, and so forth.

Note carefully, also, in the margin, so much of your evidence as is in its nature secondary, that you may not forget to take such steps as are necessary to render it admissible; as making search for the originals in the proper custody, giving notices to produce, and so forth.

The next step to be taken is to lay the evidence you have collected before Counsel, for his opinion; and it is a duty that should never be omitted in any case that is not perfectly clear and simple. It is extremely difficult for you, who have conducted the business from its commencement, and whose mind is therefore biassed insensibly by all that has come to your knowledge in other forms than such as are admissible in evidence, so to divest yourself of the information you possess, and the bias you have received, as to be enabled to form a sound judgment of the aspect of your cause as it presents itself, stripped of all that is extraneous, and seen only as it can be proved legally, and therefore as it will be seen by the Judge and the jury. A stranger will look at it with other eyes. He will view it only as you are able to exhibit it in the witness-box. He will weigh impartially the value of the evidence you have collected. He will say what of it is good, what is worthless, how this portion of it presents itself to his mind, and consequently how it is likely to appear to others. Seeing its strength and its weakness, he will advise you what is imperfect, that you may supply it, and what needs no confirmation, that you may not uselessly multiply witnesses. But to enable him to do this, you must lay before him all the facts you have gathered, and copies of the evidence you have taken, and then leave to him the task of dissection and selection.

(a) By the Editor of the Law Times.

Begin with a statement of the case, not very minute, but only such as may be necessary to enable Counsel to understand the pleadings and the evidence. Let it be a neat, succinct narrative of the most prominent facts, put in the order of time, and particularly shewing what is the true subject-matter of the dispute between the parties, and tracing it back to its origin. Do not in this repeat what is said by witness A or B, but give rather the result of their testimony than the evidence itself.

Let a verbatim copy of the pleadings follow the statement of the case, and then a copy of the statements of each of the witnesses, of documents or parts of documents, and of the manner in which you propose to prove them.

Do not insert any commentary upon the witnesses in the body of the case; but if you have remarks to make as to credit, or character, or other circumstances in relation to the witnesses, with which you consider that Counsel ought to be acquainted, state it in the margin. If any witness is in any way questionable, you should be extremely careful so to state, for the opinion of Counsel will of course be framed upon the assumption that your witnesses are trustworthy, and your evidence capable of being proved to the letter as you state it, unless you advise him to the contrary; and fatal consequences to your cause may result from your neglect. Be very careful, likewise, to make known to him every flaw or difficulty in your case that is known to or suspected by you. To mislead him is to be yourself misled.

Now comes the question, to whom shall you send it. The practice with some is to submit it to the Pleader by whom the pleadings were drawn; others send it to Counsel having no knowledge of the cause, and who is not likely to be afterwards engaged in it. But there can be no doubt that the most prudent course is to confide it to the Counsel whom you purpose to retain as your junior at the trial. There are many reasons for this preference. Advising upon evidence requires something more than merely legal knowledge; it demands some experience of the practice of evidence, and of the manner in which Courts and Juries are influenced. A Pleader has no knowledge of this important portion of the duty. He will inform you if the evidence you lay before him is sufficient in law to maintain the action, but he cannot advise you how it is likely to influence the jury as a question of fact. This can only be done by one who practises as an Advocate; for it is not knowledge to be found in books, but to be acquired by experience. It is an advantage to you that one of your Counsel at the trial should previously have made himself master of the case; and this he cannot fail to do if he advises you upon the evidence. Knowing where lies its strength and its weakness, he is enabled to direct his Leader at once to the points that most demand his attention.

Perhaps some of our readers, conscious of extensive legal acquirements or of long experience, having therefore great confidence in themselves, may deem it unnecessary to go to Counsel for advice upon evidence, and if they can safely save to their clients the cost of such a process, it will be their duty to do so. But can it be avoided safely? for if not safely, then it would not be either wisely or economically avoided. There is one rule for your guidance in this, and only one, and that is to look to your case, and not to yourself; by which we mean that you should be guided entirely by the character of your cause, and not at all by self-reliance. If the case is very simple, and the evidence very clear and conclusive, you may dispense with any preliminary examination of it; but if it be in any respect difficult, complicated, or doubtful, do not trust to your own skill, however great, or your own experience, however extensive, but go to Counsel for assistance, if it be only to relieve yourself from responsibility. But, in truth, you cannot trust your own judgment in the matter. You partake of the interest, and consequent bias, of a party, and are unable to weigh impartially the testimony you have yourself collected. You know too much of the case to form an accurate opinion of its merits, and it is for this reason that the Attorney who "gets up" a case never can conduct it so well as another Attorney who knows nothing of it until it is put into his hands, and then sees and hears no more of it than is set down in his instructions. That personal interest which would inconveniently cloud your judgment as an Advocate, will be found no less misleading in any attempt to form a fair estimate of the difficulties and defects of the evidence you have collected.

Carefully avoid too frequent intercourse with your witnesses before the trial. You will hear it often said of certain Attorneys, that they are clever at managing a witness; which means, in truth, that they are skilful in moulding the testimony of witnesses to the requirements of their case—inducing them to prove precisely that which they are wanted to prove. This they accomplish by suggestions, which witnesses are often but too ready to seize; as by questions such as these, "Did not such a thing happen?" "Are you sure you did not hear so-and-so said, or something like it?" "Think it over again, and say if this or that did not take place?" But all such incitements to the imagination of a witness to help his memory are really nothing less than subornation of perjury. The witness, indeed, is not asked to tell a lie, but an inducement is offered to him, to which self-importance, or zeal, will often tempt him to yield, to swerve from the straight path of truth, and to disguise and pervert, if not positively to invent a falsehood. Be it your care seduiously to shun all such illicit practices; do not permit your zeal to outrun your discretion; let not your anxiety for victory blind you to the means by which it may be won; suffer not even the entreaties of your client to lead you into any path that will not bear the strictest scrutiny of virtue and honour. Instead of encouraging a willing witness to make a case for you, where you have cause to suspect the existence of such a design, or the slightest doubt arises in your mind whether the story he is telling you is true, interfere at once to assure him that he will not thereby please you or profit himself; that you want the truth, and the truth only, whether it be for or against you.

Nor will this honest and honourable proceeding on your part be unprofitable to your client. A witness who deceives you in your office, when you are quietly taking his story from his own lips, will be very likely to deceive you in court, when subjected to rigid cross-examination. It is one thing to invent a story, and another thing to sustain it under the ordeal of a public investigation. Like all wrongful weapons, it is likely to break in your hands, and to wound you instead of your adversary. If the witness tells you the very truth; even though that be unfavourable to your case, you have the advantage of knowing the worst, and perhaps of being enabled to guard against it; you are in no danger of being taken by surprise at the trial, or having one statement in your brief and another elicited in the witness-box. Tricks of this kind seldom succeed in the long run. If a cause be won by them now and then, many more are lost by reason of them. If they obtain for the practitioner the reputation of being "sharp," they bring also a discreditable fame, which he never loses, and which certainly limits his practice to the least profitable portion of the business of an Attorney. Again, we say, in this as in every other department of your profession, you will find the strictest honesty to be the soundest policy—to be as profitable as it is right and creditable.

Another hint may be introduced here:—when getting up your case, be not content with considering merely what evidence will be requisite to maintain it; give also careful thought to this question, scarcely less important,—what is likely to be the defence? for it is as necessary to anticipate that as to be well armed for the attack. The best mode of doing this is to ask yourself how you would answer the demand if you were acting for the defendant, and that will help you to the probable character of the defence, if its real nature cannot be ascertained from the pleadings or inquiry. On this point you should closely question your client, to learn from him, if possible, what is the defence, which may usually be gathered from a full statement of what has passed between the parties previously to the commencement of the action. It rarely happens that some controversy has not preceded open hostilities, in the course of which the defendant will probably have declared more than once his reasons for not acceding to the demand, and however unwilling your client may be to tell you the case on the other side, you will glean it for yourself from a detail of the whole quarrel; and you should make it a rule never to proceed to trial, or even to draw your brief, without obtaining from your client all he knows that might help you to the important information you are seeking.

THE LEGISLATOR.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

PRIVATE BILLS IN PARLIAMENT.

TUESDAY, Dec. 7.—Ordered, that this House will not receive any petition for a private Bill after Monday, the 21st day of March next, unless such private Bill shall have been approved by the Court of Chancery; and the House will not receive any petition for a private Bill approved by the Court of Chancery after Monday, the 23rd day of May next. Ordered, that this House will not receive any report from the Judges, upon petitions presented to this House for private Bills, after Monday, the 23rd day of May next.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

HEALTH OF TOWNS.

TUESDAY, Dec. 14.—In answer to Sir J. GRAHAM Lord J. MANNERS said, it was the intention of the Government, after the recess, to introduce a Bill for giving local boards of health the power to erect cemeteries outside the towns, with other enlarged powers for similar purposes.

PARISH CONSTABLES.

Mr. DENDES obtained leave to bring in a Bill to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the appointment of parish constables.—The Bill passed the first reading, and was ordered to be read a second time on the 16th of February.

CHRISTMAS-BOXES TO POSTMEN.

Mr. SCHOLEFIELD inquired whether it was the intention of the Postmaster-General, while permitting the letter-carriers in the metropolis to receive Christmas-boxes, to prohibit the receipt of those gratuities by letter carriers in the provinces; and, if so, whether the latter were to receive compensation for the loss of such gratuities?—Mr. G. A. HAMILTON said it was the intention of the Postmaster-General to probibit the receiving of Christmas gratuities by the letter-carriers in the provinces; and the Postmaster-General did not consider that that entitled them to any claim for compensation.

POOR LAW ORDERS.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 15.—Mr. CORBETT asked the President of the Poor Law Board whether the orders of the Board, issued on 25th of August last, had been rescinded, and whether any substituted order had been prepared; and if so when it would be issued to the board of guardians.—Sir J. TROLLOPE said that the order had been rescinded and a modified order prepared, which would be printed, he believed, that day, and sent to the boards of guardians as soon as possible.

THE LAW OF SETTLEMENT.

Mr. WISE begged to ask the President of the Poor Law Board, whether there was any intention of altering the law of settlement, or of proposing any change in the mode of charging the rates for the relief of the poor?—Sir J. TROLLOPE said he had considered the subject, but it was one which required so much consideration, and was of so much importance, that it could not be undertaken except with the direct concurrence of the Government. He had placed all the information he possessed before Government, and the subject was now occupying their attention.

JUDGES IN PARLIAMENT.

THURSDAY, Dec. 16.—Lord HOTHAM gave notice that after the recess he should move for leave to bring in a Bill to preclude all judges of the Superior Courts of law and equity, and the Ecclesiastical Courts, from sitting in that house.

ROYAL ASSENT.

The royal assent was given by commission to the following Bills:—The Commons Inclosure; the West India Colonies Loans Act Amendment; and the Bank Notes, Bills. The Lords Commissioners were the Lord Chancellor, the Marquis of Salisbury, and the Earl of Lonsdale.

COMMISSION ON TESTAMENTARY JURISDICTION.

Mr. HATFIELD inquired of the right hon. gentleman the Home Secretary, whether the report of the Commissioners on Testamentary Jurisdiction would be laid on the table before the recess?—Mr. WALPOLE said he hoped it would be produced before the recess.

POOR REMOVAL ACT.

Mr. WISE moved for returns shewing the total number of paupers who have become chargeable on any parishes and unions in England and Wales, under the operation of the Poor Removal Act of 1846, and of the subsequent Acts relating to that enactment, for the last three years; and the amount of money expended for the in-maintenance and out-door relief of such irremovable poor in the said unions and parishes, for the same period.

THE MAGISTRATE, AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

A RATING question, which turned on the construction of local Acts, and therefore of no general interest, is Kipling v. Ingram, 20 Law T. Rep. 124.

A single case in Criminal Law is to be noted. Where a coroner's jury had found a verdict of "Wilful Murder," and there is evidence upon the depositions to support the finding, the Court of Q. B. will not admit the defendants to bail, though the murder appears to have been committed in a duel, and there is not conclusive evidence of guilt. (Reg. v. Barthelemy, 20 Law T. Rep. 125.)

In Election Law there is another decision on the sufficiency of a notice of objection. In the notice the objector described himself as being "on the list of freemen for the city of Carlisle." This, it will be observed, does not follow the form in the schedule to the Act, which gives the words of description thus:—"A. B. upon the list of persons entitled to vote for the city of ——." Another section enacts, "That no notice of objection shall be void in respect of any description, &c. if the matter is so stated as to be commonly understood;" and the question in this case was whether the defect was thus cured. The Judges differed, MAULE, J. holding the notice to be insufficient, but the majority held it to be such as might be commonly understood, and therefore a good notice. (Feddon v. Sawyers, 20 Law T. Rep. 127.)

A case of very great interest in Municipal Law is reported from the Court of Error. A parish had two churchwardens and two overseers. The list of burgesses was made out and signed by the two overseers, and it was not signed by either of the churchwardens. For omitting to do this, an action for the penalty of 50*l.* was brought against the churchwardens, it being contended that they were overseers also within the meaning of the Act, which requires all the overseers to sign the burgess-list. And the Court held that so it was; and that the action would lie. (Clarke v. Gant, 20 Law T. Rep. 131.)

CRIME IN IRELAND.—A Parliamentary blue-book has been printed, shewing the number of criminal offenders committed for trial or bailed for appearance at the Assizes of each county in Ireland in the year 1851. These returns present a decrease of 6,642 committals, or 21·20 per cent. as compared with the year 1850, the total number of committals in that year being 31,326, while in 1851 the number rose not higher than 24,684. The offences against the person with violence had decreased from 4,930, in 1850, to 2,930, in 1851. The number of offences against property had hardly undergone any change for the better; the figure was 2,224 in 1850, and 2,215 in 1851. A table of the amount of crime committed during the last four years gives the following result:—Murder, 1848, 195 cases; in 1849, 170; in 1850, 113; and in 1851, 118 cases. Attempts at murder, in 1848, 15; in 1849, 5; in 1850, 28; and in 1851, 14 cases. Shooting at or stabbing, in 1848, 110; in 1849, 66; in 1850, 62; and in 1851, 87 cases. Conspiracy for murder in the four years respectively, 49, 26, 12, and 10 cases. Manslaughter 166, 173, 156, and 135 cases. Arson 134, 189, 155, and 160 cases. The other crimes in the list are—attacking houses, killing cattle, perjury, riot, rescue, and assault on peace officers. Riots have declined from 3,222 cases, in 1848, to 1,827 cases in 1851; and rescue from 4,131 cases in 1848, and 3,077 cases in 1850, to 1,915 cases in 1851.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

A TENANT in tail of two estates redeemed the land-tax on both with the money produced by the sale of part of one. One of the estates went over under a shifting use. It was held that, on redemption, the land-tax merged in the ownership, and that the owner of one estate had no right to an apportionment as against the owner of the other. (Harrison v. Round, 20 Law T. Rep. 118.)

The great tithes of certain lands were merged therein by a person having no title to the tithes, the merger was confirmed by the commissioners, and the tithes were stated to be so merged, both in the agreement for commutation and in the apportionment. The lands were afterwards contracted to be sold as tithe free. The purchaser objected that the person by whom the tithes were merged had no title to them. But the Court held that a sufficient title was shewn, for "the Tithe Commutation Acts were pre-eminently laws made for those who kept their eyes open, and not for those who went to sleep on their rights." (Walker v. Bentley, 20 Law T. Rep. 120.)

In Sanders v. Rodway, 20 Law T. Rep. 122, the Court granted an injunction to restrain a husband from infringing a covenant in a deed of separation from his wife, by which he agreed not to molest her, nor to send letters or messages to her.

Where a trustee had gone out of the jurisdiction, and his address was unknown, the Court held it to be necessary that an application should be made to it to appoint a new trustee, such power of appointment not being given by the will. But it refused to order the transfer to the new trustees of shares in a company purchased with the trust funds, as by so doing it would be sanctioning a breach of trust. (Re Harrison's Trust, 20 Law T. Rep. 122.)

A. who died in December, 1826, by will directed a leasehold estate to be sold, and out of the proceeds 50*l.* to be paid to B. Both the executors afterwards died, and in 1852, B. filed a claim for the 50*l.* and interest against the executors of the surviving executor, and the claim was held not to be barred by the Statute of Limitations. (Low v. Nash, 20 Law T. Rep. 123.)

Hennicker v. Hennicker, 20 Law T. Rep. 125, was an interesting question as to the construction of the Stamp Act, in relation to a partition deed. It was held, that sec. 22, which requires the full purchase-money or consideration to be truly stated in the deed, does not apply to the case of a partition. "It appears to us," said the Court of Q. B. "that the transaction in question cannot be considered a sale, and if not a sale, the provisions of the 22nd section do not apply, and it was not necessary to express the consideration for equality of partition in the deed; and where a money bond was given to secure the payment of the true consideration given for equality of partition, it was held that even if the deed were not properly stamped, and did not express the true consideration, the bond was not therefore void."

Lord Henniker v. The Attorney-General, 20 Law T. Rep. 130, was a question as to liability to legacy duty. A. by will empowered B. to appoint to his wife an annuity chargeable upon the land of A. if B. should think fit. B. exercised the power, and in the same instrument imposed on his wife the condition of relinquishing dower. The legacy duty was held by the Court of Error to be payable upon the annuity, it being nothing more than an appointment of the annuity or legacy upon a condition.

Where a purchaser under a decree, being also a defendant in the cause, took a reference to the Master on the title, which was reported good, such purchaser was held not to be liable to pay the costs of the reference. (Holland v. King, 20 Law T. Rep. 123.)

CONVEYANCING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—As the emoluments of solicitors have been greatly reduced of late years by the shortening of deeds, which has been effected by the good sense and honour of the Profession, and not by any compulsory legislative enactment, and as the principle of remuneration for conveyancing business ought not to be dependent on the length of deeds, but on the skill and labour employed, and responsibility incurred in their preparation, I am induced to lay before your readers a proposed scale of fee for preparing conveyances, mortgages, and settlements, to which I invite their attention, and should be glad to receive their opinions and suggestions on it.

It will be observed that in preparing this scale I have, to some extent, been guided by the new rules and orders in bankruptcy, issued in October last under the sanction of the Lord Chancellor, which fixes the allowance to be given to official assignees for collecting and realising the property of bankrupts, and I have adopted that scale with this slight variation, viz. in transactions above 100*l.* and not exceeding 500*l.* I have substituted 2 for 2½ per cent. which will be made up to us by not computing the charges on fractional parts of 50*l.*

I am, Sir, yours, &c. A SOLICITOR.

Proposed scale of charges for conveyances, mortgages, and settlements, including investigation of title, attendances, and correspondence, but excluding inventories, costs of obtaining the opinion of counsel, stamps, and parchment:—

Where the consideration money is under 40*l.*				£2 2 0
Exceeding 40*l.* and not exceeding 100*l.*				5 per cent. on the consideration money.
,,	100*l.*	,,	150*l.*	£3 6 0
,,	150*l.*	,,	200*l.*	7 0 0
,,	200*l.*	,,	250*l.*	8 0 0
,,	250*l.*	,,	300*l.*	9 0 0
,,	300*l.*	,,	350*l.*	10 0 0
,,	350*l.*	,,	400*l.*	11 0 0
,,	400*l.*	,,	450*l.*	12 0 0
,,	450*l.*	,,	500*l.*	13 0 0
,,	500*l.*	,,	600*l.*	14 0 0
,,	600*l.*	,,	700*l.*	15 0 0
,,	700*l.*	,,	800*l.*	16 0 0
,,	800*l.*	,,	900*l.*	17 0 0
,,	900*l.*	,,	1,000*l.*	18 0 0
,,	1,000*l.* then for every 100*l.* beyond 1,000*l.* and any fractional part of 100*l.* an additional 10s.

MORTGAGES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Permit me to make one or two observations with reference to the suggestion that powers of sale should in future be omitted from mortgages on the ground that they are unnecessary, since mortgagees can now sell under the direction of the Court of Chancery.

The principal reason assigned for the proposed omission is, that a mortgage is thereby rendered less expensive. Now although it is quite possible to bring a mortgage containing a power of sale within thirty folios, I agree with you that it is unusual. Let us therefore assume that the power in question lengthens the deed fifteen folios, i. e. extends it to forty-five folios; now the additional cost which this entails is 2*l.* 5*s.* viz. 30*s.* for drawing and engrossing, and 15*s.* for stamp and parchment; and to save this sum it is recommended to deprive a mortgagee of the only mode of proceeding by which he can realise his security without invoking the aid of the Court of Chancery at a cost of 40*l.* or 50*l.* at the very least!

It appears to me that such a proceeding would be unjust to the mortgagor, as rendering his property liable to be consumed unnecessarily by legal expenses; and inexpedient as regards the mortgagee, inasmuch as his security may become depreciated in value, and may not realise sufficient to pay the costs of Chancery proceedings, in addition to the principal and interest; and also because a sale under the provisions of a mortgage-deed may be accomplished much more expeditiously than one under the recent Act of Parliament.

My conviction that the practical consequences of the adoption of the proposed suggestion would be very prejudicial to all parties concerned in mortgage transactions (excepting, perhaps, the mortgagee's solicitor) must be my apology for thus trespassing upon your valuable space.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

JOHN HORGOOD.

14, King William-street, Strand, Dec. 15, 1852.

[NOTE.—We suspect our correspondent overestimates the cost of a foreclosure and sale by claim. We doubt if it would exceed 15*l.* The objection is, that the cost of every mortgage is largely increased to provide for that which is not required in one mortgage in twenty.

The question whether it is not better to risk the chance of paying 15*l.* than incur the certainty of 2*l.* 12*s.* But certainly the better course would be to provide by statute that a power of sale should be incident to a mortgage unless expressly forbidden by the deed.—ED. LAW T.]

Answers to Queries.

WHO IS SURVIVOR?

YOUR correspondent, "An Old Subscriber," invites attention to a knotty point, involving a claim to a legacy under very singular circumstances. A. B. residing at Monmouth, died on Tuesday, Nov. 30, 1851, at 10·55, p.m. local time, having a legacy left him by C. D. who lived in London, and died on the same day, but at 11·2, p.m. Greenwich time, which is 16 minutes faster than Monmouth time. Are the executors of A. B. entitled to the Legacy? I am decidedly of opinion that they are.

Supposing instead of residing at Monmouth, A. B. had lived in London, his death would have occurred at the same moment of time, however differently that moment may have been represented in different parts of the Globe, and would have taken place, nine minutes after that of his neighbour, C. D. Or supposing the death of C. D. had at the instant of its occurring been communicated by electric telegraph to Monmouth, would not the news have found A.B. the legatee, alive to receive it? I am not aware of any case bearing on the point; but the above seems to me the common sense view of the matter.

Bridport, Dec. 13, 1852. A SUBSCRIBER.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

IN the form of a County Court appeal, a curious question was raised in Pauling v. Pontifex, 20 Law T. Rep. 126. A builder sent in a tender, on application of defendant's surveyor to him, among others; the tenders were opened, and his was the lowest. The Court held, that according to the custom of the trade and the conduct of the parties, the plaintiff's tender, as being the lowest, was accepted, although the surveyor was not expressly instructed to accept the lowest; at least the Court thought that there was evidence of this to go to the jury, and that was all they could try upon appeal. From the evidence, a contract might be implied in law, and the jury had a right to draw such an implication if they thought fit.

A question in the Law of Insolvency was decided in Jackson v. Burnham, 20 Law T. Rep. 129. It was an action of debt, to which defendant pleaded, that before the action the plaintiff had petitioned the Insolvent Court, who had made the usual vesting order of the plaintiff's effects in the provisional assignee, and that the debt had accrued after the order and before the discharge. The plea was held to be bad for not averring that the provisional assignee had interfered to recover the debt. The Court held itself to be bound by a decision on a similar point which had arisen under the Bankruptcy Act. (Herbert v. Sayer, 20 Law T. Rep. 129.)

THE MERCANTILE LAWYER.

TWO decisions on the Law of Bankruptcy have now to be noticed. In Ex parte Curties, 20 Law T. Rep. 121, a trader having twice compounded with his creditors, and failed to effect a third composition offered of 11*s.* in the pound, became bankrupt, having assets that would enable him to pay 12*s.* in the pound. It was held on appeal that he was not entitled to a certificate, nor to any protection, because he had attempted to impose upon his creditors by false representations as to the amount of his assets.

Besides a point of pleading, which we need not notice, it was decided in Wesson v. Allcard, 20 Law T. Rep. 132, that a certificate under the arrangement clauses is no defence against a creditor without notice of the several meetings.

DESIGNS ACT EXTENSION.—The Government Bill has been printed to extend the provisions of the Designs Act, 1850, and to give protection from piracy to persons exhibiting new inventions in the Great Industrial Exhibition of 1853. There are ten clauses in the Bill, which states that the Exhibition is to be held in Dublin next year, and the measure is to be cited as "The Protection of Inventions Act, 1853."

DIARY OF SALES BY AUCTION, DURING THE NEXT WEEK,

ADVERTISED IN THE "LAW TIMES."

DAY.	PLACE.	AUCTIONEER.	WHEN ADVERTISED.	PROPERTY.
Wednesday, Dec. 22	Garraway's.	Ellis and Son.	Dec. 11.	Valuable freehold property in City of London.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

EQUITY PRACTICE.—We have to direct the reader's attention to a few more decisions on the new practice. In Egremont v. Egremont, 20 Law T. Rep. 122, the LORDS JUSTICES appointed a guardian ad litem for an infant defendant on a mere affidavit of fitness of the proposed guardian without requiring a commission. In Jones v. Batten, 20 Law T. Rep. 122, the LORDS JUSTICES confirmed the previous decision of Vice-Chancellor TURNER as to one stamp only being necessary upon a bill that was both written and printed. Vice-Chancellor BRUCE said "that the preliminary written bill and the printed bill formed together only one bill, and not two bills, and the stamp might as well be on the first as on the second, as his Lordship premised that the written copy would be retained on the file, and one stamp ought to suffice." In Sergison v. Beavan, 20 Law T. Rep. 123, it was held that an affidavit of merits is not now necessary upon an application for leave to serve upon the attorney for the plaintiff-at-law a bill to restrain proceedings in the action. In the practice of the Court as to the hearing of claims, Vice-Chancellor STUART stated in Rawlins v. Daglish, 20 Law T. Rep. 124, "that he considered that special claims should be distinguished from ordinary claims, and he should, therefore, direct that on a short cause day no claims were to be taken except such as were certified by counsel to be short claims. All other claims would take their place in the general paper, to be heard with other causes." As to the appointment of a receiver, he said, in Grote v. Bing, 20 Law T. Rep. 124, that where such was sought "in place of some person already in possession of the property, the motion should be made in open court. But in cases where a receiver had been already appointed, and a vacancy occurred by death or otherwise, or where, as upon the death of the owner of the property, no person was in possession, the application should be made at chambers."

COMMON LAW.—An important point on the right to inspect documents, under the new Evidence Act, was decided in Doe dem. Child v. Roe, 20 Law T. Rep. 126. It was a case of ejectment brought by the original lessor for a forfeiture by breach of covenant; the lease was in the plaintiff's possession; the defendant, as being the tenant in possession, was held to be entitled to an inspection of the lease. "The action," said WIGHTMAN, J. "is an ejectment by the lessor of the plaintiff upon a breach of covenant. The defendant sought to inspect the document in order to satisfy himself whether there was any defence to the action or not; that is, whether there really was any such clause of forfeiture in the lease as the lessor of the plaintiff relied upon."

Queries.

EVIDENCE.

YOUR correspondent, "A. B." in last week's paper, is clearly right in his construction of the fourteenth section of the above Act. As to wills less than thirty years old, the mere production of them from the proper custody must be supplemented by formal proof of their execution, in order to their being admissible in evidence in actions affecting real estate. It appears to me, therefore, that those cannot possibly be brought within the provisions of the section in question. The point as to wills thirty years old is not quite so clear, as they are admissible without proof of execution; but it is certainly a fair argument against the admissibility of a certified copy, even of the latter, that they do not quite come within the words of the section,—documents "of such a public nature as to be admissible," &c.

While, however, I submit the law is as I have stated, I think all reasonable men must agree, that in these days it ought to be otherwise, and my principal object in writing you is to request you to afford your valuable aid in having the necessary alteration introduced in some of the measures now before Parliament. The most appropriate for its insertion would, no doubt, be that of Lord Brougham, affecting the law of evidence and procedure.

At present, in any trivial action either in the Superior Courts or in the County Court, where a will of land is to proved, the party seeking to produce such will in evidence must bring down the official from the Court of Probate with the original will, and must be at the trouble and expense of searching for and summoning the attesting witnesses, or if they are dead, witnesses to prove their death and handwriting. And all this although the validity or execution of the will is not contested by the other side; and the cases in which the will is only formal evidence are by far the most numerous.

I should beg to suggest that in all cases a certified copy of a will, or of a grant of probate, or of letters of administration, shall be sufficient evidence of such will or grant, provided the party adducing the same in evidence shall have given reasonable notice of his intention to adduce them, and no demand shall have been made by the other side that the original should be produced or proved. It should, of course, be added, that if such a demand be made, and the documents proved to the satisfaction of the judge, the cost shall be borne by the party demanding the same.

Manchester, Dec. 9, 1852. J. C.

Answers to Queries.

IN answer to "A. B.'s" query, 20 LAW TIMES, 118, as to the proper place for searching for the record of letters patent of Edward 6,—the Record Office, Chancery-lane. The records at this office commence from the year 1483; the records in the Tower of London commencing from King John to Edward 4 (1461). WM. THOS. WESHALL, 1, Mitre-court-buildings, Temple, Dec. 15, 1852.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

NORFOLK.—The Right Hon. Horatio Earl of Orford; the Right Hon. Henry Valentine Stafford Lord Stafford; the Hon. Brownlow North Osborne DeGrey; Robert John Harvey Harvey, esq.; Sir Eaton Stanard Travers, Kt. K.H; Henry Ramy Upcher, esq.; Thomas Brightwen, esq.; John Thomas Mott, esq.; Vincent Edward Eyre, clerk; Henry William Bartholomew Edwards, esq.; John Calthrop, esq.; John Windham Dalling, esq.; George Blomefield, esq.; Roger Kerrison, esq.; Ferdinand Ives, esq.; Albemarle, Cator, esq.; James Dott Hulton, esq.; and Anthony Hudson, esq. to be deputy-lieutenants.

CARNARVON.—Sir Thomas Erskine, bart.; and Thomas Edward Mostyn Lloyd Mostyn, esq. to be Deputy-Lieutenants.

MEMBERS RETURNED TO SERVE IN THIS PRESENT PARLIAMENT.

BOROUGH OF OLDHAM.—William Johnson Fox, esq. of No. 3, Sussex-place, Regent's-park, London, in the room of John Duncuft, esq. deceased.

BOROUGH OF BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—James Henry Porteous Oakes, of Newton, in the county of Suffolk, esq. in the room of John Stuart, esq. who has accepted the office of Vice-Chancellor.

CITY OF DURHAM.—The Hon. Adolphus Frederick Charles William Vane, commonly called Lord Adolphus Frederick Charles William Vane, in the room of Thomas Colpitts Granger, esq. deceased.

BOROUGH OF ABINGDON.—The Hon. Montague Bertie, commonly called Lord Norreys, of No. 18, Grosvenor-street, Middlesex, in the room of Lieutenant-General James Caulfeild, deceased.

CITY OF PETERBOROUGH.—George Hammond Whalley, esq. in the room of the Hon. Richard Watson, deceased.

The right Hon. Sir John Jervis has appointed William John Beale, of Birmingham, in the county of Warwick, gent. to be one of the Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, in and for the county of Warwick, also in and for the counties of Stafford and Worcester.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY THE LORD-LIEUTENANT OF THE COUNTY OF SALOP.—Sir Thomas Fletcher Fenton Boughey, bart.; Charles Powell, esq.; and Richard George Jebb, esq. to be deputy-lieutenants.

Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint Capel Hanbury Williams, esq. and Sir Theophilus St. George, bart. to be assistant-magistrates for the district of Natal, in South Africa.

COURT PAPERS.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

THE following orders of the Lord High Chancellor were issued to the public on Saturday:—

"The Right Hon. Edward Burtenshaw, Lord St. Leonards, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, doth hereby, in pursuance of an Act of Parliament passed in the 15th and 16th years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled 'An Act for the Relief of the Suitors of the High Court of Chancery,' and in pursuance and execution of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, order and direct as follows: that is to say—

"First, That the Commissioners of Inland Revenue do prepare stamps impressed upon adhesive paper, of the amounts following:—that is to say, threepence, fourpence, eightpence, one shilling and fourpence, one shilling and sixpence, two shillings and sixpence, and two shillings and eightpence.

"Secondly, That such stamps shall be affixed, by the parties requiring to use the same, on the vellum, parchment, or paper, on which the proceeding in respect whereof such stamps may be required is written, printed, or engrossed, or which may be otherwise used in reference to such proceeding.

"Thirdly, That every officer of the Court of Chancery who shall receive any document to which a stamp shall be so affixed shall, immediately upon the receipt thereof, obliterate or deface such stamp, by impressing thereon a seal to be provided for that purpose, but so as not to prevent the amount of the stamp from being ascertained, and no such document shall be filed or delivered out until the stamp thereon shall be obliterated or defaced as aforesaid.

"ST. LEONARDS, Chancellor."

"The Right Hon. Edward Burtenshaw, Lord St. Leonards, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, doth hereby, in pursuance of an Act of Parliament passed in the 15th and 16th years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled 'An Act for the Relief of the Suitors of the High Court of Chancery,' and in pursuance and execution of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, order and direct as follows:—

"1. When no certificate of the taxation of a bill of costs shall be required, the ad valorem duty directed by the order of the 25th day of October to be levied by stamps on the Master's certificate shall nevertheless be due, and shall be payable on the amount of the bill as taxed, or on the amount of such part thereof as may have been taxed; and the solicitor is in such case to cause the proper stamp (the amount thereof to be fixed by the Master) to be impressed on, or annexed to, the bill of costs.

"2. The fees hereunder specified shall hereafter be collected, not in money, but by means of stamps denoting the amount of such fees, stamped or affixed, at the expense of the parties liable to pay the fees, on or to the vellum, parchment, or paper on which the proceedings in respect whereof such fees are payable are written or printed, or which may be otherwise used in reference to such proceedings.

"First.—In the Registrar's office.

"For orders made by a judge in chambers, drawn up by the registrar, the like fees as by the order of the 23rd of October, 1852, are directed to be taken by the chief clerks to the judges, for orders drawn up by such chief clerks.

"Second.—In the Record and Writ Clerks' office.

	£.	s.	d.
"For amending every record of any bill	0	10	0
"For amending every office copy thereof	0	5	0
"Copies of documents left as exhibits, per folio	0	0	5

"ST. LEONARDS, Chancellor."

ORDER OF COURT.—1. That the Commissioners of Inland Revenue do prepare stamps impressed upon adhesive paper, of the amounts following, that is to say, threepence, fourpence, eightpence, one shilling and fourpence, one shilling and sixpence, two shillings and sixpence, and two shillings and eightpence.

2. That such stamps shall be affixed by the parties requiring to use the same on the vellum, parchment, or paper on which the proceeding in respect of which such stamps may be required is written, printed, or engrossed, or which may be otherwise used in reference to such proceeding.

3. That every officer of the Court of Chancery who shall receive any document to which a stamp shall be so affixed, shall, immediately upon the receipt thereof, obliterate or deface such stamp, by impressing thereon a seal to be provided for such purpose, but so as not to prevent the amount of the stamp from being ascertained; and no such document shall be filed or delivered out until the stamp thereon shall be obliterated or defaced as aforesaid.

(Signed) ST. LEONARDS, C.

TRANSFER OF CAUSES.

Notice dated Dec. 10, 1853.—The following causes except such as the parties may desire to retain in their present lists, on the ground that briefs have been delivered to and consultations held with counsel not practising in the Court of Vice-Chancellor Sir George Turner, will be transferred from the lists of Vice-Chancellor Sir R. T. Kinderdey and Vice-Chancellor Stuart, to the list of Vice-Chancellor Sir George Turner, on the first day of Hilary Term next—that is to say:—

FROM VICE-CHANCELLOR KINDERSLEY'S LIST.

Hurford v. Rees	Taylor v. Taylor
Roberts v. Jones	Charlton v. Allen
Butchart v. Dresser, 2	Boyd v. Roux
Unwin v. Unwin	Blyth v. Carpenter
Hicks v. Sallitt	Scaping v. Cheetham
Torbock v. Hewitson	Holloway v. Collier
Green v. Berron	Langworthy v. Church
Langton v. Langton	Evans v. Heath
Forbes v. Richardson	Johnson v. Marshall
Todd v. Beames, 2	Ashby v. Blenkinsopp.

FROM VICE-CHANCELLOR STUART'S LIST.

Stent v. Wickens	Crabbe v. Moxhay
Osborn v. Gerrard	Batham v. Hopkins
Orlebar v. Nicholay	Vincent v. Pane
Girdlestone v. Creed	Oppenheim v. Henry
Smith v. Newbould, 6	Burrowes v. Drummond
Wilson v. Hope	Powell v. Merritt
Vere v. Wilson	Wildes v. Davies, 7
Dale v. Hamilton	Busk v. Donner
Higgin v. Lane, 2	Peak v. Peak
Cunliffe v. Lawrence	Morier v. Budd.

ELECTION PETITIONS.—The following days have been fixed by the general committee of elections for the appointment of select committees to try the petitions complaining of undue elections and returns:—On Monday, Feb. 14, for Tavistock, Bridgnorth, Lancaster, Canterbury. On Wednesday, Feb. 16, Blackburn, Clitheroe, Chatham. On Monday, Feb. 21, Stoke-upon-Trent, Newry, Southampton, Kidderminster. On Wednesday, Feb. 23, Frome, Cambridge, and Waterford. All parties interested are directed to attend, by themselves, agents, or counsel.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

Winter Assizes.

YORK, Dec. 13.—The commission for holding the winter gaol delivery at York was opened in this city on Saturday. The learned judges appointed were Mr. Justice Williams and Mr. Justice Talfourd. The calendar contains the names of 89 prisoners in custody, and 20 out on bail, and is considered to be very heavy, both from the number and nature of the offences charged. Of these, 4 are charged with murder, 2 with rape, 2 with forgery, 7 with cutting and stabbing, 28 with robbery, 9 with manslaughter, 17 with burglary, 4 with horse-stealing, 8 with bigamy, 1 with arson, 1 with night poaching, 1 with concealment of birth, 5 with perjury, and the rest with minor offences.

NISI PRIUS SITTINGS.—When the first cause was called on, the Attorney-General submitted to the attention of the Lord Chief Justice the great convenience which would result, both to the Bar and the public, if the sittings at Nisi Prius in this court were fixed to take place in future at ten o'clock instead of half-past nine. Lord Campbell said he would consult with the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas upon the subject, and see whether the proposed arrangement could be adopted. He was quite sure that the alteration would be very much for his (Lord Campbell's) own convenience. On looking at the records of the Court he found that in former times the Court sat at seven o'clock, and when he first became a member of the Bar it sat at nine. Now it had got to half-past nine; and as it was proposed in future to sit at ten, it might soon be proposed to sit at midday. The Attorney-General said that the Lord Chief Baron had for many years sat at ten o'clock. Lord Campbell said he was unwilling to adopt any arrangement which would waste a valuable half-hour of the public time. The Attorney-General.—The latter hour would be very convenient to commercial men, as it would enable them to see their letters before coming to the court. Lord Campbell said he would readily accede to the arrangement if he found, on consideration, that it would be for the public good. He had spent a short time in Ireland, and found that in that country the Courts never sat before eleven, nor after three o'clock. The Attorney-General said he thought seven hours' occupation in court was a sufficient stretch for the mind both of Judge and jury. The Solicitor-General said the case was not the same as it was formerly, when the sittings began with a list of almost innumerable remanets. Recent changes had brought the business more within the control of the Court. Lord Campbell said he should be glad if he could accede to the proposal without injury to the public.

OPENING THE MAYOR'S COURT.—On Wednesday, in the Court of Common Council, Mr. James Davis, the Chairman of the Secondaries and City Courts Committee, brought up the report on the subject of throwing open the Mayor's Court to all solicitors practising in the Courts of Law and Equity at Westminster. The report detailed the whole of the proceedings of the committee, including those successful conferences with a deputation of the Court of Alderman on the subject, and their interviews with the attorneys of the Mayor's Court, who claimed compensation for right of alienation and exclusive practice, as well as three consultations with the Recorder, who strongly recommended the admission of all solicitors under certain regulations. It further stated that the Recorder had laid before the committee a series of rules for governing the practice of the Court, with the necessary forms, and also a scale of fees and charges to be taken therein, which were approved of by the committee; and, in accordance with the suggestion of the Recorder, they recommended that an order to afford facilities for the conducting of suits in the Mayor's Court, upon a reformed principle, in January, they should be authorised to provide temporarily a suitable office for the Registrar of the Lord Mayor's Court, in the immediate vicinity of the Guildhall, and an assistant to the deputy-registrar. After some observations from members of the court, in approbation of the liberal and beneficent project of throwing open the Mayor's Court to the Profession generally, by which arrangement any man could send his own attorney to represent him there, the Recorder said that in his opinion the mass of business introduced to the Mayor's Court upon the change recommended would be so great as to pay all the expenses which might be apprehended, and a great deal more. The report was then agreed to, and sent back to be carried into execution.

FEES OF COURTS.—At the close of a case tried on Wednesday, in the City, some difference having arisen as to the amount of the fees payable to the officers of the Court, the Lord Chief Justice inquired into the matter, and then stated publicly he was surprised to find that the summoning officer claimed 2*l.* 8s. for summoning the special jury, and the ushers of the court 1*l.* 4s.; and that in ordinary causes 3s. 6d. was paid for each cause to the hall-keeper, 7s. 6d. for four ushers, 3s. 6d. for a tipstaff, and 4s. 6d. for two summoning officers. His lordship also stated that the whole of the expenses of the Nisi Prius Office were under 2*l.* being less than the sum claimed under the rules of the Corporation of London by their summoning officer. The Treasury had determined that for the future no higher fees should be paid at Westminster than would pay the expenses of the Courts, and the ushers there were paid by salaries, as should be the case also in London. There was formerly a profit of more than 50,000*l.* a-year by these fees, and although in the now scale some of the items were increased, the public should not forget that a great number of fees had been entirely abolished.

IRELAND.—DUBLIN.—The Society of the Attorneys and Solicitors of Ireland held a meeting on Monday last, the 29th ultimo, to take into consideration Mr. Whiteside's Bill for amending the procedure in the Superior Courts of Law in Ireland. The opinions generally expressed here on this measure of law reform are much more favourable than those entertained on the subject of Mr. Napier's Landlord and Tenant Bills, which apparently are doomed to please nobody. The landlord party look with an extreme degree of nervous apprehension on any measures of this kind, framed as they are to interfere with their own prescriptive rights; and to the bulk of the people, who have imbibed the doctrines of the Tenant League, the measures of the Irish Attorney-General will give no sort of satisfaction.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

DEMICHELIS.—On the 8th inst. the wife of Cesare Demichelis, esq. of Turin, and 46, Leicester-square, barrister, of a son.

FITZGERALD. — At Worthing, the lady of Lieutenant-General Sir John Forster Fitzgerald, M.P. of a son.

MOORE.—On the 16th inst. at Leytonstone, the wife of Mr. C. C. Moore, of Mile-end, of a son.

PONSONBY.—On the 12th inst. at Down-Ampney, the Lady Maria Ponsonby, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

LAUDALE, Robert, esq. of Pitmedden, Perthshire, S. S. C., Edinburgh, to Mary, daughter of John Laidlay, esq. of Fleetwood-on-Wyre, Lancashire, at Fleetwood, on the 15th inst.

PEACOCK, Mr. William H. of Barnsley, solicitor, second surviving son of the late John Peacock, esq. Norton, county of Durham, to Elisabeth, third daughter of Braithwaite Hodgson, esq. of Green End, near Hawkshead, on the 15th inst. at Hawkshead, Windermere.

WHITEHEAD, John, esq. of the Middle Temple, barrister-at-law, to Jane Philippa Baskerville, youngest daughter of the late Hugh Hovell Farmar, esq. of Dunsinane, county of Wexford, on the 9th inst. at Bathwick Church, Bath.

DEATHS.

BALLANTINE, William, esq. for many years a magistrate of the Thames Police Court, at his residence, Cadogan-place, on the 14th inst. aged 73.

EMPSON, William, esq. Professor of Law, on the 10th inst. at the East-India College, Haileybury, aged 62.

FENWICK, Thomas, esq. of South-hill, Chester-le-street, in the county of Durham, a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant, on the 11th inst. aged 80.

PALMER, Richard, esq. town-clerk of Preston, and for fifty-three years one of the coroners for the county of Lancaster, on the 13th inst. aged 79.

TAYLOR, Mr. Thomas David, solicitor, formerly of Northbuildings, Finsbury-circus, at Rodney-terrace East, Bow-road, on the 11th inst. aged 57.

CHRISTMAS "BLESSINGS."—Among the many announcements and inventions brought under our notice, as applicable to the season and its enjoyments, none contrast so favourably, or so quickly recommend themselves, as those of Mr. Scarlett and Mr. Merry. The one has reduced mock turtle soup to a portable and solid substance, so that, if required, it may be carried from place to place even in a sheet of brown paper, thus making of the most delicious preface to a dinner the proverbial gentlemanly parcel. And Mr. Merry has invented "a game," which may be used either as a round, or a single partner, and is called "THE GAME OF THE CHACE." It is calculated to afford a fund of innocent amusement, is neither abstruse nor childish, and is capable of infinite variation. The title, "The Chase," is given, we presume, because the instruments of play are miniature horses, and a Lilliputian race-course, and "the race is to the swift." Mr. Scarlett's portable soup, and Mr. Merry's entirely novel and interesting game, are, we repeat, the most attractive of the new inventions for which Christmas folk will be thankful. Our advertisements will explain further of the merits of both.

MONEY MARKET.

English Funds.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.
Bank Stock	223½	223½	223½	223	223	223
3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities	100½	100½	101	100⅝	100⅜	101
3 per Cent. Consols Annuities	†	†	shut	101⅛	shut	shut
Consols for Opening	‡	‡	100½	100	100¼	101¼
New 3 per Cent. Annuities	shut	shut	..	..	..	..
New 3½ per Cent. Annuities	104	104	104½	104	104	104
Long Annn. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	..	..	7	7	7	6¾
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Oct. 10, 1859)	..	..	6¾	..	..	..
Do. 29 yrs. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	shut	shut	6¾	shut	..	..
India Stock	shut	shut	..	shut	..	..
India Bonds (1,000*l.*)	82	82	77	78	79	..
Do. do. (under 1,000*l.*)	..	..	75	..	79	79
South Sea Stock	shut	shut	..	..	..	224½
Do. do. New Annuities	shut	shut	..	..	..	..
Exchequer Bills, 1,000*l.* June	65*	65*	62*	62*	63*	60*
Do. do. 500*l.* June	65*	65*	62*	62*	..	60*
Do. do. Small, June	60*	60*	62*	62*	63*	60*

* Premium. † 101⅛ with div for money.
‡ 100⅛ Ex. div.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Dec. 14.

ABBEY, JOHN, timber merchant, Shelton, Staffordshire, Jan. 8 and 31, at ten, Birmingham. Off. as. Whitmore. Sols. Llewellyn, Tunstall, and Hodgson, Birmingham. Petition, Dec. 9.

BENNETT, ALFRED, window blind manufacturer, Bridge-house-place, Newington-causeway, Dec. 27, at eleven, Jan. 28, at twelve, Basinghall-st. Off. as. Graham. Sol. Teague, Crown-court, Cheapside. Petition, Dec. 13.

DUDGEON, STEPHEN, builder, Litchurch, Derbyshire, Jan. 7 and 21, at ten, Nottingham. Off. as. Bittleston. Sols. Bowley, Nottingham; and Hodgson, Birmingham. Petition, Dec. 13.

HIRST, GEORGE, manufacturer, Horncoat, Kirkburton, Yorkshire, Jan. 10, at half-past eleven, Jan. 31, at eleven, Leeds. Off. as. Hope. Sols. Turner, Huddersfield; and Bond and Barwick, Leeds. Petition, Dec. 4.

ROBINSON, WILLIAM, upholsterer, Grand Junction-terrace, Edgeware-road, Dec. 28, at one, Jan. 25, at two, Basinghall-st. Off. as. Edwards. Sols. Sole and Co. Aldermanbury. Petition, Dec. 8.

SPRATT, JOHN, coach builder, Sloane-st. and Exeter-st. Chelsea, Dec. 23, at half-past twelve, Jan. 24, at one, Basinghall-st. Off. as. Johnson. Sol. Chidley, Gresham-st. Petition, Nov. 9.

WALTON, WILLIAM, baker, Leamington Priors, Warwickshire, Dec. 30 and Jan. 19, at eleven, Birmingham. Off. as. Bittleston. Sols. Poole and Son, Southam; and Hodgson, Birmingham. Petition, Dec. 1.

Gazette, Dec. 17.

ATKINSON, JOHN, seed crusher, Kingston-upon-Hull, Jan. 12 and Feb. 2, at twelve, Hull. Com. Ayrton. Off. as. Carrick. Sols. Shackles and Son, Kingston-upon-Hull. Petition, Dec. 9.

BOULTER, ROBERT NEWELL, tailor, Mount-row, Westminster-road, Lambeth, Jan. 1, at half-past two, and Jan. 28, at twelve, Basinghall-st. Com. Goulburn. Off. as. Nicholson. Sol. Pain, 5, Gresham-st. London. Petition, Dec. 13.

HARRISON, SAMUEL COLE, linen draper, Sunderland-by-the-Sea, Dec. 24 and Jan. 31, at twelve, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Com. Ellison. Off. as. Baker. Sols. Parker, St Paul's Churchyard; Rawson and George, Bradford Yorkshire; and J. J. and G. W. Wright, Sunderland Petition, Dec. 4.

JACOB, CHARLES, merchant, Ingram-court, Fenchurch-st. City, Jan. 1 and 29, at one, Basinghall-st. Com. Goulburn. Off. as. Pennell. Sols. Marten, Thomas, and Hollams, Commercial Sale-rooms, Mincing-lane. Petition, Dec. 14.

JAMES, BENJAMIN, builder, Newport, Monmouthshire, Dec. 28 and Jan. 25, at eleven, Bristol. Com. Hill. Off. as. Miller. Sols. Phillpotts, Newport; and Bevan, Bristol. Petition, Dec. 14.

KYD, CHRISTIAN BRUCE, common brewer and maltster, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Dec. 30, at eleven, and Feb. 11, at twelve, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Com. Ellison. Off. as. Baker. Sols. Sudlows, Torr, and Janoway, Bedford-row; and G. W. Hodge, Grey-st. Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Petition, Dec. 11.

SALTER, SAMUEL, maltster and mealman, Hunton-bridge, Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire, Jan. 1, at two, and Jan. 28, at eleven, Basinghall-st. Com. Goulburn. Off. as. Pennell. Sols. Sanger, 4, Essex-court, Temple; and Cowley, Watford, Hertfordshire. Petition, Dec. 14.

SHOWELL, WILLIAM, publisher and bookseller, 30, Great Marlborough-st. and 27, St. John's Wood-terrace, St. John's Wood, Dec. 28, at two, and Jan. 28, at twelve, Basinghall-st. Com. Halroyd. Off. as. Groom. Sols. Lawrance, Plews, and Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London. Petition, Dec. 7.

TULLY, COLLINGWOOD, ship owner and merchant, Sunderland, Dec. 30, at twelve, and Feb. 11, at one, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Com. Ellison. Off. as. Wakley. Sols. Crosby and Compton, 3, Church-court, Old Jewry; and J. T. Hoyle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Petition, Dec. 4.

VOTE, JAMES KENT, builder, Albion-square, Dalston, Dec. 30, at eleven, Jan. 24, at two, Basinghall-st. Com. Evans. Off as. Johnson. Sol. Taylor, 15, South-st. Finsbury. Petition, Dec. 11.

WELLINGTON WILLIAM, builder, Brindley-st. Harrow-road, Paddington, Dec. 28 and Jan. 28, at eleven, Basinghall-st. Com. Holroyd. Off. as. Edwards. Sol. Wilson, 16, Gresham-st. London. Petition, Dec. 14.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Barr and Sykes, yarn spinners, first, 3s. 10d.; and first sep. of Barr, 1s. Young, Leeds.—Beesham, W. P. banker, first on new proofs, 2s. 1d. Edwards, London.—Crosthwaite, J. merchant, second, 8d.; and on new proofs, 2s. 8d. Turner, Liverpool.—Davies, J. grocer and ironmonger, first, 4s. Turner, Liverpool.—Edwards, J. sack, twine, and shoe-thread manufacturer, further, 4½d. Hernaman, Exeter.—Geary, N. stay maker, first, 1s. 5d. Edwards, London.—Goldsmith, W. corn merchant, final, 5s. 10d. Stansfeld, London.—Hodgson, Lewis, and Co. spirit merchants, first on new proofs, 6s. Young, Leeds.—Heilbrons and Harrison, drysalters, &c. second, 7s. 9d. Whitmore, London.—Hornby, W. joiner and builder, first, 4s. 6d. Turner, Liverpool.—Hotten, J. T. watchmaker, &c. first, 4s. 9d. Hernaman, Exeter.—James, R. S. ironmonger, first, 2s. Young, Leeds.—Jones, E. draper, first, 8d. Turner, Liverpool.—Kretschmar, E. manufacturing jeweller, first, 3s. 9d. Groom, London.—Lee, W. T. merchant, first on new proofs, 10s.; second, 3s. 3d. Hope, Leeds.—Matthews, W. V. druggist and grocer, first and final, 1s. 0½d. Hernaman, Exeter.—Pryde, Jones, and Gibb, nail makers, &c. first, 1s. 9d. Morgan, Liverpool.—Reid, J. ship broker, second, 0½d. Baker, Newcastle.—Russell, G. merchant, eighth, 11½d. Christie, Birmingham.—Rutland, G. straw bonnet manufacturer, first, 1s. 5½d. Whitmore, London.

INSOLVENTS' ESTATES.

Apply at the Provisional Assignee's Office, Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London, between the hours of eleven and three.

Corrigall, J. master and owner of the barque Saron, 20s. —Gillet, W. captain of militia, 5s. making 15s. 6½d.—Howse, C. superannuated clerk, 3s. 9d. making 6s. 6½d.—Morgan, R. H. barman, 20s.—Penney, T. foreman in a dockyard, fourth, 3s. 8½d.—Yarker, J. retired coast officer, 6s. 2d. making 20s.

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Dec. 7.

Breeze, J. tobacconist, High-st. Windsor, Oct. 27. Trust. J. White, wholesale tobacconist, High-st. Shoreditch. Sols. Tucker and Sons, Sun-chambers, Threadneedle-st.—Brockelbank, T. licensed victuller, Greyhound public-house, Milton-st. Fore-st. City, Nov. 10. Trust. T. Clarke, distiller, Albany-st. Regent's-park. Sols. Taylor and Collison, Great James-st. Bedford-row.—Clarke, J. draper, Broadway, Westminster, Nov. 27. Trusts. W. Hitchcock, Wood-st. and T. Millgate, Gresham-st. warehousemen. Sols. Sole, Turner, and Turner, Aldermanbury.—Drake, J. linendraper, York, Nov. 19. Trusts. H. J. Rayson, painter, York, and J. Milling, warehouseman, Glasgow. Sols. J. and J. P. Wood, York.—Elsmore, J. draper, Stoke-upon-Trent, Nov. 4. Trusts. J. Hickson, draper, Newcastle-under-Lyne, and H. Hickson, merchant, Manchester. Sol. R. Slaney, Newcastle-under-Lyne.—Hayward, J. Portsmouth-place, Kennington-lane, Kennington, Nov. 27. Trust. T. T. W. Williams, Grafton-place, Euston-square. Sol. E. Adams, George-st. Mansion-house.—Hughes, J. draper, Paddington-st. Middlesex, Nov. 27. Trusts. H. Sturt, Wood-st. and W. Lycett, Gutter-lane, warehousemen. Sols. Sole, Turner, and Turner, Aldermanbury.—Lay, T. draper and haberdasher, Walworth, Surrey, Nov. 19. Trusts. W. H. Holyland, Watling-st. and W. Nevill, Gresham-st. warehousemen. Sol. A. Jones, Size-lane.—Musselwhite, R. linen draper, Dudley, Worcester, Dec. 1. Trusts. S. H. Norris and R. Doncaster, merchants, Manchester. Sols. Sale, Worthington, and Shipman, Manchester.—Parr, R. builder, Nottingham, Nov. 11. Trusts. J. Greensmith and J. Lacy, builders, J. Riley, slater, and S. Hall, stone mason, Nottingham. Sol. W. Brown, Nottingham.—Raper, J. draper, Liverpool, Nov. 30. Trusts. D. Turner, draper, and E. Roberts, accountant, Liverpool. Sols. Evans and Son, Liverpool.—Sporle, W. ironmonger, Royston, Hertford, Nov. 29. Trusts. W. D. Sims, engineer, Ipswich, and W. Abbott, upholsterer, Royston. Sols. W. H. Nash, Royston; S. B. Jackaman, Ipswich.—Whitehead, R. sen. farmer, Botesdale, Suffolk, Nov. 29. Trusts. W. Robinson, merchant, and R. Collins, grocer and draper, Botesdale. Sol. W. Gross, Botesdale.

Gazette, Dec. 10.

Benson, B. printer and bookseller, Weymouth, and Melcombe Regis, Dorset, Nov. 16. Trusts. J. Renshaw, merchant, Gracechurch-st. and J. Drew, confectioner, Weymouth and Melcombe Regis. Sols. Henning and Andrews, Weymouth.—Field, W. nurseryman, Rotherfield, Sussex, Dec. 2. Trusts. T. Crittall, relieving officer, Rotherfield, and J. Poxon, farmer, Brenchley. Sol. W. C. Cripps, Tonbridge Wells.—Ford, J. tailor and draper, Ridgmount, Bedford, Nov. 17. Trusts. G. Mellor, gentleman, and W. Perkins, draper, both of Woburn. Sol. J. Greene, Ampthill.—Fry, W. H. victualler, Wilney, Oxford, Nov. 19. Trusts. L. Warrington, grocer, and T. Whitlock, sheriff's officer, both of Wilney. Sols. Rose and Bullen, Bampton.—James, H. yeoman, Littleworth, Faringdon, Berks, Dec. 2. Trusts. J. Wells, harness maker, and G. H. Mantell, surgeon, both of Faringdon. Sol. A. H. Mantell, Faringdon.—Lewis, L. shopkeeper, Fleur-de-Lis, Bedwelty, Monmouth, Nov. 18. Trusts. G. Wheller, corn merchant, Maindee, and R. Graham, auctioneer and agent, Newport. Sol. G. Blakey, Newport.—Neal, N. grocer and draper, Eaton Bray, Bedford, Nov. 24. Trusts. E. Coleman, grocer, Ampthill, and T. Weatherill, draper, Dunstable. Sol. W. Medland, Dunstable.—Osborne, M. W. grocer, Coventry, Dec. 2. Trusts. J. Slaney, colonial produce agent, Mincing-lane, and T. Waterston, tailor, Coventry. Sol. J. Royle, Coventry.—Roberts, H. farmer, Llanfihangel Esceifog, Anglesea, Dec. 3. Trusts. W. Roberts, farmer, Llediwigan; R. Hughes, merchant, Llangaffo; and J. Owen, Tai Coch, and O. Jones, Taimawr, farmers. Sol. H. B. Roberts, Bangor.—Seaton, W. grocer, Oakham, Rutland, Dec. 2. Trusts. J. Bishop, wholesale grocer, Warner's-yard, Mincing-lane, and D. S. Royce, auctioneer, Oakham. Sols. Ades and Adam, Oakham.—Spratt, J. coach builder, Sloane-st. and Exeter-st. Sloane-st. Middlesex, Dec. 7. Trusts. R. Collard, coach wheelwright, Kinnerton-st. Belgrave-square; J. W. Gibson, coach ironmonger, Long-acre; and C. Farmer, ironmonger, Clifton-terrace, Brompton. Sol. M. Lewis, Wilmington-square.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Nov. 30.

Armitage, A. and J. dyers, Mytholm-bridge, near Huddersfield, Nov. 19. Debts paid by J. Armitage.—Askham, W. and W. F. surgeons and apothecaries, Eckington, July 1. Debts paid by W. F. Askham.—Bibby, J. Preston, and Cockshott, E. Dundalk, corn merchants, Nov. 26.—Burdes, E. and W. and Anderson, E. lime burners, farmers, ship owners, and merchants, as regards W. Burdes, Carley Lime Works, Sunderland near the Sea, Nov. 25.—French, G. and Pratt, D. jun. mercers and drapers, Walsall, Nov. 27.—Gillham, J. and Womack, J. tailors and publishers of fashions, Haymarket, July 29. Debts paid by Womack.—Gray, F. and S. M. tinplate workers, japanners, &c. Birmingham and Gough-square, Dec. 31, 1860.—Hancock, C. and Young, H. W. solicitors and attorneys, Tokenhouse-yard, Nov. 29. Debts paid by Hancock.—Hargreaves, L. Taylor, T. and Dobson, J. stone masons and contractors, Fall Barn and elsewhere, in the Forest of Rossendale, as regards Hargreaves, Nov. 25. Debts paid by Taylor and Dobson.—Hodgson, C. and E. coach manufacturers, Durham, Nov. 23. Debts paid by R. Hodgson.—Kidson, D. Dugdale, J. Jackson, J. and Hodgson, T. millwrights and machine makers, Green's Mill, near Bacup, Nov. 26. Debts paid by J. Tattersall, auctioneer, Bacup.—Moon, J. jun. and Woolacott, J. furnishing ironmongers and smiths, Barnstaple, Nov. 17.—Rutland, J. jun. and Ball, D. jun. wine, beer, and spirit merchants, Cooper's-row, Tower-hill, Jan. 1.—Scholefield, R. B. Holdsworth, S. Yeardley, J. and Briggs, E. hatters and silk spinners, and manufacturers, Castleton Mills, near Rochdale, Nov. 6. Debts paid by E. Briggs.—Stagg, G. and Kilvert, R. house painters, Manchester, Nov. 15. Debts paid by Kilvert.—Toms, W. P. and T. O. plumbers and brasiers, Plymouth, Nov. 27.—Womack, J. and Litchfield, accountants and general agents, Manchester. Debts paid by Litchfield.—Wood, H. and Gresham, A. tea dealers and grocers, Blackburn, Nov. 19.

Gazette, Dec. 3.

Black, W. Carlisle, and Pigg, J. Coathill, Wetherall, dealers in alabaster and manufacturers of plaster of Paris, Dec. 27. Debts paid by W. Jackson, Carlisle.—Brotherton, R. and Rigg, R. sen. railway contractors, Whitehaven, Nov. 15.—Budd, R. and C. straw bonnet manufacturers, Dunstable, Nov. 23. Debts paid by R. Budd.—Davidson, J. Y. and Partridge, F. coal merchants, Bankside, Nov. 29. Debts paid by Davidson.—Eastwood, L. sen. and Tovo, E. joiners and packing-case makers, Manchester, Dec. 1.—George, W. and Jarrell, T. farmers and brickmakers, Oxford, Nov. 27. Debts paid by George.—Harris, W. T. Day, N. M. Harris, F. J. and Meek, G. wholesale stationers, Queen-st. Cheapside, as regards F. J. Harris, July 26. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Healey, E. and Lloyd, T. B. law stationers, Manchester, Dec. 1.—Heap, J. and R. Plowright, A. and Bennett, J. silk printers, Kirkmanshulme, Newton, Nov. 27. Debts paid R. Heap.—Hine, B. H. and J. G. and Mundella, A. J. hosiers, Nottingham, as regards J. G. Hine, Oct. 29.—Irwin, A. W. and Taylor, M. attorneys, Verulam-buildings, Gray's-inn, Dec. 1.—Lawton, J. and Brook, J. fancy cloth manufacturers, Huddersfield, Nov. 23. Debts paid by Lawton.—Loton, H. and Cary, R. carvers and gilders, Cleveland-street, Fitzroy-square, May 6.—Lowndes, H. and Cross, T. B. merchants, Liverpool, Nov. 30.—Morley, D. and Booth, J. smallware manufacturers, Manchester, Aug. 16.—Penkivil, R. S. and Fitch, F. surgeons, &c. Chaddesley Corbell, Sept. 29. Debts paid by Fitch.—Pescot, T. and Elliott, W. linen drapers and general dealers, Lindfield, Nov. 24. Debts paid by Elliott.—Plowright, A. Heap, R. and Bennett, J. pattern designers, Manchester, Nov. 27. Debts paid by Plowright.—Rigby, J. and Whittaker, W. dyers, Gigg, near Bury, Nov. 29. Debts paid by Rigby.—Rostron, R. McKinnell, J. H. Dutton, T. and Booker, M. M. Rio de Janeiro and Bahia, as regards McKinnell, June 30.—Russell, J. and J. leather sellers, John-st. Parker's-row, Bermondsey, Dec. 3.—Smith, J. and W. bakers and flour dealers, Liverpool, Sept. 4.—Strange, R. and G. grocers, Walton-st. Chelsea, Nov. 30.—Swinborne, T. C. and G. P. and Wellington, R. A. refiners of isinglass and gelatine, Scott's-yard, Cannon-st. and Coggeshall, as regards T. C. Swinborne, Aug. 24.—Taylor, J. and Clarke, C. R. commission agents, Manchester, Nov. 25.—Upperton, R. and Stone, R. colliers and farmers, Trinsaran, Pembrey, Sept. 17.—Usmar, T. and Hunter, J. schoolmasters, Epping, Nov. 30.—Wilkinson, T. W. and Binkam, G. auctioneers and general agents, Gresham-st. Nov. 20. Debts paid by Wilkinson.—Worley, W. H. and Pyall, H. printers and publishers, Chichester-place, Gray's-inn-road, Nov. 29.

AN important LANDED ESTATE for SALE in the South of England, value 1800*l.* to 2000*l.*; let to efficient and well-satisfied tenants on leases. Price Thirty-four Years Purchase on the Rental. It has no mansion, but important manorial rights.

Apply (personally, only) to MR. LAMEE, Landed Estate Agent and Auctioneer, No. 62, New Bond-street, London.

OFFICES or CHAMBERS UNFURNISHED. A superior set of spacious ground-floor CHAMBERS, consisting of three excellent rooms, kitchen, &c.; also, other sets, equally well fitted up, and replete with every convenience, TO BE LET, in a house of the first respectability.

Apply at 34, Soho-square.

BOOKCASE for SALE.—To Barristers and Others.—A large mahogany Winged Bookcase to be sold, 10 feet wide, 9 feet high, with every convenience of large and small drawers, pigeon-holes, ledgements, &c. Price £11.; original cost, 60*l.*—Apply to Mr. WARTON, 28, Bucklersbury, Mansion-house.

CONTENTS.

	Page.
NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS	139
LEADING ARTICLES—
To Readers	139
Lord St. Leonards	139
Criminal Appeal	139
New Practice in the Court of Chancery	139
Hints to busy Practitioners	140
A Sketch of the Scotch Law Courts (X.)	141
LEGISLATOR—
Imperial Parliament	142
MAGISTRATE—Summary	142
JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL—Summary	143
REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER—Sum.	143
COUNTY COURTS—Summary	143
Late Cases on the Law and Practice of the County Courts	144
MERCANTILE LAWYER	145
THE LAWYER—Summary	145
PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES—
Society for Promoting the Amendment of the Law	145
Conference on the Reform of the Mercantile Law	146
LEGAL INTELLIGENCE	146
GAZETTES	146

Now ready,

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising New Time Tables in Chancery, Common Law, Bankruptcy, and the County Courts, in addition to all the usual information required for ready reference in offices. Price 1s.; stamped to pass free by the post, 13d. Copies sent by return of post to persons enclosing 13 postage stamps to the office.

THE LAWYERS' POCKET-BOOK for 1853 is in the Press.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, with all the decided Cases, the new Table of Fees, and many other improvements.

Just published,

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY LAW, comprising the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, with NOTES of all the CASES decided on its construction; the NEW RULES and ORDERS; with Notes and Forms, and a copious Index. By C. J. B. HERTSLETT, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, Author of "The Law of Master and Servant." Price 7s. 6d. cloth; 8s. half-bound; 10s. bound.

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, comprising all the New Statutes, Rules, and Orders, Tables of Fees, with Notes and abundant Index, the orders being placed with the sections of the statute to which they relate. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, Author of "Leading Cases in Equity." Price 8s. 6d. cloth; 10s. half-bound; 11s. bound.

NEW TABLES of FEES in the COURTS of COMMON LAW.—MR. CROCKFORD announces that the NEW TABLES of FEES have been introduced into the SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT. This edition also contains all the Cases decided upon the New Practice during Michaelmas Term, with additional Forms, Notes, and Index. The Nisi Prius Officers' Act has been inserted in the Appendix. The First Edition is out of print. Such was the demand for it, that it was exhausted in a fortnight.

LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"A SUBSCRIBER."—Neither of the works named is likely to appear in a new edition for many months,—perhaps years to come.

"STUDI ET."—There is no such book as our correspondent requires, but there ought to be. Then there are few competent to write it; of those competent, how few have leisure, still fewer inclination. Blackstone is the nearest approach to it, but not precisely what "Student" wants.

"AN ARTICLED CLERK" will see that his requirement has been anticipated by the announcement below.

"D. H." (Driffield), and many other "ARTICLED CLERKS."—We have well weighed your requests: we recognise the utility of such a work, and we are sure we could make it extremely useful and instructive. But it is a question of cost, and upon the closest calculation it could not be produced unless a sale of 500 could be secured, and that is hopeless. Less than that would involve a serious loss.

KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, 1852. SECOND EDITION.

MR. CROCKFORD, in announcing that this book is now ready, requests us to offer an apology for the short delay which has taken place in its publication; a delay which has resulted entirely from the printer having more to do than he could possibly overtake at this busy printing season.

The forms of proceedings given in the first edition have been subjected to a careful revision by the editor, and a large number of additional forms, which appeared likely to be practically useful, have been introduced.

All the cases which were decided upon the new procedure during last Michaelmas Term, and which have from time to time appeared in these columns, have been inserted under those sections of the Act, the effect of which they illustrate or explain; while to the Appendix have been added an abstract of the Nisi Prius Office's Act, and the new tables of fees framed under sec. 10 of that statute.

VOL. XX. No. 508.

SCALE OF CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Under Fifty Words.....20 5 0

For every additional Ten Words.... 0 0 6

Advertisements from the Country should be accompanied with an order upon the Agent in Town, or a Post-office order (payable at 190, Strand) for the amount.

Advertisements ordered for the first page are charged one-half more. If not so ordered, they will take the chance of position.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1852.

TO READERS.

CHRISTMAS-DAY falling on a Saturday, we publish on Friday. We have taken advantage of this to dispose of a large arrear of matter that had been standing in type for a long time, waiting for a place. We shall now be enabled to begin the new year with almost a cleared stage. Hence the curtailment of leading articles and other original reading.

LORD ST. LEONARDS.

THE late LORD CHANCELLOR had devoted himself, with a zeal as unequalled as his ability, to his duties as a Judge and as a Reformer of the Law. He had not mingled at all in politics,—indeed, we believe he did not make one political speech during the entire period of his office. Great hope, therefore, was entertained that he would accept the office which Lord ABERDEEN is said to have made to him, that he should continue to give to the country the benefit of his great services, in his character as a Lawyer and a Law Reformer, by remaining in the high office in which he has won such golden opinions from all sorts of men. We regret to announce to our readers that Lord ST. LEONARDS felt that he could not, consistently with honour, accept this unprecedented but well-deserved tribute to his worth as a public servant, and that he was bound to retire with the Government by which he was placed at the post where he has done so much substantial service, and shewn such mastery of the science as well as of the technicalities of the law of England.

From the whole Profession, irrespective of party, there will, we are sure, be but one expression of profound regret at the retirement of so splendid a Judge and so practical a Reformer of the Law.

We trust, however, that we shall not lose his services altogether in either capacity. He may still give to his country the benefit of his judicial powers in the appeals in the House of Lords, and promote rational Law Reform by submitting his own measures to the Legislature, where they will not be received with the less respect because he no longer sits upon the woolsack.

CRIMINAL APPEAL.

THE newspapers are teeming with comments upon the unsatisfactory nature of the evidence on which Mr. KIRWAN has been convicted of the murder of his wife. Few Lawyers, accustomed to the analysis of evidence, and experienced in the fallibility of witnesses who are most desirous to tell the truth, will review that trial without coming to the conclusion that it is at least so doubtful as not to justify a conviction. Mr. KIRWAN may be guilty, but the evidence is quite consistent with innocence, and it is not the custom in this country to hang men because they may have committed a crime. This case fails in the first step: there is no proof whatever that Mrs. KIRWAN was murdered—that she did not die from natural causes.

We have received a pamphlet vindicating one Dr. SMYTH, who was some time since convicted of rape under improbable, if not impossible, circumstances, on the testimony of a girl who had slept the previous night in a brothel!

In our own personal experience, we have seen some eight or ten persons convicted of crimes, who were afterwards proved to be innocent and pardoned; we have known twice that number of instances of innocent men convicted, but who were unable to prove innocence, because of the difficulty of proving a negative.

The Chaplain of the Devon County Gaol informed us that, from his religious intercourse with the prisoners, he had reason to believe that there was rarely a sessions or an assizes at which one or more innocent men were not convicted.

Does not this prove the necessity for an appeal in the form of a new trial?

If 20*l.* be in dispute, a new trial is allowed, because Judges and juries are supposed to be fallible. Are they not equally fallible where life or liberty is at stake?

Or is it that the law esteems property beyond liberty or life?

If there be any reason for permitting a second hearing of a question of money, the same reason must apply with tenfold force for permitting a second hearing of a question on which depends life, liberty, and reputation.

Who will signalize himself by taking up this question, and securing for the lives and liberties of an Englishman the same measure of justice and protection as is accorded to his property?

Of course we do not suggest an indiscriminate right of appeal, but only the same privilege as is now enjoyed in civil cases—that if the party considers he has not had a fair trial, he should be permitted to move the Court for a new trial on satisfying them that justice requires it.

Surely the Judges are as competent to determine whether new trials ought to be allowed in criminal cases, as they are now in civil cases; and the only objections the possibility of their being overburdened with business, is now removed. There is no fear of the Courts of Westminster being overwhelmed; they are more likely to die of inanition. It will be a charity to give them something to do.

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

THE mode of procedure in the Courts of Chancery having been very much altered of late years, and especially by the Acts of last session, it is proposed to give, in a series of articles, a concise account of the course of a Chancery suit according to the present practice of the Court, noticing, however, so far as to render intelligible, the late changes, the ancient usages of the Court.

There are different modes in which proceedings may be commenced in Chancery, which we propose to notice seriatim under three heads:—First, by bill or information; secondly, by claim; and, thirdly, by certain more summary proceedings, either by petition or summons.

1ST. AS TO PROCEEDINGS BY BILL OR INFORMATION.

The person applying to the Court of Chancery for relief, who is called the plaintiff, does so by bill, addressed to the Holder of the Great Seal, or to the King or Queen in Chancery, in case the person holding the seals is a party or the seal is in the King's hands. But if the suit is instituted on behalf of the Crown, or of those who partake of its prerogative, or whose rights are under its particular protection, as the objects of a public charity, the matter of complaint is offered to the Court by way of information, given by the proper officer, viz. the Attorney or Solicitor General. (Mitf. Plead. 7.) The bills to which the remarks immediately following relate, are those usually known as original bills, praying relief, and as the practice in conducting a suit commenced by bill differs very little from that in conducting a suit commenced by information, it may be considered, that what is hereafter said with respect to bills is also applicable to informations, except where a difference is stated to exist between those two modes of procedure.

FORM OF BILL.

The bill states in the shape of a concise narrative the material facts, matters, and circumstances upon which the plaintiff relies, and it is divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively, each paragraph containing, as nearly as may be, a separate and distinct statement or allegation; the bill then concludes with a prayer for the specific relief which the plaintiff may consider himself entitled to, and also for general relief. The names of the persons against whom the suit is instituted, who are called defendants, are next written down, and the bill is signed by counsel, by whom it is usually said to be settled, but by whom, in practice, it is in reality drawn, and by whom it must be signed. Lastly, there is a note stating the names and address of the solicitors for the plaintiffs by whom the bill is filed. (See 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 10; and for a form of a bill, see Schedule B to the orders of the 7th August, 1852.)

Under the old system the body of the bill contained interrogatories founded upon the statements in the bill, for the purpose of obtaining discovery from the defendants. According to the new practice the bill is not to contain any interrogatories, which, however, as we shall hereafter see, may, if necessary, be afterwards filed separately for the same purposes as heretofore.

Previous to the 1st November, 1852, bills were engrossed on parchment, and then filed, but from and after that day every bill (with the exceptions which will be shortly mentioned), is to be printed, and a copy thereof is to be filed by the record and writ clerks in the same manner as they formerly used to file an engrossment. (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 1.)

A slight alteration in writing to correct a mistake in a printed bill will not constitute a sufficient ground for the Clerk of Records and Writs refusing to file the same. Thus, in Yeatman v. Moulsey, where an alteration in a printed bill was made in writing, a person whose name was Constantia Maria having in the printed bill been wrongly described as Maria Constantia, the plaintiff's solicitor altered the bill, in writing, by striking out the printed word "Maria," and inserting the same word in writing after the word "Constantia." The LORDS JUSTICES held that the bill, in its altered state, was to be treated as a printed bill within the meaning of the statute. "We must not, however," observed Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE, "be understood as intending to sanction the filing of a bill of this kind where the alteration is at all extensive or important, or where it is such as to interfere with the legibility of the bill." (20 Law T. Rep. 106.)

MODE OF COMPELLING APPEARANCE.

Formerly, when the bill was filed, the first step to compel the appearance and answer of defendants was to serve them with a subpœna; that is to say, with a writ called by that name, because, according to the old form, it commanded a defendant to appear and answer sub pœna centum librorum. (Dan. Ch. Pr. 409.)

The writ of subpœna is, however, now abolished, and the plaintiff, instead of serving the defendant with a subpœna to appear and answer, must now serve him with a printed bill of complaint, which must have (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, ss. 2, 3), with such variations as circumstances may require, the following indorsement thereon:—

Victoria R.

To the within-named defendant C. D. greeting.

We command you ["and every of you," where there is more than one defendant], that within eight days after service hereof is given, exclusive of the day of such service, you cause an appearance to be entered for you in our High Court of Chancery to the within bill of complaint of the within-named A. B. and that you observe what our said Court shall direct.

Witness ourself at Westminster, the day of , in year of our reign.

NOTE.—If you fail to comply with the above directions you will be liable to be arrested and imprisoned.

Appearances are to be entered at the Record and Writ Clerk's Office, Chancery-lane, London. (See Schedule to 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86.)

The printed bill, previously to its being served, must be stamped with a proper stamp by one of the clerks of records and writs, indicating the filing of such bill of complaint, and the date of the filing thereof. (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 3.)

It may here be remarked that the filing of a printed bill of complaint has the same effect as the filing of a bill of complaint and issuing of a subpœna had under the old practice; and its service upon the defendant properly indorsed and stamped will have the same effect as the service on him of a writ of subpœna formerly had, and will entitle the plaintiff to such remedies for default of appearance, and otherwise as he was formerly entitled to in case of due and proper service of a subpœna. (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 4.)

A defendant therefore now incurs the following liability for default of appearance, which, it will be observed by the indorsement in the bill, must be entered within eight days after service of the bill, exclusive of the day of service.

First, he may proceed against an unprivileged person by having an attachment issued against him. (Order XVI. May 1845, art. 3); against privileged persons, as peers and members of Parliament, by a sequestration against their property; against corporation first by distringas, then by alias distringas, and pluries distringas on which sums to a small amount are levied, and failing to produce obedience, a sequestration is lastly issued against the property of the corporation.

Secondly, instead of proceeding by way of attachment or sequestration, a plaintiff may enter an appearance for a defendant not appearing within the eight days after service, except when the defendant is an infant or a person of unsound mind. (Order XXIX. May 1845; Dan Ch. Prac. 427); and the Court, on the application of the plaintiff, may order a solicitor to be assigned as guardian of an infant, or a person of weak or unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, on his non-appearance, in order to appear and defend the suit. (Order XXXII. May 1845).

An appearance may be entered for a person having privilege of Parliament on application by the plaintiff producing the return of the process of sequestration issued against him. (Stat. 1 Wm. 4, c. 36, s. 12.)

MODE OF SERVICE OF A PRINTED COPY OF A BILL.

The service upon a defendant of a printed copy of a bill of complaint is to be effected in the same manner as service of a writ of subpœna was formerly effected; that is to say, by delivering it to the person to be served, or by leaving it at his dwelling-house, except that it will not be necessary to produce the original bill, which will be on the files of the Court. (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 5.)

In addition to the above-mentioned mode of serving a defendant, which is called ordinary service, there is an extraordinary service, which the Court has power to order; first, under its general jurisdiction, by ordering service within the jurisdiction to be effected upon some person other than the absent defendant, to be treated as valid against him; a subject upon which there are many conflicting decisions (Dan. Ch. Pr. 414): secondly, under its statutory jurisdiction, the Court had powers conferred upon it, of either allowing actual service under certain circumstances to be effected out of the jurisdiction; or, of ordering service within the jurisdiction, in certain cases upon a person other than the defendant, as a substitute for service upon the defendant himself. (Dan. Ch. Pr. 419.)

Under the New Practice, the Court is to be at liberty to direct substituted service of a printed bill, in such manner and in such cases as it shall think fit. (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 5.)

This very large discretionary power conferred upon the Court will be very useful, and will put an end to many of the doubts and difficulties which the decisions threw in the way of the Court in ordering substituted service.

The plaintiff is bound to deliver to the defendant or his solicitor, upon application for the same, any number not exceeding ten of the copies of the printed bill, who is to pay for the same after the rate of one halfpenny per folio. (15 and 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 7; and V. and VI. of the Orders of Aug. 7, 1852.)

WRITTEN COPIES OF BILL.

In order to prevent the inconvenience which might result by the delay which it is supposed might be occasioned by printing bills in certain cases where speed is considered requisite, viz. where the bill prays a writ of injunction, or a writ of ne exeat regno; or if it is filed for the purpose either solely or amongst other things of making an infant a ward of Court, a written bill may be filed. The plaintiff or his solicitor must, however, give an undertaking to file a printed copy within fourteen days, which is to be considered to have been filed at the time of filing the written copy, and if the printed bill be not filed within that period, the Clerk of Records and Writs is to take the written bill or copy of bill off the files of the court, without further order; and the plaintiff in the suit, or his solicitor, who shall have personally undertaken to file such printed copy, is to pay to the defendant all the costs incurred by him in the suit, such costs to be taxed by the taxing Master, without further order, upon the production to him of the certificate of the Clerk of Records and Writs, that a printed copy of the bill has not been filed pursuant to such undertaking, and to be recoverable in like manner as costs ordered to be paid by a party in a suit to another party in a suit are recoverable.

The service of the written copy, properly stamped and indorsed, is to have the same effect as the service of the printed copy.

It has been held that where a written bill has been stamped and filed under the 6th section of the Equity Jurisdiction Improvement Act, and a printed copy was afterwards filed, that a second stamp under the 12th section of the Suitors in Chancery Relief Act, and the 6th of the Orders of the 25th of October, 1852, is not necessary, as the two bills in effect only constitute one bill, and the written bill is retained on the file. (Jones v. Batten, 20 Law T. Rep. 122.)

It must be borne in mind that neither costs, as between party and party, or as between solicitor and client, for any written bill or copy, nor brief of bill, will be allowed, unless the Court in disposing of the costs of the cause direct the allowance thereof. (See 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 6, and II., III. and IV. of the Orders of 7th August, 1852.)

HINTS TO BUSY PRACTITIONERS.

[Under this title we propose from time to time to remind the practitioner of useful facts which, amid the claims of business and the flood of changes in the law, he may possibly have overlooked. As we also may overlook many, we shall be obliged by "hints" from any of our readers.]

AMENDMENT OF PROCEEDINGS IN THE SUPERIOR COURTS UNDER THE NEW PRACTICE.

WE deem it advisable to call the attention of our readers to a very important decision of Lord CAMPBELL, in reference to the powers of amending proceedings, given to the Judges by the 222nd section of the Common Law Procedure Act. We take the report from the second edition of KERR'S Common Law Procedure Act, just published, p. 212.

The 222nd section, it will be recollected, enacts that "All such amendments as may be necessary for the purpose of determining, in the existing suit, the real question in controversy between the parties, shall be made."

The case we refer to was that of Mitchell v. Crosswaller, which was tried at the Guildhall, before Lord CAMPBELL, on 11th December current. The action was for injuries sustained by Mrs. Mitchell. The first count was for damages sustained by the wife; and the second count for loss and expenses sustained by the husband. The defendant had pleaded "not guilty" and "not possessed." The facts of the case were these:—Mrs. Mitchell was crossing a street, when a large hooded cart belonging to the defendant came up, knocked her down, and injured one of her ancles and her thigh. The main defence was, that the carman who was driving the cart at the time of the accident had returned to his masters' premises for the evening, and had been going to put away the horse and cart in the stable, when the foreman, who was in bad health, asked to be driven to his home. The carman went to seek his masters' permission, but as they were not to be found, he took the foreman on his own responsibility, and was returning home when the accident occurred. The carman was therefore not employed on his masters' business at the time of the accident; and hence the master was not responsible for the acts of his servant. The Lord Chief Justice did not think that evidence to this effect could be given, either under the plea of "not guilty" or "not possessed." Leave was then asked to add a plea for the purpose of trying this issue. The plaintiffs had had previous notice that this point of liability was to be raised. The Lord Chief Justice allowed the amendment, and without costs.

It would thus appear that if a defendant, after pleading, should have any doubt whether, under the pleas on the record, evidence of all his defences will be admitted, he should give notice to the plaintiff what his real defence is, and at the trial, if necessary, apply to add a plea, or amend those on the record. If this view be the correct one, the pleading of the Superior Courts will come to be closely analogous to that of the County Courts; for a defendant may always plead the general issue, and then give notice of his grounds of defence, and that he intends at the trial to apply for leave to add such pleas as may be necessary to admit evidence of that defence.

SKETCH OF THE SCOTCH LAW COURTS.

ARTICLE TENTH.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE—A PUBLIC PROSECUTOR—NO GRAND JURY—VERDICTS OF A MAJORITY—VERDICTS OF "NOT PROVED"—COUNSEL FOR PAUPER PRISONERS—PRISONER HAS THE LAST WORD—STATISTICS.

We have described the proceedings in a criminal prosecution up to the day of trial, and have stated, that, before the prisoner can be called upon to plead, written evidence must be produced by the public prosecutor of the statutory requisites having been complied with, viz. that fifteen days previously a copy of the indictment, of the names and residences of the witnesses, and of the panel of jurors had been served on the prisoner. This service must be personal, if the accused is in prison: if he has been bailed, it must also be personal, if possible, or at the last known residence, and if access is denied at that place of residence, a copy must be affixed on the door. On the other hand we have seen, that the prisoner is not entitled to a copy of the depositions taken before the committing magistrate, or rather of the ex parte proofs: for they are nothing else than examinations not on oath, but taken in writing, and in a solemn way before the magistrate by the Crown solicitor, not materially differing from the kind of examination every attorney subjects his witnesses to, previous to a trial and with a view to fill up the proofs in his brief. The prisoner having also duly received notice of the day appointed for trial, we will now suppose that day to have arrived.

The prisoner must in general appear in person on the day of trial, otherwise he may be outlawed. But he is entitled to appear by counsel for the preliminary purpose of stating any technical objections to the service of the documents before mentioned. On this point the Court is rigorously strict in exacting from the prosecutor the utmost accuracy in the copies given to the prisoner. Of these the chief is the Indictment itself, and as the form of that document may be interesting, we shall give here a skeleton of its material parts. In Larceny it runs thus, where the prisoner has made a statement before the magistrate:—"William Cairns, alias George Douglas, present prisoner in the Tolbooth of Haddington, you are indicted and accused at the instance of John Inglis, esquire, her Majesty's Advocate for her Majesty's interest, That albeit, by the laws of this and every other well-governed realm, Theft is a crime of an heinous nature and severely punishable, yet true it is and of verity, that you, the said William Cairns, alias G. D. are guilty of the said crime, actor, or art and part, in so far as on the, &c. And you, the said W. C. alias G. D. having been apprehended and taken before J. B. esq. sheriff substitute of the shire of Haddington, you did, in his presence, at Haddington, on, &c. emit and subscribe a declaration, which declaration, as also the foresaid stolen articles, or part thereof, being all to be used in evidence against you, the said W. C. at your trial, will for that purpose be in due time lodged in the hands of the High Court of Justiciary, before which you are to be tried, that you may have an opportunity of seeing the same, all which, or part thereof, being found proven by the verdict of an assize, or admitted by the judicial confession of you, the said W. C. alias G. D. before the Lord Justice General, Lord Justice Clerk, and Lords Commissioners of Justiciary, you, the said W. C. alias G. D. ought to be punished with the pains of law, to deter others from committing the like crimes in all time coming. A. B. Advocate Depute."

After any objections competent have been made to the service, and overruled, the prisoner is then asked by the Court if he pleads guilty or not guilty. He need not plead either, but may partly confess and partly deny, in which case a plea of not guilty is entered as to the part which is not distinctly admitted. Other proceedings at this stage are nearly identical with those common in England, as when the prisoner stands mute, or is an idiot, lunatic, deaf and dumb, &c. If the prisoner pleads any special plea, he can only do so where he has given a day's previous notice to the prosecutor, though this rule is seldom enforced. There is, however, a feature of the Scotch criminal procedure which may now be specially mentioned, of which our own is notoriously destitute, except in cases of treason, which is, the assigning by the Court of counsel and attorney to all pauper prisoners. This important safeguard of the innocent and the destitute was provided by the Scottish Legislature so long ago as in 1587. A statute of that day enacts,—"That all and whatsoever lieges of this realm accused of treason or of whatsoever crime (crime in Scotland includes our misdemeanours) shall have their advocates and procurators (attorneys) to use all lawful defences, whom the Judge shall compel to procure for them in case of their refusal, that the suit of the accuser be not taken pro confesso, and the party accused prejudiced in any suit, before he be convicted by lawful trial." This statute has been in full force for nearly three centuries. Where the prisoner, therefore, has not previously applied for counsel or attorney, the Court will assign them to him as a matter of course, as soon as he is arraigned, and no counsel can refuse to act. Where at Sessions no counsel attend, an attorney is then assigned as advocate. The Junior Bar of Scotland naturally are preferred to this branch of practice, and it is eagerly welcomed, not for its emoluments, but for what to many is more valuable, an opportunity of exercising their professional skill.

After pleading not guilty by advice of counsel, the prisoner is allowed to demur to the indictment, and the demurrer must then be disposed of; the judgment on a demurrer against defendant not being in any case final, but merely that he plead over. The panel of jurors summoned, and which consists of forty-five persons, is then called over, and fifteen are selected out of that number by ballot. The prisoner, besides challenging the array, has in all cases whatever (be it felony or misdemeanour), a peremptory challenge of five jurors, and any number of challenges for cause assigned. The jury then are sworn, and it must be borne in mind, that in Scotland the jury empanelled to try an indictment invariably amounts to fifteen persons.

There are some peculiarities in the procedure regarding witnesses, which may also be noticed. It is an invariable rule, never departed from, that the witnesses are never allowed to be in court after the evidence begins, but, on the contrary, are kept by themselves in a separate chamber, under the custody of the usher. So rigid is this rule, that, if a witness has happened to be in court, while another gave his evidence, that is a circumstance fatal to the former's admissibility. We have already stated that no witness can be produced against a prisoner on his trial, of whose name and occupation and at least residence, the prisoner was not informed by notice fifteen days previously. If a wrong address was given, or one at which the witness could not be found, or in general, whenever the prisoner has been misled by the information, this also is fatal to the witness's admissibility, provided the objection be taken before the jury is sworn. We have also stated, that the written examination of the witnesses taken before the committing magistrate not being on oath or admitting of cross-examination, cannot be given in evidence at the trial. Indeed, a witness at the trial may refuse to be sworn until his written evidence thus taken before the committing magistrate is first cancelled. Another peculiarity is now to be noticed, which may be considered as a set-off in favour of the prisoner against his want of an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses who appeared before the committing magistrate, which is this, that he is absolutely entitled by his attorney to examine beforehand every witness, whom the public prosecutor is to bring against him at the trial. This he is enabled to do by means of the list of witnesses furnished to him as before described, and he can thus ascertain with great accuracy the nature of the evidence against which he must contend; indeed, if he can shew that his attorney has not been able to obtain access to any witness, this is a good ground for asking a postponement of the trial. Though, however, the prisoner's attorney is thus entitled to see and examine the Crown witnesses who are to appear at the trial, so as to know what they can speak to, the interview is permitted to take place only in presence of the Crown solicitor, or his clerk, or some person authorised by the magistrate. This restriction is imposed with a view to prevent the prisoner or his attorney from tampering with the witnesses. The law of Scotland also declares, that the evidence of a single witness, however clear and conclusive, is not sufficient in any case, whether of felony or misdemeanour, to warrant a conviction, unless at least there is also very strong corroborative testimony; and the rule is carried to a degree of stringency unknown in this country.

When a witness is called upon to give evidence in a criminal trial in Scotland, the manner in which he is sworn is much more impressive than in this country. It is the Judge and not the usher, who administers the solemn formula. No New Testament is tendered, but instead thereof the Judge calls on the witness to hold up his right hand, and repeat after him the following words:—"I swear by Almighty God, and as I shall answer to God at the Great Day of Judgment, that I will tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in so far as I know, or shall be asked on this occasion."

The order in which counsel address the jury is also somewhat remarkable. When the Criminal Law Commissioners in 1844 elicited so many opinions as to the leading points of our criminal procedure, it will be recollected, that many gentlemen expressed an opinion, that some invariable rule should be adopted of securing to the prisoner's counsel the last word to the jury, much injustice being too often done by the prosecutor's privilege of reply. On this subject, the Scotch procedure can throw important light, for the Scotch act invariably on the contrary practice to ourselves, and altogether it must be admitted that they have adopted the more rational and humane plan. The following is the mode in which they conduct their prosecutions. After the jury is sworn, and the preliminary objections already referred to disposed of, the prosecuting counsel commences, not with an address to the jury, telling them with copious and minute detail of the facts, which "he hopes to be able to prove" by his witnesses, but with calling these witnesses at once. It is very rarely indeed that any preliminary statement whatever is made by either counsel, the general rule being that which has now been stated. The prosecuting counsel, therefore, calls his witnesses one by one, the prisoner's counsel cross-examining, and the other re-examining, if necessary. Junior counsel take the examination in chief, alternately with their leader, if the latter think fit. After the prosecuting counsel has called all his witnesses, the prisoner's counsel immediately calls his own witnesses seriatim, who are dealt with by the other side in the same way. When the witnesses for the defence have been exhausted, then the senior prosecuting counsel begins to address the jury, commenting, with what amplitude he thinks proper, on the evidence produced on both sides. After he has concluded, the prisoner's counsel then rises, and addresses the jury in reply, and this ends the case. If, however, from any peculiarity of the case, further evidence should be called incidentally or otherwise, or any discussion arises on a point of law, the rule is invariable, that the prosecuting counsel speaks first, and the prisoner's counsel replies, speaking last. The Judge then immediately sums up. Though it must be confessed there are obvious advantages to the prisoner in this procedure, it is, nevertheless, found in practice to give rise to this disadvantage, that it too often happens that the Judge displays a tendency to assume the advocate, and reply to the prisoner's counsel. This, however, perhaps, is an evil which exists to some extent even in our own practice, with this additional aggravation, that with us the jury are favoured with two successive replies, to the prisoner's counsel instead of one, which is all that is possible in Scotland.

The next point to be noticed is the constitution and powers of the jury. Since the Scotch jury in criminal cases consists of fifteen persons, it is not so much to be wondered at that a verdict by a majority should be held valid, inasmuch as there must thus be always a concurrence of at least eight voices. A considerable proportion of the consulted leaders of our profession ten years ago, expressed a desire to see effect given to the decision of some majority even in our own jury of twelve, some consenting to fix the minimum at eight, some at nine, and others at ten out of the twelve. Our partiality for the rule of unanimity may be somewhat inveterate; yet nevertheless, satisfactory as the Scotch may find their juries to work by a majority, we cannot help thinking, that it is impossible to answer the one solid argument in favour of our own practice, that nothing tends more effectually to compel the jury to consider and weigh well the evidence in all its bearings, to correct misapprehensions, and review hasty impressions, aided by minds having equal opportunities of judging, than the knowledge that they must be unanimous in their ultimate finding.

Not only does a Scotch verdict in a criminal case not require to be unanimous, but it does not require to be even one out of the two —"guilty," or "not guilty,"—for it may be something intermediate, viz. "not proved." If a strict adherence to truth be a primary requisite of a jury's finding, there can be no doubt that such a verdict as this, which in fact declares, that while there is well-grounded suspicion against the prisoner, yet it is not strong enough in the eye of the law to warrant condemnation, is one which exists in the nature of things. Every person who has witnessed the proceedings in a jury trial sees that such a verdict is an accurate reflex, and aptly represents the result of the whole evidence, and the effect which is left on the spectator's mind. The objection that is most generally urged against such a verdict is, that it invariably leaves a stigma on the character of the prisoner which clings to him for life. The answer to this seems to be, that it is not the jury's fault, but the fault of the unfortunate combination of circumstances with which the prisoner has come to be mixed up. It is at least a remarkable fact, that out of the whole number of acquittals that take place in the Scotch Criminal Courts, no less than eighty-five per cent. are cases in which "not proved" is the verdict delivered by the jury.

We have thus seen, that the criminal procedure of Scotland is in almost every feature distinguished by some peculiarity from our own. It may seem somewhat irreconcileable with our English notions of freedom, that the magistrate should have it in his power to commit the accused for trial, without even putting the witnesses to them on oath, or allowing the accused to be present at the examination, or even by his attorney or counsel to cross-examine them; but we have also seen, that there is an ample set-off in other respects in favour of the prisoner. First, the evidence taken before the magistrate is immediately subjected to the scrutiny of a practised counsel, and if a primâ facie case is not made out, the accused is immediately discharged. If he is not, he can force on his trial within a reasonable period, and he has ample time and facility for preparing his defence, inasmuch as he must be informed fifteen days beforehand of all the witnesses who are to be brought against him, and he can actually compel the Crown solicitor to allow his attorney to examine these witnesses, so as to know almost the entire extent and weight of their evidence; in addition to which, if he is unable to pay the fees of counsel, he is entitled to have their services gratuitously.

The number of prisoners who are thus discharged after at most a few days' imprisonment by the order of the Lord Advocate and his deputies the public prosecutors, for want of a primâ facie case being made out against them, is not less than 620 per annum, or 13 per cent. of the whole persons committed for trial.

The criminal statistics of England and Scotland respectively prove to a demonstration the great if not the triumphant superiority of the Scotch criminal procedure as a whole, over our own. There are two very accurate tests by which this superiority may be detected. The one is, that the least possible number of innocent persons who have been apprehended on suspicion should be detained in prison, or even put on their trial at all. The second is, that of those who are justly put on their trial, the least possible number of guilty persons should escape. The accuracy of these tests will appear perhaps sufficiently self-evident, and when one system excels another by a striking superiority in both, it may be inferred with tolerable certainty that the former is founded on more correct principles. The greater number of innocent persons who are speedily discharged, without being detained to undergo the cruel indignity of a trial, the more perfect will be the criminal procedure under which this happens. It is found, therefore, from a collection of the statistics of the two countries, that out of the total number of offenders committed for trial, while only about 7 per cent. (6·8) are not actually put on their trial through want of a prosecutor, and through the grand jury ignoring the bill in this country, nearly three times as many, viz. 18 per cent. are in Scotland discharged at once by order of the Lord Advocate a few days after commitment. In both cases these must be assumed to be persons who ought never to have been apprehended at all, or if there was reasonable ground for apprehending them, who ought at once to have been discharged. Again, it seems equally clear that where persons have been rightly put to their trial that system seems more safe and sure where the fewest persons have been so put to their trial without cause; in other words, where the least number of prisoners are acquitted. It is found accordingly that out of the whole number of persons put on their trial before the petty jury, while only 7 per cent. are acquitted in Scotland (including in that calculation the verdicts of "not proved") no less than 19 per cent. are acquitted in this country. These statistics sufficiently demonstrate the decided superiority of the Scottish system over our own.

Before concluding this notice of so many points of difference in the Scotch criminal procedure which naturally excite an interest, it may not be inappropriate also to mention that all the Quarter Sessions cases are disposed of by a regularly trained Judge, who is a counsel of some standing, viz. the County Court Judge of the district. And what may seem equally novel is, that he tries two-fifths of these cases without the aid of a jury at all.

THE LEGISLATOR.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Friday, Dec. 17. — The Attorney-General introduced a Bill for defining the law affecting such publications as Household Narrative, and for declaring that such works are not newspapers. The remaining business was then disposed of.

THE MAGISTRATE,

AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

In the form of a County Court Appeal, an interesting case has been decided on the duties of a Clerk of the Peace. A. was convicted on two indictments for misdemeanour at Quarter Sessions, and sentenced to a fine of 4*l.* on one, and 2*l.* on the other. The trial had taken place before a second Court, sitting under the authority of the statutes. The fines were immediately paid by A.'s attorney to the person acting there as deputy for the Clerk of the Peace, and he handed them to the undersheriff. No entry was made of their receipt and payment over. The Clerk of the Peace in due time sent the roll, containing a copy of the fines, &c. (as directed by the statute) to the sheriff, with costs, addressed to him, for the purpose of levying the amounts. This roll omitted to state that the fines in question had been paid. The sheriff executed the writs, and took A. into custody, for which he brought the present action against the Clerk of the Peace. Was he liable for the neglect of the person acting as his deputy? The Court of Q. B. held, that the Clerk of the Peace would be liable, if he received fines and neglected to enter them, for damages arising from such neglect; but it was left doubtful whether he was liable for the neglect of the person acting as his deputy. Coleridge, J. thus stated his duties:—"Supposing him to have received the fine, and to have omitted to enter it on the roll as paid, and that then the sheriff, not knowing of the payment, levies, although the sheriff himself may not be quite free from negligence, yet I think there would be a breach of duty if the fine were paid to the clerk himself. But in this case the fine was paid to the appointee, and by him handed over to the sheriff; and whether any breach of duty by him constitutes negligence on the part of the Clerk of the Peace, depends upon the relation between the clerk and his appointee, and we have not quite sufficient facts before us to decide this point. (Wildes v. Morris, 20 Law T. Rep. 140.)

New Enclosure Act.—An Act of Parliament has just been printed to authorise the enclosure of the following places:—Bampton and Shilton, Oxford and Berks; Homanton, Wilts; Hareshaw-common, Northumberland; Beedon-common, Berks; Wigginton, Hertford; Broad-halfpenny-down, Southampton; Snetterton, Norfolk; Morestead-down, Southampton; Watford-field, Hertford; Great Marlow, Bucks; Oschill-common, Dorset; Magor, Monmouth; Undy, Monmouth; Eaton Bray, Bedford; Waltby-common, Westmoreland; Kirkby-Stephen-common, Westmoreland; Llanllugan-manor, Montgomery; Clayton, Sussex; Acklam-wold, York; Haughton, Chester; Ditton-common, Kent; High Oak-common, Hertford; Musley-common, Hertford; Aubourn, Lincoln; Fradswell-heath, Suffolk; and Bensington, Berrick-Salome, and Ewelme, Oxford. These enclosures are to be made forthwith.

County Rates.—Last year, out of the grants made by Parliament in aid of the county rates, 244,271*l.* 12s. was expended in the prosecution of the prisoners; 5,482*l.* 1s. 7d. in the conveyance of prisoners; and 69,024*l.* 8s. 6d. in the maintenance of prisoners from the 1st of April, 1851, to the 31st of March last; making a total of counties and boroughs in England and Wales of 318,778*l.* 2s. 1d. expended in the manner described.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

The question so long in suspense, in consequence of the contradictory decisions of different Courts and different Judges, as to the liability of a company to pay compensation to a landowner on the intended line, in consideration of his withdrawing his opposition, even although the Bill did not pass, and the railway was not made, has now been decided by the Lord Chancellor, in Hawkes v. The Eastern Counties Railway Company, 20 Law T. Rep. 117. His Lordship has taken the same view of it as appeared in the earlier cases, and has held that specific performance of such a contract should be enforced, holding that an undertaking not to oppose the Bill in Parliament is a good consideration to support the agreement. His Lordship's judgment will be read with the greatest interest, as it is one of his masterly reviews of an important practical question. "Although," he said, "the land is not wanted, yet the agreement being not to oppose, and the man being fairly in the situation of landowner, it was considered to be a contract that would probably be enforced." Again, "where, as in this case, it is an absolute and unqualified contract to take the land, I should certainly hold that no subsequent accident, certainly no subsequent conduct on the part of the company, could relieve them from the obligation they were bound by at the time they entered into it." His Lordship closed with a severe rebuke to companies and their legal advisers, who enter into contracts that are illegal, and then if they prove to be onerous to them, plead their illegality, for the purpose of relieving themselves from the charge. Although his Lordship drew a very nice distinction between the facts of this case and those in Webb v. The Direct London and Portsmouth Railway Company, 19 Law T. Rep. 2, it must be looked upon as really a reversal of that decision.

A railway company had marked a tunnel on their plan, and afterwards deviated at that spot. Upon this the question arose whether they were bound to make a corresponding tunnel on the deviated line. It was held that they had no power to deviate, but Maule, J. was of opinion, that having deviated, there was no duty imposed upon them to make a tunnel. (Little v. The Newport, &c. Railway Company, 20 Law T. Rep. 128.)

WINDING UP.

We had supposed that the question raised in Ex parte Pearson's Executors, 20 Law T. Rep. 123, had been more than once disposed of, and was too clear even for an argument. A provisional committeeman attended meetings. After the abandonment of the scheme, it was resolved, at a meeting of the managing committee, at which he was not present, that each director should be applied to for payment of 160*l.* on payment of which he should be released from further liability. He paid that sum. For this the Master placed his executors on the list of contributories, in direct opposition to all the recent decisions. Of course, Vice-Chancellor Stuart immediately ordered their names to be struck out.

Another decision against the liability of allottees. In Ex parte Beardshaw, 20 Law T. Rep. 140, the directors had given a special undertaking to return the deposits if they should not obtain their Act. The Act did not pass, and then a circular was issued to the allottees to attend a meeting, at which A. was present by proxy, and resolutions of confidence in the directors were passed. A. was held not to be a contributory towards the original expenses.

AMICABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Since the publication of Mr. H. T. Thomson's last letter, in yours of the 11th inst. I have seen a book which professes to contain the charters and bye-laws of this society, and I shall presently shew, as concisely as I can, the real state of the case between us.

I must, however, be permitted to observe, that the policy effected by my client on the 9th of October, 1832, was on the life of another person, and by the charter of the company no member has a right to vote unless he has an insurance on his own life, nor is he entitled to notice of any of the society's proceedings.

I have also to state that the printed prospectus set out in my former letters is like those of the present day—undated. It may have been printed in 1821, as suggested by Mr. Thomson. I propose now to state the facts according to the dates supplied by Mr. Thomson's letter and the office pamphlets.

On the 30th of October, 1807, a new charter was obtained, whereby it was provided that seven-eighths of the annual premiums to be received in every year were to form the amount of dividend or bonus to be payable on the shares, on the deaths of the assured happening within the year. Each share was guaranteed at this time (according to Mr. Thomson's statement) to realise 150*l.* only.

In 1820, the claims realised 150*l.* a share, and 210*l.* bonus, or 140 per cent.

In 1823, a supplemental charter was obtained, whereby the profits were directed to be divided on an average of the five years next preceding the death of the assured.

In 1830, the shares were guaranteed to realise 200*l.* each, and the bonus on each was 80*l.* 14*s.* or 40*l.* per cent.

In 1831, the bonus on each 200*l.* share was 123*l.* 10*s.* or 62*l.* per cent.

In 1832 (April), the bonus on each 200*l.* share was 137*l.* 4*s.* or 68*l.* 15*s.* per cent.

On 9th Oct. 1832, my client effected the policy in question for ten shares (2,000*l.*) on the life of R. B.

On 12th April, 1836 (three and a half years afterwards, and without any notice to my client), the society obtained a supplementary charter, which provided that the claims to arise in the years from 1836 to 1840 should be paid at the rate of 250*l.* a share, thus giving a bonus of 25*l.* per cent. and it was thereby declared that after 1840 the profit and loss on each year should be calculated on an average of the preceding seven years.

In July, 1847, as before stated, the policy in question became a claim, and the whole amount received on it was 2,227*l.* the bonus being 11*l.* 7*s.* per cent. only, whilst the total amount paid for entrance-money and premiums being 2,425*l.* left my client out of pocket 198*l.* without receiving one farthing for the compound interest thereon during fifteen years, which, at the low rate of three per cent. would be 735*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*

It is not my intention to enter into any controversy with Mr. Thomson on the principles of life assurance. All I propose to do is to state the plain facts, so that the legal profession should know the principle of the Amicable office. There is no other office, old or young, in London that carries out the same principles and practice. The principle of all other offices is this—the longer the policy is in force, the greater the bonus. The principle of the Amicable appears to be precisely the reverse.

If the policy had become a claim in either of the years from 1836 to 1840, the bonus would have been twenty-five per cent. and the total amount receivable, 2,500*l.* If in 1846, the bonus would have been twelve per cent. and the total amount receivable, 2,240*l.*

In 1847, it became a claim, the bonus was 11*l.* 7*s.* per cent. only, and the total amount actually receivable was 2,227*l.*

In 1851, had the policy been still in force, there would have been four additional premiums paid upon it, or, 644*l.* In that year the divisible profit was 9 per cent. and the total amount receivable would have been 2,180*l.* only.

In 1852 (the present year), if still in force, 161*l.* more would have been paid, and the divisible profit being 10 per cent. the total amount receivable would have been 2,269*l.* only, or 27*l.* less than the amount received in 1847.

It therefore clearly appears that, if the death had not taken place until the current year, my client would have paid in hard cash 3,650*l.* and would have received 2,200*l.* only, leaving him a dead loss of 850*l.* independently of twenty years' compound interest on the entrance-money and premiums.

These facts will speak for themselves.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

London, Dec. 20, 1852. INVESTIGATOR.

PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and made, during the past week.]

Pennant and Orsigwen Consolidated Lead Mining Company.—Call of 1*l.* per share on Dec. 20.—Tinney.

Wesleyan Newspaper Association.—Call of 3*l.* per share on Jan. 15.—Tinney.

Tontine Life Assurance Company.—Call of 7*s.* per share, on Dec. 31.—Horne.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

ANOTHER interesting judgment of the late LORD CHANCELLOR was reported last week. Barrington v. Liddell, 20 Law T. Rep. 133, was a question on the construction and application of the famous Thellusson Act. It is not necessary to present a summary of the case, for it depends upon its special facts; but the judgment is, as usual, a masterly review of the whole law, and we take from it an important construction of the statute, which the Real Property Lawyer ought to commit to memory. The statute excepts from its prohibition "any child or children of any person taking an interest under any such conveyance, settlement, or devise." What does that mean? Lord ST. LEONARDS says, "I am compelled to say that the Legislature meant what it has expressed—that nobody's child should be provided for unless you give an interest to the parent. . . . They were forced, under this proviso, to give some definition of the parents of the children, or else, as everybody is of course the child of somebody, you would have had it apply to the whole world. The Legislature said if, upon the face of your will, you make the father an object of your bounty, you may by that same will accumulate a fund within the limit allowed by law for his children; but we will not permit you to provide for anybody. It does not exclude the case of a man having an estate for life in a property given to him by a will, where the portions are directed to be raised out of that estate for his children. But does it apply to that case only? The expression is 'any interest;' there is no limit as to amount; you are yourself to be the judge of the amount and of the extent of your bounty. If there be upon the face of the will an expression, an intention of bounty, and effect given to that intention by an absolute gift to a man, then you may provide for the children of that man portions by way of accumulation: that defines who are to be the children of 'other persons.'" Another case under this statute is reported from Vice-Chancellor STUART. A. gave to trustees 50,000*l.* for maintenance of her lunatic son B. As to the surplus, interest to accumulate, and after the death of B. to dispose of the principal and accumulations for the support of the children of B. during minority, or until their portions should become payable under the will, and on their attaining twenty-one, to call in the 50,000*l.* and accumulations, and divide the same among the children of B. This was held to be valid, as being within the exception commented upon in the preceding case. (Lord Middleton v. Losh, 20 Law T. Rep. 138.)

The other cases reported in this branch of the law, are scarcely capable of being described in a summary, the facts being too complicated.

CONVEYANCING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The solicitor, whose letter appears in your last number, with a proposed per-centage scale of costs in lieu of the old mode, will, I think, have some difficulty in shewing how he thereby carries out his own principle that "remuneration for conveyancing business ought not to be dependent on the length of deeds, but on the skill and labour employed, and responsibility incurred, in their preparation." How can he regulate the amount of skill and labour by the amount of money to be paid on a sale or mortgage? Are all titles alike? all abstracts the same length, and therefore the skill and labour the same in every case? On the contrary, is not the very reverse the fact? and does it not often occur that there is more skill, labour, and responsibility (setting aside the amount of money) incurred in preparing a conveyance or mortgage for 1,000*l.* than for one ten times that amount?

I agree, it is a "consummation most devoutly to be wished," that such a scale as the one proposed should be practicable, and in the case of a mortgagor for a small amount, the costs often press hardly; but in the present state of the law, as regards titles and property, and as regards attorneys (laches, to wit), I maintain that the per-centage scale will not do. I am, Sir, yours, &c.

ANOTHER SOLICITOR.

Manchester, Dec. 22.

LIFE POLICY OF ASSURANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The subjoined case, of which I have a manuscript note, and which is also reported in the authorities, may assist your correspondent "Subscriber."

From this case, and others reported, it may, I think, be said to be settled, that payment of the insurance money cannot be enforced if the life should die after the year, or period of payment has elapsed, although the days of grace have not expired. The insurance expires with the Term, and does not continue during the days of grace, or enlarged time; and if the agent takes upon himself to give credit for the premium, the company is not bound by it. (See Tarleton v. Stainforth, 5 T. R. 695; Want v. Blunt, 12 East, 183; Jurist, vol. 10, p. 393, 7 M. & W. 151.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Bristol, Dec. 20. J. C. WHITEFIELD.

SITTINGS IN BANCO, BEFORE LORD ABINGER.

November 4, 1840.

ACEY v. FIENIE.

Life policy—Credit for premium given by agent.

Sir F. Pollock moved for leave to enter a verdict for the plaintiff upon the 1st count, or for a new trial upon the 2nd count, raised by the pleadings.

This was an action on a life policy of assurance, effected by one Charles Simpson for 400*l.* with the British Commercial Company, Hull. It appeared that by the rules of the company, fifteen days of grace were allowed to parties whose premiums might not be paid on the proper day.

Besides this, the company makes a practice of debiting their agents with the amount of premiums which they do not report to the head office as unpaid on the fifteenth day.

Under these circumstances, the premium on this particular policy being unpaid without any report, the agent was debited therewith; and the assured having died within a month afterwards, the company resisted the claim of his representatives, on the ground that the policy had expired. In reply to this, it was argued that the defendants having debited their agents with the amount of premium, ought not to avail themselves of the fact that none had, in fact, been paid within the proper time by Mr. Simpson, but that the subsequent payment might be taken by the jury to be evidence either of a payment nunc pro tunc, or of a new contract of assurance upon the terms of the expired policy. It might be that there was some understanding between the agent and Mr. Simpson, or some pecuniary transactions, in pursuance of which the agent had agreed to allow himself to be debited, as if the premium had been received by him for the company; and that when he did actually receive it, it should be considered as if paid within the time stipulated for or allowed by his employers to the assured. If so, then it was submitted that there might well be said to have been evidence to go to the jury that the agent had entered into a new contract with Mr. Simpson in the terms of the original one.

The COURT, however, thought that the verdict which had passed for the defendant, ought not to be disturbed. The only ground on which the action could succeed was, that the agent at Hull had been the agent of both parties, but that was not so, and it was clear that he had no authority whatever to enter into any new policy with one who had allowed the original contract to expire by default of payment of the premium. Neither could it be said that the debiting of the agent of the company with the amount of the premium, because he had not reported it as unpaid, was to be taken to be a payment to them of the premium. That was only a practice adopted by them for the purpose of keeping their agents in order. It was the duty of the agents to report the cases where the premiums were not paid within the fifteen days, and to return the receipts; and if he takes upon himself not to do so, but to receive the money after that time, it is clear that the company cannot be bound by it. There is therefore no ground whatever for saying that the payment so made to the agent, or the debiting of the agent by the company, is evidence of any new contract. Rule refused.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

A COUNTY Court appeal was reported last week, but it related entirely to a question of general law, and involved nothing on the law or the practice of the County Courts, so that it is noted in the department to which it properly belongs.

But there are several reports in Insolvency. In Re Rothery, 20 Law T. Rep. 143, the petition was dismissed, because all the places where the petitioner had resided for six months previously to filing the petition were not fully set forth in it; and in Re Lockwood, 20 Law T. Rep. 143, it was dismissed for not being duly attested. In Re Hackney, 20 Law T. Rep. 143, where a debtor had been arrested at the suit of a creditor, who had gone to America, and the wife of that creditor filed a petition and vesting order, it was set aside. In Re Miles, 20 Law T. Rep. 144, the Court recommended an allocation of the pay of a military officer for the benefit of the creditors, although he refused to swear to his schedule, or take his discharge. In Re Carlton, 20 Law T. Rep. 144, it was questioned, but not decided, if a pension from the Royal bounty to a literary man came under the allocation clause of the Insolvent Act. But it was held that, if it could be regarded as after-acquired property, the creditors under a previous insolvency would be rateably entitled to it. In Re Haslett, 20 Law T. Rep. 144, where a landlord had destrained the goods of an insolvent the day after his arrest, and they were purchased by third parties, and still left in insolvent's possession, it was held that they would not pass to his assignee; and in Re Edwards, 20 Law T. Rep. 144, it was decided, that though an insolvent may be out of custody when his case comes on for hearing, the Court may retain his petition, and give liberty to an ad interim assignee to apply for costs of opposition out of any fund in his hand.

LATE CASES ON THE LAW AND PRACTICE OF THE COUNTY COURTS.(a)

VIII.—CASES ON QUESTIONS OF INTERPLEADER.

A BILL of interpleader is where a person who owes a debt or rent to one of the parties in a suit, but, till the determination of it, he knows not to which, desires that they may interplead, that he may be safe in the payment. In this case it is usual to order the money to be paid into court, for the benefit of such of the parties to whom, upon hearing, the Court shall decree it to be due.

By the statute of the 8th of Anne, c. 14, s. 1, it is enacted, that "no goods or chattels whatsoever, lying or being in or upon the messuages, shall be liable to be taken by virtue of any execution on any pretence whatsoever, unless the party at whose suit the said execution issued out shall, before the removal of such goods from off the said premises, pay to the landlord all such sums of money as shall be due for rent for the said premises at the time of taking such goods and chattels, provided the said arrears of rent do not amount to more than one year's rent."

By s. 107 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95 (the County Courts Act), it is enated, that "so much of an Act passed in the eighth year of the reign of Queen Anne, intituled, 'An Act for the better Security of Rents, and to prevent Frauds committed by Tenants,' as relate to the liability of goods taken by virtue of any execution, shall not be deemed to apply to goods taken in execution under the process of any Court holden under this Act; but the landlord of any tenement in which any such goods shall be so taken, shall be entitled (by any writing under his hand, or under the hand of his agent, to be delivered to the bailiff or officer making the levy, which writing shall state the terms of holding, and the rent payable for the same) to claim any rent then due to him, not exceeding the rent of four weeks, where the tenement is let by the week, and not exceeding the rent accruing due on two terms of payment where the tenement is let for any other term less than a year; and not exceeding in any case the rent accruing due in one year: and in case of any such claim being so made, the bailiff or officer making the levy shall distrain as well for the amount of the rent so claimed, and the costs of such additional distress, as for the amount of money and costs for which the warrant of execution issued under this Act, and shall not proceed to sell the same, or any part thereof, within five days next after such distress taken; and if any replevin be made of the goods so taken, such of the goods shall be sold under the execution as shall satisfy the money and costs for which the warrant of execution issued, and the costs of the sale, and the overplus of such sale (if any), and also the residue of the goods, shall be returned, as in other cases of distress for rent and replevin thereof; and for every such additional distress for rent in arrear, the high bailiff of the court shall be entitled to have as the costs of the distress, instead of the fees allowed by this Act for making such distress and keeping possession thereof, the fees allowed by an Act passed in the 57th year of King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to regulate the Costs of Distresses levied for Payment of Small Rents.'"

By sec. 118 of the same Act, it is enacted, that "if any claim shall be made to or in respect of any goods or chattels taken in execution under the process of any Court holden under this Act, or in respect of the proceeds or value thereof, by any landlord for rent, or by any person not being the party against whom such process has issued, it shall be lawful for the clerk of the Court, upon application of the officer charged with the execution of such process, as well before as after any action brought against such officer, to issue a summons calling before the said Court as well the party issuing such process as the party making such claim, and thereupon any action which shall have been brought in any of her Majesty's Superior Courts of Record, or in any local or inferior court, in respect of such claim, shall be stayed, and the Court in which such action shall have been brought, or any judge thereof, on proof of the issue of such summons, and that the goods and chattels were so taken in execution, may order the party so bringing such action to pay the costs of all proceedings had upon such action after the issue of such summons out of the County Court; and the judge of the County Court shall adjudicate upon such claim, and make such order between the parties in respect thereof, and of the cost of the proceedings, as to him shall seem fit, and such order shall be enforced in like manner as any order made in any suit brought in such court."

And by Rule 39, under sects. 78 and 118 of the above Act of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, it is directed, that "when any claim shall be made to or in respect of any goods or chattels taken in execution under the process of any court holden under the authority of the said Act, or in respect of the proceeds or value thereof, by any landlord for rent, or by any person not being the party against whom such process has issued, and summonses have been issued on the application of the officer charged with the execution of such process, such summonses shall be served in such time and manner as hereinbefore directed for a summons to appear to a plaint, and the claimant shall be deemed to be the plaintiff and the execution creditor; the defendant and the claimant shall, five days before the day on which the summonses are returnable, deliver to the said officer, or leave at the office of the clerk of the court, a particular of any goods or chattels alleged to be the property of the claimant, and the grounds of his claim, or, in case of a claim for rent, of the amount thereof, and for what period the same is claimed to be due."

The first of the cases to which we shall advert as bearing on the question for our present consideration, is one which was determined in the Westminster County Court, before Mr. Moylan, to whose very able and learned judgment we must also refer. It is the case of Barr v. Reid, 1 Cox & Mac. 53. It was here decided that the statute of 8 Anne, c. 14, which gives to landlords priority of claim for rent over an execution creditor, is not repealed by the 107th section of the County Court Act, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. His Honour, in delivering his judgment, observed "that the point urged by the High Bailiff of Westminster, by whom the goods and chattels in question had been taken in execution under the ordinary process of the Westminster County Court, was that the statute of the 8th of Anne, c. 14 (which was passed for the express purpose of protecting landlords from pretended or collusive judgments), was in substance repealed by the 107th section of the new Act, and that in the recovery of their respective debts the execution creditor henceforward takes precedence of the landlord. I do not think such a construction of the law can be at all sustained. In order thoroughly to understand the question, it is necessary to refer, first, to the statute of Anne, c. 14, s. 1, and then to the two sections of the new Act, ss. 107 and 118. Now, it appears to me, that the intention of the 107th section, and its plain effect, is to do away with the old inviolability of the tenant's goods. The statute of Anne positively directed that the advance of the landlord's rent should be first made before the creditor could proceed even to remove the goods. Upon this point an erroneous practice has questionless prevailed, for the sheriff first to sell, and then, out of the proceeds, to satisfy the landlord: this error was pointed out and reproved by Lord Denman, in the case of Cocker v. Musgrove and Moon. Be that as it may, the precedence of the landlord has never been disputed. Under the new law this precedence, or superior right of the landlord, is merely modified, and in cases of small tenancy, still further restricted in amount. He must go through certain forms to assert his right. The onus of inquiry is no longer on the high bailiff, as it was formerly on the sheriff; the principle of precedence remains quite untouched. If it were not so, why impose upon the landlord the trouble and expense of serving on the high bailiff any notice of his claim for rent? could it be to secure to him what is already, and must continue to be, his, as long as the rights of property are respected? This would be tantamount to a declaration that the landlord's right to his rent is not to be altogether forfeited; on the contrary, this section is a clear and equitable one, and as plainly expressed as the English language can express it. The 118th section must be taken in connection with the earlier clause. It is in substance a reprint of the 6th section of the 1 & 2 Wm. 4, c. 58 (the Interpleader Act), and its purpose, as was that of its prototype, is merely to protect the high bailiff from an action by the creditor, if he yielded to the landlord's claim, or by the landlord, if he persisted in the execution of the process from the Court. Surely this provision for the adjudication of adverse claims between landlord and judgment creditor would be wholly useless if the construction attempted to be put upon the 107th section could be sustained. On the whole, the question seems to me to be free from all doubt. The landlord in this particular case has complied with the requirements of the Act as to notice, &c.; the rent for one term of the letting is admitted to be due, and the amount not disputed. The high bailiff has already, it appears, effected a sale of the goods, and the judgment of the Court is, that the quarter's rent be satisfied before any portion of the proceeds be available to the judgment creditor."

In the following case, A. had claimed goods seized by a bailiff in execution issued from the County Court at the suit of B. Summonses had been issued to A. and B. The notice under the 39th rule of practice was in the form following:—"I, the undersigned, &c. do hereby give you notice that the several goods and chattels underwritten [specifying them] are, and every one of such goods and chattels were, at the time of the seizing of the same, my own property, and not the property of Ross." It was held,—first, that the judges were empowered to make such a rule of practice as above, under the powers given to them by the 78th section of the County Courts Act; secondly, that the County Court judge had rightly decided that the 39th rule of practice had not been complied with by particulars merely specifying the goods and stating the amount of claim. (Reg. v. Chilton, 1 Cox & Mac. 293.)

In the next case, summonses had been issued under the 118th section of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, in a case of a disputed claim, and at the hearing it was objected that no sufficient notice had been served by the plaintiff of his grounds of claim under rule 39. The judge held the objection to be fatal, and decided that the goods were those of the defendant in the original suit, and liable to the process of the Court. (Jessop v. Crawley and Others, 1 Cox & Mac. 296.)

Judgment having been obtained against a defendant in an action in the County Court, execution issued, and certain property was seized thereunder. A claim was then made by A. and B. that such goods were theirs, and the form of their grounds of claim was, "that the said two horses, two collars, and two bridles were assigned to us by an indenture dated the 28th day of May, 1850, and made between," &c. (stating the parties). Upon an objection taken at the trial, that this statement was not a compliance with Rule 39, the judge held the objection to be good, and refused to hear the claim. Upon an application to the Court of Q. B. for a mandamus to the judge to hear the claim, it was held that the statement of the ground of claim was sufficient, and the mandamus was ordered to go. (Reg. v. The Judge of the County Court of Oswestry, 1 Cox & Mac. 492; Ex parte Harper and Another.) COLERIDGE, J. here observed, while delivering the judgment of the Court, "that the question in this case is whether there has been an adjudication upon the merits; or whether the Court abstained on account of the preliminary point. Here I must take it, that the claimant has been refused a hearing, on account of not having given a sufficient notice; but as to that, it really seems to me that the notice was quite sufficient. The notice need not set out a good ground of claim; it will still be a good claim if it describes in what way the party claims. The judge will decide upon the validity of the claim when he has heard the case. This is not the case of Ex parte Tanner, 19 L.J. 318, Q.B. Here the claimants shew how they claim. It is said that the claim is not sufficient, as the deed may have been a voluntary one, and void as against creditors. So it may be; still they say this is our claim, and it is for the judge to adjudicate upon it."

(a) By GEORGE HANSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

Goods having been seized under an execution out of a County Court, a third party claimed them under an assignment, whereupon the bailiff took out an interpleader summons. The claimant in due time delivered a particular of the goods he claimed, stating, without specifying them individually, that he claimed all the goods possessed by the defendant, and stating his title. On the hearing, it was objected that the claim was bad in not specifying the goods, or setting them forth in a schedule; which objection the judge held to be good, and refused to hear the case. Upon a motion for a mandamus to compel him to hear, it was held that the particular was sufficient. (Heslop v. M'George, 18 Law T. 109.)

As nearly connected with this subject, we shall next proceed to consider the cases recently determined on the question of replevin.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

EQUITY PRACTICE. — An unusual number of practice cases were reported last week. A brief note of each will suffice.

In the new practice of Evidence, it was held in Booth v. Tomlinson, 20 Law T. Rep. 136, that the Court has no power to order the viva voce examination of a defendant in a suit already at issue. But in Hextall v. Cheatle, 20 Law T. Rep. 139, Vice-Chancellor STUART ordered such an examination of a party to the cause, under a decree made before the passing of the new Act.

In Re Martin's Estate, 20 Law T. Rep. 136, the Court refused to make an order as to the particular conveyancing Counsel to whom a title was to be referred, observing, "It might be such of them as had less business than others if despatch were required."

In Everett v. Belding, 20 Law T. Rep. 136, the owner of an estate, subject to charges, who had been made defendant to a suit in respect of them, was compelled to attorn to a receiver appointed in the cause, and a reference was directed to the Master to fix an occupation-rent.

Vice-Chancellor STUART suggested the propriety of altering the form of the decree in the ordinary administration suit, now that a simple contract creditor was entitled to payment out of the real estate. It was proposed that in such decrees an inquiry should be directed whether there was real estate. (Gregory v. Atkinson, 20 Law T. Rep. 140.)

In the practice of Inspection of Documents, a very important case is reported from Vice-Chancellor KINDERSLEY'S Court. It was held in Bartley v. Bartley, 20 Law T. Rep. 140, that where a plaintiff had obtained the usual order to inspect documents in the possession of one of the defendants, a co-defendant has no right to attend such inspection if the defendant in possession of the documents objects.

COMMON LAW.—A nice point in the law of detinue was raised in Crossfield v. Such, 20 Law T. Rep. 141, by demurrer to pleas—as to one portion of the goods non detinet, and, as to the residue, that after the commencement of the suit plaintiff returned them to defendant, who accepted them, and, as to the damages claimed for the detention, defendant pleaded payment of 1s. into court. The question thus raised was as to the effect of the delivery up of the goods after suit upon the damages—could plaintiff in such case recover damages for the previous detention? The Court said,—"It seems, therefore, in detinue for goods, if all or any are delivered up after suit, the plaintiff can have no judgment to recover them or their value, but he may have judgment to recover damages for their detention, if the plaintiff has sustained any; otherwise, not; and, for the residue, the plaintiff may have the usual judgment to recover them or their value, and damages for their detention. . . . In all personal actions money may be paid into court by way of compensation or amends; this is a personal action, in which such compensation or amends is sought to be recovered, although the goods or their values are also sought to be recovered. The case is within the spirit of the Act."

WRITS SENT INTO THE COUNTRY FOR SERVICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Allow me, as a country attorney, to call your attention and that of the Profession generally, but especially London agents and attorneys, to the continued omission of those who send writs, and other proceedings into the country for service, to pay punctually their accounts for agency.

The books of our firm contain many such accounts standing open and unpaid, and I have reason to know that in most of the cases the agency charges have been received and kept by those who ought to have handed them over to the proper quarter.

In one or two instances I have threatened to sue London firms, and I know several who have been compelled by the County Courts to pay their just debts.

In some instances I am willing to allow that the neglect may be an oversight; but, in the great bulk, I fear the desire "to owe no man anything" is wanting.

For my part I have almost resolved to send back the writs unless a remittance accompany them; the charge, in all ordinary cases, might be ascertained and sent in postage stamps.

By publishing this in your widely circulated paper you will much oblige a constant subscriber, and, in conclusion, allow me to remind defaulting members of the Profession, that honour without honesty is a bauble not worth possessing.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Dec. 20. ONE, &c.

MASTERS EXTRAORDINARY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—As a recompense for us unfortunate gentlemen, which in justice ought to be granted to us, I would suggest that all who apply to the Chief Justice, by memorial in the usual way, should, on his approval, receive the appointment of "Commissioner for taking the Acknowledgments of Deeds by Married Women," and remit a year's (or two years', as the case may be) certificate duty to those who do not apply, and have been admitted attorneys within a certain number of years (say ten); because, as a general rule, it will be presumed that any one who has had the appointment during that time will have gained a sufficient emolument by it to repay him for his first outlay.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

AN EX MASTER EXTRA. &c.

Dec. 13, 1852.

COMMON LAW REFORM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—When the Common Law Procedure Act came into operation on the 24th of October last, the Profession naturally expected, that as their fees were to be reduced nearly one-half (as they have since been), that the payments out of pocket to the Government officers for issuing writs, signing judgments, and other process, would be reduced accordingly; but, instead of a reduction being made, an increase has been enforced upon almost every proceeding, for example, the payment for signing judgment before the above Act was 8s.; it has since been increased to 10s. but is now fixed at 9s.; writs of fi. fa. and ca. sa. were 1s.—now 5s. each is exacted; for searching for an appearance no charge was made—it is now 6d.; taxing a short bill of cost was about 2s.—it is now 3s. 6d. and 5s.; but, notwithstanding these increased payments, the costs given by the Taxing Masters upon a judgment under 20*l.* are only 54s.; and above 20*l.* only 4*l.* are allowed. With this additional taxation, how is it possible for the Profession to pay fair salaries, office and other expenses, when our fees are cut down below a proper remunerative scale? For, what with such increased demands, together with a duty of 120*l.* upon the articles of clerkship, 30*l.* admission fees, and 12*l.* per annum afterwards to allow us to practise, I think it can be well said our taxes are heavy indeed.

We have long endeavoured to obtain a repeal of the Certificate Duty, and now that its payment must be occupying the attention of every practitioner, I do hope that another bold stroke will be made to abolish this obnoxious burden. A moderate reduction of our costs is not what we object to, but such wholesale taxation as that to which I have just alluded presses most harshly upon the hard-working professional man.

I write this letter at the request of several members of the Profession, and therefore trust you will do me the favour to insert it.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Bedford-row. J. B. H.

THE RETIRING LORD CHANCELLOR.—The importance of the following provision in the New Chancery Act (15 & 16 Vict. c. 80), will be felt in the retirement of Lord St. Leonards as Lord Chancellor. Section 60th: "Whereas it has frequently happened that after cases have been fully heard by the Lord Chancellor in the Court of Chancery, and are standing for judgment, the Lord Chancellor has delivered up the great seal without being able, by reason of other urgent public business, to deliver judgment therein, and much inconvenience and expense to the parties has been thereby occasioned. For remedy thereof, be it enacted that in every case it shall be lawful for the person who has so delivered up the great seal, within six weeks after he shall have so delivered up the same, to give to the registrar of the said court a written judgment therein, signed by him; and a decree or order, as the case may require, shall be drawn up in pursuance of such judgment, and every such judgment and every such decree or order shall have the same force and effect as if the judgment in pursuance whereof it is drawn up had been given in open court the day before he shall have so delivered up the great seal."

THE MERCANTILE LAWYER.

ONLY a case in bankruptcy required notice in this department. In Re Addis and Others, 20 Law T. Rep. 142, the form of acceptance of a bill of exchange, given by one of several partners for a private debt, but purporting to be the acceptance of the firm, differed from that always used by the firm, and the public was not acquainted with that form. A proof tendered against the joint estate upon an acceptance so differing, was rejected, although there was no question as to the holders having given sufficient value for the bill, upon the principle that there is no implied authority in law, for one partner to accept or give bills in the name of the firm, so as to bind the partnership assets in any other manner than in the usual and proper partnership name, according to the style of the firm known to the world, and with which the public have been acquainted by use and reputation.

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING THE AMENDMENT OF THE LAW.

THE monthly meeting of this society was held at their rooms, 21, Regent-street; VANSITTART NEALE, Esq. in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed, and several new members having been ballotted for and elected,

Mr. BLUNDELL rose to move, "That it is expedient that an appeal should be allowed to suitors in County Courts who may be dissatisfied with, or aggrieved by the decisions of County Court judges in cases of insolvency." He disclaimed any wish to deprecate the County Courts, but he thought that in insolvency cases there should be an appeal to a higher tribunal. Two cases had occurred within his own knowledge, one in which the judge had frankly acknowledged that he was wrong, but said it was not in his power to remedy the wrong. The other was a case of gross partiality.

Mr. CHEER rose to order, and

The CHAIRMAN requested Mr. Blundell to confine himself to abstract principles, and not enter into personalities.

Mr. BLUNDELL then, amid much interruption, and calls to order, proceeded to state the particulars of a case in which he was engaged on behalf of some clients of his. A debtor of his client had been induced to sign a deed of assignment, and he subsequently became insolvent. He (Mr. Blundell) went down to the court in one of the midland counties, and required to see the deed, which he believed to have been fraudulently obtained; but the judge said it was prepared by a friend of his, and he refused to permit it to be produced, and he adjourned the case till October, and told Mr. Blundell that he might find out what day in October the Court would be adjourned to. In October he went down again. Another gentleman was sitting for the regular judge, and he of course could do nothing. The case was adjourned a third time; and at last the deed was produced, and a number of persons connected with the judge had got up a memorial, and attacked him (Mr. Blundell) in the local papers, and when he replied, they brought an action for libel against him. The upshot of it all was that his clients had no remedy for what they conceived to be a great wrong done to them. With regard to the general question of insolvency, he found that since the insolvency cases had been administered in County Courts, the amounts paid in by the County Court clerks within three years was 1,814*l.* while in the three preceding years the money paid into court by the clerks of the commissioners was 15,900*l.* He believed that if there was a right of appeal, such cases as he had referred to would not be at all likely to happen, as the judges would act under a wholesome fear of correction.

Mr. Serjeant Gazelee asked if there was any appeal from the Commissioner of the Insolvent Court in London?

Mr. Blundell said there was not. He thought it ought to extend to the metropolitan courts as well.

The motion, with a slight alteration affirming the desirability of appeals in insolvency cases generally, was then carried, with two dissentients.

THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

Mr. Peachey then moved—"That it is essential to reduce the law of real property to one defined system, that of free and common socage, by the immediate abolition of all customary and exceptional laws; that it is also desirable to amend the law of forfeiture as between landlord and tenant by an enactment that all forfeitures shall be relievable at law, or in equity, upon such terms as the Court shall think fit." With regard to the first part of the resolution, little required to be said; for they were all agreed that it was desirable to abolish copyholds and customary tenures; until they did which, it was impossible to have a general registration of deeds, or a codification of the laws relating to real property. With regard to the second branch of the subject, all who had anything to do with property in the neighbourhood of London would understand its importance. It was not unfrequently the case that non-insurance for a single day incurred a forfeiture of the property; and persons holding under a sub-lease incurred a forfeiture of their property by other persons who had property under the same lease not fulfilling the covenants. Not long ago the half of Somer's-town was under ejectment under these circumstances; but the present earl stopped the ejectments. To be sure, juries were very much indisposed to give verdicts for landlords in cases of forfeiture; but the very dread of the case being carried so far depreciated property very much, and rendered it less valuable both to landlord and tenant.

Mr. Blundell seconded, and after some discussion the motion was withdrawn, and the matter was referred to the consideration of the Real Property Committee.

ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

Mr. Alfred Hill said a report was to have been presented by the committee on the Ecclesiastical Courts. The committee, however, had not agreed to a report, but three draft reports, each making different suggestions, had been prepared by different members, and it was proposed that these should be read and afterwards discussed.

Dr. Waddilove then read a report drawn by him. It referred to the Royal Commission issued in 1830 to inquire into the Ecclesiastical Courts, and the jurisdiction exercised by them, and to their reports, which recommended that these courts should be consolidated; that the jurisdiction of wills should be abolished; that a general register-office should be established for wills of all descriptions; and that Courts of Equity should have jurisdiction to determine all questions of the validity of wills. He (Dr. Waddilove) recommended that there should be one probate court for the whole of England and Wales, sitting in London, which should grant probates in respect both of real and personal property; that the sittings should be held in London or Westminster, and that the jurisdiction of archbishops, bishops, and peculiars should cease. The Court of Probate to be a Court of Record, to have power to enforce its decrees, and to have jurisdiction over the discovery and distribution of assets. Where the property is under 500*l.* the executor or administrator to be sworn before a Master Extraordinary or clergyman.

Mr. Alfred Hill also read the report prepared by him. It recommended the abolition of the Ecclesiastical Courts, and the transference of their jurisdiction, so far as wills and letters of administration are concerned, to the County Courts; that before probate or letters of administration be granted, publicity be given of the intention to apply for them; that wills relating to real property be required to be registered and proved, the same as those relating to personal property; that in cases of intestacy as to real property the Court to have power to grant letters of heirship, corresponding with letters of administration having reference to personalty, the production of which shall be sufficient evidence in courts of law of the right to sue. He also recommended that there should be a general register, and that copies should be kept for inspection in the archives of the respective County Courts.

It was stated that there was a third report, which had been prepared by Mr. Collier, but that gentleman being absent, it was not read.

The two reports were referred to the Ecclesiastical Courts Committee, with a request that they should amalgamate them, and state the points of difference.

The meeting then separated.

CONFERENCE ON THE REFORM OF THE MERCANTILE LAW.

A conference was recently held at the rooms of the Society for promoting the Amendment of the Law, to consider the propriety of assimilating the mercantile laws of England, Ireland, and Scotland. There were deputations from the principal towns and law societies, and the following resolutions were agreed to:—

That the mercantile laws of England, Ireland, and Scotland are scattered and disconnected, and in many instances dissimilar and even antagonistic; a state of things tending greatly to restrict and embarrass commerce, by producing uncertainty, perplexity, and delay.

That it is highly desirable that a well-digested and well-arranged body of mercantile law should be framed and established for the whole of the three kingdoms."

That, dismissing all local and even national prejudices, the assimilation and improvement of the mercantile laws of the three kingdoms, and the improvement and, where requisite, the assimilation of the procedure, should be effected by selecting those principles and rules, wherever they may be found, which shall be deemed the best and most beneficial to the commercial classes and to the community at large; and that to this end it is necessary carefully to examine the mercantile laws, and to have recourse to the experience of other countries.

That it is desirable that this assimilation and improvement should be brought about by a general revision, amendment, and consolidation of the different branches of the mercantile law, taken successively; but that while these larger measures are proceeding much immediate relief might be afforded by a series of single Acts, addressed to the more pressing and grievous evils, which Acts, by proper arrangements, might be made subservient to the ultimate object.

That while this work is going forward it is important that no new measures of mercantile law should be introduced into Parliament but such as may apply generally to the three kingdoms, or serve as steps towards a general assimilation.

That a commission, consisting of members of both Houses of Parliament and members of the Legal and Commercial Professions, appears the most efficient means of obtaining the desired results.

That the president, vice-presidents, and council of the Law Amendment Society, and the following gentlemen, Lord Wharncliffe, Lord Montcagle, Lord Asburton, Viscount Goderich, &c. with power to add to their number, be appointed a committee to represent the views of this conference to her Majesty's Government, and to take such other measures as may from time to time appear necessary for carrying these views into effect.

That this meeting recognises with pleasure and approval the efforts which have been made by other bodies besides the Law Amendment Society for the assimilation and improvement of the mercantile laws of the three kingdoms, but would suggest for the consideration of these bodies, whether their future efforts would not be more efficient if made in connection with those of the above-mentioned committee.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

The Throwing Open of the Mayor's Court. — Mr. J. Davies, the chairman of the Secondaries and City Courts Committee, brought up the report on the subject of throwing open the Mayor's Court to all solicitors practising in the courts of law and equity at Westminster. The report detailed the whole of the proceedings of the committee, including their successful conference with a deputation of the Court of Aldermen on the subject, and their interviews with the attorneys of the Mayor's Court, who claimed compensation for right of alienation and exclusive practice, as well as their consultation with the Recorder, who strongly recommended the admission of all solicitors, under regulations. It further stated that the Recorder had laid before the committee a series of rules for governing the practice of the Court with the necessary forms, and also a scale of fees and charges to be taken therein, which were approved of by the committee; and in accordance with the suggestions of the Recorder they recommended, that in order to afford facilities for the conducting of suits in the Mayor's Court upon the reformed principle, in January, they should be authorised to provide temporarily a suitable office for the Registrar of the Lord Mayor's Court in the immediate vicinity of the Guildhall, and an assistant to the deputy-registrar. After some observations from members of the court in approbation of the liberal and beneficial project of throwing open the Mayor's Court to the profession generally, by which arrangement every man could send his own attorney to represent him there, the Recorder said that, in his opinion, the mass of business introduced to the Mayor's Court upon the change recommended, would be so great as to pay all the expenses which might be apprehended, and a great deal more. The report was then agreed to, and sent back to be carried into execution.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Dec. 24.

Artigoure, Jules, merchant, Mark-lane, City, Jan. 7, at eleven, Feb. 5, at twelve, Basinghall-st. Off. as: Pennell. Sol. Brewer, Philpot-lane, City. Petition, Dec. 17.

Bate, William, butcher, Camelford, Cornwall, Dec. 29, at one, Jan. 26, at eleven, Exeter. Off. as. Hirtzell. Sols. King, Camelford, and Stogdon, Exeter. Petition, Dec. 10.

Manley, Thomas, cattle salesman, Exeter, Dec. 29, at one, Jan. 26, at eleven, Exeter. Off. as. Hirtzell. Sol. Turner, Exeter. Petition, Dec. 17.

Pearson, Fletcher, painter, Liverpool, Jan. 5 and 31, at eleven, Liverpool. Off. as. Cazenove. Sol. Payne, Liverpool. Petition, Dec. 17.

Pullman, Frederick William, auctioneer, Leadenhall-st. Dec. 29 and Jan. 31, at twelve, Basinghall-st. Off. as. Stansfeld. Sol. Cole, Leadenhall-st. Petition, Dec. 14.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Dec. 7.

Banks, S. Gregory, T. and J. coal masters, Westleigh, as regards J. Gregory, Dec. 1. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Banks, S. and Gregory, T. coal masters, Westleigh, Dec. 2. Debts paid by Banks.—Bardsley, J. sen. W. and J. jun. brush manufacturers, Ashton-under-Lyne, Nov. 24. Debts paid by J. Bardsley.—Choake, H. Tiddy, D. G. and Fedrick, C. F. tanners, Modbury, as regards Tiddy, Nov. 30.—Collinge, I., I. jun. and R. cotton spinners, Rochdale, Dec. 3. Debts paid by R. Collinge.—Cross, W. and F. boot and shoe makers, leather cutters, and curriers, Bungay, Dec. 1. Debts paid by W. Cross.—Curties, E. and Moynihan, D. wholesale cheesemongers, York-st. Westminster, Dec. 3. Debts paid by Curties.—Dade, W. C. London, and Butterworth, C. Bradford, stuff merchants, Nov. 8. Debts paid by Dade.—Gartside, J. and J. jun. ale and porter brewers, Ashton-under-Lyne, Aug. 6. Debts paid by Gartside.—Hodgson, J. and T. and Astin, F. bobbin makers, Halifax, Nov. 30. Debts paid by J. Hodgson.—Jennings, S. sen. and jun. carvers, gilders, printsellers, and looking glass manufacturers, Goswell-st. and Duke-st. Manchester-sq. Dec. 1. Debts paid by Jennings, sen.—Kelly, J. and Cobden, A. F. coal merchants, Dec. 6. Debts paid by Kelly.—Lant, T. and G. wholesale confectioners, Birmingham, Dec. 1. Debts paid by G. Lant.—May, T. and Bidwell, J. G. sharebrokers and commission agents, Exeter, Nov. 6. Debts paid by either.—Pearson, A. and Holdsworth, S. and J. stuff manufacturers, Valley Mill, near Bradford, Dec. 1. Debts paid by S. and J. Holdsworth.—Reynolds, J. G. and Harris, M. tobacco pipe manufacturers, Bristol, Oct. 22. Debts paid by Harris.—Simpson, W. and Brooks, F. T. agricultural chemists, Mill-hill Works, Old Ford, near Bow, Dec. 4.—Smith, J. Simpson, R. and Clayton, L. boiler makers, Burnley, as regards Clayton, Dec. 4. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Soutter, J. and Parsons, S. S. carriers and leather sellers, Richmond-place, East-st. Walworth, Nov. 29. Debts paid by Soutter.—Stevens, W. Hold, J. Milldrum, R. and Hancock, M. dealers in tin, ores, arsenic, and other articles, Saint Hilary, Breage, and Crowan, as regards Hancock, Nov. 30. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Stoneham, J. T. and Mortimore, P. elastic japan waterproof paper manufacturer, Ashton-under-Lyne, Dec. 2. Debts paid by Stoneham.—Williams, O. and Fitzpatrick, J. manufacturers of flour of brimstone, Liverpool, Nov. 29.

Gazette, Dec. 10.

Blythen, E. and R. farmers and carpenters, Holt, Nov. 30.—Bown, P., H., and E. jewellers and fancy dealers, Leamington Priors, Dec. 1. Debts paid by H. Bown.—Braithwaite, F. and Jones, W. goldsmiths and jewellers, Cockspur-st. Charing-cross, June 1.—Cotterall, F. and P. jun. attorneys and solicitors, Preston, Nov. 15.—Craig, E. and Faull, E. M. B. clothiers and outfitters, Cardiff, Dec. 6. Debts paid by Craig.—Derbyshire, M. and T. and Walkden, J. brick makers, Radcliffe, Dec. 6. Debts paid by M. Derbyshire and J. Walkden.—Evans, J. and Matthews, W. W. B. silk mercers and drapers, Birmingham, Dec. 3. Debts paid by Evans.—Hallam, Jno. and Jas. worsted spinners, Skipton, Dec. 1. Debts paid by Jno. Hallam.—May, J. T. and A. stationaries, North-st. Poplar, Dec. 8. Debts paid by J. T. May.—Mollady, J. sen. J. jun. and E. E. hat manufacturers, Warwick and Denton, as regards J. Mollady, sen. Dec. 6. Debts paid by J. Mollady, jun. and E. E. Mollady.—Newbolt, J. and Park, J. ironfounders, Bury, Dec. 6. Debts paid by Park.—Newton, W. and E. J. and Woodrow, A. C. land agents, surveyors, and valuers, Norwich, as regards E. J. Newton, Dec. 6.—Parry, E. S. and Surtees, G. E. booksellers and publishers, Leadenhall-st. Nov. 8.—Prior, H. and Atkinson, H. Manchester warehousemen, Wood-st. Cheapside, Dec. 7. Debts paid by H. Atkinson.—Sang, F. Gogel, J. N. and Meyer, J. G. London, Dec. 9.—Shannon, M. A. and E. milliners and straw bonnet makers, Liverpool, Dec. 1. Debts paid by E. Shannon.—Turner, T. and Phillips, E. Upper Carlisle-st. Portman-market, Dec. 2. Debts paid by Turner.—Walkden, J. and W. and Derbyshire, T. brickmakers, Openshaw, Dec. 6. Debts paid by J. and W. Walkden.—Warr, C. and J. bricklayers and builders, Felix-place, Liverpool-road, Islington, Sept. 18, 1851.—Williams, W. Jones, R. and Williams, W. M. tobacconists and snuff manufacturers, Chester, Nov. 10. Debts paid by W. and W. M. Williams.

CONTENTS.

To CORRESPONDENTS 147
LEADERS—
The New Law Appointments 147
New Practice in the Court of Chancery 147
The Law of Marriage 147
The Attorney's Tax 147
A Collegiate School for the Lawyers 148
An Action at Law under the New Practice 148
Hints to Busy Practitioners 149
Accountants and Attorneys 149
Sham Lawyers 149
LEGISLATOR—
Imperial Parliament 149
MAGISTRATE—Summary 150
JOINT STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL 150
REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER—Sum. 150
COUNTY COURTS—Summary 150
Recent Important Insolvency Decisions 150
THE LAWYER—Summary 151
MERCANTILE LAWYER—Summary 152
COURT PAPERS 152
Inns of Court 152
Attorneys admitted 153
PROMOTIONS 154
PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES—
Attorneys and Solicitors, Ireland 154
LEGAL INTELLIGENCE 154
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS 154
JOURNAL OF PROPERTY—
Money Market 154
GAZETTES 155

To Readers and Correspondents.

'AN ATTORNEY'S CLERK."—The Sale of Arsenic Act is certainly very defective, and practically it appears to be almost entirely neglected.

'G. D. F."—We do not know whose pupil Lord Brougham was.

'GENT. ONE—This letter will be given to the writer of the article on his return to town. We believe the Masters insist on this form of affidavit.

'W. B."—None, we believe.

'STUDENS."—We have not space for his clever essay; we are compelled to limit communications to facts and matters of practice, and to avoid merely speculative discourse.

ERRATUM.—In the letter signed "A solicitor," p. 135, vol. 3, in the 10th line, "fee" should be "fees;" and in the 11th line of the paragraph beginning "proposed scale of charges," "inventories" should have been "journeys."

Now ready at the LAW TIMES Office,

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, with Introductory Sketch of an Action-at-Law as it now is, many additional Forms, the Cases decided in Michaelmas Term, the New Table of Fees, and other Improvements. Price 12s. cloth.

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanac, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax, and the other information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 1s.; or stamped for post, 1s3d. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS and the BANKRUPTCY ACT, with all the Cases decided on its construction, and a very copious Index. By C. J. B. HERTSLETT, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, Author of the "Law of Master and Servant," &c.

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI. containing a collection of Forms of Indictment for use at Quarter Sessions, according to the New Acts.

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE; the Orders being placed in the text after the sections of the Statute to which they relate, thus showing the whole Law together. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Author of "Leading Cases in Equity," &c.

On Monday,

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanacs of the Moon's rising and setting for the last as well as the present year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity, and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for reference in Courts. Price only 6d.

On Saturday,

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES for 1849, with Notes of all the Cases that have been decided on their construction, thus giving to the Practitioner the whole law, viz.—the text of it, and the judicial interpretation of the text. In a small volume for the bag or pocket. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. In continuation of the series already published from 1850. By C. J. B. HERTSLETT, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 1, 1853.

THE NEW LAW APPOINTMENTS.

THE week has been rife with promotions in which our readers have a professional interest.

Lord CRANWORTH is appointed the Lord Chancellor. After Lord ST. LEONARDS there is no man so competent to the office. The noble lord has worked his way through the Profession; he practised extensively at the Equity Bar: he has been both a Common Law judge and an Equity judge: hence, with a mind of singular acuteness, he combines a practical knowledge of the law such as is probably possessed by no other lawyer of the age, except his marvellous predecessor. Moreover, Lord CRANWORTH is a very model of urbanity in his Court, and is as popular there as he is beloved and esteemed in the private relations of his life. The new Government may justly pride itself upon the selection it has made, and which will certainly receive the unanimous approval of the Profession without distinction of party.

Vice-Chancellor TURNER succeeds him in the Court of Appeal as one of the Lords Justices, and is succeeded by Sir W. PAGE WOOD.

Sir A. COCKBURN returns to the office of Attorney-General, and Mr. BETHELL is appointed the new Solicitor-General, an honour well deserved by one who is unquestionably at the head of the Equity Bar, and of good augury for the cause of rational Law Reform of which Mr. BETHELL is known to be a zealous and enlightened advocate.

Mr. BAINES returns to his former position as Chairman of the Poor Law Board, in which he had displayed such proficiency that he was invited by the late Government on its accession to continue at his post, but he preferred to go out with the friends from whom he had received the appointment.

Mr. VILLIERS, as Judge Advocate, is untried, and there are no antecedents upon which anticipation can be founded.

Altogether the new appointments must be extremely satisfactory to the Profession, reviewing them simply upon professional merits and capacities—for here we have nothing to do with political or party considerations.

A COLLEGIATE SCHOOL FOR THE LAWYERS.

WE have received from one of the Judges of the County Courts a brief letter suggesting that we should make an effort to procure the establishment by the Profession of a Collegiate Institution for the education of the children of Lawyers, and he authorizes us to start the proposition with his name for a subscription of one hundred pounds.

We know not if our correspondent intended his letter for publication, or that we should announce his name immediately, and therefore we await his further instructions before we do so. We should also desire to be favoured by him with fuller particulars of his design, of which he gives only the title.

But in the meanwhile we lose not a moment in bringing so admirable a suggestion under the notice of our readers, and bespeaking their interest for it by the announcement of the munificent opening of the subscription list. Of course we are not as yet prepared to go into any details of a scheme of which nothing but the idea has been submitted to us; but we can see how excellent a work might be thus formed. Proprietary Schools have been found to prosper wherever they have been tried. A Collegiate Institution such as we propose for the Lawyers would embrace the advantages of the school and the college, and be constructed so as to provide the means for such an education for the children of the Profession as the vastly extended range of human knowledge and the increased requirements of business demand more and more of the rising generation. The object of such an institution will be to provide the best education at the lowest cost, and to do this by that lever of the modern world—association. Should the suggestion be approved we shall put it into a formal shape, and take the requisite means for bringing it into practical operation. We presume that substantially it must be Proprietary; but subscriptions will be required to help it into existence.

Will our correspondent permit us to announce his name, and accompany it with some particulars of his design?

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE.

IT would be an excellent thing for society if every candidate for the office of Legislator were required to undergo a preliminary examination into the Province of Jurisprudence, or, in other words, the proper limits of Law-making. It would save society from innumerable inconveniences and annoyances that result from law-makers meddling with matters which are not within their province, and it would save the law itself from a great deal of disrespect and evasion.

Gradually the world is growing wiser in this particular, and Legislators are discerning the important truth, that society can regulate itself better than they can regulate it, and that they have little more to do in the way of law-making than to provide for the prevention of wrongs by one man to another, and the enforcement of rights; that they have nothing whatever to do with individual opinions, morals, or conduct, provided those do not inflict a positive injury upon the persons or properties of others.

If the limits of law-making had been made a branch of study, we should never have seen the statute-book disgraced by laws so far violating liberty as to dictate to individuals whom they shall not marry, beyond the limits prescribed by nature, and the violation of which would be noxious to society by producing a degeneracy of race; nor should we be compelled to witness the painful spectacle of a bad law evaded by hundreds of good citizens who can afford the expense of a trip to the Continent, and set at defiance by the poor, who vindicate nature at the expense of their own morality and the legitimacy of their offspring.

One of the surest tests of a law being good or bad is the principle is the obedience it exacts from the community. If any considerable number of intelligent, respectable and virtuous persons so far object to it as to evade or violate it systematically, we may be sure that it belongs to that class of laws which have trespassed beyond the proper province of law.

So it is with Lord LYNDHURST's tyrannical law, prohibiting marriage with a deceased wife's sister. It is systematically violated and evaded. It is reprobated by the ablest of our divines and judges. It has provoked the formation of an association expressly to procure its repeal, or in default of that, to teach how it may be practically set aside. A pile of pamphlets upon our table arrays against it argument, authority, and an army of facts. Strange to say, this law is not defended by reference to a single fact, and scarcely by an argument, but only by sentiment. Its supporters choose to assume that certain inconveniences might result if such a marriage were permitted. They forget that it has been permitted for centuries, that it is permitted in four-fifths of the Christian world, and that the prohibition is of very recent date, so that it would be easy enough to adduce facts, instead of presumptions and conjectures, to prove the mischiefs that actually have resulted from these marriages, if such there be. But they do not this, because they cannot. Having experience to appeal to, they yet resort to surmise. Why? Because experience is against them. This marriage has not produced any mischiefs in fact.

But we take higher ground. We contend that it is not a matter within the province of legislation. It is a subject for individual taste and feeling. The law has no more right to provide against possible unpleasant feelings in a wife towards a sister than with her jealousies of a governess or a servant maid. To be consistent, it should go further and prohibit a man from marrying any female who has lived in his house during his wife's life, for the argument is quite as strong against them as against the wife's sister. When a law rests on so weak a foundation as a sentiment it is sure to be full of inconsistencies. No law is good that is not based upon a principle, and directed against a proved mischief done to individuals or the State. Our Law of Marriage is not so founded, and therefore it is that we shall have occasion, in another number, to direct the attention of our readers to a legal means of evading its cruel and irrational provisions, which an able Lawyer has published in one of the pamphlets now before us.

THE ATTORNEYS' TAX.

THE Profession should be prepared to go to Parliament on the 10th of February with an avalanche of petitions for justice. We must now have a new Budget; and, if they are sufficiently clamorous, they may hope to find a place in it.

Besides, in all probability there will be another General Election in the spring; Honourable Members will, therefore, be keeping one eye upon their constituents, and hints from their professional friends are likely to be received with more than common respect, especially if conveyed in such terms as shall leave no doubt as to the course they will pursue at the next election—acting upon the wholesome rule of serving those who serve us.

Individual Attorneys should petition, and so should the collective Attorneys of every town.

As with the New Year we have received a very large accession to our list of subscribers, our old readers will excuse the repetition of the form of petition which we suggested a fortnight since, as being specially adapted to present circumstances, in hope to enlist in the service of the common cause this numerous addition to our ranks:

To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled,

The humble petition of the practising Attorneys of the town of A. in the county of B.

Sheweth,

That your Petitioners are subject to a grievous tax, called the Certificate Duty, which they are required to pay in addition to the taxes which they pay in common with their fellow subjects.

That it has been declared by your Honourable House that class taxation ought to cease with class legislation.

Your Petitioners, therefore, pray your Honourable House to remove from them this unjust and partial tax.

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY.(a)

AMENDMENT OF BILL.

It often becomes necessary to amend the bill, either by stating new facts, correcting any inaccuracies, by striking out and abandoning part of the case, whether the necessity for doing so may have been discovered from the answer of the defendant, from the documents he has produced (which is frequently the case), or otherwise, or for the purpose of making other persons parties, or of striking out unnecessary parties.

The original and amended bill constitute but one record (Vere v. Glynn, 2 Dick. 441), so that the amended bill must be addressed to the same person; although he may have ceased to hold the great seals: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 377.)

Formerly it was a rule in the practice of the Court that nothing which had occurred since the institution of the suit could be introduced into the bill by way of amendment, and a new bill, called a supplemental bill, was necessary in order to bring the new matter before the Court. The reason given by the Court for the adoption of this merely technical rule was, that the introduction of matters of a posterior date would render the record incongruous: (Archbishop of York v. Stapleton, 2 Atk. 136.) Supplemental bills, however, for the purpose only of stating or putting in issue facts and circumstances which may have occurred after the institution of the suit are now unnecessary, and such facts and circumstances may be introduced by way of amendment into the original bill, if the cause is otherwise in such a state as to allow of an amendment being made in the bill; and if not, a written or printed statement of facts to be annexed to the bill is to be filed, and proceedings taken thereon as if the same were embodied in a supplemental bill: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 53. Orders 7th August, 1852, XLIV.) The necessity for filing a statement will be noticed on a subsequent occasion.

Great latitude is allowed in making amendments; a bill has been converted into an information (President of St. Mary Magdalen v. Sibthorpe, 1 Russ. 154), or by altering a statement so as to agree with the defendant's answer (Lindsay v. Lynch, 2 S. & L. 9); it seems to be doubtful whether a bill of discovery can be converted into a bill for relief (Dan. Ch. Pr. 384), although that has been allowed by the Court to be done by adding a prayer for relief and proper parties (Lousada v. Templer, 2 Russ. 565); but it seems to be clear that unless by consent (Garish v. Donovan, 2 Atk. 166; 2 V. & B. 111, n. a) a bill for relief cannot be converted into a bill of discovery by striking out the prayer: (Earl Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 V. & B. 113.) Where a plaintiff makes an entirely new case by amendment, he may be ordered to pay the defendant the costs which he would have had to pay had he dismissed the original bill and filed a new one (Smith v. Smith, Coop. 141; Maxor v. Dry, 2 S. & S. 113); so, if without making a new case expenses have been unnecessarily occasioned by the introduction of matters afterwards struck out on amendment as unnecessary, the plaintiff will be liable to pay the defendant the costs occasioned thereby: (Bullock v. Perkins, 1 Dick. 110; Strickland v. Strickland, 3 Beav. 212; Monk v. The Earl of Tankerville, 10 Sim. 284.)

No alteration can be made in any pleading or other matter after it has been filed, and by that means become a record of the Court, without the sanction of a previous order: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 387.) And without going into the question upon what occasions and at what stages of a suit an order to amend may be obtained, it may be here mentioned that applications for leave to amend must be made to the Judge at Chambers: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 26.)

Under the old practice the bill required re-engrossment when the amendments were so extensive that they could not be conveniently added to the record: (Vernon v. Vawdry, 2 Atk. 119.) And it was held that two folios of amendment introduced continuously in any one part of the record rendered a new engrossment necessary. And where the amendments were of such a character as to blot and deface the bill, it might be taken off the file: (Boyd v. Mills, 13 Ves. 87; Smith's Ch. Pr. 403; Ayck. 29.)

According to the new practice, the provisions with respect to the filing, and serving, and delivering of printed copies of a bill are as far as may be to extend and be applicable to the bill as amended.

Where, according to the old practice of the Court, which has been before mentioned, an amendment of a bill might be made without a new engrossment thereof, a bill may be now amended by written alterations in the printed bill so filed, and by additions on the paper to be interleaved therewith, according to the directions of Order I.

The practice of amending a defendant's copy of a bill, with respect to the amendment of bills filed after the Orders of 7th August, 1852, came into operation, is abolished.

A copy of an amended bill, whether upon an amendment or a reprint, or by such alterations and additions as are before mentioned, is to be served upon the defendant or his solicitor; and such copy may be partly printed and partly written, if the amendment is not made by a reprint; but in every case the copy to be served is to be stamped with the proper stamp by one of the Clerks of Records and Writs, indicating the filing of such amended bill, and the date of the filing thereof.

In all cases where, according to the old practice of the Court, a subpœna to appear to and answer an amended bill might be served upon the solicitor of a defendant, service upon the defendant's solicitor of a copy of an amended bill, whether wholly printed or partly printed and partly written, will be good service on the defendant.

Where a defendant has appeared in person to any bill, service at the address for service of such defendant of a copy of an amended bill, whether wholly printed or partly printed and partly written, will be good service on the defendant: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 8; Orders of 7th August 1852, VII. VIII. IX. X. XI.)

It may here be mentioned that the new practice will not be applicable to bills filed before the Order of 7th August, 1852, came into operation; and that the old practice is to continue in force, with reference to the amendment of such bills; and that the old practice of the court, with reference to issuing and serving writs of subpœna to appear to and answer bills, is also to continue in force with respect to bills filed before those orders came into operation: (Orders 7th August 1852, XII. XIII.)

Although the new mode of printing and serving bills, in the mode which has been before mentioned, seems at present to be quite successful, it appears to have been considered by the Legislature somewhat in the light of an experiment; and power is given to the Lord Chancellor to direct that all or any of the old practice as to the filing of bills and the issuing and service of subpœnas may be revived: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 9.)

INTERROGATORIES.

Under the practice just abolished, every bill in Chancery contained what was called the interrogating part, in which every statement and charge in the bill was converted into a series of questions, framed on the principle that the defendant might possibly be a dishonest defendant, disposed to answer evasively, and therefore suggesting modifications of the statement or charge. For example, if the statement were of a deed bearing a certain date, and made between and executed by certain parties, in certain words, or to a certain effect, the questions would be, whether such a deed of that date, or of some other and what date, was not made between and executed by such parties, or some and which of them, or some other and what parties, in such words, or to such effect, or in some other and what words, or to some other and what effect. In general all the bills were converted into interrogatories of a similar character. Originally these interrogatories were used much more sparingly, and were confined to those matters supposed to be within the knowledge of the defendant, as to which it was considered necessary or desirable to extract admissions from him. But in course of time the practice was altered, and the easier process was adopted of transmuting all the statements, into questions of the nature above described. The number of folios and the expense to all parties concerned were thereby greatly increased: (Ch. Com. Rep. 5.)

As we have before remarked, there is to be in future no interrogating part in any bill; but where the plaintiff requires an answer from any defendant or defendants to a bill, he may file in the Record Office interrogatories for their examination, within eight days after the time limited for their appearance.

If the defendant appear in person, or by his own solicitor, within the time limited for that purpose by the rules of the Court, the plaintiff is, within eight days after the time allowed for such appearance, to deliver to the defendant or defendants so required, or to his or their solicitor or solicitors, a copy of the interrogatories so filed as aforesaid, or of such of them as the particular defendant or defendants shall be required to answer.

The copy so to be delivered is to be examined with the original, and the number of folios counted by the Clerks of Records and Writs, who, on finding that such copy is duly stamped and properly written, are to mark the same as an office copy.

If the defendant do not appear in person, or by his own solicitor, within the time allowed for that purpose by the rules of the Court, and the plaintiff has filed interrogatories for his examination, the plaintiff may deliver a copy of such interrogatories so examined and marked as aforesaid, to the defendant at any time after the time allowed to such defendant to appear, and before his appearance in person or by his own solicitor; or the plaintiff may deliver a copy of such interrogatories, so examined and marked as aforesaid, to the defendant or his solicitor, after the appearance of such defendant in person or by his own solicitor, but within eight days after such appearance.

No defendant shall be called upon or required to put in any answer to a bill unless interrogatories shall have been so filed, and a copy thereof delivered to him or his solicitor within the time above limited, or within such further time as the Court shall think fit to direct: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 12; and XVI. XVII. and XVIII. of the Orders of 7th August, 1852. As to form of Interrogatories, see Orders of 7th August, 1852, XV. and schedule C. to Orders.)

In the case of Bowen v. Price (MS. Dec. 21), the question arose under the 12th section of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, where the interrogatories are directed to be delivered to the defendant or his solicitor, whether personal service on the solicitor himself was not necessary, or whether service at his office would not be sufficient. Sir R. Kindersley entertained the former opinion; but upon an application to the Lords Justices, they took a contrary view, and remarked upon the great inconvenience which would be occasioned by holding personal service necessary to one side as much as the other. Their Lordships did not, however, decide the point, but after that intimation of their opinion the Vice-Chancellor acted upon it.

AN ACTION AT LAW UNDER THE NEW PRACTICE. (a)

ARTICLE VI.

The course of proceeding when the defendant takes no legal means to dispute the plaintiff's claim has now been gone through.

In this, it has been seen, there are two main branches, one when the writ is specially indorsed (form No. 4) (b), in which the judgment is at once final on the non-appearance of the defendant, and which is an entirely new feature in practice; the other, when the writ is not specially indorsed, and in this, after non-appearance, a declaration must be filed, and in default of a plea, the judgment may be signed. This judgment is final in case the plaintiff seeks to recover a debt or liquidated demand in money, otherwise interlocutory only, until the execution of a writ of inquiry, or a reference to the Master. In cases where the writ is not specially indorsed, the judgment is an ordinary judgment by default, but the necessity there was formerly for the defendant's appearance to the action before the plaintiff could be entitled to this judgment no longer exists.

APPEARANCE TO THE ACTION.

It must now, therefore, be supposed that the defendant intends to contest the plaintiff's demand, and in this case, whichever form of writ may have been used, it is necessary that he should, in accordance with the terms of the writ, enter an appearance within eight days, or such greater number of days as may be named therein, from the service of the writ on him, inclusive of the day of service. Where judgment is not at once signed on the expiration of the time for appearance, he may, even after that time, enter an appearance under certain restrictions, for he may appear at any time before judgment; and if he appear after the time specified, either in the writ of summons or in any rule or order, to proceed as if personal service had been effected, he will, after notice of such appearance to the plaintiff or his attorney, as the case may be, be in the same position as to pleadings and other proceedings in the action as if he had appeared in time; but a defendant appearing after the time appointed by the writ is not entitled to any further time for pleading, or any other proceeding, than if he had appeared within such appointed time: (sect. 29.) And beside this general provision, there is appended to the section which provides for signing final judgment on writs specially indorsed (sect. 27, ante, p. 132) a proviso that the Court or a Judge may, either before or after final judgment, let in the defendant to defend, upon an application, supported by satisfactory affidavits, accounting for the non-appearance and disclosing a defence upon the merits. It may well be doubted whether the general provision (sect. 29) does not make unnecessary any application or affidavit on appearance before judgment to a writ specially indorsed.

The affidavit in support of an application to be allowed to appear after judgment should explicitly state the facts accounting for the non-appearance, and also some facts showing a defence upon the merits, and should aver that the defendant believes

(a) Continued from p. 140.

(a) By George Tayler, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

(b) It was intended to have been mentioned as a note to the last article, that the sums at present allowed for costs on writs specially indorsed, fixed by the Masters under section 27, are as follow:—

	Under £20.	Above £20.
Town cases	£2 14 0	..... £3 8 0
Country or agency, including mileage	3 2 0	..... 4 0 0

he has such defence. If this affidavit is made by the defendant, it would be advisable that some other person should corroborate the facts, especially those explaining the non-appearance.

The mode of appearance to each of the four forms of writ of summons must be by delivering a memorandum in writing according to the following form, or to the like effect:—

In the Queen's Bench.

A. B. plaintiff, against C. D. defendant (or C. D. and another, or others, defendants).

The defendant C. D. appears in person (or E. F. attorney for C. D. appears for him, (If the defendant appear in person here give his address.)

Entered the day of , 18 .

Such memorandum must be delivered to the proper officer or person in that behalf, and must be dated on the day of the delivery thereof: (sect. 31.) Every appearance by the defendant in person must give an address, at which address it will be sufficient to leave all pleadings and other proceedings, not requiring personal service; and if such address be not given the appearance will not be received; and if an address so given be illusory or fictitious, the appearance will be irregular and may be set aside by the Court or a Judge, and the plaintiff may be permitted to proceed by sticking up the proceedings in the Master's office without further service: (sect. 30.) If the defendant has been sued by a wrong name, he should appear by his right name, and state in the memorandum of appearance the name by which he was sued. If he appear by the wrong name, the plaintiff may continue the proceedings against him by that name.

If the defendant has appeared after the time allowed for appearance, he should give notice of his appearance to the plaintiff or his attorney (sect. 29, above). The notice may be in these terms:—

In the Queen's Bench.

A. B. plaintiff against C. D. defendant.

Take notice that I have this day entered an appearance for C. D. to the writ of summons in this action (or omitting the words for C. D.) Dated the day of , 185 .

E. F. attorney for the said C. D. (or C. D. defendant in person.)

To G. H. plaintiff's attorney (or A. B. the said plaintiff.

The next step after the defendant's appearance, in the ordinary course of a contested action, is the delivery of the declaration by the plaintiff. Before considering this or the subject of pleading, however, three topics should be referred to.

It may be just mentioned that there are provisions in the Common Law Procedure Act (ss. 42—48) for enabling the parties to an action, at any time after the writ is issued, to agree to the trial of a question or questions of fact without formal pleadings, but stated for trial in the form of an issue given in the Act, and for enabling them to state a question or questions of law in a special case for the opinion of the Court without any pleadings. These proceedings deserve separate consideration after the ordinary proceedings in an action have been gone through.

AMENDMENT OF MISJOINDER AND NONJOINDER BEFORE TRIAL.

A much more extensive system of amendment of misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties than heretofore allowed is now expressly provided for; and the proceedings of this nature, which may be adopted at this stage of the action or before the trial, had better be mentioned here.

The rules as to the misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties to actions, previous to the recent Act, appear somewhat arbitrary and complex; but as they will still exist where the discretion given by the statute is not exercised, and will probably in some degree influence that discretion, it will be as well first to compress them into a brief statement.

In actions on contract, the joining a person as plaintiff who ought not to have been joined was fatal if taken advantage of at the trial, and also when it appeared on the record, if made the ground of demurrer, motion in arrest of judgment, or writ of error. The omission to join a person as plaintiff who ought to have been joined had precisely the same effect: (Lush's Prac. 16—25; Broom's Prac. 207—216.) The joining a person as defendant who ought not to have been joined in an action on contract had the same effect as the misjoinder of a plaintiff. The nonjoinder of a defendant (except in one or two special cases) must have been taken advantage of, if at all, by a plea in abatement stating the name of the person omitted, and that he was alive and resident within the jurisdiction of the Court, and this plea must have been verified by affidavit stating the residence of such person: (Lush's Prac. 71—81; Broom's Prac. 349—364.)

In actions on tort (or ex delicto as they are sometimes called), that is, for injuries to person or property, not arising by breach of express or legally-implied contract, the joining a person who ought not to have been joined had the same effect as the misjoinder of a plaintiff in an action on contract. The nonjoinder of a person who should have been joined could only be taken advantage of by a plea in abatement, except, perhaps, where the action was in substance on a contract, though in form on tort: (Lush's Prac. 137—139; Broom's Prac. 548—554.) The improperly joining a person as defendant in an action for such a tort as could not in law be joint was fatal, if objected to by demurrer, or if, after verdict against all the defendants, made the ground of motion in arrest of judgment or writ of error. But the improperly joining a person as defendant where the tort might have been joint (unless the action were in substance on a contract) had no other effect than that such person was entitled to a verdict, and might recover his costs against the plaintiff. The nonjoinder of a defendant in an action on tort was, however, no objection; but where the action, though in form on tort, arose in reality from a contract, the nonjoinder might be taken advantage of by plea in abatement: (Lush's Prac. 178—183; Broom's Prac. 591—596.)

The Common Law Procedure Act provides for amending errors as to misjoinder and nonjoinder in almost all cases. The Court or a Judge may at any time before the trial of any cause order that any person or persons not joined as plaintiff or plaintiffs in such cause shall be so joined; or that any person or persons originally joined as plaintiff or plaintiffs shall be struck out from such cause if it appear to such Court or Judge that injustice will not be done by such amendment, and that the person or persons to be added as aforesaid consent, either in person or by writing under his, her, or their hands, to be so joined, or that the person or persons to be struck out as aforesaid were originally introduced without his, her, or their consent, or that such person or persons consent in manner aforesaid to be so struck out; and such amendment will be made upon such terms as to the amendment of the pleadings, if any, postponement of the trial and otherwise, as the Court or Judge by whom such amendment is made shall think proper; and when any such amendment has been made, the liability of any person or persons who has been added as co-plaintiff or co-plaintiffs will, subject to any terms imposed as aforesaid, be the same as if such person or persons had been originally joined in such cause: (sect. 34.) The power of correcting the nonjoinder of a plaintiff had been exercised by the Court of Exchequer, previous to the Common Law Procedure Act, in several cases, in order to save the Statute of Limitations (Brown v. Fullerton, 13 M. & W. 556), and the misjoinder of a plaintiff was amended by striking out the name by the Court of Common Pleas in Holmes v. Barney, 6 Scott, 346.

The defendant may, at or before the time of pleading, give notice in writing that he objects to the action on the ground that some person or persons not joined as plaintiff or plaintiffs ought to have been so joined, specifying therein the name or names of such person or persons (sect. 35); and thereupon, or in case any plea in abatement for nonjoinder of a person or persons as co-plaintiff or co-plaintiffs in cases where such plea in abatement may be pleaded, be pleaded by the defendant, the plaintiff will be at liberty, without any order, to amend the writ and other proceedings before plea, by adding the name or names of the person or persons named in such notice or plea in abatement, and to proceed in the action without any further appearance, on payment of the costs of and occasioned by such amendment only, and in such case the defendant will be at liberty to plead de novo: (sect. 36.)

And in the case of the joinder of too many defendants in any action on contract the Court or a Judge may at any time before trial order that the name or names of one or more of such defendants be struck out, if it appear to such Court or Judge that injustice will not be done by such amendment; and the amendment will be made upon such terms as the Court or Judge by whom such amendment is made shall think proper: (sect. 37.) This power the Courts exercised previous to the recent Act: (Palmer v. Beale, 9 Dowl. 529; Jackson v. Nunn, 4 Q. B. 209.)

The Courts would not, however, amend the nonjoinder of a defendant by allowing the name to be added, even though it were to save the Statute of Limitations: (Roberts v. Bate, 6 A. & E. 778; Goodchild v. Leadham, 1 Ex. 706.) But now in any action on contract, where the nonjoinder of any person or persons as a co-defendant or co-defendants has been pleaded in abatement, the plaintiff is at liberty, without any order, to amend the writ of summons and the declaration, by adding the name or names of the person or persons named in such plea in abatement as joint contractors, and to serve the amended writ upon the person or persons so named in such plea in abatement, and to proceed against the original defendant or defendants and the person or persons so named in such plea in abatement; but the date of such amendment will, as between the person or persons so named in such plea in abatement and the plaintiff, be considered for all purposes as the commencement of the action: (sect. 38.) The consequences of such a plea, as determined by the result of the trial, will be mentioned afterwards.

The general power of amendment given to the Courts by sect. 222 (see ante, p. 107) will no doubt have some influence in the decision of most questions arising on this subject.

The third topic referred to above is the joinder of causes of action; but to consider it now would extend this article to too great a length.

HINTS TO LAW REFORMERS.

[Under the above title might be communicated from time to time, for publication in THE LAW TIMES, suggestions for the improvement of the practice of the Law. Every practising attorney must be continually observing defects, and if he would thus bring them before the public, a remedy probably would be found for them by some of the many influential Legislators whose attention will thus be directed to them.]

1. Why should an attorney be compelled to deliver particulars of his demand with the declaration, or in the County Courts, since before he can recover he must prove that he did deliver such particulars a month before action brought?

2. Why should defendants in trumpery assault cases before Magistrates be treated as criminals, and not be allowed to give evidence like other defendants?

3. Let all causes at Nisi Prius be tried without a jury unless either of the parties desire a jury, in which latter event let due and ample notice be given. T. C.

[NOTE.—Lord BROUGHAM's Bill contains a provision to this effect.—ED. L. T.]

ACCOUNTANTS AND ATTORNEYS.

THE accountants are undoubtedly making a serious inroad on the province of the attorneys, and it is time that something should be done to secure the Profession against an invasion so mischievous to them. An attorney pays heavy duties to the State for the priviledge of learning and practising his Profession. The accountant pays nothing, and of course is thus enabled to undersell the attorney. As long as Attorneys are taxed on the plea of the protection they enjoy, they are entitled to the protection ther are compelled to pay for.

The following is a copy of an Accountant's Bill which has been sent to us. Can it be denied that this is in fact a Lawyer's Bill by persons who are not licensed to be lawyers?

Mr. F. Wale, Mr. J. Wale, and Mr. F. Dalby } Drs. to Parrinton and Ladbury.

1852.		£	s.	d.
April 16.	Writing you in answer to your inquiry respecting the renewal of your composition bills coming due on the 4th of May,
19.	Writing memorandum, agreeing to renew the composition bills due the 4th of May, for three months. Attending the respective London creditors, obtaining their assents to renew the composition bills.
22.	Drawing up letter to the country creditors, soliciting the renewal of their bills, and sending same with printed copies to twenty-four creditors. Writing to certain creditors who had refused to allow time.
30.	Writing full report to you as to the creditors that had assented. Writing to all the creditors, informing them that the arrangement for further time could not be carried out, and requesting them to abstain from all legal proceedings, and to allow a reasonable time to the sureties to obtain the money.
May 3.	Writing you in answer to your letter, giving names of the creditors who refused to allow time. Correspondence with the country creditors and attendances.
		£7	7	0

SHAM LAWYER.

THE following has been sent to us:—

I hereby give you notice, that unless the sum of 16*s.* 6*d.* due from you to James Whittaker Evans, be paid into my hands, within fourteen days from the date hereof, proceedings at law will be commenced against you for recovery thereof without further notice.

Dated this 15th day of December, 1852.

Yours, &c,

THOMAS SUGDEN.

To Mr. W. Merry. Strangeways, Manchester.

You can remit a post-office order, making it payable to James Whittaker Evans.

THE LEGISLATOR.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, Dec. 31.—Mr. BUTT gave notice that after the recess he should move for leave to bring in a bill for regulating the mode of granting new trials in criminal cases.—Mr. KEATING gave notice that after the recess he should ask whether it was the intention of the Government to introduce any measures obtaining uniformity in Acts of Parliament for the arrangement and consolidation of the existing statute law.

The House then adjourned until Thursday, the 10th of February next.

THE MAGISTRATE,
AND MUNICIPAL AND PAROCHIAL LAWYER.

Summary.

It is not necessary to repeat here the particulars of the case of Edwards v. Lowndes, 20 Law T. Rep. 154, which we noted so fully when it was reported from Nisi Prius: suffice it to say, that the full court has held that, under the circumstances, an action for the organist's salary would not lie against the Clerk to the Board of Health, no appropriation having been made by the Board of funds for such judgment.

It will be seen that we have obtained a report of the decision of the Examiner of Recognizances on Election Petitions, of which so much complaint has been made in the newspapers. Our readers will now be enabled to judge for themselves if he has rightly construed the Election Petitions Act. At all events, if they have occasion to present an Election Petition in future, they should take care to keep within this decision. We have made arrangements to procure reports of the most important points of Election Law that may be decided on the pending petitions.

The Case of Mr. Kirwan.—We are informed that a reprieve has been received by the keeper of the gaol in which Mr. Kirwan is confined, and that the capital sentence will not be carried into effect.

The Common Lodging-houses.—There has been printed, by order of the House of Lords, in a parliamentary paper, a report made by Captain Hay, one of the police commissioners, to the late Home Secretary, on the operation of the Common Lodging-house Act. The report contains a good deal of information for amending and improving the Act now in force. There are at present under police inspection upwards of 3,300 persons keeping common lodging-houses, accommodating nearly 50,000 nightly lodgers. The lodging-houses registered are so widely spread in the metropolitan police district, that the area perambulated weekly by the inspecting police serjeants in visiting them exceeds 810 miles. From September 1851 to November last, the number of keepers served with notices to register was 3,326, of which only 974 were approved and registered. 55,575 visits were made to the houses where notices had been served. About 45,861 persons occupied the houses. There had been 67 cases of fever and sickness dealt with by the police. Already the Act has had a beneficial effect on the poor creatures frequenting the places, and also as a sanitary precaution. Much is still required to be done, and it is anticipated that if the suggestions of the police commissioner now made are adopted, the places will be greatly improved, and, in case of fever, contagion prevented.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

The Courts steadily set their faces against all attempts by companies to evade their engagements, or to take advantage of their own wrong. Where a company had taken land for extraordinary purposes, and had not adhered strictly to the requirements of the Act of Parliament as to the mode of ascertaining the value, they were not allowed to make the defect thus self-produced an excuse to withdraw from making that title complete. "They have the power, but they declined to exercise it; they say, because they have not exercised it, that a good title never can be made; because this purchase-money has not been ascertained in a way that will make the purchase binding on the remainderman, they have an insecure title. To whom is the fault to be attributed? To themselves. This Court will not allow men to evade their contracts by refusing to do that which they have contracted to do, and to perform that which they are bound to do:" (Hawkes v. The Eastern Counties Railway Company, 20 Law T. Rep. 148.)

WINDING-UP.

PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and made, during the last week.]

Rugby, Warwick, and Worcester Railway Company.—Call of 4*s.* per share on classes 4 and 6 on 22nd January. A peremptory order.—Humphry.

British and Foreign Gas Light and Meter Company.—Call of 7*l.* per share on three contributories, not mentioned in the previous call.—Senior.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

It will suffice merely to invite the attention of the reader to the report of the decision of the House of Lords, in the famous case of Geils v. Geils, 20 Law T. Rep. 114, upon the effect of a decree for a divorce a mensâ et thoro in England upon a proceeding for a divorce in Scotland, and in which it was held that such a divorce obtained in England was no bar to a proceeding for a divorce a vinculo matrimonio in Scotland. Again, the masterly judgment of Lord St. Leonards will be a study for the law student.

Where A. being entitled, as residuary legatee, to one-fifteenth of a sum in stock, and the proceeds of real estate, assigned all his interest in the stock to B., covenanting that it was free from incumbrances, and a portion of the stock was sold to pay the testator's debts; it was held that B. was not entitled to have one-fifteenth part of the amount of debts paid out of the proceeds of the real estate in exoneration of the aforesaid share of stock. (Lovegrove v. Cooper, 20 Law. T. Rep. 152.)

Under the Trustee Act it has been held, in Langhorne v. Langhorne, 20 Law T. Rep. 153, that a vesting order of real estate should be made only where there would be some inconvenience in obtaining a conveyance of the property. Upon the same useful Act there is another decision to be noted. The trusts of a power of sale in a mortgage were, that the surplus should be for the mortgagor, his executors, administrators, and assigns. The mortgagor died; the mortgagee sold and paid the surplus into court under the Trustees Relief Act. A., a creditor of the mortgagor, recovered judgment against the administratrix, and obtained a charging order and petitioned the court for payment of his claim out of the surplus. But the fund was held to be real assets and not available for satisfaction of such judgment. (Re Clarke's Trust, 20 Law T. Rep. 153.)

There are three decisions on the Construction of Wills, of which it is necessary to note one only. In Hewitson v. Todhunter, 20 Law T. Rep. 153, A. by will gave 5,000*l.* to B. and declared that, in case B. should die in his lifetime, the legacy should not lapse, but should go to or devolve upon his personal representatives. B. died in testator's lifetime, having by will given all his property to his widow, and appointed her and C. his executors. The widow survived the testator and then died, and it was held that the legacy belonged to the widow, who was the executrix, and the only person beneficially interested under B.'s will.

A. on his marriage covenanted to pay the trustees of his marriage settlement 3,000*l.* out of the first capital moneys, or real or personal estate or capitalised income, of or to which he should be or become possessed or in anywise entitled, within six calendar months after he should become so possessed or entitled. He was then possessed of personal estate, consisting of his stock-in-trade, goods, and capital money used by him in his business, and leaseholds, of value greatly exceeding 3,000*l.*, and he continued so possessed for six months after his marriage. Afterwards he became bankrupt, and the trustees sought to prove against his estate for the 3,000*l.*, and it was held by the Court of Appeal that they were entitled to do so. "I am of opinion," said Lord Justice K. Bruce, "that there was a breach of contract six calendar months after the marriage took place before the bankruptcy. It was clear there was property of the bankrupt to the amount of 3,000*l.* and upwards, beyond all debts, six calendar months after the marriage; and on the best construction I can put on this covenant, it appears to me that, at the end of six calendar months, there was a breach of the covenant entitling the trustees to recover the 3,000*l.*:" (Ex parte Evans, 20 Law T. Rep. 149.)

LIFE ASSURANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—It appears to me that the case cited by your Bristol correspondent does not bear any analogy to the point in question, and consequently does not warrant the conclusion at which he has arrived. In the case referred to, the 15 days had been allowed to expire, before the premium was paid—the agent subsequently carried it to account, as if paid within the time allowed (i. e. the 15 days), but which the court very properly held he had no authority to do. Had the premium been duly paid within the 15 days, it seems clear, from the terms of the decision, that the policy would have been held to be valid.

A case actually came under my own notice some years since, in which the Provident office allowed the premium to be paid on the 15th day of grace, although the party assured had died some days previously, and the amount of the policy was afterwards duly paid. This, I know, is the established practice of all respectable offices, and is according to the clear and literal interpretation of the terms of the notice, viz., that "the premium will become due on the —— inst., and must be paid within 15 days after, otherwise the policy will cease to be in force." If this does not mean that the policy will remain in force during the 15 days, irrespectively of the life or death of the party assured, it means nothing, and is merely a trap to deprive the assured of the benefit of their policies; and I cannot believe that any respectable office would dare to risk its reputation by disputing a policy under the circumstances in question.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.,
P. D.

Bedford Row, Dec. 29, 1852.

Queries on Points of Practice.

CERTIFICATE OF ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The solicitor of a vendor contends that a purchaser cannot call upon him to file the certificate of an acknowledgment of a married woman, although he admits that the vendor is bound to prepare at his own expense the certificate and usual affidavit.

In the absence of any stipulation to the contrary, is not the vendor bound also to file in the proper office the certificate of acknowledgment at his own expense?

Dec. 27, 1852. A Purchaser's Solicitor.

Commissioners in Lunacy.—The following report to the Lord Chancellor has been made (under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 88), of the number of visits made, the number of patients seen, and the number of miles travelled by the several commissioners in lunacy, during the six months ending on the 4th August, 1852:—

Commissioners.	Visits made.	Patients seen.	Miles travelled.
Dr. T. Turner.....	128	6,227	3,978
Dr. J. R. Hume.....	152	5,511	5,694
S. Gaskell, Esq.	137	7,708	4,676
B. W. Procter, Esq.	100	5,515	3,809
J. W. Mylne, Esq.	158	7,808	5,819
W. G. Campbell, Esq.	131	7,673	4,829

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

Two Insolvency cases alone invite the practitioner's attention in this branch of the law. In Re Holmes, 20 Law T. Rep. 156, it was held that debts in the protection schedule must be inserted in the schedules under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and that the latter proceeding may be continued and supersede the protection petition; and in Re Elmore, 20 Law T. Rep. 156, Mr. Commissioner Phillips observed, that after a discharge pursuant to a rule of Court under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, nonpayment of the instalments ordered to be paid should, on the first default, be visited by an application to the Court for committal, the Commissioner truly observing,—"If they had been strict they would have got the money; but from 10*l.* they let it run on to 60*l.*"

RECENT IMPORTANT INSOLVENCY DECISIONS. (a)

There are some recent decisions in insolvency matters by the Courts at Westminster to which, as they will effect the administration of the law in the county courts, in the country especially, it is necessary to direct the attention of the judges and practitioners. The cases are Grange v. Trickett, 18 Law T. Rep. 93; 21 L. J. 26; 16 Jur. 287; Kernot v. Pittis, 20 Law T. Rep. 32; and Jackson v. Burnham et Uxor administratrix, &c. 20 Law T. Rep. 129.

The decision of the Court of Common Pleas in Abbey v. Dale, 20 L. J. 233; 15 Jur 1012, was reviewed fully in an article in the County Courts Chronicle (4 C. C. C. 325). In that case it may be remembered it was held that the jurisdiction of the County Court in debt is not ousted by a final order in insolvency—the final order not satisfying the judgment within the meaning of the term "unsatisfied judgment" in the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 98. Those words, it was shown, were susceptible of one meaning when taken in connection with the whole spirit and intention of the law as gathered from the County Courts and Insolvency codes considered together, and of another meaning when considered in their isolated and dis-associated position as connected with nothing else than the clause in which they are found. The Court of C. P. chose the latter construction, and the effect of this is that the debtor may be opposed twice over or oftener for a long list of the same offences committed in contracting debts, and imprisoned as often as the judge pleases until the debt or debts are paid, which an insolvent is utterly unable to do. An insolvent is also, curiously enough, protected by his final order from all debts in respect of which no judgments have been obtained, and in respect of debts upon which judgments have been obtained in the Superior Courts, but not from judgment debts in the County Courts: an anomaly which to say the least of it, can be founded on no principle, and never could have been intended by the legislature, because any one standing up in the House of Commons to advocate the introduction into the Act of such an absurd and unmeaning distinction would be instantly couted. It is true the judges of the C. P., when giving their decision, say it ought not be acted upon (see Macrae's Insolvency Practice, 526) except under very special circumstances, but a county court judge has been heard notwithstanding; to express his deep commiseration for an absolute pauper, who had not a farthing to pay a judgment debt, and yet feel bound at the same time to commit him for non-payment. How many more of such cases there are throughout the country it is impossible to say; but it shows the danger of the Superior Courts indirectly countenancing such perversions of law, justice, and common sense.

(a) By David Cato Macrae, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

The next decision is that of Grange v. Trickett, in which an isolated and unmeaning proviso—a proviso to nothing—has been singled out by the Q.B. and the most important consequences attached to it; consequences which in the very next insolvency case that came before the court (Kernot v. Pittis) whether they did or did not attach, could not be enforced without the aid of the Insolvent Court, whose jurisdiction by the decision in Grange v. Trickett was declared to be entirely ousted. It is but fair to these learned judges to admit that they went no further than to declare that it seemed the construction they put was right; but it was a decision to that effect notwithstanding, and one that must be attended by such important consequences, that the Insolvent Court, in the very first case in which it was brought under judicial notice in that Court, took the opportunity fully and entirely to repudiate the doctrine which it established, namely, that the effect of a discharge by the detaining creditor before adjudication is to annul the vesting order. A review of this decision of the Insolvent Court in Re Henry Collins Mander, and of Grange v. Trickett, will appear in the January number of the County Courts Chronicle.

Lastly, there is a decision of the Court of Ex. (Jackson v. Burnham, 20 Law T. Rep. 129,) fully as unsound in law, and absurd in its results, as those just noted. In that case a debt had accrued to an insolvent between the vesting order and the discharge. The question was, first, did it pass under the assignment, and, secondly, could the insolvent sue for its recovery? It was agreed that the debt passed, but it was held notwithstanding that the insolvent could sue for it. That is in substance and effect holding that the insolvent had assigned the debt, but that he had not done so. How the learned judges can reconcile this proposition, that A. B. has assigned a debt to C. D. for the benefit of E. F. and T. L., and yet that notwithstanding A. B. can still sue for the debt as if it belonged to him, it is difficult to comprehend; but they do it in this way. They say that because the assignee C. D. has neglected his duty to E. F. and T. L. ergo the title to sue for the debt reverts to A. B. The real question in the case was whether the insolvent could sue for what he had assigned to his creditors by a deed under the seal of a court of record. That question has been decided in the negative long ago by all the courts from the House of Lords downwards. Now how did the very clever pleader and counsel succeed in obtaining this decision from the Court of Exchequer? In the first place, from the words "work and labour—Uxor administratrix, &c." which occur in the report, it may be gathered that it was a hard case. It is possible the feelings of the learned judges led them to compassionate perhaps a poor widow. But the case in the House of Lords, in which it was held that an insolvent so situated could enter upon no kind of litigation, was so hard upon him, that the noble and learned lords who decided it attempted to cure it by Act of Parliament, and actually prepared a bill for that purpose and passed it through the House of Lords, and withheld their decision till it should become law; but this ex post facto legislation to meet the hardships of a particular case was objected to, and, the attempt to cure the alleged evil by legislation failing, their lordships gave judgment that an insolvent so situated could enter upon no kind of litigation whatever, and that, however hard his case was from the obstinacy and misconduct of his assignees, they could not even hear what he had to say, as he was no way interested in property that passed under the assignment: (Rockfont v. Battersby, House of Lords, 2 Cl. and Fin. N. S. 388, 1849.) This being the state of the law, how did it happen that the Court of Ex. decided that after an insolvent has assigned a debt the title to it still remains in him? It appears that an adroit use was made of a decision of the Exchequer Chamber (in Herbert v. Sayer, 5 Q.B. Rep. 965, 2 Dowl. and L. 49,) which decided that an uncertificated bankrupt has a good right to property against all the world except his assignees. That decision was founded upon wise and just principles; but it had no application to the point under discussion. There is a boundary line between property passing at the bankruptcy and property passing at the insolvency which must ever be kept in mind, otherwise the greatest confusion, disorder, and absurdities, will be introduced into the administration of these branches of law. The principles laid down in Herbert v. Sayer apply solely to property acquired after a bankruptcy. The Chief Justice Tindal commences his elaborate judgment by affirming that a bankrupt twice certificated, who had not paid 15*s.* in the pound, was in the same situation with respect to property as an uncertificated bankrupt was with respect to property after the assignment. The title to future-acquired property is the subject under discussion, and the point decided had reference solely to that description of property at the date of the discharge. It had no reference whatever to property passing under the assignment, and was in no way applicable to the point which arose in Jackson v. Burham, which related solely to property passing under the assignment. An insolvent is never in the situation of an uncertificated bankrupt (i. e. of the uncertificated bankrupt described in Herbert v. Sayer). His estate is always either entirely divested from him subject to certain exceptions specified in the Act, or entirely vested in him subject to certain liabilities also mentioned in the Act. When the point arose, the insolvent was in exactly the same situation with regard to the debt in dispute as a man who had sold an estate; and would the Court hold in reference to the sale that, unless the purchaser forthwith took possession of the property, the vendor might act as if it were his own? The question was as to the construction to be put upon the assignment; for the words of the section to be construed are the same as those used in the old assignment formerly executed by the insolvent, and the words of the section (87) have been decided in Woodland v. Fuller, 3 Per. & D. 570, to have the same operation as the assignment for which it was substituted. But instead of adhering to this sound and strictly legal decision, the Lord Chief Baron overturns it and the statute together. His lordship does not at all disguise his knowledge that he is nullifying the statute, but he boldly justifies the act; and here are his reasons: "We have given as the foundation of our judgments the authority of a decision by a superior court, but we would add that the doctrine is by no means new, that the express words of a statute may be controlled, and confined to meet the mischief contemplated by the Act." The mischief contemplated by the Act! What that means it is difficult to comprehend. The object of the assignment is to deprive an insolvent of all title to property in favor of his creditors. The mischief intended to be met and guarded against is the insolvent retaining property at the moment of his discharge. The object of limiting the words of the Act here is not to prevent but aid the mischief contemplated to be guarded against by the Act. Then as to the principle involved in this, namely, the right to promulgate what is commonly known as "judge-made law",—one cannot but regret to see a proposition alleging that Courts of Law have a right to limit or extend Acts of Parliament thus undisguisedly put forward. And then it is implied that Herbert v. Sayer favours the doctrine. Against that it is necessary at once to enter a protest. The judges there had to deal with an absurd and impracticable enactment, to the effect that an uncertificated bankrupt should be incapable of acquiring property. Why, who does not see in one moment that if he could not acquire property it was perfectly certain that his assignees could acquire none, as they could have only the same rights as the bankrupt himself and could only stand in his shoes. The Chief Justice Tindal himself puts it upon this ground when he says "All future property and contracts vest in the assignees by virtue of the Act 6 G. 4, c. 16. But there must be property in the bankrupt, or contracts with him, before such property or contracts can vest in the assignees" (2 D. & L. 49.) This property and this title remain in him, until either himself or his assignees do some act to disaffirm his title, and in the event of his assignees not interfering his title is good against all the world. That was not new law, but very old law, as the Chief Justice demonstrates. But an insolvent is never so situated. He does a solemn act disaffirming his own title. He gives up all property, both before and at the date of his discharge, as the condition of that discharge. At the adjudication he takes a solemn oath that he has disclosed every species of property, and that it is set forth in his schedule for the benefit of his creditors. If he knowingly omits any description of property he commits deliberate perjury, and may be prosecuted and transported; and as to the justice of this proceeding, if an insolvent were allowed to retain a legacy, or a debt, or an estate, or any description of property coming to him, between his petition and adjudication, the court might possibly be called upon to discharge a rich man as an insolvent debtor. Almost every day there are interests in property possessed by insolvents, which are undisclosed at the insolvency, and consequently never taken possession of by the assignee. But does that affect the assignee's title? It is every day's practice to deal with these interests in Court when discovered by creditors or their assignees at any period of time. As to the insolvent himself setting up a title as against creditors or any one else, such a thing was never heard of. Herbert v. Sayer upset new law and re-established old law. This decision of the Court of Exchequer upsets old law—introduces by judicial act a new clause into an absolute assignment, not to meet the mischief, but to further the mischief guarded against by the statute—and establishes new law, and openly justifies the assumption of legislative power.

It is singular to observe while on the one hand the Court of C. P. in Abley v. Dale profess so servile an adherence to the strict legal signification of two words in a new Act of Parliament, that they give them the effect of upsetting the whole bankruptcy and insolvency codes, which no one doubts are still the law of the land; the Court of Ex., on the other hand, goes to the opposite extreme in the other direction. It is clear although the system of administering law as established at Westminster is the nearest approach to perfection, yet, like every human institution, it is not absolutely perfect. It is, however, one great advantage that the press, legal and non-legal, can comment upon their decisions, without giving personal offence, which is not always the case when a tribunal is presided over by a single Judge. There is only one other remark in reference to Jackson v. Burnham which it is necessary to make, namely, that Mr. Baron Parke had evidently nothing to do with the decision, and that the other learned barons, Alderson, Platt, and Martin, doubted or differed from it, yet notwithstanding it stands as a decision of the Court of Ex.

COUNTY COURT FEES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—It is not many weeks since you stated in the LAW TIMES the propriety of members of the profession sending a statement of cases in which they had been concerned in the County Courts, where the remuneration was inadequate to the labour, and the suggestion of any scale of fees they might think remunerative for the purpose of guiding those with whom the fixing of such scale rested. It is unnecessary for me to state that in no one case in the County Court is a professional man adequately remunerated for his time and labour, as you will find in nine cases out of ten tried there, as much law (and sometimes more) is involved in a case to recover 1*l.* as to recover 100*l.* in the Superior Courts. I therefore think that when the Attorney is entitled to be paid for his time and labour (I hope in an adequate manner) so soon as the new scale of fees is framed, that it would be a great boon to the profession if you would aid us in urging those who can settle the fees to do so at once, and, not like the new rules in bankruptcy just issued, keep us waiting two years: surely there is not so much doing now that this cannot be accomplished. When it was necessary to settle a scale of fees in the Superior Courts, to deprive the profession of half their remuneration, it took but little time to do it.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
W. RICHARD PRESTON.

23, New Broad-street, London, Dec. 30, 1852.

THE RAMSHAY INQUIRY.—We understand the Lords of the Treasury have agreed to pay the whole of the expenses (within about 150*l.*) of the recent inquiry at Preston into the conduct of the late Judge of the County Court in this town.—Liverpool Mercury.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

EQUITY PRACTICE.—The number of points of practice reported last week was swoln by the introduction of four cases which had been sent in by the reporters, as our rule is, immediately on their decision, but which by an accident had been mislaid at the printing office.

We note first the decisions on the new practice. In The Attorney-General v. The Drapers' Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 151, the M. R. refused to appoint as a surveyor a person who had already given evidence in the case,—"he would appoint an independent surveyor." He refused also to instruct the surveyor to value the property according to what it was worth the to company, "but only at the market value." This is obviously just.

In Saunders v. Walter, 20 L. T. Rep. 151, V. C. TURNER adjourned the proceedings on a case to Chambers, for the evidence to be heard by himself with the assistance of the Chief Clerk. In Cook v. Hull, 20 L. T. Rep. 152, his HONOUR stated, that witnesses to be examined de bene esse should be examined viva voce, except under special circumstances, which might render such a course improper. In Smith v. The Swansea Dock Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 154, V. C. KINDERSLEY refused to allow the plaintiff, who was in Court, to be called and examined orally. "The claim," he said, "although it applied to proceedings on motion, required that the witness should be summoned before the examiner by subpœna in the ordinary way, and that must be done under an application made before the motion was brought on."

Service of copy of bill was, in Lea v. Smith, 20 L. T. Rep. 54, allowed where there were thirteen defendants, all in the same interest, by service of copy on one.

In M'Neille v. Acton, 20 L. T. Rep. 154, it was held, that application for appointment of an examiner of witnesses under sect. 31 of the new Act should be made to the Court and not at chambers. In Sharp v. Blondeau, 20 L. T. Rep. 154, a printed indorsement on a bill or claim, where defendant is residing out of the jurisdiction, was allowed to be altered in writing, by inserting fourteen instead of eight days; and in Robinson v. Hewitson, 20 L. T. Rep. 154 a petition was held to be within the 53rd section, and therefore where a female petitioner had married after the filing and stamping of the petition, and it thereby become necessary to amend it by making it the petition of husband and wife, it was held that such amended petition must be restamped.

Where an agreement had been executed in two parts, one of which was lost, the Court, at the instance of the plaintiff, to whom the lost part had belonged, ordered defendant to produce the part in his possession, for the purpose of having same stamped, plaintiff paying stamp duty, penalty, and costs. (Bryson v. The Warwick, &c. Canal Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 154.)

In Windsor v. Cross, 20 L. T. Rep. 152, an alteration made in an order and acted on was allowed, without requiring a supplemental order.

In Llewellin v. Pace, 20 L. T. Rep. 150, a nonsuit at law was held to have the same effect upon proceedings in equity as a verdict would have done, and, therefore, where at a trial in law the merits had been gone into and then the plaintiff selected to be nonsuited, the result was the same to the proceedings in equity as if the case had proceeded and a verdict found for the defendant. The M. R. also laid it down in the same case, that "If a party sought to discredit the testimony of a witness, he could only do so by bringing evidence to prove him to be a person not deserving of credit, but not that the evidence he has given is false."

In the Law of Attorneys should be noted a point in Re Mole, 20 L. T. Rep. 154, that under the 39th section of the Attorneys' Act, on a petition by a cestui que trust for the delivery and taxation of certain bills of costs which had been proved by the trustee, the latter should not be brought before the court, and the petition against it was dismissed with costs.

WRITS SENT INTO THE COUNTRY FOR SERVICES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Having perused in your last week's paper a letter from one of my profession complaining of the omission of many of the London attorneys to remit to their correspondents in the country the amount of their charges for service of writs, I am induced to write to you on the subject, not only to corroborate the statement of your correspondent, but also to suggest some mode by which the conduct of such ungentlemanly practitioners may be checked. In the majority of cases in which I have been engaged by a London agent or attorney to serve writs within my neighbourhood, I have never received a farthing in payment of my charges, and in one or two instances where a distringas was required I experienced considerable trouble and paid several shillings to the messenger instructed to make the necessary call at the defendant's residence some eight or nine miles from my office, and as yet have not been re-imbursed; and I believe that many of the country solicitors to whom a large amount of writs are forwarded for service in the course of a year, have met with similar treatment. In making, however, these remarks, I would wish it to be understood that they are not directed to the whole body of my professional brethren in London, for I must confess that some firms are very punctual in paying these charges, and, in the event of an omission to do so, cheerfully and promptly respond to any notice of their inadvertence. I would suggest, therefore, that in every action the taxing master be empowered to refuse to tax the plaintiff's costs until his attorney has produced to him an acknowledgment in writing from the country agent of the due payment of his charges for service of the writ, affidavit, &c. I do not think the resolution your last week's correspondent has come to, viz. to "send back writs unless remittances accompany them" can be justly acted upon, as the London agent cannot always ascertain the exact amount of costs to remit, where a mileage is to be added; and again, the charge for the affidavit of service would not be allowed on taxation in the event of defendant paying the debt and costs within four days. I dare say my suggestion is not free from objections, and I shall be obliged by any your readers calling my attention to it and devising some other means for securing to us a just remuneration for our services.

I am Sir, yours, &c.

Dec. 28, 1852. A COUNTRY ATTORNEY.

SMALL DEBTS ACT, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 127.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Will some of your readers be good enough to give me a little information as to the costs allowed by the borough and other small courts of record, to the plaintiff seeking an order for commitment in default of payment of a judgment debt under this act?

In the Manchester Borough Court of Record, no costs whatever are allowed, and the matter stands thus. If a creditor having a judgment debt and costs together above 10*l.* and under 20*l.* take out a summons under this act in that court, he has to prepare a petition, pay 9*s.* 3*d.* for the summons, attend the hearing, and if an order be made, pay 1*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.* (!) for the order; and should the debtor have removed from the district in which the judgment was recovered, then the creditor will have to summon and pay for the attendance of the proper officer of the court for that district at the hearing of the summons, to produce the original Judgment Roll, an office copy not being admitted as evidence in our Borough Court of Record. When the order is made for payment or commitment under this act, it would reasonably be supposed that the costs (at all events the 1*l.* 10*s.* paid for court fees) would be costs in the cause; but no such thing, not one penny is allowed, and the plaintiff pays all out of his own pocket. However, if the mischief stopped here it would perhaps not be so bad, but should the court make an order for payment by instalments, as is the case in the first instance, and default be made, the farce has to be re-enacted; so that if the debt were originally 7*l.* and the costs 4*l.* the whole of the 7*l.* debt would be swallowed up by the two hearings, allowing only very moderate costs to the attorney; and, in case of bringing the judgment from a distance, the whole 11*l.* would be gone.

In case of commitment, the plaintiff has to pay 3*l.* additional, to take the debtor to Lancaster, whereas as many shillings would secure him in the Borough Gaol.

After the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, was passed abolishing imprisonment on final process under 20*l.*, it was found that fraudulent debtors took advantage of the protection thereby given to them. The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 127, was then passed, enabling judgment creditors in the most simple and cheap manner (were the act properly carried out) to imprison the debtor. But, if before the judgment creditor were allowed to set that simple machinery in motion, the act had said that he should first pay into court, to be for ever forfeited, the amount sought to be recovered, and take his chance of getting what part of that amount he could from the fraudulent debtor, it would have been exacting, under the authority of Parliament, what is now being exacted without that authority, and what it is presumed never was intended.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Manchester, Dec. 28, 1852. X.

SIR THOMAS MORE & LORD ST. LEONARDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—After reading the Letter from the late Chancellor's Secretary, Mr. John Stuart, jun., which appeared in the Times of the 24th inst., I am reminded of what once occurred to the first above-named Chancellor: on directing the next cause to be called on, the reply was, "Please, your good Lordship, there is no other." An epigram was written thereon—

"When More sometime had Chancellor been,
No more suits did remain;
The same shall never more be seen,
Till More be there again!"

Yours, &c.,

J. R.

Newcastle-upon-Tyne, July 28, 1852.

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

THERE is only one case for notice this week, and that merely a point of practice in Bankruptcy. An affidavit was sworn before a Magistrate at New York, whose signature was attested by a notary public, although the affidavit did not appear to have been sworn in his name. It was held to be sufficiently sworn, and that no objection could be made on the ground that the notary was not present when it was sworn: (Ex parte Bird, 20 Law T. Rep. 150.) The other Bankruptcy case is really a decision falling under another department, where a note of it will be found.

ASSISTANT TO THE COMMISSIONERS OF PATENTS.—One of the most recent appointments made by the late ministry will, we think, give general satisfaction. At all events, we are sure that his very numerous friends in Manchester and Lancashire generally, as well as those of more recent date in the metropolis, where he has of late resided, will rejoice to learn that Professor Bennett Woodcroft—best known to the scientific world, perhaps, by his patent screw-propeller for marine and river steamers, has received, in a way which reflects honour on all parties concerned, a responsible and permanent appointment—one for life indeed,—in a department where his intimate and extensive knowledge of its past history, and his practical acquaintance with its details pre-eminently qualify him to discharge its important duties with the greatest possible benefit to the public service. The appointment is that of "Assistant to the Commissioners of Patents"—those commissioners being the Lord Chancellor, the Master of the Rolls, the Attorney-General, and the Solicitor-General. This appointment was conferred in the most handsome and flattering manner, and was wholly unsolicited and unexpected by Professor Woodcroft. We believe that Mr. Woodcroft will commence his duties immediately at the Patent Office, Southampton-buildings, late the offices of the now abolished posts of Masters in Chancery. We believe that this appointment renders necessary his entire withdrawal from his professional practice as a consulting engineer, &c., and that he will devote the whole of his time to the duties of his office; which will include the indexing of all patents, and assistance to the Queen's printer in the preparation for the press of past specifications. We are glad to learn that the commissioners of patents are about purchasing of Mr. Woodcroft the whole of his MS. "Indices of Patents," compiled at his own private cost and labour, and including every British patent from the commencement of the reign of James I. (when the first act was passed abolishing monopolies, and laying the foundation for the existing patent laws) to the present time. This immense work, the laborious compilation of more than seven years, is not a mere bald reference to every patent as enrolled, but consists of three different indices; one, chronological, not only giving the date of enrolment of every patent, but also containing references to all the works, serials, &c., in which notices of the patents have been published. Another index is arranged alphabetically, containing the names of all patentees during this long period of nearly two centuries and a half; and the third classifies under convenient heads of arrangement the subject-matter of the different patents. Nor is this all. A patentee, having reason to suspect that another person is, knowingly or otherwise, infringing his patent, applies for and, on cause shown, usually obtains, an injunction; in some cases the patent right is questioned and brought to trial at Nisi Prius; and in all these instances of litigation or legal proceedings, Professor Woodcroft's indices present the only existing means of reference. We may congratulate the public generally, and especially all ingenious inventors, on the disposition which has been manifested of late to put the regulation of patents on a better footing, and to afford, under proper regulations, all the information (which has hitherto been wholly unprocurable) which shall enable an inventor, before he embarks in the cost of a patent, to be sure that the ground has not been pre-occupied, and that, with an unquestionable right to the merit of discovery, he may not find himself placed (through no fault of his own) in the unenviable position of one who is infringing on the rights of the prior patentee.—Manchester Guardian.

COURT PAPERS.

Common Pleas.

Sittings at Nisi Prius in Middlesex and London before the Right Hon. Sir JOHN JERVIS, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, in and after Hilary Term, 1853.

MIDDLESEX.—IN TERM.

Thursday, Jan. 13. | Thursday, Jan. 20.

AFTER TERM.

Tuesday, Feb. 1.

LONDON.—IN TERM.

Monday, Jan. 17. | Monday, Jan. 24.

AFTER TERM.

Saturday, Feb. 12.

The Court will sit during and after Term at 10 o'clock.

The Causes in the List for each of the above sitting days in Term, if not disposed of on those days, will be tried by adjournment on the days following each of such sitting days.

Exchequer of Pleas.

Sittings at Nisi Prius in Middlesex and London, before the Right Hon. Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK, Knight, Lord Chief Baron of Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, in and after Hilary Term, 1853.

MIDDLESEX.—IN TERM.

1st sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 12.
2nd sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 19.
3rd sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 26.

AFTER TERM.

Tuesday, Feb. 1.

LONDON.—IN TERM.

1st sitting, Monday, Jan. 17.
2nd sitting, Monday, Jan. 24.

AFTER TERM.

Wednesday, Feb. 2, to adjourn only.

The Court will sit during and after term at 10 o'clock.

The Court will sit in Middlesex, at Nisi Prius, in Term, by adjournment from day to day until the causes entered for the respective Middlesex Sittings are disposed of.

In each of the London Sittings during Term there will be two days for the trial of causes.

INNS OF COURT.

PUBLIC EXAMINATION, HILARY TERM, 1853.

THE COUNCIL OF LEGAL EDUCATION have approved of the following Rules for the Public Examination of the Students. To afford a longer period for preparation, the Council have postponed the examination until the 22nd, 24th, and 25th days of January, 1853.

The attention of the Students is requested to the following Rules of the Inns of Court:—

"As an inducement to students to propose themselves for examination, studentships shall be founded of fifty guineas per annum each, to continue for a period of three years, and one such studentship shall be conferred on the most distinguished student at each public examination; and further, the examiners shall select and certify the names of three other students who shall have passed the next best examinations, and the inns of court to which such students belong may, if desired, dispense with any Terms, not exceeding two, that may remain to be kept by such students previously to their being called to the Bar. Provided that the examiners shall not be obliged to confer or grant any studentship or certificate, unless they shall be of opinion that the examination of the students they select has been such as entitles them thereto."

"At every call to the Bar those students who have passed a public examination, and either obtained a studentship or a certificate of honour, shall take rank in seniority over all other students who shall be called on the same day."

Rules for the Public Examination of Candidates for Honours, or Certificates entitling Students to be called to the Bar.

An examination will be held in next Hilary Term, to which a student of any of the inns of court, who is desirous of becoming a candidate for a studentship or honours, or of obtaining a certificate of fitness for being called to the Bar, will be admissible.

Each student proposing to submit himself for examination will be required to enter his name at the treasurer's office of the inn of court to which he belongs, on or before Wednesday, the 12th day of January next, and he will further be required to state in writing whether his object in offering himself for examination is to compete for a studentship or other honourable distinction; or whether he is merely desirous of obtaining a certificate preliminary to a call to the Bar.

The examination will commence on Saturday, the 22nd of January next, and will be continued on the Monday and Tuesday following.

Each of the three days of the examination will be divided as under:—From half-past nine A.M. to half-past twelve; from half-past one P.M. to half-past four.

The examination will be partly oral, and partly conducted by means of printed questions, to be delivered to the students when assembled for examination, and to be answered in writing.

The oral examination and printed questions will be founded on the books below mentioned; regard being had, however, to the particular object with a view to which the student presents himself for examination.

In determining the question whether a student has passed the examination in such a manner as to entitle him to be called to the Bar, the examiners will principally have regard to the general knowledge of law and jurisprudence which he has displayed.

The Reader on Constitutional Law and Legal History proposes to examine on the following Books:—

Hallam's Constitutional History, Vols. I. and II. Clarendon's History of the Rebellion, Vols. I. and II. May's History of Parliament. Rapin's History of the Reigns of Elizabeth to James the Second, inclusive.

Those who present themselves to obtain distinction will be examined more minutely, and expected to answer more difficult questions, drawn from the same sources, and to be acquainted with the important statutes and trials of the period; and also to answer questions relating to the progress and alterations of English law during the aforesaid reigns.

The Reader on Equity will examine in the following books:—

1. Milford on Pleadings in the Court of Chancery; Calvert on Parties to Suits in Chancery, chap. 1 & 2; Story on Equity Jurisprudence, Vol. I., and chapters 17 and 18, Vol. II.; the Act for the Improvement of Equity Jurisdiction, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86. 2. Sir James Wigram's Points in the Law of Discovery, "Defence by Plea;" the remainder of Story's Equity Jurisprudence, Vol. II.; the principal Cases in White and Tudor's Leading Cases, Vols. 1 & 2.

Candidates for certificates of fitness to be called to the bar will be expected to be well acquainted with the books mentioned in the first of the above classes.

Candidates for a studentship or honours will be examined in the books mentioned in the two classes.

The Reader in Jurisprudence and the Civil Law proposes to examine in

The Roman Law of Persons, as contained in the Institutes of Justinian, and as explained and illustrated by Heineccius (Elementa Juris Civilis); and Bowyer (Modern Civil Law.)

Candidates for a studentship or other distinction will be expected to answer all questions of principle suggested by the text of the Institutes. They will also be examined in Mackintosh—Law of Nature and Nations; Bentham—Principles of International Law, Vol. II. pp. 535 et. seq. of Bowring's edition; Montesquieu—Esprit des Lois, livre 28; Spence—Equitable Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery, part 1, book 1, chap. 7; part 1, book 2, chap. 7; part 1, Appendix; Story—Conflict of Laws, chapter on "Capacity of Persons," and "Domicile."

Candidates for a Certificate will be examined exclusively in Bowyer—Modern Civil Law, chap. 1 to 12; Mackintosh—Law of Nature and Nations; Spence—Equitable Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery, part 1, book 1, chap. 7; Story—Conflict of Laws, chapter on "Capacity of Persons."

The Reader on the Law of Real Property proposes to examine in the following books and subjects:—

BOOKS.

CLASS I.—2 Blackst. Com., or 1 Steph. Com, book 2; 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. book 2, chap. 4; book 3, chap. 1—7; Cru. Dig. tit. 11, 12, 16; Butler's Notes to Co. Lit., 191 a, sect. 2, 5; 271 b.

CLASS II.—Shelford on Mortmain, chap. 3; Roper on Legacies, chap. 19; Lewis on Perpetuity, and Jarman on Wills, with reference to 1 Vict. c. 26, ss. 28, 29.

SUBJECTS.

CLASS I.—The Nature of Estates of Freehold Tenure—their Quantity and Quality—their Rights and Incidents.

The Nature and Properties of Uses and Trusts, prior and subsequent to the Statute of Uses.

The Origin and Nature of a Lease and Release, as an ordinary mode of Assurance.

CLASS II.—The alterations effected by the Legislature during the last preceding and present reigns in the Practice of Conveyancing.

The Law of Mortmain; including therein the Law affecting the Alienation of Lands to Corporations, and the Disposition of Property to Religious and Charitable Purposes.

The Law of Lettlement; its effect upon the rights and Liabilities of Husband and Wife, as exemplified in the case of Marriage Articles, Ante-Nuptial and Post-Nuptial Settlements—and upon the Rights of Creditors and Purchasers under 13 Eliz. c. 4, and 27 Eliz. c. 5.

Students offering themselves for the public examination, and not going out in honours, will be expected to be well acquainted with the books and subjects comprised in Class I.

Students offering themselves for the public examination, and who are candidates for studentships or honours, will be expected to answer questions drawn from the books and subjects comprised in Class I. and Class II.

The Reader on Common Law proposes to examine in the following subjects and books:

CLASS I.—As to the nature of the common law generally (Stephen, Com., Vol. I. Introd. s. 3.) The law of principal and agent, and of bills of exchange and promissory notes (so far as treated of in Smith's Merc. Law. 4th ed., book 1, chap. 5, and book 3, chap. 1.) The law respecting tenancies from year to year, and for shorter periods (Woodfall on Landlord and Tenant, 6th ed. book 1, chap. 5, ss. 1 and 2.) The law respecting larceny and obtaining money by false pretences (Arch. Cr. Pl. 12th ed. book 2, part 1, chap. 1, ss. 1 and 3.)

CLASS II.—The law of partnership and corporations (so far as treated of in Smith's Merc. Law, 4th ed. book 1, chap. 2 and 4.) The law of distress (Woodfall, Landlord and Tenant, 6th ed. book 2, chap 2, ss. 1, 2, 3.) The cases of Ashby v. White (1 Smith, L. Cas. p. 105), and Marriott v. Hampton (2 Id., p. 237), with the notes thereto. The Common Law Procedure Act (15 & 16 Vict. c. 76), so far as it treats of the writ, appearance, joinder of parties and of causes of action (ss. 1-41.)

Students desiring merely to obtain a certificate to be called to the bar, will be examined in the books and subjects comprised in Class I.

Candidates for studentships or honours will be expected to be familiar with the books and subjects specified in both the above classes, and also with leading cases (if any) bearing upon the several branches of law therein enumerated, decided since the last editions of the books above-mentioned.

By Order of the Council,
RICHARD BETHELL, Chairman.

Council Chamber, Lincoln's Inn,
December 11th, 1852.

ATTORNEYS TO BE ADMITTED.

QUEEN'S BENCH, HILARY TERM, 1853.

Adye, Arthur, jun. 9, Devonshire-street, Red Lion-square; Bradford, Wilts; and Gt. James-st., articled to Wm. Stone
Appleton, Henry, Stokesley J. P. Sowerby
Aspinall, Clarke, New Ferry, near Liverpool—J. Collinson, Richard Radcliffe
Ayre, Charles Edward, 8, New Palace-yard; and Kingston upon-Hull—W. Ayre, jun.; W. Sanger
Babington, John, 37, Store-street, Bedford-sq—E. Babington; J. Scott
Baddeley, Thomas, jun. 38, Gloucester-terrace, Mile-end—T. Baddeley
Bartlett, William Smith, Stourbridge; and Blakedown—G. C. Vernon and L. Minshall
Baugh, George, 11, Blomfield-terrace, Pimlico; and Brosely—G. Potts
Bayley, Edward D'Oyly, Stockton-on-Tees; and Pakenham-street—W. Bayley, H. Barnes, and J. Dodds
Bell, John Leonard, 2, Vernon-place, Bloomsbury-square; Bourn; and University-street—W. D. Bell
Bell, Octavius, Much Hadham; Newcastle-on-Tyne; 31, Frederick-street, St. Pancras—C. U. Laws
Berridge, Robert Bristow, 18, Ampton-street, Gray's-inn; and Leicester—S. Berridge
Bimson, John, Everton, Liverpool—G. B. Carter
Breeze, Robert, 21, St. Mary-le-Strand-place, Old Kent-road—J. Newbold; E. W. Field
Broad, Joseph, Tunstall—W. Cooper
Bunting, John, 9, Percy-circus, Pentonville; and Mansfield—J. B. Simpson; R. Parsons
Burch, Arthur, 5, Pilgrim-street; St. Thomas the Apostle; Devonshire—W. Lambert, jun.; C. H. R. Rhodes
Calthrop, Thomas Dounie, 4, Upper-park-place, Blackheath—J. S. Rymer Carrington, Charles James, 2, Cambridge-terrace, Islington; and Crofts Bank, near Manchester—J. Barlow, jun.
Cartwright, John Urry H., Lower Brunswick-terrace; Baker-street; Rawtry—F. H. Cartwright; T. C. Leitch; and W. Thorpe
Clark, Frederick, Snaith—E. E. Clark
Cockerill, Thomas Marshall, 10, Symond's-inn—H. Hoane; W. Dean
Cooper, Thomas, Kidderminster—W. Boycott
Cross, John, 17, Bernard street, Russell-square—J. Cross
Durrant, Benjamin Chandler, Sherborne; and Poole—T. Durant; B. Chandler, jun.
Earle, Charles, 12, Old Quebec-street, Portman-square—G. Sperling
Earle, Henry Benjamin, 47, Lincoln's-inn-fields; and Andover—H. Earle Edge, James Henry, 7, Denmark-street, Islington; and Liverpool—J. Atkinson
Evans, Asa Johnes, Penrallt, Cadogan; and 18, Upper Marylebone-street—J. Smith
Fewster, John Reed, 41, Alfred-street, Islington; Gordon-street; and Durham—R. J. Shafto
Freeman, Charles Edward, 2, Chalcot-villas, Hampstead—H. Abbott Galtskell, Alfred Ashley, Stratham—J. Pryer; W. S. Galtskell; and T. H. Devonshire
Girdlestone, James, Kingswinford; and Gerard-street—J. Harwood
Groves, Thomas George, 24, Newington-crescent—J. Leman
Hampson, Francis, Plaistow; and Rusholme—J. Hampson
Hanmer, Phillip, 73, Margaret-street, Cavendish-square—Messrs. Potts and Brown
Hayman, Philip Charles, 4, Gray's-inn-square; and Old Bond-street—H. Trenchard; and H. S. Westmacott
Hodgson, James Leyland, Hulme-within-Manchester; Walmer-place; Longsit-within-Manchester—T. Dodge; and A. L. Hardman
Howell, Nathaniel, 8, Esher-street, Kennington; Portsea—A. Low
Jeffery, George, 42, Seymour-street, Liverpool; and Swinton-street, Gray's-inn-road—H. M. Gibson
Jennins, Charles, 26, Bryanstone-street, Portman-square; and Bath—P. H. Watts
Kaye, George Edward, 8, Russell-street, North Brixton—C. Kaye
Keays, Frederick, 8, Fitzroy-place, Kentish-town—R. Fisher
Kough, Samuel Harley, Shrewsbury; Warwick-court; and New Ross—T. H. Kough
Last, Frederick, Hadleigh—A. C. Veley; J. Last; and H. Last
Lucas, Thomas Edward, Taunton-place, Regent's-park—J. Ingram
Maclure, Bowman, 14, Harley-street, Cavendish-square—T. H. Jones
Mander, Charles John, 38, Ladbrook-square; Notting-hill; Little Ealing—J. J. Millard
Markby, Henry, 63, Charlewood-street, Pimlico—Messrs. Crabtree and Cross
Matthews, John Williams, Plymouth—A. Rooker
Moore, William Walter Kelland, 5, Blenheim-terrace, Abbey-road, St. John's-wood; and Tooley-street—H. W. Hooper
Nairn, Henry Pearson, Twickenham—E. Watts; and J. Kingsford
Naters, Henry Trewhitt, 17, King Edward-street, Liverpool-road; and Nassau-street—G. W. Wright; and F. Turner
Neate, Albert, 40, Duke-street, Manchester-square—J. Neate
Nisbet, Henry Curtis, 10, Charles-street, Middlesex Hospital—A. Bell Payne, John Brown, Manchester—A. Oliver
Pollock, Alfred Atkinson, 6, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry—P. R. Alderson; P. J. T. Pearse; and P. J. T. Pearse, jun.
Pownall, Henry Smith, 22, Gloucester-road, Regent's-park—W. Pownall Proud, John, jun., 2, Studley-road, Clapham; and Durham—H. J. Marshall
Purchas, James Bishop, 43, Ampthill-square; and Ross—W. P. Hooper
Ram, Stephen Adye, 23, Red Lion-square; and Bartholomew-place—J. Inglis
Roberts, Samuel, Lincoln; River-street, Myddleton-square; and Gerard-street, Islington—R. Mason
Robson, John, jun. 7, Clarence-terrace, Regent's-park—J. Robson
Sanger, John Hill Melton, Lower Calthorpe-street; Exeter; Devereux-court; Maze-pond; and Devonshire-street—R. Wreford; and J. N. Wilson
Sankey, Herbert Tritton, 11, New Ormond-street; Canterbury; and Great Ormond-street—R. Sankey; and W. P. Beecham
Scott, George Edward, 22, Alpha-road, St. John's-wood; and Conduit-street, Regent-street—F. J. Fuller
Scott, George Wm. 2, Great Dean's-yard, Westminster—J. Scott
Selby, James Addison, 17, Clifford's-inn; and Albany-street, Regent's-park—T. Selby
Senior, Frederick Bernard, 3, Warwick-square, Kensington; and Kew—W. Chapman
Sheppard, Augustus Frederick, Bellofield-house; and Parson's-green, Fulham—W. Parsons; and J. King
Simpson, James Tennant, 5, Montague-place, Russell-square—J. A. Simpson
Smith, Frederick, Hungerford; and Caroline-street, Bedford-square—W. W. Smith; W. Turner; and W. Withall
Smith, Job Orton, 25, Bernard-street, Russell-square; and Canonbury-terrace—P. Richardson
Snowball, George, Sunderland—G. W. Wright
Sparrow, William David Lloyd, Derby; and 6, Waverley-place, St. John's-wood—J. B. Simpson
Stiffe, Francis William Everitt, 8, Clement's-inn; Clifton; and Percy-circus, Pentonville—A. Cox
Thomas, Richard Aubrey, Green-hall, Carmarthen; Surrey-street, Strand; Hall-street, Islington—G. Thomas, jun.
Turner, George, Kinghorne-cottage, Coborn-street, Bow-road—W. H. Turner
Utterton, Edwin, Earl's-wood, Reigate—Messrs. Dawes and Sons.
Waller, Robert, Albany-street, Regent's-park; Wolverhampton; Westbourne-terrace—Messrs. Deakin and Dent
Wallis, Wm. Talbot, Devereux-chambers, Strand—R. B. Beddome
Warwick, James Bailey, 17, Upper North-place, Gray's-inn-road—M. P. Moore
Waugh, George, jun. 5, Great James-street; and Worthing—G. Waugh, sen.; and R. Edmunds
Weekes, Charles Henry, 4, High-street, Bloomsbury; and Lamerton by Tavistock—G. W. Snell; and J. V. Bridgman
Whitfield, John Charles, Bristol—W. Gresham; W. B. Cooper; G. W. Whitaker; W. Bartholomew; and W. Beavan
Wightwick, William, Newgate-street; Brunswick-street, Dover-road; Spencer-place, Brixton-road—P. W. Fry Williams, Ebenezer Robins, 30, Claremont-square, Pentonville; and Edgbaston—R. Gillam; I. O. Jones; and R. Gillam, jun.
Wincarls, William Good, 45, Gower-place, Euston-square; Norwich—W. Rackham
Wright, Egerton Leigh, Wigan—R. Bloxham; R. Darlington; and T. F. Taylor
Wyatt, William, 12, Cavendish-road, Wandsworth; and Stratford-place, Camden New-road—Nathaniel Mason

Added to the List pursuant to Judge's Orders.

Chisholme, John, 29, Edward-street, Hampstead-road—J. C. Hall
M'Clure, Edward Wade, Sandbach—E. Lewis; A. M'Clure; and J. Remer

PROCLAMATION OF OUTLAWRY.—At the Sheriffs' Court yesterday the following persons were called upon to surrender, under penalty of outlawry:—Charles Frederick Augustus William Guelph and Charles Cassimer Reinhold, at the suit of the Queen; Samuel Lucas Lancaster, C. B. Reynolds, John Edwin Spalding, George Broderick Hartwell, Edward John Upton and Susan his wife, Henry Dundas Campbell, Henry H. Griffin, and Porter Brown François Charles Gillies.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

Commission Signed by the Lord-Lieutenant of the North Riding of Yorkshire.—Digby Cayley, Esq., to be Deputy-Lieutenant.

Vice-Chancellor Sir George Turner has been appointed one of the Lords Justices of Appeal, in the room of Lord Cranworth.

Sir W. Page Wood succeeds Sir George Turner as Vice-Chancellor.

Mr. Keogh, Q. C. has been appointed to the office of Solicitor-General for Ireland.

The Hon. H. Fitzroy has accepted the office of Under-Secretary to the Home Department.

Mr. Grenville Berkeley has been appointed Secretary to the Poor Law Board.

C. S. Whitmore, Esq. the Recorder of Lichfield, has relinquished that appointment and accepted the Recordership of Gloucester; and H. W. Cripps, Esq. of the Oxford Circuit, has been appointed in his place.

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

ATTORNEYS AND SOLICITORS, IRELAND.

At the general half-yearly meeting of the Incorporated Society of the Attorneys and Solicitors of Ireland, held in the Solicitors' Hall, on Friday, November 26, 1852, Richard Meade, Esq., Vice-President, in the chair, the following report of the Council was read by the Secretary, and adopted by the meeting:—

"Your council congratulate the society on its incorporation this year by a charter, which confers on it many advantages, and forms the necessary basis of future privileges, required not only by the important social position of our Profession, but for the public benefit; and the attainment of those privileges will doubtless be a subject of early consideration to our successors, and the society at large.

"The establishment of a schedule of fees, affording proper remuneration to solicitors for business transacted in the Court of Chancery, being imperatively necessary, your council have zealously followed up the exertions of their predecessors on the subject, but regret to add, without present success, although, shortly after the accession to office of the present Lord Chancellor, they presented to him copies of the memorials which had been laid before the late Lord Chancellor by our predecessors, together with further memorials, and they are now under his lordship's consideration. Your council are disposed to hope, that the delay of so important a matter is caused by the meditated further reform of the court, and the consequent desire of his lordship to arrange one complete schedule of fees.

"The oppressive stamp duties and office fees of the Court of Chancery being amongst the most serious evils of the court, your council, with a view to their abolition by any further measure of Chancery Reform, have submitted a memorial on the subject to the Lord Chancellor, and are satisfied his lordship will give to it the attention which its great public importance demands.

"In the month of February last your council submitted to the Taxing Masters of the Court of Chancery rules and suggestions, tending to expedite the business of that department, and with some modification these rules have been adopted, and are in operation since last Easter Term. Your council have, however, to express their regret that the numerous complaints of delay in the taxation of Chancery costs are too well founded. A remedy for so great an injury to the suitors and our Profession is indispensable, and should be carefully considered by our successors and the society.

"When questions of principle on the taxation of costs arise, we recommend their submission to the council, in order that appeals may (if thought proper) be prosecuted at the expense of the society, so as to relieve individual members from the hardship of trying, at their own expense, questions sometimes comparatively small in themselves, yet important to the Profession. All such cases submitted to the council have been willingly considered; but the council regret that the want of funds has limited their exertions.

"Your council, in conjunction with the Incorporated Law Society of England, made every possible exertion during the last session of Parliament to procure the abolition of the annual certificate duty, and for some time immediate success was reasonably expected, but the disarrangement of Parliamentary business, consequent on the change of ministry, checked the exertions of our Parliamentary friends. Shortly after the formation of the present ministry, a memorial on the subject was presented to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and a deputation from the Incorporated Law Society of England having submitted to him the injustice of the tax, he made several inquiries, assured them he would carefully consider the question, and bear in mind the several decisions of Parliament favourable to its repeal, and also the probable effects of modern law reform, with a desire to come to a right conclusion. The remission of the impost not having formed part of the financial scheme afterwards submitted to Parliament by the Right hon. gentleman, Lord Robert Grosvenor immediately gave notice of a motion for leave to introduce a bill to repeal the tax, but he was prevented from moving it by a political manœuvre directed against another measure. The late general election having afforded an opportunity of further exertion, your council publicly recommend our profession to exercise their influence to insure, in the present Parliament, all possible support of the measure, and your council have reason to be satisfied with the result of the exertions accordingly made, and it is expected that the bill will be submitted to Parliament on the first opportunity this session; therefore, the continued exertions of the profession are requested, as being absolutely necessary to insure success.

"A system most obnoxious to the rights and character of the profession has come under our notice—namely, contracts made between solicitors and public bodies, under which the former accept salaries for the transaction of their professional business, and the latter receive all the professional fees, though such fees may and do exceed the salaries. The council denounce such dealings, and have their legality under consideration, with a view to its trial when deemed advisable.

"Most Professions have a self-governing power. Ours has not this advantage; yet no profession is more entitled to it, because no profession requires for the discharge of its duties an equal amount of integrity and personal honour. This society is a fit depository for such a power; and, as a step towards its attainment, your council lately submitted a memorial to the benchers, requesting their sanction of a regulation that in future all attorneys and solicitors seeking to take apprentices should be members of this society. The benchers, however, did not feel themselves warranted in complying with the request. Its objects should, therefore, be considered amongst the privileges to be sought in development of those conferred by the Charter.

"The report of the committee of this society for the year 1850, checked for some time the injurious and derogatory practice of advertising for business, previously adopted by one or two members of the Profession, but your council have to regret that the practice has been lately renewed, and by a member of the society who was well aware of such report. The form of advertisement referred to is a lithographed circular, to which our attention was called by an English solicitor, who, with creditable regard for the respectability of his profession, sent us the circular he received. We immediately considered the subject, and directed a letter to be addressed to the gentleman referred to, informing him of what had taken place, and requesting to know if he had any explanation to make; and he, in his reply, avowed the circular, and, not content with insisting on his right to issue it, expressed himself in very unbecoming terms to your council. Under those circumstances, we, in pursuance of the power vested in us by the 18th by-law, felt bound to suspend the gentleman in question from the use of the rooms of the society until the general meeting of the society, to which we referred the correspondence and further consideration of the subject. Your council deeply regret that the exercise of so painful a task should have been forced upon them.

"The council regret to state that many hardships and grievances affecting the Profession and the public are frequently laid before them, which it is not in their power to remedy; and, as an instance, they think it right to notice a case in which an attorney was obliged, on the trial of a record at the Autumn Cork Assizes, 1851, and under the advice of counsel, to bring down an original will from the Prerogative Court at an expense of 23*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, yet Mr. Hudson, one of the Law Taxing Masters, disallowed the sum of 11*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, part of the sum of 23*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* which was necessarily paid to that court for sending the original will to the Assizes, stating that in the absence of any authority, rule, or Act of Parliament to warrant the charge made by the Prerogative Court, he would only allow 12*l.* as for an ordinary witness for the purpose.

"Your council congratulate the society on the increase to its numbers this year, and invite the support of those of the Profession who are not yet members, as to join the society is now more than ever an imperative duty. A chartered and united body can effect much, if well aided; the exertions of our society to protect the rights and advance the interest of our profession (both Dublin and country practitioners) were never so wanted as at present. Those exertions will be earnestly made; but we call upon all our professional brethren to join, and give the society that support which is the material element of success."

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

Result of the Examination.—At the examination of the candidates for admission on the Roll last Term, 117 had left their testimonials and were entitled to be examined. Of these 108 were passed, two did not attend, and seven were postponed—their answers not being deemed sufficient to warrant a certificate of fitness and capacity to act as attorneys and solicitors.

It will be observed by the Questions, which we published on the 27th of November, that the Examiners carefully avoided any points regarding the Law or Practice recently abolished or altered, or the new enactments and rules and orders now in force.

Southampton.—Sir G. A. Cockburn will be opposed by Mr. A. B. Cochrane, who formerly sat for Bridport.

Oxford City.—Mr. Cardwell is engaged canvassing the electors, but an opposition is threatened, and active steps are being taken to bring forward another candidate. The nomination is fixed for Tuesday.

Foreign Rabbits.—The Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury having received and considered the application from an eminent importer and salesman of Leadenhall-market, requesting that rabbits, alive or dead, may be admitted to enter free of duty, their lordships have directed Mr. Hamilton, one of the secretaries to the Treasury, to acquaint the Commissioners of Customs that their lordships are of opinion that rabbits, not being specifically mentioned in the schedules of the Act 8 & 9 Vict. c. 90, must be held to belong to the class of goods unenumerated, and not, either in part or wholly, manufactured, and as such are, under the existing tariff, duty free on importation into this country. In pursuance of this decision of the Lords of the Treasury, the Customs' authorities have issued a General Order to their officers at the several ports in the kingdom, directing the delivery of foreign rabbits in future free of duty.

The Card Cheating Case at Brighton.—Richard Sill, the attorney whose name has so often appeared before the public in reference to the card-cheating case at Brighton, and who was convicted and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment at the Central Criminal Court, has been liberated from the House of Correction, Coldbath-fields, a writ of error having been allowed in his case, which will be heard in a Superior Court at some distant period.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

Dendy.—On the 30th ult. at 27, Fortess-terrace, Kentish-town, the lady of Arthur Hyde Dendy, Esq. barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

Giles.—On the 22nd ult. at Grove-road, North Brixton, the wife of John Edward Giles, Esq. barrister-at-law, of a son.

Middleton.—On the 24th ult. at Grove-house, near Leeds, the wife of Joseph Middleton, Esq. barrister-at-law, of a son.

Rawlinson.—On the 27th ult. at No. 39, Oxford-terrace, Hyde-park, the wife of T. A. Rawlinson, Esq. barrister-at-law, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

Colquhoun, George, Esq. of Parson's-hill, Woolwich, solicitor, to Mary, fourth daughter of the late Mr. Joseph Poulton, of Hackney, on the 28th ult. at South Hackney Church.

Hector, Cornthwaite, Esq. second son of the late C. J. Hector, Esq. M.P. for Peterafield, to Ann, second daughter of the late William Hayward, Esq. of the Temple, London, on the 28th ult. at St. Mary's, Lambeth.

Roope, Richard, Esq. of the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law, to Marcella, sixth daughter of the late John Were Clarke, Esq. of Bridwell-house, Devon, on the 23rd ult. at Halberton, Devon.

Wild, W. Stuart, Esq. of the Middle Temple, only son of the Rev. W. T. Wild, B.D. vicar of Westow, Yorkshire, to Jane, youngest daughter of Alexander Brown, esq. of Broadgate-house, Steeple Bumpstead, Essex, on the 21st ult. at Steeple Bumpstead.

DEATHS.

Babington, Alice Helen, youngest child of Benjamin Babington, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn, barrister-at-law, on the 23rd ult. at 31, George-street, Hanover-square, aged two and a half years.

Bloxsome, Edward, Esq. for fifty-three years deputy clerk of the peace for the county of Gloucester, on the 26th ult. at his residence, the Rangers, Dursley, aged 80.

Hoskins, Kedgwin, Esq. a deputy-lieutenant and magistrate for the county of Hereford, and formerly one of its representatives in several successive Parliaments, on the 24th ult. at his residence, Birch-house, near Hereford, aged 75.

Metcalfe, Elizabeth Anne, wife of Thomas Metcalfe, esq. of 5, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, and 29, Hertford-street, May-fair, on the 26th ult. aged 38.

Rogers, Edward, Esq. of Stanage-park, near Ludlow, formerly M.P. for Bishop's Castle, on the 22nd ult. at Bath.

JOURNAL OF PROPERTY.

MONEY MARKET.

English Funds.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Frid.
Bank Stock	Christmas Day.	224	223½	223½	223½	223½
3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities		101⅛	101⅛	101⅛	101⅛	101⅛
3 per Cent Consols Annuities		shut	..	..	shut	shut
Consols for Opening		100⅝	100⅝	100⅝	100⅝	100⅝
New 5 per Cent. Annuities		..	..	..	..	..
New 3½ per Cent. Annuities		104⅛	104⅛	104⅛	104⅛	104⅛
Long Annu. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)		6⅛	6⅛	6⅛	6⅛	6⅛
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Oct. 10, 1859)		..	..	..	..	..
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)		..	..	..	..	..
India Stock		..	..	..	..	..
India Bonds (1,000*l.*)		..	80	..	..	..
Do. do. (under 1,000*l.*)		..	80	80	83	..
South Sea Stock		..	..	..	..	..
Do. do. New Annuities		..	..	..	..	..
Exchequer Bills, 1000*l.* June		69*	71*	69*	..	72
Do. do. 500*l.* June		66*	70*	69*	..	72
Do. do. Small, June		..	70*	69*	..	72

* Premium.

THE SECO[illegible]
COMMON LAW [illegible] of an Action at Law [illegible] decided in Michaelmas [illegible] arrangements. Price [illegible]

THE LAW [illegible] ALMANAC
for [illegible] Almanack, [illegible] of an Abbreviated View [illegible] Tables, [illegible] of Business, Time, and the other Information [illegible] the Office, giving only just [illegible] to any person [illegible]

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS
and the BANKRUPTCY [illegible] with all the Cases decided on its construction, added [illegible] By C. J. B. [illegible], Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Author of "The Practice of Bankruptcy and Insolvency," &c.

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI. containing a [illegible] of Cases of Indictment [illegible] at Quarter Sessions, according to the [illegible]

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE; the Orders being placed in the [illegible] after the Sections of the Statute to which they relate, thus rendering the whole Law together. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Author of "Leading Cases in Equity," &c.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanack of the Month's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Taken in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 6d.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES for 1849, with Notes of all the Cases that have been decided on their construction, thus giving to the Practitioner the whole Law, viz. the text of it, and the judicial interpretation of the text. In a small volume for the bag or pocket. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. In continuation of the same already published from 1800. By C. J. B. HERSCHELL, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

To Readers and Correspondents.

COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVED.—"W. R. P." (City); "Flat Justitia" (Manchester); "Lex"; "R. W. B."

"FAIR PLAY'S" remarks are probably just, but he willigno the impossibility of publishing anything so personal as his allusions.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer—not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith.

No notice can be taken of anonymous contributions

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 8, 1853.

TO READERS.

DESIROUS of bringing up a large arrear of reports that were in type, so as to begin the busy part of the year next week with cleared columns, we have taken advantage of this season of holiday and the temporary lull in legal topics produced by recent changes, to devote a larger space to the reports and a lesser space to legal intelligence and information, than is our custom out of term. Hence the omission of divers of the wonted departments into which the contents of THE LAW TIMES are usually distributed.

CRIMINAL APPEAL.

THE measure of justice which we have so long demanded is likely to be conceded at last. Mr. ISAAC BUTT has given notice that he will introduce a Bill for providing an Appeal in Criminal Cases. Mr. KIRWAN'S case has forced upon the attention of the newspapers that which the LAW TIMES, speaking the experience of the Profession, had long since proposed and advocated. Even the Examiner, that sternest critic of our criminal law, with whom accusation suffices for conviction, and who would inflict punishment without mercy, has at length acknowledged that there ought to be some legitimate tribunal for reviewing a criminal trial. With such unanimity of opinion it is probable that justice and humanity will triumph at last, and that it shall no longer be the reproach of English law that while property to the amount of 20*l.* is protected by new trial against the error of human judgment, the same protection is denied to liberty and life.

The arguments against a Criminal Appeal are singularly weak. It is said that it will encourage crime by adding one more to the chances of escape for the criminal; that it will at least delay, if not defeat, justice, as it will be demanded in every case if it is given as a matter of right; and that if it is to be by leave of the Court above, one-half of its sittings would be occupied in hearing applications for new trials.

It will be seen that these objections, which are all that ever have been urged against it, are founded upon the assumption that a new trial is to be had without any difficulty. But such is not the design of those who advocate a Criminal Appeal. We contemplate nothing more than the same privilege as is permitted to parties in civil actions, namely, permission to go to the Court of Appeal, which is already established for deciding disputed points of law, and show cause why a new trial should be had, and that it should [illegible] reported the [illegible] application, relying upon the Court [illegible] sufficient grounds for [illegible] shown. To this [illegible] appears to be established by the prisoner's counsel, to the satisfaction of the Court, either that the evidence was insufficient to justify a conviction, or that evidence could be adduced for the defence which would rebut the case for the prosecution; and good reasons why this evidence was not produced at the trial should be required.

It has been suggested by some of the newspapers that the power of ordering a new trial should be vested in the Secretary of State. This would be undoubtedly a great improvement, and it would have some advantages; but on the other hand, the applications would be too numerous to receive due attention from the Home Office, and practically all minor offences would thus be excluded from the benefit of the provision; and it is important that it should extend to all criminal convictions, the loss of reputation being often a severer punishment than the sentence, and the removal of the stigma would be the primary object of the appeal.

We regret that this question is not to be brought before Parliament by some English Lawyer of distinction. It should have originated in the House of Lords, and would have come with peculiar grace from Lord CAMPBELL, as the author of so many other improvements in our Criminal Law. It is not yet too late for the Lord Chief Justice of England to produce a Criminal Appeal Bill. Sure we are that Mr. BUTT would willingly leave it to hands more able than his own to secure its success.

ELECTION PETITIONS.

THERE is just now a great outcry among the one hundred and odd members against whose returns petitions have been lodged, at the injustice done to them by charges made which may never be substantiated, and costs forced upon them to defend themselves from false and frivolous accusations. All sorts of alterations of the law are proposed, the practical effect of which would be to prohibit petitions altogether, and thus to give impunity to corruption.

But, in fact, very little alteration is necessary. The existing law, with the slightest amendment, would afford ample protection against vexatious and frivolous petitions. The Committee have power to order costs to be paid by the petitioner in their discretion. To secure complete justice for all parties, there needs but this trifling modification. Let it be enacted that a notice (say of fourteen days) shall be given by the petitioner to the Sitting Member, of the particular cases, with names and dates, which he proposes to put in evidence. Let each case be treated as is a distinct issue in law, and let the costs follow the result: that is to say, if the Sitting Member disputes the charges, or any of them, let it not be left to the Committee to say whether they are frivolous, but, according to the decision of the particular case, let the costs of proving or disputing it be paid by the losing party. If the petitioner brings a charge which he cannot support, let him pay the costs of the Sitting Member in disputing that particular charge; if, on the other hand, the Sitting Member disputes the charge, and the petitioner proves it, let the former pay the latter the costs of the proof to which he has thus been put. Let the general costs of the petition follow the general result.

Such a provision would effectually prevent frivolous charges and vain defences. A bill of a single clause would accomplish the object.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

THE long-promised, often-attempted, often-defeated reform of this relic of barbarism may now be looked upon as imminent Lord DERBY placed it among his promises, so that the doomed Courts can find no refuge on his side of the House; and Sir JAMES GRAHAM has promised it on behalf of the present Ministry, so that there is no hope for them from the Ministerial Benches. The only question at issue is, shall they be reformed or extinguished?

We are for their total extinguishment. Reform cannot reach their defects, for they are fundamentally bad. Their jurisdiction is founded upon an assumption which in this age and in a Protestant country is not acknowledged,—the right of the Church to regulate the morals and consciences, not of its own members only, but of the whole community. Hence the origin of their jurisdiction over wills and marriages. They have been handed down to us from Roman Catholic times, and they are [illegible] with the Roman Catholic policy, which yields those demands of the Church. But Protestants dispute the claim and deny the authority, and yet manage to say, in a Protestant country we have Church Courts exercising a jurisdiction over all the marriages and all the wills of the population, whether Churchmen or Dissenters. And to this the Dissenters have submitted quietly, while waging war against a Church Rate!

Undoubtedly, neither with wills nor with marriages can the Ecclesiastical Courts claim any right to concern themselves; these are essentially matters for the civil power, and to the ordinary tribunals of the country they must be consigned. If the Ecclesiastical Courts are to be preserved at all, they must be limited strictly to their proper province, the Ecclesiastical Government of the Church; they must be nothing more than tribunals for deciding disputes within the Church itself, and maintaining its discipline over its own clergy.

Nothing less than this will satisfy the requirements of the age we live in.

A COLLEGIATE SCHOOL FOR THE LAWYERS.

WE have received the following letter from the County Court Judge to whom we allnded last week, as having authorised us to put down his name for a subscription of one hundred guineas towards the establishment of a Collegiate School for the sons of members of the Profession.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I thank you for your courtesy and readiness in inviting the attention of the Profession to the establishment of a Collegiate School for the education of their sons. You have taken a wider, and I think, upon the whole, a better view of the question than I did. My intention was that the institution should be confined to the maintenance and education of the children of the poorer members of the Profession for a certain period, upon their contributing a small annual payment. There can, however, be no reason why such an institution might not be rendered effectual and valuable to the children of the wealthier members of the Profession, by providing "the best education at the lowest cost." Until the sense of the Profession be taken upon the question, it would be inexpedient for me to offer any suggestions. I have, therefore, merely thrown out a hint, which may be improved by competent persons. The Medical Profession, I apprehend, have established such a school; and most assuredly the Legal Profession are sufficiently numerous, rich, and powerful to form one for the education of their own children. When I sent my former letter to you I did not intend it for publication, as you rightly conjecture, my object being that of suggestion. You ask whether I will now permit my name to be announced; I consent to it, because it is a pledge of my sincerity in endeavouring to promote so useful an object, and because it may stimulate those who have children to turn their attention to the subject.

I am, Sir, your very obedient servant,
BENJ. PARHAM.

Hawford Lodge, Worcester, Jan. 3, 1853.

Thus the scheme is larger than either had contemplated at first, and the double object may be easily attained. The advantages of a cheap and good education may be well combined with charitable objects. A fund might be provided purposely for the education of the destitute children of members of the profession, in the same institution where those more fortunate pay for an education, the best that can be given, provided for them at the smallest cost. The twofold objects would materially help each other, and we can discover no substantial obstacle. The usual objection to the admission of children on charity, that it associates the paying ones with an inferior class, will not apply to an institution where all belong to one class, for those admitted with the help of the charity would be, in all respects but wealth, the equals of the rest. We now leave the suggestion to the consideration of our readers before we put it into a formal shape, and we shall be obliged by any hints that may be contributed upon so interesting a subject.

THE MAGISTRATE,
AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

EXCLUSIVE AUDIENCE OF THE BAR AT BOSTON SESSIONS.

The following report of proceedings at Boston Borough Sessions has been forwarded to us.—An application was made by Kent, of the Midland Circuit, (in the absence of Flowers), for the exclusive audience of the Bar at Boston Sessions. He also stated that it was the intention to make a subsequent application to alter the day of holding Spalding Sessions from Thursday to Wednesday.

Millington said he was deputed by a number of his professional brethren to oppose the application of the learned gentleman, not alone as a matter of private interest, but also on public grounds. It was rather, however, on public grounds that he would base his opposition than on any appeal ad misericordiam. Whoever had watched the progress of legislation for the last 20 years, must be convinced that it was the object and intention to make law as simple, and its administration as easy and economical as possible. The Legislature had, in fact, succeeded in so far simplifying the law, that the cases which came before these courts were of that common-place nature, that he thought he was not arrogating too much for the gentlemen of the profession to which he belonged, if he stated they were perfectly competent to discharge them. On public grounds, also, he would remind the Bench of what had been done in County Courts, the cases coming before which involved occasionally questions of great variety and intricacy; yet the Legislature had not thought proper to exclude attorneys from them; and he thought the same rule might fairly be extended to Courts of Quarter Sessions. He believed the Bar were about to introduce the rule of personal communication with clients, by which he thought barristers would lose much of their dignity and independence; and he conceived that if the bar usurped the practice at present confined to attorneys, much of the respect which was now justly due to the Bar would pass away. He hoped, however, as the County Courts Act had not thought proper to exclude attorneys, this Court would also be induced to pause ere they adopted that course. The principles decided in cases before the former tribunal were very difficult, —the applications generally much more complicated; and yet they managed to get through them without detriment to public justice. And now, as the practice of Courts of Sessions had become so much more simplified, he thought it would be a hardship to exclude them. It would also entail great additional expense in prosecutions, as much, he believed, as twenty-five per cent. This was a feature worthy of consideration; and he hoped the Bench would pause before they made the order for which the learned counsel prayed. With respect to parochial settlements, he thought attorneys were at least as well qualified as any other parties to conduct such questions; and they heard of scarcely any appeals. He had himself witnessed the conduct of the Bar at Spilsby and elsewhere; and he certainly did not think their presence gave additional facilities to the administration of justice. The cases had probably been prolonged, but no good had therefrom resulted to the public. Of course he conceded, that this Court had a perfect right to make any order it thought fit for the conduct of its proceedings; and he might remark, that in a pecuniary sense the alteration prayed for would not affect the profession to which he belonged; but on the public grounds to which he had referred, he did not conceive the expediency of the case was proved, and he therefore hoped the Court would not grant what the learned counsel sought.

Staniland also opposed the application on the same grounds as those mentioned by Millington. He also urged that no public advantage could arise, the Bar being very differently constituted to what it was fifty years ago; no university honours were now necessary; a person had but to attend a certain number of dinners, and at the end of three or five years he was a barrister. The consequence was the introduction of a very different class of persons; such as an auctioneer, or the editor of a newspaper, or any person who had failed in another pursuit, and to whom the Bar was a sort of refuge for the destitute. He stigmatised the application as one of peculiar assurance—

The Clerk of the Peace here very properly suggested to Staniland that he should refrain from indulging in harsh terms.

Staniland thereupon briefly concluded his argument, insisting that the profession to which he belonged were quite as well qualified as barristers to assist in the administration of justice, and urging that if the present application were granted, it would be a stigma on the profession. (The Chairman: "No, no.")

Kent having briefly replied,

The Chairman said the Bench was so closely identified with the magistrates of Spalding, that it would be necessary to consult them on the application; and they would therefore defer the consideration of the question to the adjourned sessions at Spalding.

New Trials in Criminal Cases.—Kirwan's Trial.—On the 15th February Mr. Butt, M.P., who was counsel for Kirwan, is to bring a bill forward in the House of Commons "to make better provision for the granting new trials in criminal cases."

The convict Kirwan has not yet been removed to the Spike Island depôt, one of his medical friends having given a certificate of delicate health. The most earnest efforts are now being made by his friends to have the sentence upon him altogether annulled.

Since the committal of Lord Frankfort to the House of Correction, Coldbath-fields, he has conformed himself very willingly to the rules of the prison, and appears quite reconciled to his punishment. He wears the prison dress, and in every respect is placed on the same footing as the other prisoners, except that by the payment of five shillings per week he is excused from labour, and spends his time principally in reading.

The Militia.—Tuesday's Gazette contains an Order in Council, commanding that all deputy-lieutenants, colonels, and commanding officers of corps of militia shall immediately proceed to raise and enrol in their respective counties volunteers to serve for the term of five years, according to the provisions of the act passed last session for consolidating and amending the law relating to the militia in England.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

The Lords Chancellor and the Lords Justices in the Court of Appeal, one of them (Lord Cranworth) dissenting, have held that the bequest of an annuity to A. to be secured by purchase of stock out of the proceeds of the sale of some land, and if that should not be sufficient the same to be supplied out of the personal estate, is a perpetual annuity. Lord St. Leonards observed: "It is perfectly settled and agreed upon that if an annuity be given simpliciter to one generally, a life interest only passes. It is equally, I believe, undisputed, that if an annuity be directed to be provided for out of the proceeds of property or out of property generally—if an annuity is to be brought into existence by the application of property, and that is given to a party generally, the party would take the property appropriated to purchase the annuity, and therefore would take the annuity in perpetuity if it were purchased: (Kerr v. The Middlesex Hospital, 20 Law. T. Rep. 160.)

Whenever a gift is made to husband and wife, the presumption of law is that it is given to one person, and they take as one person. Therefore where a bequest of 700*l.* was made to A. and B. his wife, and C., and there was a subsequent bequest of 200*l.* to C. 200*l.* to A. and 200*l.* to B., it was held that A. and B. were entitled only to a moiety of the 700*l.* and that C. took the other moiety, the general rule of construction not being altered by the context: (Re Wylde's Estate, 20 Law T. Rep. 162.)

In the Law of Vendor and Purchaser it has been held in Clark v. May, 20 Law T. Rep. 164, that a purchaser of real estate and of a judgment debt which represents the same property, at a particular price for the whole, has a right to apportion the purchase-money as he thinks fit, and to have a conveyance by two separate deeds, one comprising the real estate and purporting to be in consideration of a certain sum, and the other comprising the judgment debt and purporting to be in consideration of the residue of the purchase-money.

It is vulgarly thought that in England a man may do what he likes with his own. It is not exactly so, as will be seen by the case of M'Donnell v. Hesselrige, 20 Law T. Rep. 164. The facts were these:—A single lady, foolishly speculating upon a marriage not then arranged, but only hoped for, loving wisely not too well, conveyed a fund to trustees, upon trust for herself until the solemnisation of the marriage, if any, or in case there should be no marriage and after the solemnisation of the same marriage, if any, upon trust for her for life, for her separate use, exclusive of the contemplated or any other husband, and after her decease in trust for her children, and in default of children in trust for such persons as she should appoint, and in default of appointment in trust for her next-of-kin. The contemplated marriage did not take effect, and she afterwards married another, having previously prevailed on the trustees to whom the stock had been transferred to sell out a portion of it. It was held that she was not mistress of her own money; that she was bound by her own settlement on herself; that she had no power to revoke the settlement previously to the second marriage; and that the trustees were guilty of a breach of trust—another instance also of the liabilities of trustees.

The law of a foreign country governs a contract made in England with respect to landed property in that country. Thus, in Demerara mortgages cannot be made without certain formalities. A mortgage made here of certain lands there, without those formalities, was in Waterhouse v. Stansfeld, 20 Law T. Rep. 165, held to be bad against the assignees of the mortgagor.

Another Will case is reported from V. C. Stuart's Court. A. by will gave stock to the wife of his nephew B. At the date of his will B. was living with a woman whom he had introduced to the different members of his family as his wife, and who was believed by them to be so. The testator also believed that B. was married to this woman, but he was not personally acquainted with her. B. died without having been married. The reputed wife was held not to be entitled to the legacy (Re Davenport's Trustees, 20 Law T. Rep. 165).

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

Although a Scotch case, The North British Bank v. Collins, 20 Law T. Rep. 157, presents some points of general interest in this branch of the law: thus, where the deed provided that the yearly abstract of the company's affairs exhibited by the directors should be binding on the partners, who were to have no right to examine the company's books, but it was to be competent for a majority of the partners at a general meeting to appoint two of their number to examine and report on the general state of the company's affairs, it was held that an individual shareholder was not thereby precluded from filing a bill alleging that the yearly abstracts were false and fraudulent, and that these allegations were sufficient to warrant a reference to an accountant to inspect the company's books and report whether the abstracts were bonâ fide and not fraudulent.

The late Lord Chancellor has decided a case of considerable interest to Building Societies, reversing the decision which we formerly reported from the Court below. Seagrave v. Pope, 20 Law T. Rep. 158, was a bill to redeem a mortgage to a building society formed under the original scheme, before they were made permanent societies and mortgages expressly redeemable. It will be remembered that V. C. Bruce held that the mortgagor was entitled to redeem upon certain calculations of the value of his unpaid subscriptions. But upon appeal the Lord Chancellor has reversed this decision, holding that, upon a review of the Building Societies Act, the rules of the particular society, and the terms of the mortgage, the condition of the mortgage was not to repay the sum advanced and interest, but for the due payment of all future monthly payments, subscriptions, and fines, according to the rules of the society. "There is," he said, "an entire absence of any provision for advance, except in the way of the payment of a share by anticipation; and by a security for the advance was intended a security for the performance of the contract in relation to which the payment by advance was made—that is, the contract to pay the future subscriptions."

It will suffice to direct the reader's attention to the very important case of Reg. v. The York and North Midland Railway Company, 20 Law T. Rep. 166, in which it was decided by the Court of Q.B. that, where a railway company had taken land under the compulsory clauses of its Act of Parliament, and had constructed and opened a part of the line, it was bound to complete the whole line, however unprofitable, or unnecessary, or injurious it might be, and whether it had or had not funds for the purpose. It will be satisfactory to observe that from this astounding conclusion of legal logic one judge (Erle, J.) dissented. Doubtless, the judges felt themselves compelled to it by deductions from former decisions; but it is very greatly to be regretted when the conclusions of law are found to differ from those of common sense, for it tends to bring the law itself into odium. But the reasons for the various judgments are given at length in the report, and the reader will form his own opinion how far they are satisfactory.

Queries.

LIFE INSURANCE—RIGHT TO BONUS.

By a policy dated July 21, 1816, in the Norwich Office, a sum of money was assured on the life of H. G., payable within three months after proof of her death, and such further sum or sums as should at any time or times thereafter be appropriated under the regulations of the office as a bonus upon that policy. The premium was payable on July 21, yearly.

The above policy became vested in C. D., who, on July 21, 1851, paid the year's premium in advance to July 21, 1852. On April 8, 1852, H. G. died, and on June 30, 1852, the directors declared a bonus, the calculations for which included the profits up to June 30, 1851, only.

C. D. contends that he is entitled to this bonus, as made before his money became payable. The office refused to acknowledge the claim, and consequently C. D. (the policy being thirty-four years old) loses 10*l.* per cent. on the premiums paid during the existence of the policy.

Will any of your readers say if they have met with a similar case in any other office? A Subscriber.

COURT PAPERS.

COMMON LAW SITTINGS IN TERM.

Queen's Bench.

Sittings at Nisi Prius in Middlesex and London, before the Right Hon. JOHN Lord Campbell, Lord Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, in and after Hilary Term, 1853.

MIDDLESEX.—IN TERM.
1st sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 12.
Any common jury cause may be taken at this sitting.
2nd sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 19.
Any common jury cause may be taken at this sitting.
3rd sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 26.
For undefended causes only.
AFTER TERM.
Tuesday, Feb. 1.
LONDON.—IN TERM.
1st sitting, Monday, Jan. 17.
2nd sitting, Monday, Jan. 24.
Any common jury cause may be taken in term.
AFTER TERM.
Saturday, Feb. 12.

The court will sit at 10 o'clock every day.

The causes in the list for each of the above sitting days in Term, if not disposed of on those days, will be tried by adjournment on the days following each of such sitting days.

CROWN PAPER.

Manchester—Reg. (on prosecution of Corporation of Manchester) v. John Plant and another Lancashire—Reg. (on prosecution of Omerod and others) v. The Manchester and Southport Railway Company
Surrey—Reg. (on prosecution of Overseers of Christchurch) v. Geo. Chas. Fletcher
Suffolk—Reg. v. Inhabitants of Haughley
London—Reg. v. Inhabitants of St. Leonard's, Shoreditch
Kent—Reg. v. William Waghorn
Somersetshire—Reg. v. Inhabitants of Nempnett Thrubwell
Middlesex—Reg. (on prosecution of Poor-Law Board) v. The Vestrymen and Directors of Poor of St. Pancras
" Wm. Dugdale (plaintiff in error) v. The Queen (defendant in error)
Herefordshire—Reg. (on prosecution of Parish Officers of Bodenham, resp.) v. The Churchwardens and Overseers of the Parish of St. Andrew, Worcester
Bucks—Reg. (on prosecution of the Parish Officers of Aylesbury, resp.) v. Wm. Roberts and others, app.
Middlesex—Reg. v. Geo. Philbrick Swinborne and two others
Suffolk—Reg. v. The Inhabitants of Stowmarket.

SPECIAL CASES AND DEMURRERS.

For Judgment.

The Mayor, &c. of Berwick-on-Tweed v. Oswald.—Dem.
Same v. Renton.—Dem.
Same v. Dobie and another, exors. &c.—Dem.
Tallis v. Tallis.—Dem.
Leverick v. Mercer.—Dem.
Phelps v. Warren.—Special case.

For Argument.

Michaelmas Term, 1853.

Doe dem. Housfield v. Rideal.—Special verdict.

Hilary Term, 1853.

Gill v. Fowke.—Special case
Johnson and Wife v. Lucas.—Dem.
Williams and another v. Evans.—Dem.
Liverpool Tradesmen's Loan Society Company v. Dickenson.—Dem.
Kernot v. Cattlin.—Dem.

NEW TRIAL PAPER.

Standing for Judgment.

Cambridge—Chief Baron. Haylock v. Sparke. Mr. O'Malley.
Liverpool—Mr. Justice Wightman. Mellor v. Leather and others. Mr. E. James.
Middlesex—Lord Campbell. Reg. v. Eastern Archipelago Company. Mr. Crowder.

Michaelmas Term, 1852.

For Argument.

London—Lord Campbell. Hastings v. Brown. Attorney-General.
Bristol—Mr. Baron Platt. Bongleaux v. Swayne and another. Mr. Serjt. Kinglake.
Notts—Mr. Justice Coleridge. Earl of Scarborough v. Pickering. Mr. Willmore.
Oxford—Mr. Justice Williams. Wiltshear v. Cottrell. Mr. Keating.
Wells—Mr. Baron Martin. Doe dem. Butt v. Rons. Mr. M. Smith.
Herts—Chief Justice Jervis. Johnson v. Gibson. Mr. Bovill.
London—Lord Campbell. Bessell v. Wilson. Mr. H. Hill.
Northumberland—Lord Campbell. The Mayor, &c. of Berwick-on-Tweed v. Renton. Mr. Knowles.
Monmouth—Mr. Justice Williams. Keyse v. Powell. Mr. W. H. Watson.
London—Lord Campbell. Heywood and others v. Potter. Mr. Bramwell.
Carlisle—Mr. Justice Wightman. Walton v. M'Grath and another. Mr. Atherton.
Middlesex—Lord Campbell. Maugham administrator, &c., v. Smith. Mr. E. James.
Hereford—Mr. Justice Creswell. Doe dem. Hemings and others v. Parkinson. Mr. Keating.
Liverpool—Mr. Justice Wightman. Neill v. Warhurst. Mr. Serjt. Wilkins.
" Mr. Justice Wightman. Reg. v. Inhabitants of Houghton. Mr. Atherton.
Warwick—Mr. Baron Alderson. Derra de Moroda v. Dawson and others. Mr. Serjt. Miller.
Devon.—Mr. Baron Martin. Northam v. Hurley. Mr. Serjt. Kinglake.
London—Lord Campbell. Gregory v. Cotterell and others. Mr. Chambers for Defendant. Mr. Slowman.
Sussex—Mr. Justice Maule. Doe dem. Bratt v. Ashland, Bart. Mr. Serjt. Channell.
Middlesex—Lord Campbell. Reg. v. Dr. Newman. Sir A. Cockburn.

Tried during Michaelmas Term.

Middlesex—Mr. Justice Crompton. Kernot v. Cattlin. Mr. Udall.

ENLARGED RULES.

First Day.

In the matter of John Smith, gent. one, &c.
In the matter of a plaint between Maurice Webb, plaintiff, and Alexander Jenkins, defendant, in the County Court of Lancashire, holden at Liverpool.
Keating v. Stewart.
In the matter of Richard Lile, gent. one, &c.
In the matter of James Thomas Russell, gent. one, &c.
Wilson v. Simpson.
Robinson and others v. Shaw.
In the matter of Frederick Day, gent. one, &c.
Reg. v. Justices of Middlesex.
Reg. v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners.
Reg. v. Mayor and Assessors, &c. of Harwich.

COUNTY COURT APPEALS.

Mountney v. Collier—From County of Staffordshire, holden at Uttoxeter.

Court of Common Bench.

Sittings at Nisi Prius in Middlesex and London before the Right Hon. Sir JOHN JERVIS, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, in and after Hilary Term, 1853.

MIDDLESEX.—IN TERM.
Thursday, Jan. 13.
Thursday, Jan. 20.
AFTER TERM.
Tuesday, Feb. 1.
LONDON.—IN TERM.
Monday, Jan. 17.
Monday, Jan. 24.
AFTER TERM.
Saturday, Feb. 12.

The court will sit during and after Term at 10 o'clock.

The causes in the list for each of the above sitting days in Term, if not disposed of on those days, will be tried by adjournment on the days following each of such sitting days.

DEMURRER PAPER.

Monday, Jan. 17.

Quartermaine v. Bittleston and others.
Marker v. Kewick.
Tanner v. Benton.

REMANET PAPER—ENLARGED RULES.

Enlarged Generally—In the matter of Sharp, Clerk, and others v. All of Horbury. In Prohibition.
" Dalby v. The India and London Life Assurance Company.

New Trial of Michaelmas Term, 1848.

Surrey—Hamilton v. Cochrane. Standing for arrangement.

New Trials of Michaelmas Term last.

London—Peterson v. Ayre.
" Moffatt v. Dickson, Clerk, &c.
Surrey—Duncan v. Tindall, junr.
Essex—Matthew v. Osborne.
Herts—Rappen v. Hunt.
Middlesex—Sharman v. Sanders and others.
London—Rowe v. Tipper.
" Same v. Same.

APPEALS FROM THE COUNTY COURTS
Under the Statute 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61.

	Appellant.	Respondent.
Kent—Margate.....	Winch, C.	Winch, A.
Essex—Chelmsford	Cheveley	Fuller.
Durham—Gateshead ..	Gibbon, W.	Gibbon, M.

Exchequer of Pleas.

Sittings at Nisi Prius in Middlesex and London, before the Right Hon. Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK, Knight, Lord Chief Baron of Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, in and after Hilary Term, 1853.

MIDDLESEX.—IN TERM.
1st sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 12.
2nd sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 19.
3rd sitting, Wednesday, Jan. 26.
AFTER TERM.
Tuesday, Feb. 1.
LONDON.—IN TERM.
1st sitting, Monday, Jan. 17.
2nd sitting, Monday, Jan. 24.
AFTER TERM.
Wednesday, Feb 2, to adjourn only.

The court will sit during and after term at 10 o'clock

The court will sit in Middlesex, at Nisi Prius in term, by adjournment from day to day until the causes entered for the respective Middlesex Sittings are disposed of.

In each of the London Sittings during term, there will be two days for the trial of causes.

PEREMPTORY PAPER.

To be called on the first day of the term, after the motions, and to be proceeded with the next day, if necessary, before the motions.

6 Nov. 1852.—Doe d. Hulin and others v. Powell—Mr. Whateley. To set aside verdict for defendant on payment of costs, and for a new trial—Mr. Keating.
2 Nov. 1852.—Morgan v. Clifton—Mr. James. To set aside verdict for plaintiff, and for new trial, and for leave to add pleas—Mr. Chambers.
22 Nov. 1852.—Price v. Hewett—Mr. Field. For leave to plead and demur at the same time, and for a stay of proceedings on issue on fact—Mr. Petersdorff.

SPECIAL PAPER.

For Judgment.

Taylor v. Loft and others, special case.—Heard Nov. 10, 1852.

REMANET FROM MICHAELMAS TERM, 1853.

For Argument.

Alcock v. Ashpitel, Administrator, &c.—Dem.
Alcock v. Ashpitel, Administrator, &c.—Dem.

SITTINGS PAPER.

		Banc.	Nisi Prius.
Tuesday	Jan. 11	Motions and Peremptory Paper ..	....
Wednesday ..	12	Errors, Peremptory Paper, and Motions..	Midd. 1st sitting. ....
Thursday	13	General Business	....
Friday	14		....
Saturday	15		....
Monday	17	Special Paper	London 1st sitting.
Tuesday	18	General Business	....
Wednesday ..	19	Special Paper	Midd. 2nd sitting.
Thursday	20	Circuits Chosen	....
Friday	21	General Business	....
Saturday	22	Crown Cases	....
Monday	24	Special Paper	London 2nd sitting.
Tuesday	25	General Business	....
Wednesday ..	26	Special Paper	Midd. 3rd sitting.
Thursday	27	General Business ..	....
Friday	28		....
Saturday	29		....
Monday	31		....

NEW TRIAL PAPER.

For Judgment, moved Easter Term, 1852.

Chester—Mr. Justice Williams. Pearson, clerk, v. Beck. Mr. Evans.
Carmarthen—Mr. Baron Martin. Williams and another v. Pearson. Mr. Knowles.

Moved Michaelmas Term, 1852.

York—Lord Campbell. Watson v. Wood. Mr. E. Hill.

For Argument, moved Easter Term, 1852.

Kingston Lord Campbell. Griffin and another v. Humphrey. Mr. Chambers.

Moved Hilary Term, 1853.

London—Lord Chief Baron. Vincent v. Shropshire Union Railway and Canal Company. Attorney-General.

Moved Easter Term, 1852.

Chelmsford—Mr. Justice Coleridge. Gant v. Pattrick. Mr. Serjt. Channell.
" Mr. Justice Coleridge. Gant v. Groom. Mr Serjt Shee.

Moved Michaelmas Term, 1852.

Middlesex—Mr. Baron Martin. Bedford and others, executors, &c. v. Collier. Mr. Butt.
Newcastle—Lord Campbell. Heslop v. Baker and others. Mr. Bliss.
Carlisle—Mr. Justice Wightman. Waters and others v. Towers and another. Mr. Atherton.
Liverpool—Mr. Justice Wightman. Rubberstv and another v. Ward. Mr. Watson.
" Mr. Justice Wightman. Robertson and another v. Wait and another. Mr. Serjeant Wilkins.
Maidstone—Lord Chief Justice Jervis. Hills the younger v. Milson. Mr. Chambers.
Guildford—Lord Chief Justice Jervis. De Clermont v. Bradbury and another. Mr. Chambers.
Worcester—Mr. Justice Williams. Christie and another v. Winnington. Mr. Alexander.
Stafford—Mr. Justice Creswell. Instan v. Yates. Mr. Gray.
Carmarthen—Mr. Justice Crompton. Morgan, administratrix, &c. v. Thomas. Mr. Evans.

Moved after the Fourth Day of Michaelmas Term, 1852.

Middlesex—Mr. Baron Martin. Tanner v. Woolmer and others. Sir A. Cockburn.
" Mr. Baron Martin. Mr. Scothorn and another v. The South Staffordshire Railway Company. Mr. Bramwell.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting to the Right Hon. William Ewart Gladstone, the offices of Chancellor and Under Treasurer of her Majesty's Exchequer; the Queen has also been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, appointing the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bart. to be her Majesty's Commissioner for the affairs of India; the Queen has also been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the office and place of Advocate-General or Judge Martial of her Majesty's Forces to the Hon. Charles Pelham Villiers; the Queen has also been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, for nominating, constituting, and appointing the Right Hon. Mathew Talbot Baines to be a Poor Law Commissioner for England; the Queen has also been pleased to constitute and appoint the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert to be her Majesty's Secretary at War; the Queen has also been pleased to grant the office of her Majesty's Advocate for Scotland to James Moncreiff, Esq. The Queen has also been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, constituting and appointing the Right Hon. Sir James Robert Geo. Graham, Bart.; Vice-Admiral Hyde Parker, C.B.; Rear-Admiral Maurice Frederick Fitzhardinge Berkeley, C.B.; Captain the Honourable Richard Saunders Dundas, C.B.; Captain Alexander Milne, and the Honourable William Francis Cowper, to be her Majesty's Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the said United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the dominions, islands, and territories thereunto belonging.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Captain George Thompson Wade to be Civil Commissioner and Collector of Taxes for the Seychelles Islands, dependencies of the Island of Mauritius. Her Majesty has also been pleased to appoint Thomas T. Kelly, Esq., M.D., to be an Assistant Magistrate for the district of Natal, in South Africa.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Rev. John Alexander Mathias, Bachelor of Arts, to be Chaplain on the establishment of the Government of the Island of Ceylon. Her Majesty has also been pleased to appoint Richard Davies Hanson, Esq., to be Advocate-general for the colony of South Australia.

Mr. Thomas Kemmis has been appointed Crown Solicitor for the Leinster Circuit, vice Mr. William Kemmis, resigned. This is one of the outgoing arrangements of the Tories.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Mr. W. C. S. Rice, barrister-at-law, to be his Chief Secretary.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, constituting and appointing the Right Hon. John George, Earl of Aberdeen, K.T.; the Right Hon. William Ewart Gladstone; Alfred Hervey, Esq. (commonly called Lord Alfred Hervey); the Hon. Francis Wemyss Charteris; and John Sadleir, Esq. to be Commissioners for executing the offices of Treasurer of the Exchequer of Great Britain, and Lord High Treasurer of Ireland.

Her Majesty having been graciously pleased to deliver the seals of the duchy and county palatine of Lancaster to the Right Hon. Edward Strutt, the oath of Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster was this day (Dec 17) by Her Majesty's command administered to him accordingly.

Privy Council.—Extract from a Supplement to the Gazette of Jan. 4.—This day the Most Noble George Douglas Duke of Argyll and the Right Hon. John Robert Viscount Sydney were, by her Majesty's command, sworn of her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, and took their respective places at the Board accordingly.

Her Majesty having been pleased to deliver the custody of the Privy Seal to the Most Noble George Douglas Duke of Argyll, the oath of Keeper of the Privy Seal was this day administered to him, and his Grace took his place at the Board accordingly.

Her Majesty in Council was this day pleased to declare the Right Hon. Edward Granville Earl of St. Germans, Lieutenant-General and General-Governor of that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland.

Her Majesty in Council was this day pleased to appoint the Right Hon. Edward John Lord Stanley of Alderley, President of the Committee of Council appointed for the consideration of all matters relating to Trade and Foreign Plantations, in the absence of the President of the said Committee for the time being.

Irish Affairs.—Lord Chancellor, Right Hon. M. Brady; Attorney-general, Mr. A. Brewster; Solicitor-general, Mr. W. Keogh.

Scotland.—Lord Advocate, Right Hon. J. Moncreiff; Solicitor-general, Mr. W. Deas.

Scotch Law Appointments.—Mr. Moncreiff is, of course, again Lord Advocate, and is before his constituents for re-election. Mr. J. C. Brodie has been reappointed to the office of Crown Agent. The Depute-Advocates will also be the same as under Lord John Russell's late Ministry—viz. Messrs. George Young, Thomas Cleghorn, George Dingwall Fordyce, and A. R. Clark. We believe also that Mr. James Donaldson will be, as before, Advocate-Depute for the Sheriff Court and Exchequer.—Scotsman.

Members returned to serve in this present Parliament.

Borough of Hertford. — The Hon. William Francis Cowper, one of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

Town of Nottingham.—The Right Hon. Edward Strutt, of Kingstone Hall, in the county of Nottingham, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

City of Carlisle.—The Right Hon. Sir James Robert George Graham, Bart. First Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty.

City of London.—The Right Hon. John Russell, commonly called Lord John Russell, one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State.

City of Oxford.—The Right Honourable Edward Cardwell, President of the Board of Trade.

Borough of Southwark.—Sir William Molesworth, Chief Commissioner of Works.

Borough of Brighton.—Alfred Hervey, Esq. commonly called Lord Alfred Hervey, one of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

Borough of Morpeth.—The Right Honourable Sir George Grey, Bart.

District of Burghs of Leith, Portobello, and Musselburgh.—James Moncreiff, Esq. her Majesty's Advocate for Scotland.

Borough of Wolverhampton.—Charles Pelham Villiers, Esq. commonly called the Honourable Charles Pelham Villiers, Judge Advocate General.

City of Lichfield.—Alfred Henry Paget, commonly called Lord Alfred Henry Paget, Chief Equerry and Clerk Marshal to Her Majesty.

Borough of Aylesbury.—Richard Bethell, Esq. Her Majesty's Solicitor-General.

City of Gloucester.—The Honourable Maurice Frederick Fitzhardinge Berkeley, one of the Lords Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of Great Britain and Ireland.

The following buildings are certified as places duly registered for solemnising marriages, pursuant to the Act of the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85:—St. Ann's Church, Aughton, Lancashire; L. Wright, superintendent-registrar, Calvert-street Chapel, St. Saviour, Norwich; F. J. Blake, superintendent-registrar. Ebenezer, Rhydefelen, Glamorganshire; W. B. Watkins, superintendent-registrar.

The North British Mail, speaking of the fatality of a ring, says:—"We believe that in October 1845, a man, named Donald Fraser, was transported for the theft of the same ring which formed a very important link in the chain of evidence which was on Friday adduced against George Christie for the murder of Mrs. Ross and her grandson."

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Jan. 4.

Thom, James, tailor, Peckham, Jan. 7, at one, Feb. 11, at twelve, Basinghall-st. Off. as. Cannan. Sol. Wetherfield, Basinghall-st. Petit'n, Dec. 31.

Ellis, Josiah, machine broker, Preston, Lancashire, Jan. 17 and Feb. 7, at twelve, Manchester Court. Off. as. Pott. Sols. Turner and Son, Preston; Cooper and Son, Manchester. Petition, Jan. 1.

Veals, Charles, miller, Ashwater, Devonshire, Jan. 18, and Feb. 11, at three, Exeter Court. Off. as. Hernaman. Sols. Kingdon, Ridsworthy, and Stogdon, Exeter. Petition, Dec. 28.

Dividends.

Bankrupt Estates.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Black, J. wine merchant, first, 4s. 1d. Graham, London.—Cameron and Bruce, pickle merchants, first, 2s. Stansfeld, London.—Dubbins, E. common brewer, first, 1s. 11d. Graham, London.—Farrell, W. provision dealer, first, 1s. Bird, Liverpool.—Kirkman, R. merchant, third, 0¾d. Bird, Liverpool.—Laing, J. coal merchant, first, 1s. 3d. Graham, London.—Lilley and Ashmall, merchants, first sep. of Lilley, 5s. Bird, Liverpool.—Lowndes and Bateson, merchants, second, 11-128ths of 1d. Bird, Liverpool.—Mant and Gill, merchants, fourth, 0¾d. Bird, Liverpool.—Nash, W. woollen warehouseman, second, 1s. Stansfeld, London.—Parker, C. flax spinner, fourth and final, 1-13th of 1d. Baker, Newcastle.—Strickland and Brickwood, merchants, third, 1-16th of 1d. Bird, Liverpool.—Tattersall, T. corn merchant, second, 4s. 0¾d. (making 20s.) Turner, Liverpool.—Williams, W. Williams, W. jun. and Williams, T. R. bankers and millers, first sep. of W. Williams, sen. 5s.; first sep. of W. Williams, jun. 9d.; first sep. of T. R. Williams, 6d. Acraman, Bristol.—Wraith, B. carrier, first, 2s. 4½d. Bird, Liverpool.

Insolvent Estates.

Apply at the Provisional Assignee's Office, Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, between the hours of eleven and three.

Cortlide, S. H. dissenting minister and author, 2s. 9½d.—Chesnutt, G. clerk, 10½d. (making 3s. 10½d.)—Fagerman, Z. captain royal marines, 2s. 6d. (making 3s. 7d.)—Groves, R. widow, 7s. 2d. (making 17s. 11d.)—Harris, H. B. master in the Navy, 12s. 6d. (making 20s.) Williams, T. pork butcher, 6s. 1d. (making 11s. 1d.)

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Dec. 28.

Browne, J. cordwainer, Maidstone, Kent, Dec. 3. Trusts. S. Bentlif, widow, Maidstone; W. Linley, leather factor, West Smithfield; and T. Sycklemore, currier, Maidstone. Sol. H. M. Sparham, Basinghall-chambers.—Campbell, N. blacksmith, Benenden, Kent, Dec. 13. Trusts. C. Ellis and W. Haynes, ironmongers, Maidstone. Sol. H. A. Wildes, Maidstone.—Kelwick, J. merchant, River Lee Wharf, Waltham Abbey, Essex, Dec. 1. Trusts. R. S. Meeson, J. Meeson, E. Meeson, and W. Doyle, coal and lime merchants, Stratford. Sol. C. J. Rawlings, Waltham Abbey.—Wilson, W. oil and colourman, Goswell-road. Trusts. R. Wilson, gentleman, Holloway; T. Whitmore, colonial broker, Mincing-lane, Sols. Abbott and Driver, Birchin-lane.

Gazette, Dec. 31.

Austin, R. draper, Allison-terrace, Kensington, Middlesex, Dec. 22. Trusts. D. Laurie, warehouseman, Watling-street; and I. MacCutchan, warehouseman, Friday-st. Sol. T. M. Cattlin, Ely-place.—Cannon, G. currier, Marlborough-street, Devonport, Devon, Dec. 21. Trust. W. W. Snell, merchant, Plymouth. Sols. Wright and Bonnar, London-st. Fenchurch-st. Clapham, J. Wellington-st. Leeds, York, Dec. 9. Trusts. H. Micklethwait, book-keeper, and S. F. Jones, iron merchant and founder, both of Leeds. Sol. J. Thackrah, Hunslet, Leeds. Hanney, J. tea dealer, Leigh, Lancaster, Dec. 22. Trust. U. C. Whittingham, Manchester. Sols. Hitchcock, Buckley, and Tidswell, Manchester.—Piper, E. J. wine and spirit merchant, Ledbury, Hereford, Dec. 23. Trusts. J. Stallard, wine and spirit merchant, Worcester, and G. H. Piper, gentleman, Ledbury. Sol. V. Barber, Ledbury.—Ridgeway, F. cutler and ironmonger, South Shields, Durham, Nov. 2. Trusts H. Ridgeway, cutler and ironmonger, and W. Mears, ironmongr. both of Sunderland. Sols. Ranson and Son, Sunderland.—Woodbridge, S. carpentor and builder, Hornsey, Middlesex, Dec. 17. Trust. N. Saxton, timber merchant, Blackfriars-bridge-wharf, Upper Ground-street, Surrey. Sols. Willoughby and Cox, Clifford's-inn.—Yates, J. G. grocer, Angel-terrace, West Hammersmith, Middlesex, Dec. 1. Trust. R. Rawley, wholesale cheesemonger, New-st. Covent-garden. Sol. J. E. Elworthy.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Dec. 21.

Brierley, E. and Jack, A. patent press dyers and finishers, Rochdale, Nov. 26.—Brown, M. Ingham, R. and Newberry, S. manufacturers of cotton, Read Holme, near Rawtenstall within Lower Booths, as regards Newberry, Dec. 11.—Carson, A. and T. K. as regards T. K. Carson, Oct. 28.—Christian, T. and A. drapers and silk mercers, Douglas, Dec. 8. Debts paid by A. Christian.—Dawkins, W. and J. warehousemen and commission agents, Bread-st. Cheapside, Dec. 8.—Garwood, G. and Myers, J. horse dealers, Manchester, Dec. 18.—Howarth, J., T., and H. cotton cloth manufacturers, Hulshaw Moor, Farnworth, Dean, Dec. 16. Debts paid by J. Howarth.—Hughes, J. and James, R. coal merchants, Sept. 25.—Jervis, J. and H. tea dealers and grocers, Bristol, Oct. 6th. Debts paid by H. Jervis.—Jones, T. and J. wine and spirit dealers, Manchester, Oct. 10. Debts paid by T. Jones.—Leng, R. sen. Brown, R. Davies, E. and Brown, E. salt proprietors, Knight's Grange, Winsford, Dec. 15.—Meader, G. C. and Foot, C. wine and spirit merchants, Idol-la, Dec. 9.

Gazette, Dec. 24.

Allen, E. and R. and Holmes, J. stuff manufacturers, Bradford, as regards R. Allen, Dec. 22. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Atkinson, P. E. and Musgrave, C. law stationers, Chancery-lane, Dec. 24. Debts paid by A. B. Carpenter, Elm court, Temple.—Bens, B. and Baldrey, W. jun. Hanworth, Dec. 21.—Besemeres, J. and J. jun. and W. warehousemen, Wood-st. Cheapside, and Houndsditch, Dec. 23.—Binns, R. and Pinder, S. card setting machine maker, Dec. 21. Debts paid by Pinder.—Chadwick, R. and Buckley, R. painters, plumbers, and glaziers, Oldham, Dec. 22. Debts paid by Chadwick.—Cherry, W. A. veterinary surgeon, Hogyard, St. Giles, and Stephen-mews, Cresse-st. Rathbone-pl. Dec. 21.—Colthurst, G. and F. maltsters, Bristol, Nov. 1. Debts paid by E. Colthurst.—Fry, T. W. and Groom, H. C. ship and insurance brokers, Lime-st. Dec. 24.—Jackson, J. and J. drapers and tailors, Macclesfield, July 24.—James, C. and J. and L. wine and spirit merchants, Aug. 31.—Johnson, B. and Morgan, W. nail factors, Bromsgrove, Dec. 1.—Kay, J. and Goff, H. W. chemists and druggists, Prospect-pl. Kingsland-rd. Nov. 1.—King, R. and Clark, R. carpenters and builders, St. John's Wold, Dec. 21.—Kynes, C. Ridley, S. ship chandlers and provision merchants, Strype-gardens, Tower-hill, and Ratcliffe, Rotherhithe, Oct. 3. Debts paid by Kynes.—Lee, [illegible] L. and Cowland, J. music sellers and publishers, Albemarle-st. Piccadilly, Dec. 28. Debts paid by Lee.—Lenfers, H. and Wild, J. engine makers and [illegible] [illegible], Dec. 24.—Masterman, C. T. and Lloyd, [illegible] [illegible]-without, Dec. 21. Debts paid by [illegible] P. and Orione, L. merchants Gardens, Little Tower-street, Dec. 24. Debts paid by Mc Murray.—Oliver, W. Liverpool, and [illegible] C. baker, Kittering, as regards [illegible] of shares, Dec. 24. Debts paid by Bell.—Pitt, J. and Pitt, T. [illegible] Hill, Heywood, Mar'st. Debts paid by Pitt.—Pringle, D. and Hobson, J. H. woollen and lambswool spinners and wool dealers, Leicester, Dec. 11.—Smithurst, J. and Rawlins, W. engineers, millwrights, and iron and brass founders, Old Gravel-lane, St. George's East, Dec. 21. Debts paid by Swinburne.—Thistleton, W. and Lukey, J. grocers, [illegible]-st. and house agents, Dover, Dec. 23. Debts paid by W. Thistleton.—Welsh, H. D. Livingston, E. and Hodges, W. tailors, drapers, and outfitters, Bristol, Dec. 17.—Debts paid by Hodges.—Webb, T. Webb, J. and Hopkinson, W. general merchants and commission agents, Huddersfield, and Sydney, New South Wales, Dec. 17, as regards Hopkinson. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Worley, R. and Fisher, G. ship insurance brokers and agents, Liverpool, Dec. 21. Debts paid by Worley.

Gazette, Dec. 28.

Brear J. and Patchet, F. wire manufacturers, Popplewell, near Cleckheaton, Dec. 24.—Brierley, A. and Travis, F. W. manufacturing chemists, Dewsbury, Dec. 24. Debts paid by Brierley.—Carr, S. and J. manufacturing chemists, Leeds, Dec. 23.—Crabb, C. sen. and C. jun. linen drapers, Nottingham Dec. 24. Debts paid by Crabb, jun.—Crawford, J. and Franklin, F. G. painters and glaziers, Redcross-st. and Bridge-st. Southwark, Dec. 25.—Dennis, G. N. and Duncan, A. tailors, Jermyn-st. Saint James, Dec. 1. Debts paid by Hunter.—Hall, E. and T. grocers and cheesemongers, Sevenoaks, Dec. 23. Debts paid by T. Hill.—Lees, A. and Cooper, W. japanners, Birmingham, Dec. 21.—Martin, J. Stone, G. and Martin, J. and R. bankers, Lombard-st. as regards Stone, Dec. 25.—Morrish, F. E. and Young, J. licensed victuallers and dining-room keepers, Liverpool, Dec. 23.—Peterson, W. sen. and W. jun. boot and shoe makers, Pentiry, Dec. 24. Debts paid by W. Peterson, jun.—Rayment, G. W., and E. wharfingers and coal merchants, Brehen Wharf, Upper Thames-st. as regards W. Rayment, Dec. 27.—Scully, T. and J. merchants, Curtain-road, Dec. 13. Debts paid by Scully.—Stilwell, E. and Holbeck, J. gold and silver lacemen, Vigo-st. Regent-st. Dec. 24. Debts paid by Holbeck.—Sutton, W. S. and Lupard, J. H. cork manufacturers, Brighton, Dec. 23.—Taylor, H. and Harmer, H. grocers, drapers, general shopkeepers, tailors, wine and spirit merchants, Hurleham, Sept. 8.—Whitfield, E. and J. and Mee, S. general factors, Birmingham, Dec. 21.

Gazette, Dec. 31.

Allbut, T. and M. booksellers, &c. Manley, Dec. 18. Debts paid by E. Allbut.—Bannerman, J. and H. Young, W. Bannerman, J. A. Winterbottom, A. Gillibrand, P. and Bannerman, D. merchants, Manchester, London, Leeds, Bradford, and Huddersfield, as regards A. Winterbottom, Dec. 28.—Bannerman, J. and H. Young, W. Bannerman, J. A. Winterbottom, A. Gillibrand, P. and Bannerman, D. under the firm of "The Patent Dacian Company," Strangeways, Manchester, Dec. 28. Debts paid by Winterbottom.—Barrowclough, T. and Ashworth, T. porters for a railway company, Waterfoot and elsewhere, Dec. 16.—Berthelmes, E. and Buckup, J. commission merchants, Bradford, Dec. 31.—Brierley, A. and Travis, W. manufacturing chemists, Clifton-bridge, Dewsbury, Dec. 24. Debts paid by Brierley.—Compton, J. and Ritchie, T. printers, Middle-st. Smithfield, June 30.—Derrington, J. and Sminett, H. brass founders, Manchester, Dec. 21.—Dobell, E. J. and Fordham, S. wine and spirit merchants, Bath, Dec. 28. Debts paid by Dobell.—Ellis, J. R. and Porter, N. merchants, Clement's-lane, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Ellis.—Fitch, J. Queen-st. Golden-square, and Fitch, W. Princes-st. St. James, Dec. 31.—Fordati, J. Coxhead, J. Goldsmid, Y. H. general merchants, Old Jewry-chambers, as regards Fordati, Dec. 31.—Franklin, J. and West, W. farriers, Wigmore-st. Cavendish-sq. Dec. 25. Debts paid by Franklin.—Gibson, T. S., M. B., and C. Thompson, J. Reynolds, C. Dignum, E. Williamson, E. jun. Neuman, C. W. Firth, T. Worthington, W. Ashton, H. Blackburne, J. L. Corbett, E. Barton, J. and T. and Hubbs, W. rock salt proprietors and white salt proprietors, under the firm of the Meadow Bank Company, Over, Oct. 6.—Green, F. Tucker, W. Denny, G. and Ratsbone, H. M. Cornhill, as regards Denny, Dec. 31.—Jones J. and Turner, W. cotton doublers, Manchester, Dec. 24. Debts paid by Turner.—Kitchin, J. P. and Gregson, J. I. stock and share brokers, Old Broad-st. Dec. 29.—Latham, J. and Grindrod, T. power-loom cloth manufacturers, Clitheroe, Dec. 24. Debts paid by Latham.—Moore, F. L. and Moore, L. G. wine and spirit merchants, Basing-lane, Dec. 31. Debts paid by F. L. Moore.—Pearson, E. and Rutland, W. B. printers, booksellers, &c. Shrewsbury, Dec. 28. Debts paid by Rutland.—Ranking, J. and H. and Christian, S. merchants, St. Helen's-place, Bishopsgate-st. as regards H. Ranking, Dec. 31.—Rawlings, W. and Johnson, W. J. dyers, scourers, &c. Judd-st. New-road, Marchmont-st. Russell-square, and at High-st. Highgate, Dec. 24.—Robinson, W. Oldroyd, M. Firth, J. Robinson, G. Oldroyd, I. and M. Pickles, J. Oates, J. B. Parritt, J. Day, C. and M. Blakeley, G. Fox, M. sen. and M. jun. Day, J. Firth, E. Oldroyd, M. jun. and Lassington, W. scribbling millers, under the firm of Day, Parritt, and Co. Batley Carr, as regards M. and C. Day, and G. Blakeley, M. Fox, sen. M. Fox, jun. and J. Day and M. Oldroyd, Dec. 17. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Rusby, W. Brown, G. and Booth, H. stone merchants, &c. Bankside, Southwark, and Bridge-wharf, Kingsland-road, as regards H. Booth, Jan. 1.—Stanley, E. and White, M. A. milliners, Portsmouth, Dec. 29.—Straith, J. and Frull, R. Y. sworn brokers, Great Tower-st. Dec. 31. Debts paid by Straith.—Taverner, J. and Berry, J. ale and porter dealers, Birmingham, Dec. 6.—Usborne, M. and Moore, J. A. corn factors, New London-st. Dec. 21. Debts paid by Usborne.—White, J. B., J. B. jun. G. F. and R. S. eminent manufacturers and [illegible] makers, Millbank-st. Westminster, Swanscomb, and Erith, as respects J. B. White, sen. Dec. 21.—Williamson, W. A. and C. upholsterers and cabinetmakers, Ludgate-hill, Dec. 31.—Zulueta P. J. de, P. de, and M. de, merchants, London, Liverpool, and Gibraltar, as regards P. J. de Zulueta, Dec. 31.

Bankrupts.

From the Gazette of Friday, Jan. 7.

Bradbury, Samuel, cheesemonger, Holborn-hill.

Brown, James Hollebar, shipbuilder, Yarmouth.

Emmett, John, corn dealer, Blandford-street, Eaton-square.

Hoaten, William, draper, St. Blazey, Cornwall.

Mayson, Stephen, builder, Mount-pleasant, Liverpool-road.

Nixon, James, woollen manufacturer, Leeds, near Oldham.

Shaw, William, bookseller, Ludgate.

THE NEW [illegible]
LAW COURTS [illegible] to the Pages in the last [illegible]
PROCEDURE ACT. [illegible]
N.B.—This is referred to [illegible] a separate work. [illegible]

THE SECOND [illegible]
[illegible]
ALL THE NEW [illegible]
Forms. Price [illegible]

THE LAW [illegible] ALMANAC
for 1853, [illegible]
Attorneys, Their Duties, [illegible]
Statutes and Two Useful [illegible] and five other important subjects in the Office. Price only [illegible] other part to any

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS
and the BANKRUPTCY ACT, [illegible] Circular Cards destined in its construction, and a very Useful Index. By C. J. B. HUNTERBERT, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Author of "Leading Cases and Forms," &c. Price 1s. 6d.

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI. containing [illegible] of Indictment for use at Quarter Sessions, [illegible] Price 1s. 6d.

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE; [illegible] the Orders lately passed [illegible] the Statutes of the Session to which they relate, [illegible] and which Law together. By CHARLES TUDOR, [illegible] Law, Author of "Leading Cases in Equity," &c. Price 12s.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanack of the Month; Rules and Sittings for the last as well as the present Term; complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables to Common, Local, Bankruptcy and Insolvency, and much other matter required for Reference in Chambers. Price only 6d.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES for 1849, with Notes of all the Cases that have been decided on their construction, thus giving to the Practitioner the whole Law, viz. the text of it, and the Judicial Interpretation of the text, in a small volume for the bag or pocket. Price 5s. 6d. cloth. In continuation of the series already published from 1846. By C. J. B. HUNTERBERT, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"AN OLD SUBSCRIBER."—We would advise him to apply to the Board of Inland Revenue, who are now required to state what the stamp ought to be, and not to rely upon answers from our readers; therefore we do not insert his query. He will be pleased to expect it should he find any difficulty in the course we recommend, and then it shall appear.

"E. H."—We have no doubt that he would be admissible as a solicitor.

"E. W. J. (Manchester) should ascertain if any such society exists bona fide. If not, it will be a proper subject for animadversion; if there be such a society, it is not within our jurisdiction.

"AN ARTICLED CLERK."—Tudor's is as good a description of the new practice as may—at least, it appears to find favour with those who are the best judges of the value of a law book—the actual practitioners who use it.

"W. F. N." (Rotherham) desires the name and address of our correspondent, "A Clerk of a single Court." Will he send it?

"J. B" (Derby.)—His case is a hard one; but we could not with propriety permit an appeal through the LAW TIMES against judicial decisions.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer—not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith.
No notice can be taken of anonymous contributions.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 15, 1853.

TO READERS.

Desirous of presenting to our readers the new Common Law Rules, issued so unexpectedly at the commencement of this Term, and which are now in operation, we have been compelled to omit almost all other legal intelligence, the usual leading articles, correspondence, &c. and several reports that were in type.

Next week, a Double Number will bring up the arrears.

THE NEW RULES.

A BODY of New Rules, in framing which the Judges have adopted the admirable plan of repealing and re-enacting, instead of adding, has been issued. They will be found entire in another part of this number of THE LAW TIMES.

They are now being [illegible] so as to form either a Supplement to Mr. Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act, or a separate work, with notes and index, and with marginal references to all the pages in the first and second editions of that book to which the rules relate, so that the practitioner possessing it may be enabled instantly to find the portions of the New Act and of the practice to which the New Rules [illegible]. It will also be added as an appendix to the second edition of Kerr's Procedure Act, of which it will now form a part, and all the copies hereafter ordered will contain it.

Thus the [illegible] will constitute the whole of the law as it is.

THE LAW [illegible]

THE Secretary of the [illegible] is very desirous [illegible] Society has no purpose to [illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible] we did not [illegible] an open [illegible] of it—only that they sanctioned an [illegible] of it. Of this there can be no doubt, for the proof is before us in a [illegible] able essay by Mr. Erskine Beower Denison, Barrister-at-Law, published and circulated by the Association, and the object of which is to prove the validity of Marriage with a Wife's Sister celebrated abroad. But let it not be supposed that we find any fault with the Society for looking and touching how to evade a bad law: the fault is not with them, but with the makers of such a law. The duty of obedience to a law is not unlimited:—it is clearly bounded by the limit of the right of Society to make such a law. If law-makers trespass beyond their province, they have no moral claim to the obedience of the subject—might may enforce it, but there remains to the oppressed the right of resistance, or the privilege of evasion. In dictating to a man whom he shall not marry, beyond that limit of relationship which nature herself prohibits by degeneracy of the race, the Legislature exceeds the powers vested in Society, and invades individual liberty in a matter which in no manner concerns Society. The oppressed in such case being few, resistance is out of the question: but evasion remains, and they have a moral right to resort to it. How this may be done Mr. DENISON tells us in the very able pamphlet that lies upon our desk.

It is based upon the principle thus emphatically declared by Lord STOWELL; "English decisions have established this rule, that a foreign marriage, valid according to the law of the place where celebrated, is good everywhere else."

We cannot attempt to compress into the limits of a leading article Mr. DENISON's review of the cases bearing upon either side of the question, which he puts with admirable impartiality, shirking no difficulties and omitting no doubts; but we state briefly his conclusion to be, that if a man wants to marry his wife's sister he can do so at Hamburg, where the Dutch law has not disgraced itself by any such trespass upon the liberty of the subject, and that such a marriage will be held to be valid here, in spite of the statute, of so discreditable an origin, that has wrought so much misery and wrong in England.

We recommend all of our readers who may be consulted where such a marriage is sought, before they advise their clients, to peruse this pamphlet, weigh well its arguments, and judge for themselves of the worth of its conclusions.

CONVEYANCING REFORM.

THE Solicitor-General, in his address to his constituents at Aylesbury, made an emphatic statement of his views with respect to changes which he deems to be necessary in Conveyancing, and which are well known to be of the most radical nature. He seeks nothing less than to make the transfer of land as simple and as inexpensive as that of a bale of merchandise.

Such a revolution is impossible, we know, but the desire for it marks the animus of the speaker and gives warning that no changes that may be proposed will be too extensive to receive his approbation. Moreover, the Profession cannot and must not close its eyes to the fact, that there is a very wide spread discontent with the present costliness of conveyances, and that this discontent is not altogether without foundation. In the present temper of the times it will be impossible to maintain the present system for two years longer, and seeing that a great change cannot be long averted, we again and again repeat the exhortation we have so often taken the liberty of addressing to the lawyers, to anticipate the impending changes that will be constructed by their enemies, and avert the threatened mischiefs by bold but moderate and reasonable reforms, planned and promoted by themselves. We rejoice to find, from the correspondence that comes to us from every part of the country, that the Profession is at last awaking to a sense of its danger, and of the only means of avoiding it, and there seems to be tolerable unanimity of opinion among them as to the necessity for doing something. But unhappily they cannot agree what that something should be. A scale of ad valorem charges has been proposed, but is stoutly opposed by many. A charge proportioned to skill and labour required, without any reference to the length of the deed, has numerous supporters, but none has suggested how the difficulty is to be overcome of determining what was the labour and skill required, save from the statement of clients, that the conveyance in some cases bears so large a proportion to the value of the property, or the amount of the purchase money, as we have said, we are still of opinion that, with the whole, the ad valorem plan is the best. It is the most inexpensive certainly, but it offers many advantages both to solicitor and client, and in the long run it would be found the most profitable.

But a change in the mode of charging will not suffice to save us from the threatened innovation. Some plan must be devised for lessening the cost of conveyancs, and we must look to their consequent multiplication to compensate, in part at least, for the loss so produced. How may this be done?

First, by abbreviating them. In honest truth there is no doubt that this might be done with perfect safety. Half the words used are superfluous. For instance, why repeat the words "heirs, executors," &c. every time that the parties' names are used? Why not insert a general declaration, once for all, that the deed is made by A. on behalf of his heirs and assigns, and by B. on behalf of his executors, &c. This alone would sweep away several folios. Why should not the invariable covenants be put in the same words as they are stated in an abstract, seeing that their meaning is universally understood? Many such improvements might be suggested which would please the public, prove, that the Profession is not averse to reasonable alteration, and probably save it from those sweeping changes which will certainly be forced upon us from without if we do not, and speedily too, something very effective within, for the lessening of the cost of conveyancing.

In our next we shall proceed to consider how the cost of conveyancing is consequent upon the law of real property, and what improvements might be effected in this without resorting to the equivocal scheme of a Registration of Deeds.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

THE practitioners in these Courts have held a meeting for the purpose, if they can, of saving them from entire destruction.

They declare their willingness to submit to any reforms that may be desired; but they protest against their abolition.

But it is not a case for reform; the objection to them is not merely that they abound in monopolies and abuses, but that their foundation and structure are unsound, unfitted for the time, an insult to one half the community, and an injustice to the other. It is as Ecclesiastical Courts that they are condemned. It is as such that they have usurped a jurisdiction over wills and marriages, which they cannot be permitted to retain under any pretence, or with any promises of reform. But then they say, you must have tribunals for these questions. Why not the regular Courts of Law and Equity? Why should a will be tried twice over? Why could not the same Judges, who now determine the validity of wills in certain cases, do so in all cases? And why should not the regular Courts try a divorce as well as the validity of a marriage?

Let the Ecclesiastical Courts continue, if they please, their purely ecclesiastical jurisdiction; let them try church questions arising within the church; but take away from them everything that savours of a civil jurisdiction, and transfer it to the tribunals which are constituted for the protection of civil rights and the punishment of civil wrongs, to which all the people have access, in whose wisdom they have confidence, and where they may have the widest choice of lawyers to conduct their suits and plead their causes.

SHAM LAWYERS.

HERE is another of the fraternity.

8, Princess Street,
Manchester, 5th January 1853.

Sir,

I am instructed by Mr. J. Richardson to apply to you for payment of the sum of £3 13*s.* 9*d.* owing by you to him. And unless the same be paid at my office on or before Friday next proceedings will be commenced against you for the recovery thereof without further notice.

I am yours obediently,
THOS. BALE.

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY.(a)

HAVING already shown how a suit may be instituted by bill or information; and assuming that the defendant has voluntarily, either by himself or by his soliclaim, demurrer, or an appearance [illegible] accordingly for him by the modes already [illegible] you may now consider in what manner [illegible] against whom the bill has been filed can [illegible] himself.

(a) Continued from p. 143.

He may do in different ways—First, by demurrer; secondly, by plea; thirdly, by disclaimer, by which he disclaims all interest in the matters in question in the suit; fourthly, by answer; and all or any of these different modes of defence may be joined, provided each relates to a separate and distinct part of the bill. (Mitf. p. 106.)

DEMURRER.

Whenever any ground of defence is apparent on the bill itself, either from matters contained in it or from defect in its frame, a defence may be set up against it by demurrer. A demurrer is, in effect, an allegation of a defendant, which admitting for the purpose of arguing the demurrer, that the matters of fact alleged by the bill are true, shows that, as they are therein set forth, they are insufficient for the plaintiff to proceed upon, or to oblige the defendant to answer (Gittersen v. Muir, 2 Ves. jun. 95; 21 Bro. C. C. 270; East India Company v. Henchman, 1 Ves. jun. 289), and it therefore demands judgment of the court, whether the defendant shall be compelled to answer the bill, or the particular part of it to which the demurrer applies.

Although a demurrer admits facts which are well pleaded to be true, it does not admit inferences or matters of law which in strictness ought not to be stated on the record; for instance, suppose a particular deed is set out and a legal inference is averred as arising from the words of the deed, a demurrer put in to the bill, although it admits the deed as a matter of fact, does not admit the legal inference drawn from it in the bill (see Campbell v. Mackay, 1 My. & Cr. 603, 618); nor will a demurrer be held to admit facts which are repugnant to each other (Loker v. Hills, 2 Ves. 4, 7); or to a record stated in the bill (Arundel v. Arundel, Cro. Jac. 12; Mortimer v. Fraser, Dan. Ch. Pr. 500); or which are contrary to facts of which the court takes judicial notice, as the recognition of the independence of a foreign state (Taylor v. Barclay, 2 Sim. 213); or of a war in which this country is engaged with a foreign country (Dolder v. Lord Huntingfield, 11 Ves. 292); many other instances might be given. If therefore a bill states any matters incorrectly of which the court is bound to take judicial notice, such statements on the argument of a demurrer will be of no effect.

OF THE DIFFERENT GROUNDS OF DEMURRER.

Demurrers to original bills may be divided into two classes; first, demurrers to relief, which frequently include a demurrer to discovery; and secondly, demurrers to discovery only, which sometimes consequentially affect the relief. Without entering into minute particulars, it may be useful to mention the objections to relief appearing on the bill itself, which, according to Lord Redesdale, can be taken advantage of by demurrer; they are as follows:—

1. That the subject of the suit is not within the jurisdiction of a Court of Equity, as where the plaintiff may obtain relief at Common Law, in the Ecclesiastical, Admiralty and Bankruptcy Courts; 2. That some other Court of Equity has the proper jurisdiction; 3. That the plaintiff is not entitled to sue by reason of some personal disability. Thus, if an infant or a married woman, an idiot or a lunatic, exhibiting a bill, appear upon the face of it to be thus incapable of instituting a suit alone, and no next friend or committee is named in the bill, the defendant may demur; but if the incapacity did not appear upon the face of the bill, the defendant must take advantage of it by plea; 4. That he has no interest in the subject, or no title to institute a suit concerning it. Where, for instance, a plaintiff claims under a will, and it is apparent upon the construction of it, that he has no title, a demurrer will be allowed. (Brownswood v. Edwards, 2 Ves. 247; Parker v. Fearnley, 2 S. & S. 592.) So where an executor does not appear by his bill to have proved the will of his testator, or appears to have proved it in an improper (3 P. Wms. 371) or insufficient (Combes' case, 1 P. Wms. 766) court, as he does not show a complete title to sue as executor a demurrer will hold; 5. That he has no right to call on the defendant concerning the subject of the suit; for instance, a legatee has no right to file a bill against the creditors of his testator to compel them to pay their debts in satisfaction of his legacy: (Alsager v. Rowley, 6 Ves. 148;) 6. That the defendant has not that interest in the subject which can make him liable to the claims of the plaintiff; thus, where a bankrupt is made party to a bill against his assignees touching his estate, he may demur to the relief, all his interest having been transferred to his assignees: (Whitworth v. Davis, 1 V. & B. 545; 2 Rose 116; Bailey v. Vincent, 5 Madd. 46; but it seems that if fraud had been charged and costs prayed against him, he could not demur: (Lloyd v. Lander, 5 Madd. 282; 7. That for some reason founded on the subject-matter of the case, the plaintiff is not entitled to the relief he prays. To these may be added; 8. The [illegible] of the bill to answer the purposes of complete justice; thus, where the bill is defective in point [illegible] (Hopkyr v. Stapleton, 2 Atk. 187), or is without the signature of counsel (Kirkley v. Burton, 5 Madd. [illegible] whenever a want of parties appears on the [illegible] it is a good cause for a demurrer, the demurrer must however show who are the proper parties to such, indeed by name, for that might be impossible; but in such a manner as to point out to the plaintiff the objection to his bill, and enable him to amend by adding the proper parties. Mitf. Pl. 180. And 9, the impropriety of confounding distinct subjects in the same bill, or of unnecessarily multiplying suits: (Mitf. Pl. 110.)

The objections to a bill, which are causes of demurrer to discovery only, are these:—1. That the case made by the bill is not such in which a Court of Equity assumes jurisdiction to compel a discovery; where, for instance, a bill of discovery does not allege that the discovery is in aid of proceedings either pending or intended: (Cardale v. Watkins, 5 Madd. 18.) 2. That the plaintiff has no interest in the subject, or no interest which entitles him to call on the defendant for a discovery. Therefore, when a plaintiff filed a bill for a discovery, namely, to support an action, which he alleged by his bill he intended to commence in a Court of Common Law, although by this allegation he brought his case within the jurisdiction of a Court of Equity to compel a discovery, yet the court being of opinion that the case stated by the bill was not such as would support an action, a demurrer was allowed; for unless the plaintiff had a title to recover in an action at law, supposing his case to be true, he had no title to the assistance of a Court of Equity to obtain from the confession of the defendant evidence of the truth of his case: (Mitf. 187.) 4. Although both plaintiff and defendant may have an interest in the subject, yet that there is not that privity of title between them which gives the plaintiff a right to the discovery required by his bill. 5. That the discovery, if obtained, cannot be material. And, 6. That the situation of the defendant renders it improper for a Court of Equity to compel a discovery. It is a general rule, that no one is bound to answer so as to subject himself to punishment, in whatever manner that punishment may arise, or whatever may be the nature of the punishment. If, therefore, a bill requires an answer which may subject the defendant to any pains or penalties, he may demur to so much of the bill; as, if a bill charges anything, which if confessed by the answer would subject the defendant to any criminal prosecution, or to any particular penalties, as an usurious interest, maintenance, champerty, simony. And in such cases, if the defendant is not obliged to answer the facts, he need not answer the circumstances, though they have not such an immediate tendency to criminate: (Mitf. Pl. 194.)

FORM OF DEMURRER.

A demurrer requires to be signed by counsel; but as it asserts no fact, and relies merely upon matter apparent on the face of the bill, it is put in without oath: (Mitf. Pl. 208.) The following is the form of a demurrer:—

The demurrer of A. B. (or of A. B. and C. D.) to the bill of complaint of E. F.

This defendant by protestation, not confessing or acknowledging all or any of the matters and things in the said complainant's bill to be true in such manner and form as the same are therein set forth and alleged, doth demur thereto, and for cause of demurrer sheweth, &c.; and concludes—Whereupon this defendant demands the judgment of this honourable court, whether he shall be compelled to make any further or other answer to the said bill, or any of the matters and things therein contained, and prays to be hence dismissed, with his reasonable costs in this behalf sustained. (Smith's Ch. Pr. 304.)

The demurrer as in the above form, is always preceded by a protestation against the truth of the matters contained in the bill; a practice borrowed from the common law, and probably intended to avoid conclusion in another suit: (Mitf. Pl. 212.)

A demurrer must express the several causes of demurrer; and in case it does not go to the whole bill, it must clearly express the particular parts of the bill demurred to. (Mitf. Pl. 213.)

No demurrer, as was formerly the case, is to be held bad and overruled upon argument only because such demurrer does not cover so much of the bill as it might by law have extended to: (86th Order, August 1841.)

No demurrer is to be held bad and overruled upon argument only because the answer of the defendant may extend to some part of the same matter as may be covered by such demurrer: (87th Order, August 1841.

Where a new fact is introduced into a demurrer for the purpose of supporting it, it will be overruled as being a speaking demurrer. The introduction, however, of new argument will be considered only as surplusage: (Davies v. Williams, 1 Sim. 5; Cawthorn v. Chalie, 2 S. & S. 127.)

DEMURRER ORE TENUS.

A defendant may, at the hearing of his demurrer, orally assign another cause of demurrer, different or in addition to those assigned upon the record, which, if valid, will support the demurrer, although the causes of the demurrer, stated in the demurrer itself, are held to be invalid. This oral statement of a cause of demurrer at the Bar is called demurring ore tenus: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 543.)

FILING, SETTING DOWN, AND HEARING DEMURRERS.

The engrossment of the demurrer must be filed in the Record and Writ Office; but a separate demurrer [illegible] the plaintiff [illegible] by bill does it [illegible] defendant, or [illegible] defendants may, without any leave of the court, put in a demurrer to the plaintiff's bill within the time allowed to the defendant for demurring alone (twelve days), to a bill, or within a time to be fixed by any general order of the Lord Chancellor for that purpose; but after that time a defendant or defendants, not required to answer the plaintiff's bill, shall not be at liberty to put in a demurrer to the bill without leave of the court; and it is provided that the power of the court to grant further time for demurring to any bill, upon the application of any defendant or defendants thereto, whether required to answer the bill or not, is to remain in full force, and not be in anywise prejudiced or affected; and it is also provided, that if the court shall grant any further time to any defendant for demurring to the bill, the plaintiff's right to move for a decree under the provisions hereinafter contained, shall in the meantime be suspended. By the 19th of the Orders of 7th August, 1852, a defendant required to answer a bill must put in his demurrer, not demurring alone, within fourteen days from the delivery to him or his solicitor of a copy of the interrogatories which he is required to answer; but the court is to have full power to enlarge the time, from time to time, upon application being made to the court for that purpose.

Applications for time to demur are to be made to the judge at chambers: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 38.)

EFFECT OF DEMURRER.

Where a demurrer to the whole bill is allowed, the bill is considered out of court; but although it is but rarely done, it is in the discretion of the court to allow the bill to be amended: (Baker v. Mellish, 11 Ves. 68, 72; and see 4 My. & Cr. 277.) An amendment after a general demurrer has been allowed is irregular; but if the defendant demur to the amended bill, he waives the irregularity: (Watkins v. Bush, 2 Dick. 701.)

Leave to amend for the purpose of adding proper parties will, however, be given, unless the court sees that the plaintiff can have no relief under any circumstances, under the record before it: (Tyler v. Bell, 2 My. & Cr. 89.)

The allowance of a partial demurrer does not, as in the case of a general demurrer, put the bill out of court, except as to that part of it which is covered by the demurrer; an order to amend, or to refer an answer upon exceptions, or to adopt any other proceedings in the cause, may be obtained in the same manner as if there had been no demurrer: (Mitf. Pl. 215.)

Where the court, on a demurrer, has decided the question between the parties on the merits, the decision may be pleaded in bar of a new suit; but another bill may be filed in general where a demurrer has been allowed on a mere point of form: (Mitf. Pl. 215.)

After a demurrer has been overruled a second demurrer will not be allowed; for it would be, in effect, to rehear the case on the first demurrer. On an argument of a demurrer, any cause of demurrer, though not shown in the demurrer as filed, may be alleged at the bar, and, if good, will support the demurrer: (Mitf. 217.) The defendant may apply to the court to put in a less extensive demurrer (Devonshire v. Newenham, 2 S. & L. 199; Clegg v. Legh, 4 Madd. 207), or a plea; but if he neglects to apply to the court for leave to file the plea it will be taken off the file, as it is the rule of the court not to allow two dilatories at once: (Rowley v. Eccles, 1 S. & S. 512.)

If, after a demurrer to the whole bill has been overruled, the defendant cannot obtain leave to put in another demurrer or a plea, he must put in a full answer. Where a demurrer accompanied by an answer is overruled, the defendant need not answer further until the plaintiff has excepted to his answer for insufficiency: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 559.)

THE MAGISTRATE,
AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

THERE is one case only in this department, and it belongs to the Criminal Law. It was decided in Reg. v. Pierce, 20 Law T. Rep. 182, in the Oxford Circuit, by WILLIAMS, J., that the law of finding of lost property does not extend to the case of a railway servant finding things left in a railway carriage, it being his duty to take them to the office; and to appropriate them to his own use is larceny. It is a question for the jury whether such larceny was committed in the course of the journey or afterwards, on an indictment in county A., under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 13.

In the same case it will be observed that the Judge refused to make an order for delivery to the prisoner of money found on his person, although that money was not the subject of the charge. WILLIAMS, J. was of opinion that neither Judge nor Justice had power to make such an order; nor even could the Secretary of State.

[illegible] of a prisoner [illegible] The wholesome [illegible] The Court [illegible] order. It further [illegible] Litigation.

EXCLUSIVE AUDIENCE TO THE BAR.

THE Cardiganshire Michaelmas Quarter Sessions were held on the 4th and 5th instant, before E. C. L. Fitzwilliams, Esq. chairman, and a full bench of magistrates, when the learned chairman brought on his motion for Exclusive Audience for the Bar, of which he had given notice at the previous quarter sessions. The learned gentleman adduced many of the arguments which he had submitted, when Mr. Lloyd Hall, to the Judge of the County Courts, when moving for Exclusive Audience in 1846, reported in 1 C. C. Chron. 122, dwelling particularly on the great advantage to every Judge presiding over a Court of Law in having the best Advocates that could be obtained to practise there, and showing the reason why Attorneys so very seldom make good Advocates, however learned or talkative they might be. He stated that when he was first called to the Bar, upwards of twenty years ago, it never had been doubted that no Attorney could be heard whilst there was a barrister disengaged in court and willing to hold a brief in the case; and to show how dangerous it was for an attorney to address a court where not expressly enabled by statute so to do, he cited Lord Campbell's dictum in Reg. v. Amos, Comyn's Digest, tit. "Maintenance"; Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown, c. 83, s. 127; Doe d. Bennett v. Hale, 15 Q. B. Rep. 171; and 19 Law J. N. S. 358, Q. B.; and the able commentary upon that case by his learned friend Mr. Pulling, in 18 Law Review, p. 122. The motion was carried nem. con., so that, for the future, no attorney can be heard in that court when barristers are present.

TITHE COMMUTATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—As your agricultural as well as clerical readers may feel anxious to know the result of the corn averages for the seven years to Christmas last, published in The Lowton Gazette of this evening, viz:

	s.	d.
Wheat.....	6	0¼	per imperial bushel.
Barley.....	3	9¼	"
Oats.....	2	6¾	"

I beg to state for their information that each 100*l.* of tithe rent-charge will, for the year 1853, amount to 91*l.* 18*s.* 5½*d.*, which is a reduction of more than two per cent. from last year's value.

The following statement from my Annual Tithe Commutation Tables, will show the worth of 100*l.* of tithe rent-charge for each year since the passing of the Tithe Commutation Act, viz:—

	£	s.	d.
For the year 1837	98	13	9¾
" 1838	97	7	11
" 1839	95	7	9
" 1840	98	15	9¼
" 1841	102	12	5¾
" 1842	105	8	2¾
" 1843	105	12	2¾
" 1844	104	8	5¾
" 1845	103	17	11¾
" 1846	102	17	8¾
" 1847	99	18	10¾
" 1848	102	1	0
" 1849	100	3	7¾
" 1850	98	16	10
" 1851	96	11	4¾
" 1852	98	16	11¾
" 1853	91	18	5¾
	£1,697	19	4¾

General average for 17 years, £99 17 7¾

I am, Sir, yours &c.

CHARLES M. WILLICH.

25, Suffolk-street, Pall-mall East, 7th Jan. 1853.

DUTIES OF CONSTABLES AND POLICE OFFICERS AS TO SEARCHING PRISONERS.

On Thursday, in the Court of Q. B. on a motion in the case of Bessé v. Wilson, Lord CAMPBELL said that he wished to take this opportunity of correcting a misapprehension as to what was his opinion with respect to the practice of searching persons who were charged with offences. At the conclusion of the trial of this case he had expressed his disapprobation of the manner in which the plaintiff had been searched when taken to the station-house. He repeated the disapprobation which he had then expressed; for there was no right in a case of this kind to inflict the indignity to which this plaintiff had been subjected. But he had been informed that an erroneous impression of what he said had gone abroad, it was supposed that he had said that there was the right in any case of search a prisoner at any time. He had not said so. It was the duty of an officer to search [illegible] instance, a man was about to commit a felony, he might be searched to see whether he had any fire-boxes or matches about his person. He took this opportunity of correcting the error, because he had received from that most useful officer, Sir Richard Mayne, to whom the country was much indebted for a most excellent discharge of his public duties, a communication stating that an idea had gone abroad that to search any person charged with an offence was forbidden by law. No such doctrine had been stated by him, nor would it be stated by any one who had the honour to occupy the seat which he then occupied. It might be highly satisfactory, and indeed necessary that the prisoner should be searched. He (Lord Campbell) had never said that searching a prisoner was always a forbidden act. What he said applied to circumstances such as existed in this case. If a tradesman was charged with such an offence as that with which he was charged in this case, and he appeared before the magistrate by counsel and not in person, and a warrant issued against him, not charging him with any crime, but merely to make him appear in person, the act of searching him was contrary to law. It was said that the search here was justified because the person in custody might have some instrument about him with which he might make away with or injure himself, or the alderman before whom he was brought. This did not appear a satisfactory reason; it assumed that when a man was apprehended because he had in the first instance appeared by counsel, and not in person, he would take with him the means of committing suicide or murder. This was a most absurd supposition.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

AN extremely curious case, arising out of an eccentric will, was last week reported from the House of Lords. In Ferrie v. Atherton, 20 Law T. Rep. 170, it appeared that A. devised his real and personal estate to trustees, charging them not to sell, if they could avoid it, the real property till the end of nineteen years; but if they should sell part, to apply the proceeds to pay off his mortgage debts and to hold the residue till the end of the nineteen years, when the proceeds were to be paid to his children B., C., and D. in certain shares. The trustees disclaimed, and thereupon the cestui que trusts executed a deed by which they agreed to divide the property into two classes. Class 1 was to be sold immediately to pay testator's debts. Class 2 was to be held by trustees named in the deed, in trust for the purposes of the will, so far as not inconsistent with the deed, to pay the rents to the parties as entitled under the will, and with power to a majority of the trustees to sell even within the nineteen years, at the end of which period, however, the property was to be sold absolutely, and the proceeds divided as directed by the will. B. died before the end of the nineteen years. Was the property by this deed converted into personalty so as pass to his next-of-kin? It was held that the deed had converted the property in Class 1 at the time of sale, and that the property in Class 2 was converted, but not until the end of the nineteen years or previous sale, under the provisions of the deed. And as for the rents, until such sale "they would go to the parties who would take them as real property."

In Cox v. Dolman, 20 Law T. Rep. 171, Lord St. LEONARDS said, "It appears to be settled law that while the legal estate in a term remains unbarred and uncalled in, and is still vested in the trustee who may obtain possession and so execute the trusts of the will, the estate of that trustee is not barred; and if the estate of the trustee is not barred, the right of the cestui que trust also is not barred."

The question to what extent the court will support the purchase of a reversionary interest or set it aside on the ground of inadequacy of value, has been the subject of much controversy and conflicting decision. Hence the interest that will attach to the case of Edwards v. Burt, 20 Law T. Rep. 172, decided in the Court of Appeal. It was there laid down that, on a purchase by private contract of a reversionary interest from an expectant heir, if the transaction is impeached within a reasonable time, it is incumbent upon the purchaser to show that he gave the fair market value for it, and where he did not this, the sale would be set aside. The court said, "It was urged upon us that if we should set aside the present transactions on the ground of undervalue, we should in effect be deciding that no sale of a reversion can be sustained unless it be made by public auction. This we certainly do not mean to decide. The [illegible] sale was not a sale by auction, but no effectual steps were taken to acquire a knowledge of the market value before the bargains were completed. As to the first transaction, no steps whatever were taken. As to the second, nothing was done except to obtain the opinion of an actuary, and such an opinion is evidently unsatisfactory with reference to the local circumstances likely to influence market value. Indeed, on such a subject an actuary is by no means the best authority to refer to. If, previously to the sale of a reversionary interest, the vendor and purchaser consider in ascertaining from persons of competent skill, and having knowledge of the property and of all the circumstances likely to influence value, a well-considered estimate of what the property would be likely to fetch on a sale, and act on that opinion, we are far from meaning to decide that such a transaction could be afterwards impeached merely because other surveyors should come to a conclusion different from that on which the parties had acted. The court would probably be inclined in such a case, as a matter of fact, to believe the original and not the subsequent estimate to be correct." This should be carefully noted by our readers.

Another case in the Law of Vendor and Purchaser is that of Pegg v. Ureden, 20 Law T. Rep. 174. A. being in occupation of premises belonging to B. entered into an agreement with him on April 2, 1846, to hire the same at a rent of 160*l.* a year, and to pay down 650*l.*, A. to have the right of purchasing the same at any time within nine years, at the price of 2500*l.* in addition to the 650*l.* on giving three months' notice of his intention to do so. A. gave notice accordingly on 14th May, 18, 1850. On Sept. 4, B. complained of delay in completing the purchase, and on Nov. 3 gave notice to A. that unless he completed in six weeks, he should consider the contract abandoned. A. continued the investigation of title, but did not complete before the six weeks expired. B. treated the contract as abandoned, and A. filed a bill for specific performance. The question was, whether time was of the essence of the contract? The M. R. held, that it was not so, and that even if it had been so, it had been waived by the defendant. It was also intimated, but not expressly decided, that the plaintiff had accepted the title by proceeding to compare the abstract with the deeds.

The very interesting question What passes by a demise of all "in occupation under a lease" was illustrated in Whittington v. Corder, 20 Law T. Rep. 175. V. C. TURNER said,—"I apprehend the true meaning of the words 'occupation under a lease' is not actual personal use and occupation, but occupation to which he is entitled under the instrument by which the right of possession was granted." Therefore where A. was owner of two houses and demised one to B., and afterwards found a subterranean chamber extending under both, and converted it into a cellar for his own use, and then mortgaged both houses to C. with powers of sale, and the mortgagee sold to B. the house that had been leased to him, describing it as in "his occupation," and thereupon B. opened a way into the cellar, and partitioned off so much of it as was under his house, the Court held him to be entitled to it, as it had passed under the lease, although not known at the time.

Where A. had entered into a negotiation with B. for the purchase of an estate in August, and in October B. wrote to his solicitor, stating that A. had agreed to purchase on the production of a sufficient title, and directing him to prepare an agreement, and an unsigned memorandum to this effect was then delivered by B. to A., and on Nov. 29 A. wrote to B.'s solicitor, desiring to know when he would forward the agreement "relative to the purchase he had concluded with B.;" the contract was signed in February, and the purchase completed in April; and in the meanwhile, on Jan. 9, A. made a will, and devised personalty to D. and E. upon trust to complete the purchase he had recently made of B., and get the same conveyed to them upon trust, &c. it was held that, at the date of this will, he had a devisable interest in the estate, and that it passed by the devise to D. and E.: (Morgan v. Holford, 20 Law T. Rep. 177.)

In the Law of Trusts and Trustees the reader should note the case of King v. Mallings, 20 Law T. Rep. 178, in which V.C. KINDERSLEY, held that, "as the question of a trustee having a strict right to insist upon a release under such [illegible] of opinion that, where it was the case of a declared trust, as where the trust was apparent on the face of a deed, the fund clear, and the trust clear the fund, and the trustee was paying either the interest or the capital of such fund in strict accordance with the terms of the trust, a trustee under those circumstances was not entitled to a personal release by deed. " " Where a trustee is paying in strict accordance with the trust it is entirely unnecessary; a general receipt would be sufficient." It is otherwise in the case of an encumbrancer. He is entitled to a general release on the distribution of the funds.

A case of unusual interest is reported from the Oxford Circuit. In Doe v. Powell, 20 Law T. Rep. 181, which was an action of ejectment brought to recover property settled on the heirs of A., the plaintiff claimed title through the maternal ancestor, it being admitted that A. had no descendants living. A statement of A.'s father, that he had no father or mother to cry him, was proved; and all the witnesses swore they had never heard of any other relative on the father's side except the father and grandfather, both long since dead. This was held to be a prima facie case, and that it was not necessary to go further the paternal line, nor to trace the heirs of the grandmother or great grandmother on the father's side.

We need but to direct attention to the very interesting case of Stultz v. Schoeffle, 20 Law T. Rep. 183, in the Prerogative Court, in which Dr. LUSHINGTON reviewed the question how far a wife may exert her authority over the testamentary disposition of her husband. The facts are too complicated for a summary.

CONVEYANCING COSTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Now that the practice in the Courts of Common Law is reformed, and (thanks to the diligence and perseverance of our late Chancellor) a chancery suit, like other things, will have an end in a definite space of time, the cry for reform is echoed with redoubled vigour against the existing state of the law of real property. But the cry is raised by those who know very little of the laws of England respecting real property, and it only finds a faint echo from those who are best acquainted with it. No one doubts that the existing state of the law requires some modification and amendment; but there are few who can show any plan by which such modification can beneficially be made. Those who advocate a sweeping reform, and who, whilst pretending to render a title safer and more eligible to a purchaser, desire every mortgage or conveyance to be registered in a public office, are very much mistaken as to the subject they have to handle. Such a registry as is proposed would lay bare all the defects of every title in the kingdom, and thus render a purchaser for a valuable consideration liable to be ousted from the possession of an estate which he had bought and honestly paid for, by reason of some defect which the vigilance of his solicitor had failed to discover. Besides, few who have real property would wish their title to be registered with the mortgages and incumbrances which necessity sometimes compels. Some plans are almost amusing from the utter stupidity with which they are proposed. The Morning Post, in a late article on this subject, suggested a registry only to be searched by solicitors, thus, if A. conveys an estate to B. and B. to C. and so on, each transaction being enrolled, the titles of the kingdom in about sixty years' time would become marketable "by the mere inspection of the registry."(a) Thus argues the editor, and who doubts the correctness of his logic? But if transactions such as the editor mentions were the only ones which were resorted to by the owners of real property, the expenses of investigating a title would certainly be as little under the present as under the proposed arrangement. I dare assert as a positive fact (and the experience of every solicitor must corroborate the assertion) that not one title out of a hundred would be as simple as the example which the editor of The Morning Post puts as an illustration of his proposition. It is, in fact, the desire men have to confine their property to their own family, and the various provisions which in the settlement or will are made for the various members of the family (and in which all the legal skill and ingenuity of the conveyancer are invoked to make the rules of law tally with the intentions of the party), which causes such expense in investigating and abstracting up the titles of half the property in the realm. No doubt a registry would in some cases be of great service; but whilst the registry would give, perhaps, a safe title to the purchaser, it certainly would add to the expense of investigating the title. If the deeds are registered in full, there would be at least one-eighth of the solicitor's bill to be paid for the copies registered. If only registered shortly (as proposed in the Bill brought into Parliament by Mr. Drummond), no solicitor would dare to accept a title from the extracts enrolled. Necessity and experience have shown that short deeds lead to very great confusion and danger. The leases and conveyances under Lord Brougham's Acts are seldom, if ever, used. And what solicitor would be satisfied with and take the extract as the legal effect of the deed. A mistake, a difference in opinion in the registrar, and the title is upset! What security, therefore, does a registry on these principles afford?

But as to the question of costs, much may be done. As to myself, I do not approve of the per-centage system. I should suggest that the scale of costs now adopted be considerably modified, and that every bill of costs for a conveyance, before it is sent in to the client, be taxed by an officer to be appointed for that purpose. The names of the parties and of the estate might be left in blank, and thus, whilst it would give the practitioner a fair remuneration, it would secure the client from imposition and fraud.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.,
A CONSTANT READER AND
Jan. 8, 1853. AN OLD PRACTITIONER.

(a) The editor cites the usual case of transfer of stock and asks why land cannot be transferred as readily? The editor ought to know that personal property is governed by far different laws from real property!

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—In your number of the 8th inst. you have an observation reprobating the state of the law as laid down by the majority of the judges in the case of The Queen v. the York and North Midland Company, and you infer that the law, as so laid down, differs from common sense, and has a tendency to bring the law itself into odium. With submission to you, I cannot for a moment bring myself to think that the decision in the case mentioned, or in the case of The Queen v. the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, which is reported in your last number, has any such tendency. On the contrary, it seems to me that the decisions in both the cases are reasonable, fair, just and equitable, and that, if sustained, they will have a most wholesome and beneficial effect. A contrary state of the law would leave the public at the mercy of any body of persons who, for their own money purposes, have chosen to clothe themselves, through the medium of Parliament, with exclusive powers, would render Parliament a mere machine to be used for speculative purposes, and would enable companies to say "We will not let any body else do this work, and we ourselves will do it only in case we so choose." Before they clothe themselves with the advantages of parliamentary powers, and with the disadvantages of parliamentary liabilities, companies should deliberate, and having ultimately obtained special powers and privileges, should not, in my humble judgment, be permitted to repudiate their responsibilities and thus, as it were, play false with Parliament and with the public. It seems to me that the reasoning of Lord Campbell in the judgment delivered by him in the two cases mentioned is unanswerable, and I even think that Parliament itself should be very chary of relieving companies from liabilities sought for and obtained by themselves, and should do so only in cases of such an extraordinary nature that I can scarcely imagine they can arise.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
Jan. 10, 1853. A SUBSCRIBER.

Queries on Points of Practice.

SALE UNDER DECREE.

Would any of your subscribers inform me what the practice is under the following circumstances: A decree for sale of estate for payment of mortgages and costs has been made, the estate sold, and the purchase money in court. I am now about proceeding to have the cause heard on further directions and costs. Do the mortgagees execute the conveyance first and afterwards receive their mortgage money under the decree on further directions; or is it the practice for the purchasers, under the circumstances, to wait for the execution of mortgages, after they have been paid under the order?

Answers to Queries.

CERTIFICATE OF ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

IN answer to the question of "A Purchaser's Solicitor," whether the vendor is not bound to file in the proper office the certificate of acknowledgment at his own expense, I think he is bound to do so. Until the certificate and affidavit are recorded in the proper office, the deed will have no effect as regards the party under coventure.

It is laid down in Dart's Vendors and Purchasers, page 884, "that the costs of perusal and execution by all necessary conveying parties fall upon the vendor, including, it is conceived, the costs of all matters essential to the validity of the deed as a perfect conveyance: e. g. the acknowledgment of married women, and the filing of the certificate of acknowledgment. J. S. H.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

It seems that the affidavit of the party entitled to dividends of money paid into court by a railway company is not required where the application is for payment of these dividends, but the affidavit of title by the solicitor is sufficient. It is otherwise, however, where the affidavit is for payment of the capital. (Ex parte Bodyngton, 20 Law T. Rep. 187.)

In the Vice of a County Court appeal the following question was raised:—A. bought shares in a railway company, which [illegible] and sold them to B. [illegible] B. [illegible] the shares to A. [illegible] A. [illegible] B. [illegible] A. [illegible] B. [illegible] A. [illegible] B of enlarged [illegible] there are [illegible] murders, two [illegible] In the Exchequer [illegible] which three [illegible] on the special paper [illegible] and two for argument; and of [illegible] there are sixteen for argument, and [illegible] judgment. Of County Court appeals there are only four, of which three are in the Common Pleas, and one in the Queen's Bench. In the Court of Chancery we have the unprecedented [illegible] there being no arrears, the labours of Lord St. Leonards having for the first time in memory cleared the list before he quitted the woolsack, and the Lords Justices must have worked well, for their list has but eight appeals. It is otherwise with the Vice Chancellors. In Vice Chancellor Kindersley's Court there are one hundred and ten causes, of which twenty-three are claims, and three are special cases. In Vice Chancellor Stuart's Court there are one hundred and forty-seven causes, of which twenty-seven are claims, and seven special cases; and in Vice Chancellor Woon's Court there are eighty-three causes, of which sixteen are claims, and four special cases. It must not, however, be supposed that this difference results from difference of speed in the despatch of business. The fact is, that the Profession are somewhat gregarious, and prefer particular courts, without any cause that can be assigned. Thus of late they have been flocking to Vice Chancellor Stuart's Court, and deserting Vice Chancellor Turner's, and this preference appears to be quite independent of the character of the judges: it is given to the court. There is a fashion even in this.

Equity Practice.—It has been held in Bowen v. Price, 20 Law T. Rep. 174, that the delivery of interrogatories for the examination of a defendant need not be made to his solicitor personally, but, under the new statute and orders, it will be sufficient if it be made at the solicitor's office.

Where a sale of a mortgaged estate was prayed under sect. 48 of cap. 86, instead of foreclosure, it was held in Girdlestone v. Lavender, 20 L. T. 176, that it must be applied for at the hearing; and if the decree be then made for foreclosure, it cannot afterwards, on motion, be converted into a decree for sale.

Where a claim for the appointment of new trustees of real estate was filed by a mortgagee of a portion of the beneficial interest against the heir-at-law of the surviving trustee, without making any of the other cestuis que trust parties, the court declined to order an enquiry as to the parties beneficially interested, and directed the claim to stand over, with leave to amend: (Wetherill v. Garbett, 20 L. T. Rep. 178.)

Common Law.—We have to note two points on the law of evidence, decided by Williams, J. in the same case, Doe v. Powell, 20 L. T. Rep. 181. In a former unsuccessful action of ejectment brought on the same demise to recover the same property, A. defended as landlord, and obtained a commission to perpetuate testimony. Before the witnesses were examined under it, A., finding he had no legal claim, agreed to defend for B. (the defendant, as landlord, in the subsequent action), to be repaid the costs out of the rents received on B.'s account. It was held, that the deposition of a deceased witness under the commission in the former suit was admissible in the second, although it did not appear that the lessors of the plaintiff had notice that A. defended the first action on B.'s behalf.

The other point was as to secondary evidence. The deed by which property was settled on the wife of A. being in the hands of defendant B., a subpœna was taken out by the plaintiff for its production. The clerk of defendant's agent attended and opposed the application, and in order to show that defendant had no such deed as that described in the affidavits, he stated the real contents of the deed. It was held that such statement was not admissible as secondary evidence of the contents of the deed.

SERVICE OF WRITS IN THE COUNTRY.

[illegible] in your Number of the 10th inst. from [illegible] of the London attorney, and requesting [illegible] Sir, the [illegible] of this old custom of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] correspondent, "and receive the favour of a post-office order by return for the amount of their charges." The object of this is to prevent the London agent from receiving the amount. Now, Sir, it is far less trouble to pay the charges to the London agent than to obtain a post-office order and write a letter therewith (to say nothing of the postage). For my part I always adopt this plan:—When I am desired to pay the charges in town, I do so immediately; if a "post-office order" is to be sent, I allow the country attorney to write me several letters before sending it. I hope others will do likewise. I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

A London Attorney.

Elm Court, Temple, Jan. 4th, 1852.

AN ADVERTISEMENT.

To the Editor of the Law Times.

Sir,—In the first page of your Number of the 1st of January is an advertisement under the title "Situations wanted and vacant," as follows:—To Equity Draftsmen.—A Solicitor would be glad to receive a Card from a gentleman at the Chancery Bar, of easy private means, to whom business would be desirable. Address," &c. What does this mean? Is it an invitation for a member of the bar to go snacks with the solicitor, or to let the solicitor go snacks with him in the amount of his fees? Or else to do the work of this precious solicitor at an under price, or gratis, for the sake of having something to do; or perhaps give a bonus for it? That it means something of this sort is transparent. I am therefore astonished to see such an advertisement in your columns, and cannot account for it, unless with the new year the "unlimited competition" principle is to be engrafted into the practice of the law. First, attorneys usurp the place of barristers as advocates! Then accountants usurp the place of attorneys as agents! And lastly, I suppose, everybody will be allowed to be everybody else's attorney and advocate according to his will and pleasure: (see Com. Dig. tit. "Maintenance;" Hawk. P. C. c. 83; and 13 Law Rev. 122.) Alas poor Lawyers!

An Old Member of the Bar.

[We thank our correspondent for directing attention to this advertisement, and should equally with him like to know what it means. But it should be observed that it is impossible for a journal to play the censor with advertisers. An Editor does not see the advertisements, and has nothing to do with them. Provided they be not illegal or immoral, the public have a right to insert any advertisements they please.—Ed. L. T.]

Queries on Points of Practice.

THE NEW PROCESS.

I should feel obliged by any of your numerous correspondents answering the following question for me:—

A client of mine has had an execution put into his house; he owes the plaintiff the money, but he has not been served with any writ or other proceeding. I have had the office searched, and find an affidavit of service filed with a copy of a writ of summons at the suit of the plaintiff annexed thereto, upon which judgment under the Common Law Procedure Act has been signed. My client is prepared to swear (in which he can be corroborated) that on the very day the affidavit states the defendant was personally served he was confined to his bed by illness some 100 miles from his residence. The amount of the levy has been paid to the sheriff under protest.

Query,—Under the foregoing circumstances what remedy has my client against the plaintiff or other person? A. B.

Answers to Queries.

PRACTITIONERS IN CANADA.

To "Alpha," in Law Times of April 10, 1852.

Any attorney or solicitor in Her Majesty's courts of law or equity in England or Ireland, or any writer to the signet or solicitor before the higher courts of Scotland, is admitted to practise as attorney of all the courts of Upper Canada upon proof of service under articles of clerkship to a practising attorney in the province for three years, unless such attorney, solicitor, writer to the signet, or solicitor before the higher courts shall have taken a degree at any of the universities in the United Kingdom, in which case he is admitted after two years' such service.

Graduates of any university in Great Britain or Ireland (who are not attorneys) are admitted as attorneys in Upper Canada after three years' such service: all other parties after five years.

Graduates of any university in Great Britain or Ireland (whether attorneys or not) are called to the Bar in Upper Canada three years after examination and admission into the Law Society of Upper Canada, on payment of about 28*l.* sterling: all other persons five years after such examination and admission; same fees.

Barristers who are also attorneys, and attorneys who are barristers, practise both professions at once in all the courts in Upper Canada; but attorneys who are not barristers cannot practise as barristers, and barristers who are not attorneys cannot practise as attorneys.

In the United States each state has its own peculiar laws as to the admission of attorneys and counsellors. They generally require from three to six months' residence in the state, and to pass an examination before the court. There is very little difficulty and no expense in an English attorney getting admitted in the courts of the United States. There is no such word as "barrister" in the United States; attorneys are all "counsellors," and practise as barristers.

In Lower Canada, the laws being different from those in Upper Canada (which are similar to those in England), no English attorney or barrister could do anything were he admitted. Graduates of any incorporated college or seminary are there admitted by examination after four years' service under articles to a practising advocate in Lower Canada; other persons after five years' such service and examination.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

A County Court appeal is reported from the Q. B.; but as it relates entirely to a question of general law, and in no way to the peculiar law or practice of the County Courts, it is omitted in the department to which it belongs.

Some decisions in Insolvency are to be noted by the County Court practitioners. In Re [illegible], 20 Law T. Rep. 179, a petition as a trader was dismissed on the evidence showing he was not a trader. It was held in Re Fry, 20 Law T. Rep. 179, that where a protecting order had been given under sect. 28, and a warrant discharging the insolvent issued by mistake, the Court might revoke the order and recommit the petitioner. In Re Smith, 20 Law T. Rep. 180, it was held that an insolvent owing debts contracted whilst in trade must petition as a trader; and in Re Rendall, 20 Law T. Rep. 180, that payment of debts within three months of the date of the petition is not within the exceptions specified in the petition, and therefore is a parting with property under the statute, and fatal to the locus standi of the petitioner.

SCALE OF FEES.

To the Editor of the Law Times.

Sir,—On the 30th of last June the royal assent confirmed the deliberation of the two Houses of the Legislature which recognised the right of "attorneys in the County Courts" to be paid costs and charges for their labours, and directed a scale to be framed for that purpose.

Is it not a gross injustice that we are deprived of our acknowledged rights by the delay in forming the scale of fees? I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Birmingham. A Subscriber.

[We are happy to say that they are now prepared, and will be published in a few days.—Ed. Law T.]

COUNTY COURTS ABUSES.

To the Editor of the Law Times.

Sir,—As the scale of fees in the County Courts is to undergo revision, it would be a very great advantage to the Profession if you would urge the reduction of fees now payable out of pocket, as they are at present perfectly preposterous, and quite out of keeping even with the fees in the Superior Courts (although they have lately been added to in number, and extended in amount to obtain a judgment by default). To recover a debt over 20*l.* in the Superior Courts the costs allowed, including attorney and all fees, is 3*l.* 8*s.* in a town, and 4*l.* in a country case: whereas the actual money out of pocket in the County Courts to sue for any sum between 20*l.* and 50*l.* is, summons 2*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, and hearing fee 3*l.* 5*s.*, in all 5*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*, and mileage in addition 2*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*; more than is allowed for the whole costs of attorney and fees in the Superior Courts in a town case, and 4*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.* more in actual money out of pocket; and this is the cheap Law so much cried up in the County Courts! Surely something must be done to remedy the evil, and it might easily be accomplished by compelling the defendant, as in the Superior Courts, to appear in so many days, and in default of his doing so to let execution issue on the summons, and thus save the hearing fee, which must now be paid, even if the defendant does not dispute the debt. No doubt it will be urged that the fees payable include everything but the attorney and witnesses, and that if a trial took place in the Superior Court the fees would be heavier. I am willing to admit it would cost a trifle more in some cases; but they do not there charge for what they don't do, nor do they compel a defendant to pay a hearing fee to settle an action. For it may be settled by a judge's order on payment of five shillings; whereas, in the County Court it cannot in any way be settled, even when the amount and terms of payment are agreed, unless, as I have before stated, prepayment of 3*l.* 5*s.* for a hearing fee when the amount is over 20*l.* and under 50*l.*, and in like proportion in other cases. There is also another abuse which should be done away with if County Courts are to do a respectable business, namely, the increased scale over 50*l.* In the Superior Courts the fees do not increase for any amount over 20*l.*, whereas in the County Courts, if you seek to recover a debt over 50*l.* you have to pay in fees 2*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for a summons, and 5*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* for a hearing fee. It could hardly be supposed that such abuses existed in these so-called model courts, and I think the sooner you give us your powerful aid in upsetting them, the better, and I am sure you will have the thanks of the Profession; for the risk of paying such heavy fees and getting them back 2*s.* 6*d.*, and 3*s.* a month (as is often the case) should be done away with. I am, Sir, yours, &c.

W. Richard Parsons.

28, New Broad-st., London, Jan. 11, 1853.

County Court Appeals.—Thursday.—Lord Campbell said that, under the new rules, appeals from the County Courts would be heard in full court in term time. They would be entered in the special paper, and proper books must be delivered to the judges, as in other cases which were entered in that paper.

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

A SHIPPED goods on board defendant's ships, to be carried from Genoa to London. By the bills of lading, which were in the usual form, the master bound himself to deliver the goods safe and free from damage in London. In the course of the voyage they were much damaged by rats, although defendant had kept cats on board, and used the usual means to protect his corn from damage; nevertheless, the defendant was held to be liable as a common carrier for the damage done. "The only part of the exception," said the Court, "under which it is possible it could be contended to fall, is as a danger or accident of the sea; but this, we think, includes the dangers properly so called by the violence of the winds and waves, which may be acting on a seaworthy ship, and does not cover damages by rats, which is a kind of destruction not peculiar to navigation, but to which all commodities are liable on land or in warehouses." (Leveroni v. Drury. 20 L. T. Rep. 178.)

COURT PAPERS.

CHANCERY SITTINGS.

HILARY TERM, 1853.

Lord Chancellor's Court.

At Lincoln's-Inn.

Tuesday ... Jan. 11	Appeal Motions
Wednesday 12	Petition day
Thursday 13	Appeals
Friday 14
Saturday 15
Monday 17
Tuesday 18
Wednesday 19
Thursday 20	Appeal Motions
Friday 21	Petition day
Saturday 22	Appeals
Monday 24
Tuesday 25
Wednesday 26
Thursday 27	Appeal Motions
Friday 28	Petition day
Saturday 29	Appeals
Monday 31	Appeal Motions

Lords Justices.

Tuesday 11	Appeal Motions
Wednesday 12	Appeals
Thursday 13
Friday 14	Petitions in Lunacy, Bankruptcy, and Appeal Petitions
Saturday 15	Appeals
Monday 17
Tuesday 18
Wednesday 19	Petitions in Lunacy, Bankruptcy, and Appeal Petitions
Thursday 20	Appeal Motions
Friday 21	Appeals
Saturday 22
Monday 24
Tuesday 25
Wednesday 26	Petitions in Lunacy, Bankruptcy and Appeal Petitions
Thursday 27	Appeal Motions
Friday 28	Appeals
Saturday 29
Monday 31	Appeal Motions

Rolls Court.

Tuesday ....Jan. 11	Motions.
Wednesday 12	Petitions in General Paper
Thursday 13	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions, and Exceptions
Friday 14
Saturday 15
Monday 17
Tuesday 18
Wednesday 19
Thursday 20	Motions
Friday 21	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions, and Exceptions
Saturday 22
Monday 24
Tuesday 25
Wednesday 26
Thursday 27	Motions.
Friday 28	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions and Exceptions.
Saturday 29	Petitions in General Paper.
Monday 31	Motions.

Short Causes, Short Claims, Consent Causes, Unopposed Petitions and Claims, every Saturday at the sitting of the court.

NOTICE.—Consent Petitions must be presented and copies left with the secretary on or before the Thursday preceding the Saturday on which it is intended they should be heard.

Vice-Chancellor Kindersley's Court.

Tuesday 11	Motions, and seven adjourned Petitions
Wednesday 12	Petition day. Petitions (unopposed first)
Thursday 13	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims,
Friday 14	Causes, and Further Directions
Saturday 15	Short Causes, short Claims and Causes
Monday 17	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims,
Tuesday 18	Causes, and Further Directions
Wednesday 19
Thursday 20	Motions
Friday 21	Petition day. Petitions (unopposed first)
Saturday 22	Short Causes, Short Claims, and Causes
Monday 24	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims,
Tuesday 25	Causes, and Further Directions.
Wednesday 26
Thursday 27	Motions
Friday 28	Petition day. Petitions (unopposed first)
Saturday 29	Short Causes, Short Claims, and Causes
Monday 31	Motions

N.B.—Unopposed Petitions, not exceeding ten, at the sitting of the court every day (except seal-day.)

Vice-Chancellor Stuart's Court.

Tuesday 11	Motions
Wednesday 12	Short Causes, Short Claims, Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Exceptions, and, Further Directions
Thursday 13	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims,
Friday 14	Causes, and Further Directions
Saturday 15	Petitions (unopposed first)
Monday 17	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims,
Tuesday 18	Causes, and Further Directions
Wednesday 19	Short Causes, Short Claims, and Causes
Thursday 20	Motions
Friday 21	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, Exceptions, and Further Directions
Saturday 22	Petitions (unopposed first)
Monday 24	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, Ex-
Tuesday 25	ceptions, and Further Directions
Wednesday 26	Short Causes, Short Claims, and Causes
Thursday 27	Motions
Friday 28	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, Exceptions, and Further Directions
Saturday 29	Petitions (unopposed first)
Monday 31	Motions

Vice-Chancellor Wood's Court.

Tuesday 11	Motions and claims
Wednesday 12	Petition Day. Petitions (unopposed first) and Causes
Thursday 13	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, Claims, and Further Directions
Friday 14	Short Causes, Short Claims, Claims, and Causes
Saturday 15	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, Claims and Further Directions
Monday 17
Tuesday 18
Wednesday 19
Thursday 20	Motions and Claims
Friday 21	Unopposed Petitions, Short Causes, Short Claims, Claims, and Causes
Saturday 22	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, Claims, and Further Directions
Monday 24
Tuesday 25
Wednesday 26
Thursday 27	Motions and Claims
Friday 28	Petition day—Petitions, Short Causes, Short Claims, Claims, and Causes
Saturday 29	Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Causes, Claims, and Further Directions
Monday 31	Motions and ditto.

Arches Court.

First Session, Tuesday, Jan 11.
Second Session, Wednesday, Jan. 19.
Third Session, Thursday, Jan. 27.
Fourth Session, Friday, Feb. 4.
Bye Day, Saturday, Feb. 12.

Admiralty Court.

First Session, Thursday, Jan. 13.
Second Session, Friday, Jan. 21.
Third Session, Friday, Jan. 28.
Fourth Session, Saturday, Feb. 5.
Bye Day, Tuesday, Feb. 15.
Default Day, Thursday, March 17.

Prerogative Court.

First Session, Friday, Jan. 14.
Second Session, Saturday, Jan. 22.
Third Session, Monday, Jan. 31.
Fourth Session, Tuesday, Feb. 8.
Bye Day, Thursday, Feb. 17.
Caveat Day, Wednesday, March 16.

Appeals Court.

First Session, Saturday, Jan. 15.
Second Session, Tuesday, Jan. 25.
Third Session, Tuesday, Feb. 1.
Fourth Session, Wednesday, Feb. 9.
Bye Day, Friday, Feb. 18.

Consistory Court.

First Session, Tuesday, Jan. 18.
Second Session, Wednesday, Jan. 26.
Third Session, Thursday, Feb. 3.
Fourth Session, Thursday, Feb. 10.
Bye Day, Saturday, Feb. 19.
Extra Court Day, Thursday, March 11.

Vice-Chancellor Stuart's Court.

NOTICE TO SOLICITORS.—It is necessary to draw the attention of solicitors to the following notice posted up in this court:—

"It is requested by the Vice-Chancellor that all papers for the use of the court be left with the proper officer at least one clear day before any petition, cause, or other matter, can come on to be heard.

"Lincoln's-inn, Nov. 6, 1852."

Upon a short cause being called on to-day, his Honour said that no papers had been left with the proper officer of the court, and that he should make the solicitor pay the costs of the day. After his having repeatedly had occasion to speak of the court's requiring the papers to be left, the omission to do so could only arise from gross neglect, and he must endeavour to reform the regulation by making the solicitors pay the costs of the day where it was not complied with.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

FURTHER GENERAL ORDERS AND RULES.

Order of Court, Friday, Dec. 24, 1852.

THE Right Honourable Edward Burtenshaw, Lord St. Leonards, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, doth hereby order and direct in manner following, that is to say:—

1. "When any of the Masters in Ordinary shall request the opinion of any of the conveyancing counsel, nominated by the Lord Chancellor under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 41, to be taken upon any matter depending before such Master, such business is to be laid before the conveyancing counsel in rotation, to be ascertained in the manner prescribed by the General Orders of the 16th day of Dec. 1852; and a memorandum or minute of every such request is to be prepared by the Master's chief clerk, and signed by him, and such memorandum or minute, when marked with the name of conveyancing counsel in rotation, shall be a sufficient authority for such counsel to proceed with such business; and if the conveyancing counsel in rotation shall be unable or decline to proceed therewith, the same shall be offered to the other conveyancing counsel nominated as aforesaid, successively, according to their seniority at the bar, until some one of them shall accept the same.

2. "Where, under a decree or order of the court, whether already made or hereafter to be made, any estate or interest shall be put up for sale with the approbation of one of the Masters in Ordinary, an abstract of the title to such estate or interest is, upon the request of the Master, to be laid before the conveyancing counsel in rotation, for the opinion of such counsel thereon, to the intent that the said Master may be better enabled to give such directions as may be necessary respecting the conditions of sale of such estate or interest.

3. "Notwithstanding the preceding orders, the Master is to be at liberty to request the opinion of any one in particular of the said conveyancing counsel to be taken upon any matter before such Master, where the circumstances of the case may render it expedient to do so.

"(Signed) ST. LEONARDS, C."

Order of Court, Thursday, Dec. 16, 1852.

The Right Honourable Edward Burtenshaw, Lord St. Leonards, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, doth hereby, in pursuance of an Act of Parliament passed in the fifteenth and sixteenth years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to abolish the Office of Master in Ordinary of the High Court of Chancery, and to make provision for the more speed and efficient despatch of business in the said court," and in pursuance and in execution of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, order and direct as follows:

1. "The business to be referred to the conveyancing counsel nominated by the Lord Chancellor, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 41, is to be distributed among such counsel in rotation by the first clerk to the registrars for the time being, and during his occasional or necessary absence by the second clerk to the registrars for the time being, and during the occasional or necessary absence of both such clerks, then by such one of the other clerks to the registrars as the first registrar for the time being may nominate for that purpose.

2. "The clerk making such distribution as aforesaid is to be responsible that the business is distributed according to regular and just rotation, and in such manner as to keep secret from all persons the rota or succession of conveyancing counsel to whom such business is referred; and it shall be his duty to keep a record of such references, with proper indexes, and to enter therein all such references.

3. "When the court, or a judge sitting at chambers, shall direct any business to be referred to any such conveyancing counsel, a short memorandum or minute of such direction is to be prepared and signed by the registrar, if the same shall have been given in court, or by the judge's chief clerk if given in chambers, and the party prosecuting such direction, or his solicitor, is to take such memorandum or minute to the registrar's clerk, whose duty it shall be to make such distribution as aforesaid; and such clerk is to add at the foot thereof a note specifying the name of the conveyancing counsel in rotation, to whom such business is to be referred, and such memorandum or minute is to be left by the party prosecuting such direction, or his solicitor, with such conveyancing counsel, and shall be a sufficient authority for him to proceed with the business so referred.

4. "In case the conveyancing counsel in rotation shall from illness or from any other cause be unable or decline to accept any such reference, the same shall be offered to the other conveyancing counsel appointed as aforesaid successively, according to their seniority at the bar, until some one of them shall accept the same.

5. "The preceding orders are not to interfere with the power of the court, or of the judge sitting at chambers, to direct or transfer a reference to any one in particular of the said conveyancing counsel, where the circumstances of the case may, in his opinion, render it expedient. "ST. LEONARDS, C."

HILARY TERM, 1853.

REGULÆ GENERALES.

WHEREAS the practice of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, in civil actions, in respect of which the said courts possess a common jurisdiction, has been to a great extent superseded or altered by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, and it is expedient that the written rules of practice of the said courts should be consolidated and rendered uniform: It is ordered, that all existing written rules of practice in any of the said courts in regard to such civil actions, save and except as regards any step or proceeding heretofore taken, shall be and the same are hereby annulled, and that the practice to be observed in the said courts with respect to the matters hereafter mentioned shall be as follows; that is to say,

WRIT OR SUMMONS.

1. When a writ of summons is indorsed in the special form mentioned in sect. 27. of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, the following are the amounts which may be indorsed by the plaintiff's attorney or agent upon the writ for costs; and to include mileage:

In actions above 20*l.*

	£	s.	d.
In town causes	3	8	0
In country or agency cases (including mileage)	4	0	0

In actions under 20*l.*

In town causes	2	14	0
In country or agency cases (including mileage)	3	2	0

Where the plaintiff's attorney, at the time of issuing the writ, claims more than the sums fixed as above, the indorsement on the writ of summons in respect of costs shall be as follows: "Such sum as shall be allowed on taxation for costs." And in case the plaintiff shall be found not entitled to more costs than such fixed sums, or if more than one-sixth shall be disallowed, the plaintiff's attorney shall pay the costs of taxation. So if the attorney has indorsed on the writ one of the fixed sums for the costs of judgment, and claims more costs on signing judgment, and on taxation shall be found not entitled to more than such sum, or if more than one-sixth be taken off on taxation, the plaintiff's attorney shall in like manner pay the costs of taxation.

APPEARANCE.

2. If two or more defendants in the same action shall appear by the same attorney and at the same time, the names of all the defendants so appearing shall be inserted in one appearance.

ATTORNEY AND GUARDIAN.

3. An attorney not entering an appearance in pursuance of his undertaking shall be liable to an attachment.

4. No attorney shall be changed without the order of a judge.

5. A special admission of prochein amy, or guardian, to prosecute or defend for an infant, shall not be deemed an authority to prosecute or defend in any but the particular action or actions specified.

JOINDER OF PARTIES.

6. Whenever a plaintiff shall amend the writ after notice by the defendant, or a plea in abatement of a nonjoinder by virtue of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, sect. 36, he shall file a consent in writing of the party or parties whose name or names are to be added, together with an affidavit of the handwriting, and give notice thereof to the defendant, unless the filing of such consent be dispensed with by order of the court or a judge.

PLEADINGS.

7. No side bar rule for time to declare shall be granted.

8. The defendant shall not be at liberty to waive his plea, or enter a relicta verificatione after a demurrer, without leave of the court or a judge, unless by consent of the plaintiff or his attorney.

9. In case the time for pleading to any declaration or for answering any pleadings, shall not have expired before the 10th day of August in any year, the party called upon to plead, reply, &c. shall have the same number of days for that purpose after the 24th day of October as if the declaration or preceding pleading had been delivered or filed on the 24th of October.

10. Where a defendant shall plead a plea of judgment recovered, he shall in the margin of such plea state the date of such judgment, and if such judgment shall be in the Court of Record, the number of the roll on which such proceedings are entered, if any; and, in default of his so doing, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to sign judgment as for want of a plea; and in case the same be falsely stated by the defendant the plaintiff, on producing a certificate from the proper officer or person having the custody of the records or proceedings of the court where such judgment is alleged to have been recovered, that there is no such record or entry of a judgment as therein stated, shall be at liberty to sign judgment as for want of a plea.

PAYMENT OF MONEY INTO COURT.

11. No affidavit shall be necessary to verify the plaintiff's signature to the written authority to his attorney to take money out of court, unless specially required by the Master.

12. When money is paid into court in respect of any particular sum or cause of action in the declaration, and the plaintiff, accepts the same in satisfaction, the plaintiff, when the costs of the cause are taxed, shall be entitled to the costs of the cause in respect of that part of his claim so satisfied, up to the time the money is so paid in and taken out, whatever may be the result of any issue or issues in respect of other causes of action, and if the defendant succeeds in defeating the residue of the claim, he will be entitled to the costs of the cause in respect of such defence, commencing at "Instructions for Plea," but not before.

13. Where money is paid into court in several actions which are consolidated, and the plaintiff, without taxing costs, proceeds to trial on one and fails, he shall be entitled to costs on the others up to the time of paying money into court.

DEMURRER.

14. The party demurring may give a notice to the opposite party to join in demurrer in four days, which notice may be delivered separately or indorsed on the demurrer, otherwise judgment.

15. No motion or rule for a concilium shall be required; but demurrers as well as all special cases, special verdicts, and appeals from County Courts, shall be set down for argument in the special paper at the request of either party, four clear days before the day on which the same are to be argued, and notice thereof shall be given forthwith by such party to the opposite party.

16. Four clear days before the day appointed for argument the plaintiff shall deliver copies of the demurrer book, special case, special verdict, or appeal cases, with the points intended to be insisted on, to the Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench or Common Pleas, or Lord Chief Baron, as the case may be, and the senior puisne judge of the court in which the action is brought; and the defendant shall deliver copies to the other two judges of the court next in seniority; and in default thereof by either party, the other party may on the day following, deliver such copies as ought to have been so delivered by the party making default; and the party making default shall not be heard until he shall have paid for such copies, or deposited with the Master a sufficient sum to pay for such copies. If the statement of the points have not been exchanged between the parties, each party shall, in addition to the two copies left by him, deliver also his statement of the points to the other two judges, either by marking the same in the margin of the books delivered, or on separate papers.

17. When there shall be a demurrer to part only of the declaration or other subsequent pleadings, those parts only of the declarations and pleadings to which such demurrer relates shall be copied into the demurrer books; and if any other part shall be copied, the Master shall not allow the costs thereof on taxation, either as between party and party, or as between attorney and client.

VENUE, CHANGE OF.

18. No venue shall be changed without a special order of the court or a judge, unless by consent of the parties.

PARTICULARS OF DEMAND OR SET OFF.

19. With every declaration (unless the writ has been specially indorsed under the provisions contained in the 25th section of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852,) delivered or filed, containing causes of action such as those set forth in Schedule B. of that Act, and numbered from 1 to 14 inclusive, or of a like nature, the plaintiff shall deliver or file full particulars of his demand under such claim, where such particulars can be comprised within three folios; and where the same cannot be comprised within three folios, he shall deliver or file such a statement of the nature of his claim, and the amount of the sum or balance which he claims to be due, as may be comprised within that number of folios; and with every plea of set-off containing claims of a similar nature as those in respect of which a plaintiff is required to deliver or file particulars, the defendant shall in like manner deliver particulars of his set-off. And to secure the delivery or filing of particulars in all such cases, it is ordered, that if any such declaration shall be delivered or filed, or any plea of set-off delivered, without such particulars or such statement as aforesaid, and a judge shall afterwards order a delivery of particulars, the plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be, shall not be allowed any costs in respect of any summons for the purpose of obtaining such order, or of the particulars he may afterwards deliver; and a copy of the particulars of the demand, and set-off, shall be annexed by the plaintiff's attorney to every record at the time it is entered with the proper officer.

20. A summons for particulars, and order thereon, may be obtained by a defendant before appearance, and may be made, if the judge think fit, without the production of any affidavit.

21. A defendant shall be allowed the same time for pleading after the delivery of particulars under a judge's order which he had at the return of the summons, unless otherwise provided for in such order.

SECURITY FOR COSTS.

22. An application to compel the plaintiff to give security for costs must, in ordinary cases, be made before issue joined.

DISCONTINUANCE.

23. To entitle a plaintiff to discontinue after plea pleaded, it shall not be necessary to obtain the defendant's consent, but the rule shall contain an undertaking on the part of the plaintiff to pay the costs, and a consent that if they are not paid within four days after taxation defendant shall be at liberty to sign judgment of non pros.

STAYING PROCEEDINGS.

24. In any action against an acceptor of a bill of exchange, or the maker of a promissory note, the defendant shall be at liberty to stay proceedings on payment of the debt and costs in that action only.

COGNOVIT; WARRANT OF ATTORNEY; JUDGES' ORDER FOR JUDGMENT.

25. No judgment shall be signed upon any cognovit or any warrant of attorney without such cognovit or warrant being delivered to and filed by the Master, who is hereby ordered to file the same in the order in which it is received.

26. Leave to enter up judgment on a warrant of attorney above one and under ten years old, is to be obtained by order of a judge made ex parte, and if ten years old or more, upon a summons to show cause.

27. Every attorney or other person who shall prepare any warrant of attorney to confess judgment which is to be subject to any defeasance shall cause such defeasance to be written on the same paper or parchment on which the warrant is written, or cause a memorandum in writing to be made on such warrant, containing the substance and effect of such defeasance.

28. The costs of filing a judge's order for judgment against a trader defendant under the Bankrupt Act, shall not be allowed unless specially ordered by the judge.

EVIDENCE; ADMISSION AND INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS; SUBPŒNA TO PRODUCE RECORDS DEPOSITIONS ON INTERROGATORIES.

29. The form of notice to admit documents referred to in the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, section 117, may be as follows:

In the Q. B.
C. P.
or Exchequer. } A. B. v. C, D.

Take notice that the { plaintiff / defendant } in this cause proposes to adduce in evidence the several documents hereunder specified, and that the same may be inspected by the { defendant, / plaintiff, } his attorney or agent, at , on , between the hours of ; and the { defendant / plaintiff } is hereby required, within forty-eight hours from the last-mentioned hour, to admit that such of the said documents as are specified to be originals were respectively written, signed, or executed, as they purport respectively to have been; that such as are specified as copies are true copies; and such documents as are stated to have been served, sent, or delivered, were so served, sent, or delivered respectively; saving all just exceptions to the admissibility of all such documents as evidence in this cause. Dated, &c.

G. H. attorney
[or "agent"] for { plaintiff / defendant. }

To E, F. attorney or ["agent"] for { defendant / plaintiff. }

[Here describe the documents, the manner of doing which may be as follows:]

Originals.

Description of the Documents.	Date.
Deed of covenant between A. B. and C. D. 1st part; and E. F. 2d part	1st January, 1848.
Indenture of lease from A. B. to C. D.	1st February, 1848.
Indenture of release between A. B., C. D., 1st part, &c. ...	2d February, 1848.
Letter, defendant to plaintiff ...	1st March, 1848.
Policy of Insurance on goods by ship Isabella on voyage from Oporto to London	3d December, 1847.
Memorandum of agreement between C. D., captain of said ship, and E. F....	1st January, 1848.
Bill of exchange for 100*l.* at three months, drawn by A. B. on and accepted by C. D., endorsed by E. F. and G. H. ...	1st May, 1849.

Copies.

Description of Documents.	Dates.	Original or duplicate, served, sent, or delivered, when, how, and by whom.
Register of baptism of A. B. in the Parish of X.	1st Jan. 1808
Letter—plaintiff to defendant...	1st Feb. 1848	Sent by general post, 2nd Feb. 1848
Notice to produce papers	1st March, 1848	Served 2d Mar. 1848, on defendant's attorney, by E. F. of——
Record of a judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench in an action, J. S. v. J. N....	Trinity Term, 10th Vict.
Letters patent of King Charles II. in the Rolls chapel	1st Jan. 1680

30. In all cases of trials, writs of inquiry, or inquisitions of any kind, either party may call on the other party, by notice, to admit documents in the manner provided by and subject to the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852; and in case of the refusal or neglect to admit after such notice given, the costs of proving the document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the cause may be, unless at the trial or inquisition the judge or presiding officer shall certify that the refusal to admit was reasonable; and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice be given, except in cases where the omission to give the notice is in the opinion of the Master a saving of expense.

31. An order upon the lord of a manor, to allow the usual limited inspection of the court rolls, on the application of a copyhold tenant, may be absolute in the first instance, upon an affidavit that the copyhold tenant has applied for and been refused inspection.

32. No subpœna for the production of an original record shall be issued unless a rule of court or the order of a judge shall be produced to the officer issuing the same, and filed with him, and unless the writ shall be made conformable to the description of the document mentioned in such rule or order.

33. All depositions of witnesses taken under the order of a judge, rule of court, or writ of commission, shall be returned to and filed in the office of the Masters of the court in which the action or proceeding is pending.

TRIAL, NOTICE OF TRIAL, AND INQUIRY.

34. Notice of trial or inquiry, and of continuance of trial or inquiry, shall be given in town; but countermand of notice of trial or inquiry may be given either in town or country, unless otherwise ordered by the court or a judge.

35. The expression "short notice of trial," or "short notice of inquiry," shall in all cases be taken to mean four days.

36. Notice of trial or inquiry may be continued to any sitting in or after term, on giving a notice of continuance four days before the time mentioned in the notice of trial or inquiry, unless short notice of trial or inquiry has been given, in which cases two days previous notice shall be sufficient, unless otherwise ordered by the court or a judge, or by consent.

37. Countermand of notice of inquiry shall be given four days before the day of inquiry mentioned in the notice, unless short notice of inquiry has been given, and then two days before such day, unless otherwise ordered by the court, or a judge, or by consent.

38. On a replication or other pleading denying the existence of a record pleaded by the defendant, a rule for the defendant to produce the record shall not be necessary or used, and instead thereof a four days' notice shall be substituted, requiring the defendant to produce the record, otherwise judgment.

39. The costs of the day for not proceeding to trial or to execute a writ of inquiry may be obtained by a side bar rule, on the usual affidavit.

40. In all cases where the plaintiff's pleading is in denial of the pleading of the defendant, without joining issue, the plaintiff's attorney may give notice of trial at the time of delivering his replication or other subsequent pleading: and in case issue shall afterwards be joined, such notice shall be available; but if issue be not joined on such replication, or other subsequent pleading, and the plaintiff shall sign judgment for want thereof, and forthwith give notice of executing a writ of inquiry, such notice shall operate from the time that notice of trial was given as aforesaid; and in all cases where the defendant demurs to the plaintiff's declaration, replication, or other subsequent pleading, the defendant's attorney, or the defendant, if he plead in person, shall be obliged to accept notice of executing a writ of inquiry on the back of the joinder in demurrer; and in case the defendant pleads a plea in bar or rejoinder, &c. to which the plaintiff demurs, the defendant's attorney, or the defendant, if he plead in person, shall be obliged to accept notice of executing a writ of inquiry on the back of such demurrer.

41. Notice of a trial at bar shall be given to the Masters of the court before giving notice of trial to the party.

42. No trial by proviso shall be allowed in the same term in which the default of the plaintiff has been made, and no rule for a trial by proviso shall be necessary.

43. All causes to be entered for trial in London and Middlesex shall be entered as follows; that is to say, if notice of trial shall be given for any sitting within term, two days before the day of sitting; and if for a sitting after term, before eight o'clock, P.M. of the day before the first day of such sittiug, and if the same shall not be so entered for such sittings respectively, a ne recipiatur may be entered.

JURY AND VIEW.

44. No rule for a special jury shall be granted on behalf of any defendant (or plaintiff in replevin), except on an affidavit, either stating that no notice of trial has been given, or if it has been given, then stating the day for which such notice has been given; and in the latter case, no such rule is to be granted unless such application is made for it more than six days before that day; provided that a judge may, on summons, order a rule for a special jury to be drawn at any time.

45. No cause shall be tried by a special jury in Middlesex or London, unless the rule for such special jury be served, and the cause marked in the Associate's book as a special jury cause, on or before the day preceding the day appointed in Middlesex or London respectively for the trial of special juries.

46. There shall be no rule for the sheriff to return a good jury upon a writ of inquiry, but an order shall be made by a judge upon summons for that purpose.

47. Sheriffs, other than the sheriffs of London and Middlesex, shall, seven days before the commission Middlesex, shall, seven days before the commission day, make and keep at their offices, for inspection, a printed copy of the panel of the special jurymen to try the special jury causes at the assizes, as directed by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852; but such special jury need not be summoned, except notice be given as provided for by the 112th section of the said Act.

48. The rule for a view may in all cases be drawn up by the officer of the court, on the application of the party, without a motion for that purpose.

49. Upon any application for a view, there shall be an affidavit, stating the place at which the view is to be made, and the distance thereof from the office of the under sheriff, and the sum to be deposited in the hand of the under sheriff shall be 10*l.* in case of a common jury, and 16*l.* in case of a special jury, if such distance do not exceed five miles, and 15*l.* in case of a common jury, and 21*l.* in case of a special jury, if it be above five miles. And if such sum shall be more than sufficient to pay the expenses of the view, the surplus shall forthwith be returned to the attorney of the party who obtained the view; and if such sum shall not be sufficient to pay such expenses, the deficiency shall forthwith be paid by such attorney to the under sheriff. And the under sheriff shall pay and account for the money so deposited according to the scale following; (that is to say,)

	£	s.	d.
For travelling expenses to the under sheriff, showers and jurymen, expenses actually paid, if reasonable.
Fee to the under sheriff, when the distance does not exceed five miles from his office	1	1	0
Where such distance exceeds five miles ...	2	2	0
And in case he shall be necessarily absent more than one day, then for each day after the first a further fee of	1	1	0
Fee to each of the showers the same as the under sheriff, calculating the distance from their respective places of abode.
Fee to each common juryman, per diem ...	0	5	0
For each special juryman, per diem ...	1	1	0
Allowance for refreshment to the under sheriff, showers, and jurymen, whether common or special, each, per diem ...	0	5	0
To the bailiff for summoning each juryman whose residence is not more than five miles distant from the office of the under sheriff	0	2	6
And to each whose residence does exceed five miles of such distance	0	5	0

NEW TRIALS, MOTIONS IN ARREST OF JUDGMENT, AND JUDGMENT NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO.

50. No motion for a new trial, or to enter verdict or nonsuit, motion in arrest of judgment, or for judgment non obstante veredicto, shall be allowed after the expiration of four days from the day of trial, nor in any case after the expiration of the term, if the cause be tried in term, or after the expiration of the first four days of the ensuing term when the cause is tried out of term, unless entered in a list of postponed motions by leave of the court.

51. No suitor who appears in person shall be at liberty to set down any motion in such list of postponed motions, without the express leave of the court.

52. No affidavit shall be used in support of a motion for a new trial in any case, unless such affidavit shall have been made within the time limited for the making such motion, without the special permission of the court for that purpose.

53. If such motion as above mentioned be entered in such list of postponed motions, or if such motion be postponed by leave of the court, in the case of a cause tried in term, the attorney who has instructed counsel to make the motion shall give notice of it to the attorney of the opposite party, otherwise judgment signed on behalf of the opposite party shall be deemed regular, and every suitor who appears in person shall give a similar notice.

54. If a new trial be granted without any mention of costs in the rule, the costs of the first trial shall not be allowed to the successful party, though he succeed on the second.

JUDGMENT.

55. No rule for judgment shall be necessary; and after the return of a writ of inquiry judgment may be signed at the expiration of four days from such return.

56. All judgments, whether interlocutory or final, shall be entered of record of the day of the month and year, whether in term or vacation, when signed, and shall not have relation to any other day; but it shall be competent for the court or a judge to order a judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc.

57. When a plaintiff or defendant has obtained a verdict in term, or in case a plaintiff has been nonsuited at the trial in or out of term, judgment may be signed and execution issued thereon in fourteen days, unless the judge who tries the cause, or some other judge, or the court, shall order execution to issue at an earlier or later period, with or without terms.

58. Where issue shall be joined in any cause which is ordered to be tried before the sheriff or a judge of an inferior court of record, the defendant may at the time when, according to the 101st section of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, a defendant might give notice to the plaintiff to bring on an issue to be tried, give twenty days notice to the plaintiff to bring on the issue to be tried before such sheriff or judge at the court to be holden next after the expiration of such twenty days; and if the plaintiff neglects to give notice of trial before such sheriff or judge, or to proceed to trial in pursuance thereof, the defendant may proceed as provided for by the said 101st section.

COSTS; SETTING OFF DAMAGES ON COSTS.

59. One day's notice of taxing costs, together with a copy of the bill of costs and affidavit of increase (if any), shall be given by the attorney of the party whose costs are to be taxed to the other party, or his attorney, in all cases where a notice to tax is necessary.

60. One appointment only shall be deemed necessary for proceeding in the taxation of costs of an attorney's bill.

61. Notice of taxing costs shall not be necessary in any case where the defendant has not appeared in person, or by his attorney or guardian.

62. When issues in law and fact are raised, the costs of the several issues both in law and fact will follow the finding or judgment, and if the party entitled to the general costs of the cause obtain a verdict on any material issue, he will also be entitled to the general costs of the trial; but if no material issue in fact be found for the party otherwise entitled to the general costs of the cause, the costs of the trial shall be allowed to the opposite party.

63. No set-off of damages or costs between parties shall be allowed to the prejudice of the attorney's lien for costs in the particular suit against which the set-off is sought; provided, nevertheless, that interlocutory costs in the same suit, awarded to the adverse party, may be deducted.

ERROR.

64. Within eight days after the filing with the Master of the memorandum of error in fact, required by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, the plaintiff in error shall assign error; and in default, the defendant in error, his executors or administrators, shall be entitled to sign judgment of non pros.

65. No rule to plead to assignment of error in fact, or any other pleadings in error, shall be necessary, but either party may give to the opposite party a notice to answer such pleading within four days, otherwise judgment; which notice may be delivered separately, or indorsed on the pleading.

66. Notice of trial, and all other proceedings thereon, shall be the same as in issues joined in an ordinary action.

67. After the suggestion of error in law, alleged and denied as prescribed by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, is entered, either party may set down the case for argument, and forthwith give notice in writing to the opposite party, and proceed to the argument thereof as on a demurrer, without any rule or motion for a concilium.

68. Four clear days before the day appointed for argument, the plaintiff in error shall deliver copies of the judgment roll of the court below to the Judges of the Queen's Bench on error from the Common Pleas or Exchequer, and to the Judges of the Common Pleas on error from the Queen's Bench; and the defendant in error shall deliver copies thereof to the other Judges of the Court of Exchequer Chamber before whom the case is to be heard; and in default by either party, the other party may on the following day deliver such books as ought to have been delivered by the party making default, and the party making default shall not be heard until he shall have paid for such copies, or deposited with the Master a sufficient sum to pay for such copies.

69. The costs of proceedings in error shall be taxed and allowed as costs in the cause.

EXECUTION.

70. It shall not be necessary, before issuing execution upon any judgment whatever, to enter the proceedings upon any roll.

71. No writ of execution shall be issued till the judgment paper, postea, or inquisition, as the case may be, has been seen by the proper officer, nor shall any writ of execution be issued without a præcipe being filed with the proper officer.

72. Every writ of execution shall bear date on the day on which the same shall be issued, and shall be tested in the name of the Lord Chief Justice or of the Lord Chief Baron of the court from which the same shall issue, or in case of a vacancy of such office then in the name of the senior puisne judge of the said court, and may be made returnable on a day certain in term.

73. Every writ of execution shall be indorsed with the name and place of abode or office of business of the attorney actually suing out the same, and in case such attorney shall not be an attorney of the court in which the same is sued out, then also with the name and place of abode or office of business of the attorney of such court in whose name such writ shall be sued out; and when the attorney actually suing out any writ shall sue out the same as agent for an attorney in the country, the name and place of abode of such attorney in the country shall also be indorsed upon the said writ; and in case no attorney shall be employed to issue the writ, then it shall be indorsed with a memorandum expressing that the same has been sued out by the plaintiff or defendant in person, as the case may be, mentioning the city, town, or parish, and also the name of the hamlet, street, and number of the house of such plaintiff or defendant's residence, if any such there be.

76. Writs of capias ad satisfaciendum for the purposes of outlawry, or final process, or to fix bail, must be made returnable on a day certain in term, and may be so returnable on any day in term, and it shall be sufficient for either purpose that there be eight days between the teste and return.

75. A writ of capias ad satisfaciendum to fix bail shall have eight days between the teste and return, and must, in London and Middlesex, be entered four clear days in the public book at the sheriff's office.

76. Every writ of execution shall be indorsed with a direction to the sheriff, or other officer or person to whom the writ is directed, to levy the money really due and payable and sought to be recovered under the judgment, stating the amount, and also to levy interest thereon, if sought to be recovered, at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum from the time when the judgment was entered up, or if it was entered up before the 1st of October 1838, then from that day; provided that in cases where there is an agreement between the parties that more than four per cent. interest shall be secured by the judgment, then the indorsement may be accordingly to levy the amount of interest so agreed.

77. In cases of an assessment of further damages, pursuant to the statute of 8 & 9 Will. 3, it shall be stated in the body of the writ of execution that the sheriff, or other officer or person to whom the writ is directed, is to levy interest on the damages assessed, and costs taxed in that behalf, at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum from the day on which execution was awarded, unless execution was awarded before the 1st of October 1838, and in that case from that day.

REVIVOR AND SCIRE FACIAS.

78. A plaintiff shall not be allowed a rule to quash his own writ of scire facias or revivor, after a defendant has appeared, except on payment of costs.

AUDITA QUERELA.

79. No writ of audita querela shall be allowed unless by rule of court or order of a judge.

ENTRY OF SATISFACTION ON ROLL.

80. In order to acknowledge satisfaction of a judgment it shall be requisite only to produce a satisfaction piece, in form as hereinafter mentioned; and such satisfaction piece shall be signed by the party or parties acknowledging the same, or their personal representatives; and such signature or signatures shall be witnessed by a practising attorney of one of the Courts at Westminster expressly named by him or them, and attending at his or their request, to inform him or them of the nature and effect of such satisfaction piece before the same is signed, and which attorney shall declare himself, in the attestation thereto, to be the attorney for the person or persons so signing the same, and state he is witness as such attorney; [provided that a judge at chambers may make an order dispensing with such signature under special circumstances, if he thinks fit,] and in cases where the satisfaction piece is signed by the personal representative of a deceased, his representative character shall be proved in such manner as the Master may direct.

Form of Satisfaction Piece.

In the Monday, the day of A.D. 185 .
" to wit.—Satisfaction is acknowledged
"between , plaintiff, and , defendant,
"in an action for and ;
"And do hereby expressly nominate
"and appoint , attorney-at-law, to witness
"and attest execution of this acknowledg-
"ment of satisfaction."

"Judgment entered on the day of
"in the year of our Lord 185 . Roll No. ."

Signed by the said in the presence of me of , one of the attorneys of the Court of at Westminster. And I hereby declare myself to be attorney for and on behalf of the said expressly named by h and attending at h request to inform h of the nature and effect of this acknowledgment of satisfaction (which I accordingly did before the same was signed by h). And I also declare that I subscribe my name hereto as such attorney. — Signature. the above-named plaintiff. Date.

SEIZABLE PROCEEDINGS, BAIL, AND BAIL IN ERROR.

81. The sheriff, or other officer or person to whom any writ of capias shall be directed, or who shall have the execution and return thereof, shall, within six days at least after the execution thereof, indorse on such writ the true day of the execution thereof.

82. Where the defendant is described in the writ of capias or affidavit to hold to bail, by initials, or by a wrong name, or without a Christian name, the defendant shall not be discharged out of custody, or the bail-bond delivered up to be cancelled, on motion for that purpose, if it shall appear to the court that due diligence has been used to obtain knowledge of the proper name.

83. An action may be brought upon a bail-bond by the sheriff himself in any court.

84. In all cases where the bail-bond shall be directed to stand as a security, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to sign judgment upon it.

85. Proceedings on the bail-bond may be stayed on payment of costs in an action, unless sufficient reason be shown for proceeding in more.

86. When bail to the sheriff becomes bail to the action, the plaintiff may except to them, though he has taken an assignment to the bail-bond.

87. A plaintiff shall not be at liberty to proceed on the bail-bond pending a rule to bring in the body of the defendant.

88. No rule shall be drawn up for setting aside an attachment, regularly obtained against a sheriff, for not bringing in the body, or for staying proceedings regularly commenced on the assignment of any bail-bond, unless the application for such rule shall, if made on the part of the original defendant, be grounded on an affidavit of merits, or if made on the part of the sheriff, or bail, or any officer of the sheriff, be grounded on an affidavit, showing that such application is really and truly made on the part of the sheriff, or bail, or officer of the sheriff, as the case may be, at his or their own expense, and for his or their indemnity only, and without collusion with the original defendant.

89. Whenever a plaintiff shall rule the sheriff on a return of cepi corpus to bring in the body, the defendant shall be at liberty to put in and perfect bail at any time before the expiration of such rule; and a plaintiff having so ruled the sheriff shall not proceed on any assignment of the bail-bond, until the time has expired to bring in the body as aforesaid.

90. In case a rule for returning a writ of capias shall expire in vacation, and the sheriff or other officer having the return of such writ shall return cepi corpus thereon, a rule may thereupon issue, requiring the sheriff or other officer, within the like number of days after the service of such rule as by the practice of the court is prescribed with respect to rules, to bring in the body issued in term, to bring the defendant into court, by forthwith putting in and perfecting bail above to the action; and if the sheriff or other officer shall not duly obey such rule an attachment shall issue in the following term for disobedience of such rule, whether the bail shall or shall not have been put in and perfected in the meantime.

91. Notice of more bail than two shall be deemed irregular, unless by order of the court or a judge.

92. The bail, of whom notice shall be given, shall not be changed without leave of the court or a judge.

93. No person or persons shall be permitted to justify himself or themselves as good and sufficient bail for any defendant or defendants if such person or persons shall have been indemnified for so doing by the attorney or attorneys concerned for any such defendant or defendants.

94. If any person put in as bail to the action, except for the purpose of rendering only, be a practising attorney, or clerk to a practising attorney, or a sheriff's officer, bailiff, or person concerned in the execution of process, the plaintiff may treat the bail as a nullity, and sue upon the bail-bond as soon as the time for putting in bail has expired, unless good bail be duly put in in the meantime.

95. In the case of country bail, the bail-piece shall be transmitted and filed within eight days.

96. A defendant may justify bail at the same time at which they are put in, upon giving four days' notice for that purpose, before eleven o'clock in the morning, and exclusive of Sunday. If the plaintiff is desirous of time to inquire after the bail, and shall give one day's notice thereof as aforesaid to the defendant, his attorney or agent, as the case may be, before the time appointed for justification, stating therein what further time is required, such time not to exceed three days, then (unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order) the time for putting in and justifying bail shall be postponed accordingly, and all proceedings shall be stayed in the meantime.

97. Every notice of bail shall, in addition to the descriptions of the bail mention the street or place, and number (if any), where each of the bail resides, and all the streets or places, and numbers (if any), in which each of them has been resident at any time within the last six months, and whether he is a housekeeper or freeholder.

98. If the notice of bail shall be accompanied by an affidavit of each of the bail, according to the following form, and if the plaintiff afterwards except to such bail, he shall, if such bail are allowed, pay the costs of justification; and, if such bail are rejected, the defendant shall pay the costs of opposition, unless the court or a judge thereof shall otherwise order.

Form of Affidavit of Justification of Bail.

In the Queen's Bench [or "Common Pleas," or "Exchequer of Pleas," as the case may be.]

Between A. B. plaintiff, and C. D. defendant.

A. B. one of the bail for the above-named defendant, maketh oath and saith that he is a housekeeper [or freholder, as the case may be] residing at [describing particularly the street or place, and number, if any]; that he is worth property to the amount of £ [the amount required by the practice of the courts] over and above what will pay all his just debts [if bail in any other action, add "and every other sum for which he is now bail"]; that he is not bail for any defendants except in this action [or, if bail in any other action or actions, add "except for C. D. at the suit of E. F. in the Court of in the sum of £ , for G. H. at the suit of I. K. in the Court of , in the sum of £ " specifying the several actions, with the courts in which they are brought and the sums in which the deponent is bail]; that the deponent's property, to the amount of the said sum of £ [if bail in any other action or actions, here add "and of all other sums for which he is now bail as aforesaid"], consists of [here specify the nature and value of the property in respect of which the bail proposes to justify, as follows: "stock-in-trade, in his business at , carried on by him at , of the value of £ ; of good book debts owing to him to the amount of £ ; of furniture in his house at , of the value of £ ; of a freehold or leasehold farm of the value of £ , situate at , occupied by ; or of a dwelling-house of the value of £ , situate at , occupied by ; or of other property, particularising each description of property, with the value thereof]; and that the deponent hath for the last six months resided at [describing the place or places of such residence].

Sworn [&c. as usual].

99. If the plaintiff shall not give one day's notice of exception to the bail by whom such affidavit shall have been made, the recognisance of such bail may be taken out of court without other justification than such affidavit.

100. Where notice of bail shall not be accompanied by such affidavit, and in bail in error, the plaintiff may except thereto within twenty days next after the putting in of such bail and notice thereof given in writing to the plaintiff or his attorney, or where special bail is put in before any commissioner, the plaintiff may except thereto within twenty days next after the bail-piece is transmitted and notice thereof given as aforesaid; and no exception to bail shall be admitted after the time hereinbefore limited.

101. Affidavits of justification shall be deemed insufficient unless they state that each person justifying is worth double the amount sworn to over and above what will pay his just debts, and over and above every other sum for which he is then bail, except when the sum sworn to exceeds 1,000*l.*, when it shall be sufficient for the bail to justify in 1,000*l.* beyond the sum sworn to.

102. It shall be sufficient in all cases if notice of justification of bail be given two days before the time of justification.

103. In all cases bail either to the action or in error shall be justified, when required, within four days after exception, before a judge at chambers, both in term and vacation.

104. Bail, though rejected, shall be allowed to render the principal without entering into a fresh recognisance.

105. Bail shall be at liberty to render the principal at any time during the last day for rendering, so as they make such render before the prison doors are closed for the night.

106. On application by a defendant or his bail, or either of them, for an order to render a defendant to a county gaol, it shall be specified on whose behalf such application shall be made, the state of the proceedings in the cause, for what amount the defendant was held to bail, and by the sheriff of what county he was arrested, which facts shall be stated in the order; and that on such order being lodged with the gaoler of the county gaol in which such defendant was so arrested, the defendant may be rendered to his custody in discharge of the bail; and that on such lodgment and render a notice thereof, and of the defendant's being actually in custody thereon, in writing, signed by the defendant or his bail, or either of them, or the attorney or agent of any or either of them, shall be delivered to the plaintiff's attorney or agent, and thereupon the bail for the said defendant shall be wholly exonerated, without entering any exoneretur.

107. If a defendant shall be in custody of the gaoler of any county gaol by virtue of any process issued out of any of the said courts, he may be rendered in discharge of his bail in any action depending in the said court in like manner as is last hereinbefore provided, and thereupon the bail shall be wholly exonerated without entering any exoneretur.

108. Where the plaintiff proceeds by action on the recognisance of bail, the bail shall be at liberty to render their principal at any time within the space of eight days next after the service of the process upon them, but not at any later period; and notice thereof given, the proceedings shall be stayed upon payment of the costs of the writ and service thereof only.

109. Bail shall only be liable to the sum sworn to by the affidavit of debt and the costs of suit, not exceeding in the whole the amount of their recognisance.

110. To entitle bail to a stay of proceedings pending a writ of error, the application must be made before the time to surrender is out.

111. Whenever two or more notices of justification of bail shall have been given before the motion on which bail shall appear to justify, no bail shall be permitted to justify without first paying (or securing to the satisfaction of the plaintiff, his attorney or agent) the reasonable costs incurred by such prior notices, although the names of the persons intended to justify, or any of them, may not have been changed, and whether the bail mentioned in any such prior notice shall not have appeared, or shall have been rejected.

EJECTMENT.

112. No judgment in ejectment for want of appearance or defence, whether limited or otherwise, shall be signed without first filing an affidavit of the service of the writ, according to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, and a copy thereof, or, where personal service has not been effected, without first obtaining a judge's order or a rule of court authorising the signing such judgment; which said rule or order, or a duplicate thereof, shall be filed together with a copy of the writ.

113. Where a person not named in the writ in ejectment has obtained leave of the court or a judge to appear and defend, he shall enter an appearance according to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, entitled in the action against the party or parties named in the writ as defendant or defendants, and shall forthwith give notice of such appearance to the plaintiff's attorney or to the plaintiff if he sues in person.

114. If the plaintiff in ejectment appears at the trial, and the defendant does not appear, the defendant shall be taken to have admitted the plaintiff's title, and the verdict shall be entered for the plaintiff, without producing any evidence, and the plaintiff shall have judgment for his costs of suit as in other cases.

CAUSES REMOVED FROM INFERIOR COURTS.

115. Rules to appear in causes removed from inferior courts shall in all cases be a four-day rule, both in term and vacation.

116. In cases of removal of causes from inferior courts by habeas corpus, where bail is required to be put in on behalf of the defendant, the same practice shall be used, as near as may be, as in putting in bail to an ordinary action, and in the event of no bail being put in within eight days after the habeas corpus allowed a procedendo may issue.

117. If a cause be removed from an inferior court having jurisdiction of the cause, the costs in the court below shall be costs in the cause.

PENAL ACTIONS, COMPOUNDING OF.

118. Leave to compound a penal action shall not be given in cases where part of the penalty goes to the Crown, unless notice shall have been given to the proper officer; but in other cases it may.

119. The rule for compounding any qui tam action shall express therein that the defendant thereby undertakes to pay the sum for which the court has given him leave to compound such action.

120. When leave is given by the Court of Queen's Bench to compound a penal action, the Queen's half of the composition shall be paid into the hands of the Master of the Crown Office for the use of Her Majesty.

PAUPERS, ACTIONS BY.

121. No person shall be admitted to sue in formâ pauperis unless the case laid before counsel for his opinion, and his opinion thereon, with an affidavit of the party or his attorney that the same case contains a full and true statement of all the material facts, to the best of his knowledge and belief, shall be produced before the court or judge to whom application may be made; and no fees shall be payable by a pauper to his counsel and attorney, nor at the offices of the Masters, or Associates, or at the judges' chambers, or elsewhere, by reason of a verdict being found for such pauper exceeding five pounds.

122. Where a pauper omits to proceed to trial, pursuant to notice, he may be called upon by a rule to shew cause why he should not pay costs, though he has not been dispaupered, and why all further proceedings should not be stayed until such costs shall be paid.

PRISONERS, AND PROCEEDINGS AGAINST.

123. Every rule or order of a judge directing the discharge of a defendant out of custody upon special bail being put in and perfected shall also direct a supersedeas to issue forthwith where defendant is in a county gaol.

124. The plaintiff shall proceed to trial, or final judgment, against a prisoner in the term next after issue is joined, or at the sittings or assizes next after such term, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order, and shall cause the defendant to be charged in execution within the term next after such trial or judgment.

125. The keeper of the Queen's prison shall present to the judges of the courts in their respective chambers at Westminster, within the first four days of every term, a list of all such prisoners as are supersedeable, stating as to what actions and on what account they are so, and as to what actions (if any) they still remain not supersedeable.

126. If, by reason of any writ of error, special order of the court, agreement of parties, or other special matter, any person detained in the actual custody of the keeper of the Queen's prison be not entitled to a supersedeas or discharge for want of proceeding to trial or judgment, or charging in execution, within the time prescribed, then and in every such case the plaintiff or plaintiffs at whose suit such prisoner shall be so detained in custody shall with all convenient speed give notice in writing of such writ of error, special order, agreement, or other special matter, to the keeper, upon pain of losing the right to detain such prisoner in custody by reason of such special matter; and the keeper shall forthwith after the receipt of such notice cause the matter thereof to be entered in the books of the prison, and shall also present to the judges of the respective courts, from time to time, a list of the prisoners to whom such special matter shall relate, showing such special matter, together with the list of the prisoners supersedeable.

127. All prisoners who have been or shall be in the custody of the keeper for the space of one calendar month after they are supersedeable, although not superseded, shall be forthwith discharged out of the Queen's prison as to all such actions in which they shall have been or shall be superseded.

128. After notice given to any plaintiff by a prisoner of his intention to apply for his discharge under any Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors, no such prisoner shall be superseded or discharged out of custody at the suit of such plaintiff, by reason of such plaintiff's forbearing to proceed against him according to the rules and practice of the courts from the time of such notice given, until some rule or order shall be made in the cause in that behalf.

129. A rule or order for the discharge of a prisoner who has been detained in execution for a year for a sum under twenty pounds may be made absolute in the first instance, on an affidavit of notice given ten days before the intended application, which notice may be given before the year expires.

SHERIFFS.—RULES TO RETURN WRITS OR BRING IN THE BODY.

130. All rules upon the sheriffs of London and Middlesex to return writs or to bring in the bodies of defendants shall be four-day rules, and upon other sheriffs eight-day rules.

131. When the rule to return a writ expires in vacation, the sheriff shall file the writ at the expiration of the rule, or as soon after as the office shall be open; and the officer with whom it is filed shall indorse the day and hour when it was filed.

132. No judges' order shall issue for the return of any writ, or to bring in the body of a defendant, but a side bar rule shall issue for that purpose in vacation as in term, which shall be of the same force and effect as side bar rules made for that purpose in term.

133. In case a rule shall issue in vacation for the return of any writ of capias, ca. sa., fi. fa., elegit, habere facias possessionem, renditioni exponas, or other writ of execution, and such rule shall have been duly served, but obedience shall not have been paid thereto, an attachment shall issue for disobedience of such rule, whether the thing required by such rule shall or shall not have been done in the meantime.

134. Where any sheriff, before his going out of office, shall arrest any defendant and take a bail bond and make return of cepi corpus, he shall and may within the time allowed by law be called upon to bring in the body by a rule for that purpose, notwithstanding he may be out of office before such rule shall be granted.

IRREGULARITY.

135. No application to set aside process or proceedings for irregularity shall be allowed unless made within a reasonable time, nor if the party applying has taken a fresh step after knowledge of the irregularity.

136. Where a summons is obtained to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the several objections intended to be insisted upon shall be stated therein.

137. In all cases where a rule is obtained to shew cause why proceedings should not be set aside for irregularity with costs, and such rule is afterwards discharged generally without any special direction upon the matter of costs, it is understood as discharged with costs.

AFFIDAVITS.

138. The addition and true place of abode of every person making an affidavit shall be inserted therein.

139. In every affidavit made by two or more deponents the names of the several persons making such affidavit shall be written in the jurat.

140. No affidavit shall be read or made use of in any matter depending in court in the jurat of which there shall be any interlineation or erasure.

141. Where any affidavit is sworn before any judge or any commissioner by any person who from his or her signature appears to be illiterate, the judge's clerk or commissioner taking such affidavit shall certify or state in the jurat that the affidavit was read in his presence to the party making the same, and that such party seemed perfectly to understand the same, and also that the said party wrote his or her mark or signature in the presence of the judge's clerk or commissioner taking the said affidavit.

142. No affidavit of the service of process shall be deemed sufficient if sworn before the plaintiff's own attorney or his clerk.

143. Where an agent in town, or an attorney in the country, is the attorney on the record, an affidavit sworn before the attorney in the country shall not be received; and an affidavit sworn before an attorney's clerk shall not be received in cases where it would not be receivable if sworn before the attorney himself; but this rule shall not extend to affidavits to hold to bail.

144. An affidavit sworn before a judge of any of the courts shall be received in the court to which such judge belongs though not entitled of that court, but not in any other court unless entitled of the court in which it is to be used.

145. Where a special time is limited for filing affidavits, no affidavit filed after that time shall be made use of in court or before the master, unless by leave of a court or a judge.

146. No rule which the court has granted upon the foundation of any affidavit shall be of any force unless such affidavit shall have been actually made before such rule was moved for, and produced in court at the time of making the motion.

147. All affidavits used before a judge out of court shall be filed with the Masters of the said courts, and be alphabetically indexed; and such affidavits shall be delivered to the Masters of the respective courts, in order to be filed, ten days next after that on which the matter is disposed of.

148. No commission for taking affidavits shall be issued to any person practising as a conveyancer, unless such person be also an attorney or solicitor of one of the courts at Westminster; and no such commission shall issue without an affidavit made by the person intended to be named therein, that he is not and does not intend to become a practising conveyancer, or that he is an attorney or solicitor duly enrolled in one of the said courts, and hath taken out his certificate for the current year.

RULES, SUMMONSES AND ORDERS.

149. Every rule of court shall be dated the day of the week, month, and year on which the same is drawn up, without reference to any other time or date.

150. Side bar rules may be obtained on the last as well as on other days in term.

151. A rule may be enlarged, if the court think fit, without notice.

152. All enlarged rules shall be drawn up for the first day in the ensuing term, unless otherwise ordered by the court.

153. It shall not be necessary to issue more than one summons for attendance before a judge, upon the same matter, and the party taking out such summons shall be entitled to an order on the return thereof, unless cause is shown to the contrary.

154. An attendance on a summons, or on an appointment before a master, for half an hour next immediately following the return thereof, shall be deemed a sufficient attendance.

155. All written consents upon which orders for signing judgments are obtained shall be preserved in the chambers of the judges of the respective courts.

156. In actions where the defendant has appeared by attorney no such order shall be made unless the consent of the defendant be given by his attorney or agent.

157. Where the defendant has not appeared or has appeared in person no such order shall be made unless the defendant attends the judge, and gives his consent in person, or unless his written consent be attested by an attorney acting on his behalf; except in a case where the defendant is a barrister, conveyancer, special pleader, or attorney.

158. Where a judge's order is made during vacation, it shall not be made a rule of court before the next term.

159. When a judge's order or order of Nisi Prius is made a rule of court, it shall be a part of the rule that the costs of making the order a rule of court shall be paid by the party against whom the order is made, provided an affidavit be made and filed that the order has been served on the party, his attorney or agent, and disobeyed.

160. Rules to shew cause shall be no stay of proceedings unless two days' notice of the motion shall have been served on the opposite party, except in the cases of rules for new trials, or to enter verdict or nonsuit, motion in arrest of judgment, or for judgment non obstante veredicto, to set aside award or annuity deed, or to enter a suggestion, or by the special direction of the court.

NOTICES, SERVICE OF, AND OF RULES, PLEADINGS, &c.

161. All notices required by these rules, or by the practice of the court, shall be in writing.

162. Where the residence of a defendant is unknown, rules, notices, and other proceedings may be stuck up in the office, but not without previous leave of the court or a judge.

163. It shall not be necessary to the regular service of a rule or order, that the original rule or order should be shown, unless sight thereof be demanded, except in cases of attachment.

164. Service of pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings shall be made before seven o'clock, P.M. If made after that hour, the service shall be deemed to be made on the following day.

165. The Masters of the several courts shall cause to be kept an alphabetical book at their offices, to be there inspected by any attorney or his clerk, without fee or reward; and every attorney practising in the said courts, and residing within ten miles of the General Post-office, shall enter in such book (in alphabetical order) his name and place of business, or some other proper place, within three miles of the said post-office, where he may be served with pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings; and as often as any attorney shall change his place of business, or the place where he may be so served as aforesaid, he shall make the like entry thereof in the said book; and all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings which do not require a personal service shall be deemed sufficiently served on such attorney if a copy thereof shall be left at the place lastly entered in such book with any person resident at or belonging to such place; and if any such attorney shall neglect to make such entry, the fixing up of any notice, or the copy of any pleadings, notice, summons, order, rule, or other proceeding, for such attorney, in the Masters' offices, shall be deemed a sufficient notice.

166. In all cases where a party sues or defends in person, he shall, upon issuing any writ of summons or other proceeding, or entering an appearance, enter in a book to be kept for that purpose at the Master's office an address within three miles from the General Post Office at which all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, or other proceedings not requiring personal service shall be left; and if such address shall not be entered in the said book, or if such address shall be more than three miles from the General Post Office, then the opposite party shall be at liberty to proceed by sticking up all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, or other proceedings in the Master's office without the necessity of any further service.

167. In all cases where a plaintiff shall have sued out a writ in person, or a defendant shall have appeared in person, and either party shall by an attorney of the court have given notice in writing to the opposite party, or the attorney or agent of such party, of such attorney being authorized to act as attorney for the party on whose behalf such notice is given, all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings which according to the practice of the courts are to be delivered to or served upon the party on whose behalf such notice is given shall thereafter be delivered to or served upon such attorney.

ATTACHMENT.

168. Rules for attachments shall be absolute in the first instance in the two following cases only; viz., first, for nonpayment of costs on a Master's allocatur; secondly, against a sheriff for not obeying a rule to return a writ or to bring in the body.

AWARDS AND ANNUITIES.

169. Where a rule to show cause is obtained to set aside an award or an annuity, the several objections thereto intended to be insisted upon at the time of moving to make such rule absolute shall be stated in the rule to show cause.

170. Costs may be taxed on award, notwithstanding the time for setting aside the award has not elapsed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

171. On a reference to the Master to ascertain the amount for which final judgment is to be signed, the Master's certificate shall be filed in the office when judgment is signed.

172. On every appointment made by the Master, the party on whom the same shall be served shall attend such appointment without waiting for a second, or in default thereof, the Master may proceed ex parte on the first appointment.

173. The Master's offices in the several courts shall be open in term time from eleven o'clock in the forenoon till five o'clock in the afternoon, and not in the evening; and in the vacation from eleven o'clock in the forenoon till three o'clock in the afternoon, except between the 10th day of August and the 24th day of October, when they are to be open from eleven in the morning till two in the afternoon, and except on Good Friday, Easter Eve, Monday and Tuesday in Easter week, Christmas-day, and the three following days, and such of the four following days as may not fall in the time of term, but not otherwise, namely, the Queen's birthday, the Queen's accession, Whit Monday, and Whit Tuesday, when the offices shall be closed.

174. In all cases in which any particular number of days, not expressed to be clear days, is prescribed by the rules or practice of the courts, the same shall be reckoned exclusively of the first day, and inclusively of the last day, unless the last day shall happen to fall on a Sunday, Christmas-day, Good Friday, or a day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, in which case the time shall be reckoned exclusively of that day also.

175. The days between Thursday next before, and the Wednesday next after Easter-day, and Christmas-day and the three following days, shall not be reckoned or included in any rules, notices, or other proceedings, except notices of trial or notices of inquiry.

176. In all causes in which there have been no proceedings for one year from the last proceeding had, the party, whether plaintiff or defendant, who desires to proceed, shall give a calendar month's notice to the other party of his intention to proceed. The summons of a judge, if no order be made thereupon, shall not be deemed a proceeding within this rule. Notice of trial, though afterwards countermanded, shall be deemed a proceeding within it.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS LIEUTENANT.

COUNTY PALATINE OF DURHAM.—Henry Lipscombe, Esq. and William Lamb, Esq. to be Deputy-Lieutenants.

COUNTY OF STAFFORD.—William Mott, Esq.; John Newton Lane, Esq.; and William Arden, Esq. to be Deputy-Lieutenants.

COUNTY OF PEMBROKE.—John Stokes, Esq. and Henry Foley, Esq. to be Deputy-Lieutenants.

COUNTY PALATINE OF CHESTER.—William Davenport Davenport, Esq.; John Dixon, Esq.; Egerton Leigh, jun. Esq.; Thomas William Tatton, Esq.; Lee Forcher Townshend, Esq.; and William Jackson, Esq. M.P. to be Deputy-Lieutenants.

At a Privy Council, held at the Castle, Dublin, his Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, the Right Hon. Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Blakeney, K.C., G.C.B., and the Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench were sworn in Lords Justices, in the absence of the Lord-Lieutenant.

The Master of the Rolls has appointed Mr. Kenyon L. Parker, Q.C., to succeed Mr. Thomas Hall Plumer, deceased, as one of the Examiners in the Court of Chancery. The other Examinership, vacant (after many years' service) by the promotion of the Hon. C. P. Villiers, M.P. to the office of Judge Advocate to the Queen, will be conferred upon Mr. C. Otter, barrister-at-law, of Lincoln's-inn. Mr. Charles Cardwell, of Lincoln's-inn, is the private Secretary of the President of the Board of Trade.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

An Epitome of the New Chancery Practice, &c. &c. By THOMAS W. BRAITHWAITE, of the Record and Writ Clerks' Office. London: Stevens and Norton.

The New Chancery Acts, with Notes, &c. By T. S. HEADLAM, Esq. M.P. Q.C. London: Stevens and Norton.

Two books on the same subject, by the same publishers, but differing somewhat in their treatment of it. Mr. BRAITHWAITE'S plan is novel and ingenious, and we should think of much practical utility. He gives an Epitome of the new Acts and Orders, arranged under the most important subjects to which they relate, distinguishing the order from the statute by a different type. For instance, under the title of "Receivers," we find a brief summary of the sections and orders relating to them. In this the author has employed much care and labour. An Appendix contains the statutes and orders in full.

Mr. HEADLAM'S volume is only a collection of the statutes and orders, with explanatory Notes at the foot of the page. No attempt at arrangement is made, and, consequently, the practitioner consulting it is obliged to turn backwards and forwards from the statute to the orders that explain it, and from the orders to the statute, and hazards the danger of overlooking the one or the other. Manifestly, in all editions of the new statutes designed for practical use, the orders should appear on the same page with the sections of the statute which they explain or carry out; and we are surprised that so experienced a legal writer as Mr. Headlam should have omitted an arrangement so obviously necessary in such a case as this, for his notes, though not numerous, are sound and practical. We would recommend him, by all means, to cure this defect in his second edition.

Popular Tables, &c. By CHARLES M. WILLICH. Second Edition.

Mr. WILLICH has improved this new edition of his valuable Tables by the introduction of various new ones for ascertaining the values of life, lifeholds, leaseholds, and church property, renewal fines, &c. If we had occasion to commend the first edition, much more may we now recommend this new one.

The Second Edition of the Common Law Procedure Act, with the New Orders, the New Tables of Fees, all the Cases decided upon it to this time, the Forms required, numerous practical Notes, an Introductory Chapter describing an Action at Law as it is under the New Practice, and a very copious Index. By R. MALCOLM KERR, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Author of The Absconding Debtors' Act, &c. London: Crockford.

MR. KERR has at least achieved the honour of a second edition, and he only has done this of all the many editors of the Procedure Act. That his treatment of the subject was approved by those who are the best judges, because they test a law book by its practical utility, was proved by the fact that a large edition of it was exhausted within a fortnight after its publication.

Mr. KERR has taken advantage of the call for a second edition to introduce various improvements. He has added greatly to its value by giving all the cases that were decided upon the construction of the Act, and the practice under it during the last term, and he has framed many new forms to meet their requirements; he has appended the New Tables of Fees, and he has much extended the Index, which before was extremely copious. There are also some typographical improvements. The numerous forms are printed in italics, so as to catch the eye readily; and the matter of the index is arranged in separate lines with the same purpose, for to the practitioner, who usually consults a work like this in a hurry, it is important that he should be able to see at a glance what he is seeking. The Introductory Sketch of an Action at Law (after the manner of that by Smith) as it is now to be conducted under the new practice, gives to the practitioner a concise view of all the changes that have been made. It will doubtless be found of special utility to the articled clerk and law student, who must have some difficulty in fishing that practice for himself out of the confusion of a long statute.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE BAR AND THEIR CLIENTS.—The following truthful letter on the project of the Junior Bar for practising without the intervention of an attorney, appeared some time since in The Times. It deserves preservation here:—"Under the rule which requires an attorney to intervene between the client and the barrister, the client has an advantage which, in many cases, has not been of slight importance to him. The fee to the barrister, being in the first place marked and paid by the attorney, being next subjected to the consideration of the taxing-master, and being then recoverable only to the extent which secures that master's approval, is, in effect, taxed before it is marked. The interest of the attorney is enlisted in favour of a low fee to the barrister, and the client is proportionately the gainer. Lord Denman has laid it down that rules will not restrain men of a dishonourable character. With the greatest submission to him, this is a very unexpected dictum of our revered Chief Justice, especially to those who are not unaware that in his own long career he was not altogether inexperienced in giving effect to some of those rules by which the Bar is regulated. But whether or not that dictum is to be taken as more than obiter, no one will doubt that the abrogation of a rule or a practice which has the effect of putting a check on the covetousness of an unscrupulous barrister would give him new opportunities of gratifying his greed of gain; and, therefore, that the interests of clients demand that a new protection to them in respect of fees shall be substituted for that which is to be taken away. Again, if an attorney be guilty of gross negligence in the conduct of his client's case, the client may be recompensed by damages in an action against the attorney. I have heard that the yearly amount paid by attorneys to avoid the publicity which would be given to their negligence by their appearing as defendants is very large. But barristers, under the existing state of things, are not exposed to such actions. If then the remedy of the client for loss by the negligence of his present legal adviser be taken away, he ought to have a substitute for it by an action against the barrister. Perhaps it may be found that legislation on this point is needless, and that where the client employs the barrister without the intervention of an attorney he does not lose his right of action, but only has another defendant to sue. Should legislation on the matter be requisite, it appears to me that the character and incidents of a mercenarium must be made to attach to the fee paid directly by the client to the barrister; that authority over the barristers who dispense with the intervention of attorneys must be given to the taxing-masters; and that those barristers must be made liable to damages for negligence in actions by their clients. If something like this be not done, the fancied boon to clients of abolishing the existing etiquette will prove to be a boon to no one but the very junior Bar. At the same time it would be a great injustice to those barristers who wish to maintain the honorary character of their services and their fees to degrade them to that mercenary position; and therefore I would suggest the expediency of there being two distinct Bars—the one, that which has hitherto existed, with its old etiquette and privileges; the other, a new Bar, with the privilege of audience in the courts, and liability to taxation and actions. It is clear enough to many that some such change is demanded, and it is equally clear to me that the change now so vehemently called for is not demanded with a single eye to the interests of the client, or with any view to the interests of those barristers who have surmounted the first difficulties of getting into practice. My impression is that the extraordinary increase of barristers within the last twenty years, from about 1,000 to above 3,000, is at the bottom of all this present stir. The benchers are greatly to blame for the present state of things. The time of studentship before the call to the Bar has been lessened from five years to three; the inducements to remain a fair time in the condition of a student have thus been lessened; and the consequence is that the courts are crowded by barrister-chicks with the shell on their heads, full-fledged only as regards their wigs and gowns. We consequently hear much of the overstocked state of the Bar; but the Bar is, in fact, very much under-stocked with men who are really competent for anything above mere routine practice. On [illegible] the Court of Common Pleas [illegible] the Court [illegible] the very junior Bar. It [illegible] of old practitioners, both at the Bar and [illegible] that within the last twenty years the [illegible] of the Bar as a body has been [illegible] that of the attorneys as a body has [illegible] been raised; and one proof of this is, that in many of the County Courts the attorney advocates [illegible] than a match for the young barristers who frequent those tribunals. A return from the County Court Judges would curiously illustrate this position. The plain, hard, unpleasant truth is, that of the men who are now called to the Bar only large majority have had a most imperfect legal education; that not a few of them are without any legal education whatever; that some of them, if they can construe, cannot parse the Latin that is to be found in the law books; and that there are existing instances of barristers whose spelling and grammar are often at variance with those of the majority of their brethren. I am not thus "fouling my own nest," for the legal nest in which I was hatched was not so ill-tenanted. Thirty years' experience of the Profession make me regret that our brethren have too much forgotten the days of their youth.—Your obedient servant,—A BARRISTER."

HILARY TERM EXAMINATION.—The examiners appointed for the examination of persons applying to be admitted, attorneys, have fixed Tuesday, the 25th instant, at half-past nine in the forenoon, at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, in Chancery-lane, to take the examination. The articles of clerkship and assignment, if any, with answers to the questions as to due service, according to the regulations approved by the judges, must be left with the secretary, on or before Tuesday, the 18th inst. Where the articles have not expired, but will expire during the term, the candidate may be examined conditionally, but the articles must be left within the first seven days of term, and answers up to that time. If part of the term has been served with a barrister, special pleader, or London agent, answers to the questions must be obtained from them, as to the time served with each respectively. A paper of questions will be delivered to each candidate, containing questions to be answered in writing, classed under the several heads of—1. Preliminary. 2. Common and Statute Law, and Practice of the Courts. 3. Conveyancing. 4. Equity, and Practice of the Courts. 5. Bankruptcy, and Practice of the Courts. 6. Criminal Law, and Proceedings before Justices of the Peace. Each candidate is required to answer all the Preliminary Questions (No. 1); and it is expected that he should answer in three or more of the other heads of inquiry.—Common Law and Equity being two thereof.—Legal Observer.

EXTRAORDINARY SCENE IN A COURT OF JUSTICE.—One of the most extraordinary scenes ever witnessed in a court of justice took place at the Quarter Sessions of Galway, on Wednesday. In an action with regard to a right of property, a witness was subpœnaed to produce a lease. When he came on the table he refused to surrender the document, although he admitted it was in his possession, "without the consent of his partners" in it. The court threatened to send him to jail, but without effect; and, as he still persisted in refusing, his worship ordered him to be searched. Accordingly, four or five policemen seized him, and attempted to throw him down on the table. The witness, however, nothing daunted by so formidable an array, showed fight, kicking and tripping with all his might. In the melée the witnesses' chair was upset, and, there being now a clear stage, physical force gained the ascendant, and poor Paddy was stretched on his back, but not until he had succeeded in causing some consternation among the young gentlemen of the bar who sat round the table, and who, having a due regard for the preservation of their faces, quickly vacated their seats. Though down, the man did not yet surrender, and it was not without considerable difficulty that the police effected their purpose. As soon as the deed was taken from him, and he had recovered his legs, he laughed heartily, saying he "did not care about it, as they took it from him by force; but he would not give it up without the consent of his partners."

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Jan. 7.

BOWEN, JAMES HOLLIDAY, fishmonger, Yarmouth. Jan. 20, at eleven, and Feb. 24, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Evans. Off. as. Bell. Sol. Barrone, Old Jewry-chambers. Petition, Jan. 6.

BRADBURY, SAMUEL, cheesemonger, Holborn-hill. Jan. 14, and Feb. 18, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Goulbourn. Off. as. Nicholson. Sols. Pontefex and Megenie, St. Andrew's-court, Holborn. Petition, Dec. 29.

[illegible], JOHN, corn dealer, Elizabeth-street, Eaton-square. [illegible]. 18, at two, Feb. 15, at twelve, Basinghall-street. [illegible]. Holroyd. Off. as. Groom. Sols. Newbon and Evans, Wardrobe-place, Doctors' Commons. Petition, Jan. 4.

HEATLY, WILLIAM, draper, St. Blasey, Cornwall, Jan. 18, at eleven, Feb. 10, at one, Exeter. Com. Bere. Off. as. Hernaman. Sols. J. R. Elworthy, Plymouth; and J. Blogdon, Exeter. Petition, Dec. 27.

MILTON, GEORGE, builder, Elizabeth-terrace, Liverpool-road, Islington. Jan 13, and Feb. 18, at eleven, Basinghall-street. Com. Pepys. Off. as. Cannan. Sol. Mr. Rushbury, Surrey-street, Strand. Petition, Dec. 26.

[illegible], Leeds. Com. Alpass. Sols. Chadwick and [illegible], Lincoln. Petition, Jan. 2.

Gazette, Jan. 11.

ROBERTSON, WILLIAM HENRY, builder, Stroud-green, Hollowell, Jan. 20, at eleven, Feb. 24, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Pennell. Sol. Dodd, Basinghall-street. Petition, Jan. 8.

BOSSEY, EDWARD, miller, East Coker, Somersetshire, Jan. 19 and Feb. 18, at eleven, Exeter. Off. as. Hirtzel. Sols. Batten, Yeovil, and Stogdon, Exeter. Petition, Dec. 20.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Allen, T. warehouseman, first and final, on new proofs, 9½d. Groom, London.—Boyd, I. silk manufacturer, second, 2½d. Groom, London.—Burton, S. and J. chemists, first, 2s. 6d. Carrick, Hull.—Cross, R. watch maker, first, 8s. Cannan, London.—Godden, R. coach proprietor, fourth, 3d. Bird, Liverpool.—Hewitt, W. brewer, first, 4d. Carrick, Hull.—Hunter, J. merchant, third, 9½d. Groom, London.—Mallens, J. A. printseller, second and final, 3½d. Groom, London.—Moyle, T. draper, first, 5s. Fraser, Manchester.—Nicholson, R. first, 1s. 10d. Carrick, Hull.—Oliver, J. plumber, second, 1s. 7d.—Peego, W. builder, second, 2d.; and on new proofs, 2s. 6d. Edwards, London. Williams, W. G. draper, third and final, 2½d. Fraser, Manchester.

INSOLVENT ESTATE.

Bury, S. farmer, second and final, 2s. 5½d. Apply at the County Court, Altrincham.

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Jan 4

Arnold, C. grocer, High-street and Rosamond-buildings, Islington, Dec. 8. Trusts. T. Conway, wholesale grocer, Mincing-lane, and J. Todd, merchant's clerk, Rood-lane Sols. Hill and Matthews, St. Mary-axe.—Brissenden, T. grocer, Uxbridge. Dec. 6. Trusts. H. Harris, cheesefactor, Slough, and J. Bishop, wholesale grocer, Warner's-yard, Mincing-lane. Sols. Hill and Matthews, St. Mary-axe.

Cannon, G. carrier, Marlborough-street, Devonport, Dec. 21. Trust. W. W. Snell, merchant, Plymouth. Sol. J. E Elworthy, Plymouth.—Fuller, H. jeweller, Ludgate-hill, Dec. 23. Trusts. J. French, jun. wholesale jeweller, Clerkenwell. E. T. Mackrell, jeweller, Thavies-inn, and S. Chenill, Jeweller, Newcastle-place, Clerkenwell. Sol. T. M. Cattlin, Ely-place.—Pollock, W. tailor, North-place, Kingsland-road, Dec. 20. Trusts. T. Williams and C. Rimmer, drapers, Blackfriars-road. Sols. Sole, Turner, and Turner, Aldermanbury.—Yates, J. G. grocer, Angel-terrace, West Hammersmith, Dec. 1. Trust. H. Rawley, wholesale cheesemonger, New-street, Covent-garden. Sols. Wright and Bonner, London-street, Fenchurch-street.

Gazette, Jan. 7.

Howell, T. farmer, Mayfield, Sussex, Dec. 18. Trust. J. Barden, Burwash, farmer. Sols. Elliman, Whitmarsh, and Ballingham, Battle.—Paice, R. C. clothier, Windsor, Berks, Dec. 27. Trust. R. Parnell, clothier, Bishopsgate-street Sol. G. J. Huson, Ironmonger lane, Cheapside.—Potter, R. C. innkeeper and farmer, Bacton, Suffolk, Dec. 29. Trust. S. Freeman, gent., and R. Smith, innkeeper, Stowmarket. Sol. J. Gudgeon, Stowmarket.—Steel, R. draper, Blyth, Northumberland, and Bedlington, Dec. 24. Trust. J. Coxon, draper, and J. Todd, hatter, Newcastle. Sols. R. Wheldon, North Shields, and W. Crighton, Newcastle.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Jan. 4.

Adam, N. and Chatfield, G. surgeons and apothecaries, Lymington, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Adams.—Arkell, J. and C. wholesale grocers, tea dealers, and cheesemongers, Maldstone, Jan. 1.—Ashby J. and Banks, J. ironmongers, seedsmen, hop merchants, and oil and colourmen, Northampton, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Banks.—Baker, W. and H. clock and clock case manufacturers, Birmingham, Dec. 31.—Barker, R., M., W. and R. and Owen, W. builders, farmers, and copperas manufacturers, West Derby, as regards M. W. and R. Barker, and W. Owen, Jan. 1. Debts paid by R. Barker.—Bateman, R. and Von Daadelsen, G. J., metal and oil brokers, Leadenhall-street, Dec. 31.—Bateson, G. and Hurn, R. ginger beer manufacturers and pork butchers, Newport, Dec. 21. Debts paid by Hurn.—Boyd, R. G. K., and J. millwrights, engineers, iron and brass founders, Kingston-upon-Hull, Dec. 21. Debts paid by Messrs Oates, Son, and Capes, of Hull, auctioneers.—Brown, J. and C. Redpath, J. ironmongers, ship smiths, and fire hearth makers, Dean's buildings, Commercial-road, Poplar, Dec. 31.—Burch, W. and J. farmers and hop planters, Boughton-under-Blean, Oct. 11.—Capper, J. and G. C. merchants and agents, Little Tower-street, Jan. 1. Debts paid by J. Capper.—Carpenter, M. and R. carpenters and undertakers, Mortlake, Dec. 29.—Cartwright, T. and J. linen drapers and hosiers, Chester, Dec. 13. Debts paid by T. Cartwright.—Clayton, J. and Gladstone, M. commission agents, Manchester, Dec 31. Debts paid by Clayton.—Crawford, R. and G., woollen drapers and tailors, Leicester, Dec. 31.—Crowther, J. of Masbrough, and Wiffall, J. of West Melton, par. Wath-upon-Dearne, grocers and general shopkeepers, at West Melton, Dec. 29.—Criswick, J. and Lepard, J. composition ornament manufacturers and frame makers, New Compton-street, St Giles-in-the-fields, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Criswick.—Downing, G. and J. H. floor cloth manufacturers, Knightsbridge, and King's-road, Chelsea, Dec. 31.—Duncan, W. H. E. and Peirce, J. S., firewood manufacturers, South Wharf Road, Paddington, Dec. 31.—Gonne C. and Gribble, T. merchants, St. Helen's-place, Bishopsgate-street, Dec. 31.—Goodman, W. and Yoke, G. linen drapers, silk mercers, &c. Uxbridge, Dec. 31.—Hatfield, G. S., and G. jun., conveyancers, attorneys, and solicitors, Manchester, as regards G. Hadfield, Dec. 31.—Hillhouse, W. and Andrews, J. tailor, Woodstock-street, Bond-street, Dec. 31.—Holliday, W. Lewis, J. and Powell, G. drapers, silk mercers, upholsterers, and carpet dealers, Birmingham, as regards Powell, Sept. 4. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Hurren, R., C. and J. wholesale clothiers, Wormwood-street, as regards C. Hurren, Jan. 3.—Johnson, R. and Pask, H. builders, Baker-street, Lloyd-square, and of Bell-yard, Grapechurch-street, Dec. 31.—Jones, W., Blaxland G. and Jones, W. H. G. attorneys and solicitors, Crosby-square, Dec. 31. Debts paid by W. Jones and Blaxland.—Kirkby, S. and J. merchants, Sheffield, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Kirkby.—Kirke, S. W. and Simpson,

Gazette, Jan. 7.

Inaster, C., Goone, G. and James, R. dyers, Sneaton, as regards James, Jan. 1.—Brown, W., Ridley, G. and H. timber, deal and slate merchants, Ipswich and Bury St. Edmunds, Dec. 31.—Buchan, R. sen., Welch, J., Buchan, R. jun. and Welch, A. calico printers, Manchester, Oct 30. Debts paid by R. Buchan, sen. and R. Buchan, Jun.—Burnett, R. L. and Critchell, S. wine and spirit merchants, Teignmouth, Dec. 31. Debts paid by R. L. Burnett.—Corkburn, J. A. and Fordyce, T. paper manufacturers, Haughton Paper Mill, near Hexham, Dec. 2.—Curtler, J. and Holyoake, J. attorneys and solicitors, Droitwich, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Holyoake.—Davey, P. and Pegg, W. coal merchants, Upper Ground-street, Blackfriars, and elsewhere, Dec. 31 Debts paid by Davey.—Davey, P., Pegg, W., Watson, W., Pegg, S. and Fewron, A. F. workers of collieries and coal merchants, Llansamlet, near Swansea, and elsewhere, as regards Peter Davey and Samuel Pegg, Dec 31. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Dawson, T and Postlethwaite, J. common brewers, Wigan, Jan. 4 Hughton, A., Hyde, J. B. and Gosling, F. N. newspaper proprietors and printers, Worcester, Dec. 3.—Eglinton, R. and Deurie, C. East India agents and merchants, London, Sept. 15.—Eglinton, R., Deane, C., Hunter, R. H., McEwen, H. and Eglinton, R. L. Calcutta, as regards R. Eglinton and R. H. Hunter, Dec. 31, 1851.—Ernest, H. and Cromwell, C. auctioneers and accountants, Cheapside, London, and Brecon, Jan. 5. Debts paid by Ernest.—Falcke, D and I. importers of and dealers in curiosities, New Bond-street, Jan. 6.—Fulton, J. A. and Green, C. spice dealers, South Lambeth. Aug. 14. Debts paid by Fulton.—Gibb, G. H. and Hill, T. G. Manchester, Dec. 31. Debts paid by G. H. Gibb.—Hardside, T. and Tyser, G. D. merchants and brokers, Cornhill, Jan. 4. Debts paid by Hardside.—Hughes, S. and E. and Patton, J. dealer in china, earthenware, and glass, Montreal and Toronto, North America, Jan. 1.—Hughes, S. and E. manufacturers of earthenware, Cobridge, Jan. 1.—Hulme, G. and T. machine makers, Rochdale, Dec. 31.—James, W. and Morrow, R. merchants and shipowners, Liverpool, Dec. 31.—Jones, G. and J. grocers, Wolverhampton, Dec. 28.—Debts paid by J. Jones.—Moore, E. and Adkins, H. surgeons, and apothecaries, Hales Owen and Cradley, Dec. 31.—Newell, B. F. and Johnson, B. linendrapers and silk mercers, Bradford, Jan. 3.—Nutt, J. W. and S. E. share-brokers, York, Dec. 8.—Ogilvie, L. and Macfee, A. house and ship joiners, Liverpool, Jan. 4.—Payne, E. and E. W. coach and livery lace and fringe manufacturers, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Dec. 31.—Pears, W. and Poney, J. japanners and blank tray manufacturers, Birmingham, Jan. 4. Debts paid by Pears.—Rennison, R. and White, G. linen and woollen drapers, Scarborough, Jan. 5. Debts paid by Rennison.—Robinson, G. and Walton, J. mercers and drapers, Darlington, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Walton.—Rodgett, M. and E. cotton manufacturers, Preston, Jan. 5.—Salt, J., Crookes, J., Bateman, J., and Schofield, H. coal masters, Oxclose, Dronfield, Jan. 4. Debts paid by Bateman, Knight, and Co.—Shoiwell, J. and Gamble, W. H. carpenters and undertakers, Stratford, Jan. 3. Debts paid by Showell.—Simons, S. and Robinson, J. tailors and drapers, Store-street, Bedford-square, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Robinson.—Smith, R., Postlethwaite, J. and Tipton, R. T. commission merchants, Liverpool and New Orleans, Oct. 5.—Stewart, M. A., Jones, E. and J. Princes-street, Cavendish-square, Jan. 3. Debts by E. & J. Jones.—Strear, T. and E. Jeffryes, surgeons and apothecaries, Wisbeach, Jan. 3.—Tibbener, W. and Smith, F. brass founders and general manufacturers, Birmingham, Jan. 1.—Taylor, J. and D. H. woollen merchants, Liverpool, Jan. 4.—Thompson, J. and Clegg, J. attorneys and solicitors, Bradford, Dec. 31.—White, John and O'Donnell, W. woollen cloth merchants, Leeds, Jan. 4.—Wilson, E. and Stubbs, E. W. manufacturing chemists, Prestolee, near Bolton, and Manchester, Dec. 31.—Wormall, H. and R. grocers and tea-dealers, Huddersfield, Dec 31, 1845.—Yates, E. and Burgess, R. wholesale druggists, Budge-row, Dec. 31.

Bankrupts.

From the Gazette of Friday, Jan. 14.

CORRINGTON, GEORGE BENJAMIN, merchant, Great Yarmouth. LOCKYER, JOHN, warehouseman, Clerkenwell-green.

HARDIE, BENJAMIN JAMES and THOMAS (Hardwood), builders, Newport, Monmouth.

PEARS, JOHN, confectioner, Plymouth.

On Monday.

THE NEW RULES of PRACTICE of the COURTS of COMMON LAW, with explanatory Notes, Index, and Marginal References to the Pages in the 1st and 2nd Edition of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT. By R. M. KERR. Price 3s.

N.B.—This is adapted for a Supplement to Kerr's Procedure Act, or as a separate Work.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, on Tuesday, will contain ALL THE NEW ORDERS, the Decisions of last Term, and the Forms. Price 12s. cloth; 13s. 6d. half-calf; 14s. calf.

Now ready at the LAW TIMES Office,

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanac, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax, and the other Information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 1s.; or stamped for post, 1s6d. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS and the BANKRUPTCY ACT, with all the Cases decided on its construction, and a very Copious Index. By C. J. B. HILBRLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Author of the "Law of Master and Servant," &c. Price 7s. 6d. cloth; 6s. half-calf; 10s. calf.

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI containing a collection of Forms of Indictment for use at Quarter Sessions, according to the New Acts. Price 6s. 6d.

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE; the Orders being placed in the Text after the Sections of the Statute to which they relate, thus showing the whole Law together. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Author of "Leading Cases in Equity," &c. Price 8s. 6d. cloth; 9s. 6d. half-calf; 10s calf.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanacs of the Moon's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 6d

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES for 1849, with Notes of all the Cases that have been decided on their construction thus giving to the Practitioner the whole Law, viz the text of it, and the judicial interpretation of the text. In a small volume for the bag or pocket. Price 10s 6d. cloth. In continuation of the series already published from 1850. By C. J. B. HILBRLET, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"W. J. L." (Winchester), "A CLERK." "AN ASSISTANT CLERK," and several others on the same subject, will see that their communications have been anticipated: but we thank them for their endeavours to set our correspondent right.

"O. P. Q." —I barrister is so entitled, but not an attorney.

"FIAT JUSTITIA" is too long for insertion; and the same cause keeps by the omission of the letter of "AN ATTORNEY" (Bristol). The first condition of correspondence is brevity.

"W. S." (Reading) Thanks for the report of the County Courts case, but it is too long for our columns at this season, and we have therefore handed it to the Editor of the County Courts Chronicle, who will make good use of it.

Several queries and other anonymous communications have been put on the fire because not authenticated by the names and address of the writers. Our numerous subscribers must understand that no notice is taken of any anonymous communication.

"AN ARTICLED CLERK." We are quite ready to procure the information he asks for; but it is difficult to obtain.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE NEW RULES AND ORDERS.

THE plan that has been adopted with respect to the New Rules just issued is this:

MR. KERR has edited them, with practical explanatory Notes and a copious Index, and Marginal References to the pages of both the first and second editions of his Procedure Act to which each rule relates. Thus the possessor of either edition, by using this Appendix, will have the whole of the New Procedure, as now regulated by the New Rules, conveniently arranged for practical use. The price of Mr. KERR's edition of the New Rules, thus noted and indexed, is 3s.

This edition of the Rules will form a part of all the remaining copies of the Second Edition of Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act, which will thus give the entire law as it now is, and for a long time is likely to continue.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 22, 1853.

THE NEW SCALE OF COSTS IN THE COUNTY COURTS.

THE Committee of the Judges of the County Courts have framed a scale of costs to be allowed to Attorneys in the County Courts, under the section of the County Courts Improvement Act of which it was our good fortune to procure the introduction; and that scale has been submitted, as by the statute was required, for the approval of the Judges of the Superior Courts.

It is with deep regret we have to announce that some of these latter object to it as being too liberal in its allowances, and that it will not be sanctioned in its present shape.

We have not seen the proposed Scale of Costs; but we understand that it was constructed with express reference to the costs allowed in the Superior Courts, and studiously kept below them, in fair proportion, very much as in the Superior Courts themselves a difference is observed with causes triable before the Sheriff. But this does not satisfy the Judges, who appear as if desirous of treating the County Courts as simply small debt courts, and not as that which in truth they now are—local tribunals for the general administration of justice.

The same fallacy lurks in the minds of not a few of our Legislators, Lawyers, and writers for the newspapers, who, remembering the old County Courts and Courts of Request, which the new County Courts have superseded, continue to attach to the latter, not the name only, but also the functions, of the former, and therefore contemplate them, esteem them, treat them, and treat of them as nothing more than what are should now term reformed County Courts, having a jurisdiction slightly extended in amount and a procedure considerably improved in its machinery. They think of the business of the new County Courts, and speak of it, as being the recovery of small debts, and they object to attaching to this process anything beyond the most trifling costs in any shape, and they demur especially to the fees of a skilled Lawyer being chargeable upon suitors for doing that which, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, does not require the interposition of a Lawyer's skill.

Such, we have no doubt, is the feeling that has moved the Judges to reject the proposed scale of costs constructed by the Committee, and it is in itself a commendable one. But in this instance it is out of place: it is founded upon a misconception of the facts and erroneous impressions as to the nature of the claim that has been submitted to them.

Will they permit us respectfully to indicate to them what are the precise grounds upon which the Profession now asks them to sanction the scale of fees which the County Court Judges have framed, with the fullest knowledge of the facts and requirements, and after the maturest deliberation, for the purpose of accomplishing the design of the Legislature, which certainly was that Professional services, when properly required, should be properly and fairly, but moderately, recompensed?

The County Courts, although preserving the old name, are, to all intents and purposes, entirely new tribunals. They were at first designed almost exclusively for the recovery of small debts, and the settlement of such very petty disputes as might be better disposed of summarily. But, by degrees, as the uses of such tribunals were proved by experience, the Legislature has continued to extend their jurisdiction, so that, in addition to the subject-matters for which, previously to their existence, no justice was to be had, because they were too small for the regards of the Superior Courts, a considerable portion of the business that previously came into the Superior Courts has been transferred to the County Courts.

Thus the County Court business now consists of two classes:—1st. The old small debt jurisdiction, ranging over all matters too trifling in amount for the Superior Courts. 2nd. The new jurisdiction over a vast range of business that might be unlimited in amount of claim, and is almost unlimited in point of difficulty and importance, and in which they are designed to be substitutes for the Superior Courts.

Now in the first class of business, the old small debt jurisdiction, the Profession do not ask for any departure from the old allowance. Undoubtedly it will not bear professional fees; except in rare cases it does not require professional aid; and the power which the Act vests in the County Court Judge to give or refuse costs will always be a security against the needless employment of professional aid in very trifling cases, unless at the employer's own expense.

But we entreat the Judges of the Superior Courts to draw the distinction here, and to take the claim of the Profession to a fair remuneration for their services in the County Courts at the point at which those services become necessary to the due administration of justice, and that is, in relation to the conduct of the second class of County Court business, namely, the trial of disputed demands, and which now are not limited to debts, but range over almost the entire domain of the law. Here it is that the Profession are wanted; here it is that they ask to be reasonably paid; here it is that the Legislature has enacted that they shall be paid; and here it is that, in pursuance of this enactment, the County Court Judges have framed the scale of fees for them which is now before the Judges of the Superior Courts, and to which some of them are objecting.

We entreat their Lordships, in settling these allowances, not to permit any fear of the unnecessary employment of professional services to induce them to withhold or reduce the costs to be allowed where such services are necessary: for the effective prevention of this is found in the power vested in the Judge, to give or refuse costs in his discretion; and surely the County Court Judges may be trusted to use that discretion, so that defendants shall not be harassed by professional costs, except in cases where they are properly required, and where they ought fairly to fall upon the losing party.

But it is not the Profession only who have an interest in this matter. The suitors have yet a larger interest in it, for it is upon them, and not upon their attorneys, that the loss will ultimately fall. The injustice of the present state of things, and which the statute was mainly designed to remedy, is this:—

In a disputed demand, where evidence is to be collected and difficult questions of law and fact are likely to arise, the suitor is compelled to have professional aid; he could not get up nor conduct his own case. But according to the present practice of the County Court, whatever the labour requisite for this purpose, the plaintiff can only recover in costs from the other party a trifling sum in payment of the services of his attorney, and consequently he is obliged to pay all the costs beyond that trifle out of his own pocket. The attorney does not lose his fees, only he obtains them at the expense of the wrong party. Contrary to all the principles of justice and to the practice of all other courts in the civilised world, the costs in the County Courts are not paid by the loser, but by the winner; and a man has only to defend an action there to punish his adversary most effectually by imposing upon him the professional expenses of proving his claim. This is the injustice which it was the design of the Legislature to remedy; this it is which the County Court Judges, guided by practical experience, consider they can best remedy by such a scale of fees, to be allowed between party and party, as they have framed, and which, for the sake of the suitors, the Judges of the Superior Courts should allow without any reduction—for, if reduced, the effect will only be to continue partially the existing injustice, and still to throw the burden of costs upon the party whom the other party has wrongfully put to cost.

For these reasons we entreat the Judges of the Superior Courts to reconsider the question, which perhaps may not have presented itself to them from the point of view in which we have now sought respectfully to present it to them; and then, we think, they will be inclined to accede to the proposition, which has emanated from the practical experience of the Committee of County Court Judges, who must be peculiarly qualified to advise upon the requirements of their own courts.

CRIMINAL APPEAL

THE sentence on KIRWAN has been commuted to transportation for life.

This cannot be justice. He is either guilty or innocent; or, we should rather say, there is or there is not sufficient proof of guilt. If there is, he ought to be hung; if there is not, he ought to be acquitted.

No intermediate course can be right; yet is this the only expedient that offers itself to avoid the consequences of possible frailty of human evidence and human judgment!

Why should it be so? There is no necessity for any such absurd violation of common sense. The law is not so intractable that it cannot be reconciled with reason. In truth, reason would say that there must be something wrong in a law that works so clumsily and so ill.

And so there is! The law is manifestly faulty in this—that it makes no provision for revising its own errors. It denies a second trial in criminal cases, whatever the mistakes committed in the first trial. It assumes what is notoriously not the fact, that witnesses always speak the truth, and that juries cannot err in their judgments; and it makes their verdict irreversible when once pronounced. But it is not consistent even with itself, for it assumes this absence of error in the court and witnesses as being the peculiar privilege of a criminal court. In all other courts it allows an appeal.

Yet we have heard juries, even in criminal courts, give some strange verdicts; we have seen many men convicted who were undoubtedly innocent, and afterwards proved to be so; we have seen many more convicted who may or may not have been guilty in fact, but who were not proved to be guilty to the satisfaction of a single person in court besides a jury weary, sleepy, hungry, and perhaps locked up to be tortured into giving a verdict against their consciences.

Surely it is time that an end should be put to this great defect in our law, by the simple and effective expedient of permitting a new trial in Criminal Cases!

SHAM LAWYERS.

How the practice is spreading downwards will be seen by the following literatim copy of a letter addressed to a tradesman in Wickham Market:—

Sir

I Am Directed by Mr. Samuel Webber, Wickham Market Bricklayer to Apply to you for Possession and Goods contained by you Onlawfull and allso Payment for Damages Done by you on the Primeses Occpyed by the Said Samuel Webber

And I allso beg to inform you that onless a immediate Possession and Proaptey bee Deleived up to Said Samuel Webber lawfull Precedaneaics will taken against you with out further notice.

Ipswich
Mr. Daul Haward ___ Janary 11th 1853.

Here is a still more audacious circular—

22, Tib Lane, Cross Street,
Manchester, Jan. 4, 1853.

Sir,

In soliciting your patronage and offering my services as agent for the Collecting of Rents, &c. permit me to justify my so doing by the advantage to owners of house property to entrust its management to a competent Agent at the expense of a small Commission, amply compensated by the time and trouble which is saved by this mode of collection.

From my long experience in the management of Cottage and other Property, the sale of Land and Buildings, &c., I am enabled to undertake this kind of Agency at a low rate of Commission, and with strict regard to the interests of the owners.

This being only one branch of my business, it may perhaps be necessary for me to state, that from my extensive practice as County Court Agent, &c., I have greater facilities of ascertaining the eligibility of parties proposing to become tenants. My knowledge of the working of the County Court also enables me the better to enforce payment of rent, and to get rid of an objectionable tenant, and this I undertake without further charge of Commission.

I shall be glad to refer you to those with whom I have already done business, who will bear testimony to my ability and integrity, and my promptitude in paying over all moneys coming to my hands for them. The most ample references can be given.

Land and Buildings sold on Commission. Persons desirous of disposing of property, on forwarding the particulars may immediately have it offered to the best advantage.

Several sums of Money to Lend on good mortgage security.

I am, Sir,
Yours very obediently,
CHARLES E. STUBBS,
Estate and County Court Agent.

A STRANGE ADVERTISEMENT.

The following appears in the Builder's Price Book. Can it be genuine?

LAW COSTS IN CONVEYANCING.

Mr. William Tayler, Solicitor, 5, Furnival's Inn, Holborn, and Truro Lodge, Counter Hill, Deptford, in order to meet the wishes of a large circle of clients, has after great deliberation framed a fixed system of Fees for the preparation of conveyances, mortgages, leases, bonds, marriage settlements, contracts, wills, assignments, deeds of copartnership, &c. which being on a greatly reduced scale will be found highly advantageous to all persons adopting it (especially to members of Freehold Land and Building Societies) by commanding Mr. Tayler's services in such business.

A copy will be forwarded, as may be directed on receipt of two postage-stamps. It may be advisable to state that those clients who honour Mr. Tayler by retaining his services, and who may nevertheless prefer to have their business transacted according to the usual system of costs, will be at full liberty so to do, and in that case will be furnished with regular bills of costs.

N.B.—Offices for the sale, purchase, and mortgage of landed estates, house property, &c. and for effecting Life Assurance Policies in the "Age" or any of the offices.

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY. (a)

OF PLEAS.

As we have before mentioned, where any objection to a bill is apparent on the face of it, either from matter contained in it, or from defect in its frame or fit the case made by it, a demurrer is the proper mode of defence.

A bill, however, may be often so drawn that, although it would be clearly open to a demurrer were all the facts fairly and openly stated, or nothing stated which was not actually true, yet it does not on the face of it, show any objection which may be taken advantage of by demurrer. In such a case the defendant, if he wishes to avoid giving an answer, must defend himself by plea, in which he may state the matter which, had it appeared on the face of the bill, would have rendered it liable to a demurrer, showing or relying upon one or more things as a cause why the suit should not be either dismissed, delayed, or barred.

OF THE DIFFERENT KINDS OF PLEAS.

The principal objections which can be taken to a bill by plea are enumerated by Lord Redesdale in his well-known Treatise. The principal are: I. That the subject of the suit is not within the jurisdiction of a Court of Equity. II. That some other Court of Equity has the proper jurisdiction III. That the plaintiff is not entitled to sue, by reason of some personal disability. IV. That the plaintiff is not the person he pretends to be, or does not sustain the character he assumes. V. That the plaintiff has no interest in the subject, or no right to institute a suit concerning it. VI. That he has no right to call on the defendant concerning it. VII. That the defendant is not the person he is alleged to be, or does not sustain the character he is alleged to bear. VIII. That the defendant has not that interest in the subject which can make him liable to the demands of the plaintiff; and IX. That, for some reason, founded on the substance of the case, the plaintiff is not entitled to the relief he prays. (Of these, the second is the plea generally termed a plea to the jurisdiction of the Court; and the third, the fourth, and the seventh are treated as pleas to the person of the plaintiff and defendant; the others are considered as pleas in bar of the suit.) X. The deficiency of a bill to answer the purposes of complete justice may also be shown by plea, which may be considered as in bar of the suit, though perhaps a temporary bar only. XI. The impropriety of unnecessarily multiplying suits may be the subject of a plea, which is also in bar of the suit; but the inconvenience which may arise from confounding distinct matters in the same bill, as it must be apparent on the bill itself, unless very artfully framed, can in general only be alleged by demurrer: (Mitf. Pl. 221.)

As to pleas to the jurisdiction of the Court, they are not of very frequent occurrence. They generally arise where the suit is for land within a county palatine (Edgworth v. Davies, 1 Ch. Ca. 40; Gerrard v. Stanley, 1 Ch. Rep. 278); or where the defendant claims the privileges of a university (Draper v. Crowther, 2 Vent. 362; Stephens v. Berry, 1 Vern. 212); or where a visitor of a college has power to determine the controversies, on account of which the application is made to the Court: (Attorney-General v. Talbot, 3 Atk. 662; 1 Ves. 78.) Pleas of this nature must however allege, not only that the Court has no jurisdiction, but how it has been deprived of it, and what Court has, jurisdiction (3 Bro. C. C. 301; 1 Ves. jun. 388; Strode v. Little, 1 Vern. 59; Earl of Derby v. Duke of Athol, 1 Ves. 202; S. C. Dick. 129); and that it is able to give a complete remedy: (Wilkins v. Chalcroft, 22 Vin. Abr. 10; Green v. Rutherforth, 1 Ves. 463.)

With respect to pleas to the person of the plaintiff, it may be shown that he is disabled to sue, as being—1, an outlaw; 2, an alien; 3, an infant; 4, an alien enemy; 5, a married woman; 6, an idiot or lunatic; 7, a bankrupt or insolvent; 8, that the plaintiff does not sustain the character he assumes. For instance, where a person sues as administrator, a plea that he is not administrator will be good (Winn v. Fletcher, 1 Ver. 473; Simons v. Millman, 2 Sim. 241); so a plea that a plaintiff is not a partner or a creditor will be good where a person has taken proceedings in equity as filling either of those characters: (Drew v. Drew, 2 V. & B. 159; Sanders v. King, 6 Madd. 61.) It was indeed at one time doubted whether a plea of this kind, as it is sometimes called a negative plea, would be valid; but the doubt has been long since considered as of no weight. The consequence of not allowing such a plea would be, that a person falsely alleging a title in himself might compel a discovery, "and thus," to use the words of Lord Redesdale, "the title to every estate, the transactions of every commercial house, and even the private transactions of every family might be exposed; and this might be done in the name of a pauper, at the instigation of others, and for the worst purposes:" (Mitf. 231.) A plea may be put in to the person of the defendant; as a bankrupt or insolvent debtor may plead his bankruptcy or insolvency, which, in effect, shows that his property has become vested in another: (Turner v. Robinson, 1 S. & S. 3.) So a person sued as a feme sole may plead that she is covert. (Beames on Pleas, 130.) Other instances might be mentioned. A plea that a defendant has no interest ought not to be put in when a defendant can by general disclaimer satisfy the suit: (Turner v. Robinson, 1 S. & S. 3.)

With regard to pleas in bar of the suit, they are generally stated to be of three kinds: 1, Pleas of matter recorded, or as of record, in the Court itself, or some other Court of Equity. 2, Pleas of matters of record in some Court not a Court of Equity; and 3, Pleas of matters in pais.

1. Pleas of matters recorded or as of record in the Court itself, or some other Court of Equity, may be where there has been a decree or order of the Court by which the rights of the parties have been determined, or another bill for the same cause dismissed (3 Atk. 626; Pritman v. Pritman, 1 Vern. 310; 1 Atk. 571); but the decree must be in its nature final, or afterwards made so by order, or it will not be a bar. For instance, a decree for an account of principal and interest due on a mortgage, and for foreclosure in case of nonpayment, cannot be pleaded to a bill to redeem unless there is a final order for foreclosure: (Senhouse v. Earl, 2 Ves. 450; Hulsey v. Smyth, Mos. 186; Venemore v. Venemore, Dick. 93.) Upon such a plea, so much of the former bill and answer must be set forth as is necessary to show that the same point was then in issue: (Child v. Gibson, 2 Atk. 603.) So a decree or order dismissing a former bill for the same matter may be pleaded in bar to a new bill (Earl of Peterborough v. Germaine, 6 Bro. P. C. 1 Toml. Ed.) except where it is dismissed without prejudice (Seymour v. Nosworthy, 1 Ch. Ca. 155), or merely for want of prosecution: (Brandlyn v. Ord, 1 Atk. 571; 14 Ves. 232.)

2. The plea of another suit depending in the same or another Court of Equity for the same cause is a good plea, except, perhaps, in the case of a suit depending in an inferior Court of Equity, the effect of which the defendant has avoided by going out of the jurisdiction of the Court: (Mitf. Pl. 246.)

3. Pleas in bar of matters of record, or of matters in the nature of matters of record, in some Court not being a Court of Equity, may be put in as a fine or a recovery, or, since they are abolished by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, a deed and enrolment under that Act may be shown to the Court by plea. So the judgment of a Court of ordinary jurisdiction (Mitf. 255), as the Lord Mayor's Court (Behrens v. Pauli, 1 Keen, 456), Court of Admiralty (Parkinson v. Lucas, Mitf. 257), of an Ecclesiastical Court (Penvill v. Luscombe, 2 J. & W. 201), or even of a foreign Court (Gage v. Bulkeley, 3 Atk. 215; White v. Hall, 12 Ves. 321,) may be pleaded in bar to a suit in equity. But it must be borne in mind that the plea must show that the subject-matter of the suit is the same, and that the suit is for the same purpose (Behrens v. Sieveking, 2 My. & Cr. 602); and the Court must have been one with full jurisdiction to determine the rights of the parties (Gage v. Bulkeley, 3 Atk. 215); and the judgment must have been final, and not merely interlocutory: (Samuda v. Furtado, 3 Bro. C. C. 70, 71.)

Pleas in bar of matters in pais are principally:—1. A plea of a stated account. 2. Of an award. 3. Of release. 4. Of a will or conveyance, or some instrument controlling or affecting the rights of the parties. 5. Of a statute in bar of the plaintiff's demand.

1. A plea of a stated account is a good bar to a bill for an account: (Dawson v. Dawson, 1 Atk. 1.) It must show that the account was final (Dawson v. Dawson, 1 Atk. 1), and that it was in writing; and what the balance was (Sewell v. Bridge, 1 Ves. 297); and whether error or fraud be charged or not, the defendant pleading a settled account must aver that it is just and true to the best of his knowledge and belief: (Anon. 3 Atk. 70.)

2. An award may be pleaded to a bill to set aside the award and open the account (Kingood v. Croucher, 2 Atk. 395; Burton v. Ellington, 3 Bro. C. C. 196); or to disturb the matter submitted to arbitration: (Tittenson v. Peat, 3 Atk. 529.) But if fraud or partiality are charged against the arbitrators, those charges must not only be denied by way of averment in the plea, but the plea must be supported by an answer showing the arbitrators to have been incorrupt and impartial; and any other matter stated in the bill as a ground for impeaching the award must be denied in the same manner (Mitf. Pl. 260, 261); but as a mere covenant or agreement to submit disputes to arbitration will not be enforced in a Court of Equity, such covenant or agreement cannot be pleaded: (Street v. Rigby, 6 Ves. 815.)

(a) Continued from p. 160.

3. If the plaintiff or person under whom he claims has released the subject of his demand, the defendant may plead the release in bar of the bill, and this will apply to a bill praying that the release may be set aside: (Mitf. 261.) In a plea of a release the defendant must set out the consideration upon which the release was made; the plea, therefore cannot extend to a discovery of the consideration; and if this be impeached by the bill, the plea must be assisted by averments covering the grounds on which the consideration is so impeached: (Mitf. 262.) A release pleaded to a bill for an account must be under seal, though it need not be signed: (Taunton v. Pepler, 6 Madd. 166.) A release not under seal must be pleaded as a stated account only: (Mitf. Pl. 263.)

4. On a bill filed by the heir-at-law on some equitable grounds, against a devisee, the latter may plead the will, and that it was duly executed: (Anstis v. Downing, 2 Ves. 361; and Meadows v. Duchess of Kingston, Ambl. 756; 3 Mer. 171.)

5. A defendant may plead a statute in bar of the suit; as, for instance, the Statute of Frauds and Perjuries (29 Car. 2, c. 3), the Statute of Limitations; but fraud, if charged by the bill in such cases, must be denied: (Mitf. Pl. 269.)

X. In certain cases, although the plaintiff's title may be good, the court will nevertheless stand neutral when the defendant has an equal claim to its protection. Thus, where the defendant is a purchaser or mortgagee for valuable consideration without notice of the plaintiff's title, he may set up that defence in bar of the suit by plea. The plea must aver the seizin and possession of the person who conveyed or mortgaged the premises at the time of the execution of the deed, and the consideration and payment of it: (Mitf. Pl. 275.) The plea must also deny notice of the plaintiff's title or claim previous thereto (More v. Mayhow, 1 Ch. Ca. 34); and fraud as particularly as it is charged in the bill: (Radford v. Wilson, 3 Atk. 815.) And they must also be denied in the answer, in order that the fact of notice or fraud may be put in issue by the plea (Harris v. Ingledew, 3 P. Wms. 94); and also in order that the plaintiff may be enabled to except to the answer for insufficiency: (Price v. Price, 1 Vern. 185; sed vide Pennington v. Beechey, 2 Sim. & Stu. 282.)

XI. The defendant may by plea object to the bill if it be deficient to answer the purposes of complete justice; for instance, a want of proper parties not apparent on the face of the bill, may be shown to the court by a plea for want of parties, going both to discovery and relief when relief is prayed: (Ashurst v. Eyre, 2 Atk. 51; S. C. 3 Atk. 341; Plunket v. Person, 2 Atk. 51.) The allowance of a plea of this kind does not determine the suit, as liberty to amend will be given by the court.

With regard to the objections to discovery only, which may be taken by plea, they are nearly the same as those which, in a former number, have been mentioned as causes of demurrer to discovery, viz.: 1. That the plaintiff's case is not such as entitles a Court of Equity to assume jurisdiction to compel discovery in his favour. 2. That the plaintiff has no interest in the subject, or no interest which entitles him to call on the defendant for a discovery. 3. That the defendant has no interest in the subject to entitle the plaintiff to institute a suit against him even for the purpose of discovery only. 4. That the situation of the defendant renders it improper for a Court of Equity to compel a discovery.

OF THE FORM OF A PLEA.

The following may be given as an example of a form of a plea: it commences:

This defendant by protestation not confessing or acknowledging all or any of the matters and things in the said complainant's bill of complaint mentioned and contained to be true, in such sort, manner, and form as the same are therein set forth and alleged; in plea to the whole of the said bill saith, &c.; [If a plea to a part of the bill, to so much or such part of the bill as prays, &c., or seeks a discovery, and whether, &c.; and concludes] therefore the said defendant doth plead the said —— (in bar) to the said complainant's bill; and prays the judgment of this honourable Court whether he shall be compelled to make any further answer to the said bill; and prays to be hence dismissed with his reasonable costs in this behalf most wrongfully sustained.

AN ACTION AT LAW UNDER THE NEW PRACTICE. (a)

ARTICLE VII.

It was said in the last article that there were three subjects which might be conveniently referred to before coming to the pleadings themselves: the new procedure for deciding questions of law and fact without formal pleadings was mentioned, and the new provisions for amending before trial misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties were stated. Reference has now to be made to the joinder of causes of action; but previous to this the practice prescribed by one of the new Rules of Court in certain cases of nonjoinder of plaintiffs may be mentioned. It may be considered as an addition to the paragraph at p. 149 ante, beginning "The defendant," and ending "(sect. 36)."

If after such notice by the defendant, or plea in abatement, the plaintiff intend to amend the writ, he must file a consent in writing of the party or parties whose names are to be added, together with an affidavit of the handwriting, and give notice thereof to the defendant unless the filing of such consent be dispensed with by order of the Court or a Judge: (R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 6.)

JOINDER OF CAUSES OF ACTION.

There are also two new provisions as to joining causes of action; and though these might perhaps have been mentioned in the first article of this series, and before the issuing of the writ, still, considering their connection with and effect on the pleadings, they are not inappropriate here.

Actions used to be arranged in certain classes called "Forms of Action," named from some actual fact or leading fiction existing in the cases included in each form. The forms of personal actions were Covenant, Debt, Assumpsit, Account, Annuity, and Scire Facias (included under the general name of "Actions on Contract"); and Trespass, Case, Trover, Detinue, and Replevin (included by the name "Actions on Tort.") It is not necessary to explain the application of these different forms of action, but the rule previous to the recent statute was that, although no two forms of action could be joined in one suit (with the exception of debt and detinue), causes of action coming within the same form might be joined. To quote the illustrations of the Common Law Commissioners in their Report (p. 32), the plaintiff might join in one action a claim on a promissory note, on a breach of promise of marriage, and a complaint of negligence against an attorney; in a second he might join a claim for criminal conversation with trespass to his person, his land, or his goods; in a third he might sue for the seduction of his daughter, infringing his patent, for negligently driving over him, and for slandering him, because in all these cases the form of action was the same. Beyond doubt it would be very inconvenient that such incongruous claims should often be joined in one action; but the truth is, in the language of the Commissioners, "that plaintiffs may be safely trusted in this matter: a plaintiff is not likely to damage his claim for criminal conversation by adding a claim which may divert attention to a question of whether he is entitled to the price of goods sold, or other incongruous matters."

The restriction on joining causes of action is therefore now removed; and although forms of action are not in express terms abolished by the recent Act, they are so in effect as a consequence of several new provisions. One of these, very effectual in this respect, is that causes of action of whatever kind, provided they be by and against the same parties and in the same rights, may be joined in the same suit; but this does not extend to replevin or ejectment; and where two or more of the causes of action so joined are local, and arise in different counties, the venue may be laid in either of such counties; but the Court or a Judge has power to prevent the trial of different causes of action together, if such trial would be inexpedient, and in such case such Court or Judge may order separate records to be made up, and separate trials to be had: (sect. 41.)

The other provision is for joining claims by a husband in his own right with claims by the husband and wife. Formerly, in an action brought by a man and his wife for an injury done to the wife, the husband could not recover for any loss or expense which had accrued to him even in consequence of such injury; but he was obliged to bring an action in his own name, as these are claims in his own right. Thus, in an action for an assault on the wife, the expense of the surgeon could not be recovered, nor in an action for slander of a wife could the damage arising from her loss of employment be recovered: (Dengate v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 5.)

Now, however, in any action brought by a man and his wife for an injury done to the wife, in respect of which she is necessarily joined as co-plaintiff, the husband may add thereto claims in his own right, and separate actions brought in respect of such claims may be consolidated if the Court or a Judge think fit; but in case of the death of either plaintiff, such action, so far only as relates to the causes of action, which do not survive, will abate: (sect. 40.)

Leaving then the collateral subjects, as they may be called, which have been considered—the amendment of misjoinder and nonjoinder before trial, and the joinder of causes of action—and returning to the main proceedings in a contested action, the pleadings between the parties are an essential part of the machinery.

PLEADINGS IN GENERAL.

Anciently the pleadings were delivered vivâ voce by the counsel. The plaintiff's counsel stated the circumstances from which the action arose; this statement was then called "the count," from the Norman-French conte; and, until the old real actions (for the recovery of real property) were abolished, the declaration in these actions was always called the count. The answer of the defendant's counsel was called "the plea," which is still the name for the analogous step in modern practice; and to this the plaintiff's counsel replied, and so on, until they contradicted as to a fact or facts, which was an issue in fact, or until one of them thought his opponent's statement bad in law, and then he demurred to it, that is, stayed from further pleading, and contended that, supposing such statement to be true, it was no answer to the case which he had stated. If there were an issue in fact between the parties, it was usually decided by a jury; if it were of law, it was decided by the court. These proceedings the officer of the court entered on a parchment roll or record as they took place. This record was called "the plea roll" when the pleadings only were entered; when the issue was entered it was called "the issue roll;" and when the judgment had been entered it was called "the judgment roll;" being the same parchment, but having different names at the different stages of the action.

Afterwards the system of vivâ voce pleading was found inconvenient, and the pleadings were written on paper, and delivered between the parties or filed in the office of the court. The introduction of written pleadings is generally supposed to have taken place about the middle of the reign of Edward III. (Step. Plead. note 6), but perhaps it was somewhat after this.

The pleadings were spoken in Norman-French (probably from the time of the Conquest) until the 36 Edw. 3, st. 1, c. 15, which enacted that for the future they should be in English. But whichever language was used in oral pleading, the record was entered in Latin from the earliest period to which it can be traced until the 4 Geo. 2, c. 26, which enacted that both pleadings and record should be in English. On the introduction of paper pleadings they followed the language of the record, and were therefore in Latin until the statute just mentioned: (Step. Plead. note 12.)

The Attorneys, after a time, themselves prepared and carried in the roll; but they subsequently found that doing so was needless until it was required for some purpose, as for the Master's signing judgment, and they omitted to do so. Now it will probably altogether cease to be used, except for bringing error or for some proceeding ulterior to the action, for it is not necessary, before issuing execution upon any judgment under the authority of the Common Law Procedure Act, to enter the proceedings upon any roll; but they may be entered upon the roll whenever the same may become necessary for the purpose of evidence, or of bringing error or the like: (sect. 206.)

There are several provisions in the Common Law Procedure Act affecting pleadings in general, and it will be therefore advisable to refer to such of these as may affect the declaration before considering the pleadings individually. These provisions relate mainly to the detail of pleading, so that, were they old-established rules, most of them would only be mentioned incidentally; but, considering their novelty, it is thought best to give them explicitly, as they become applicable.

NOTICES TO DECLARE, REPLY, &c.

Formerly, when it was desired to urge an adversary on to declare or reply, or to plead any subsequent pleading in the action, it was necessary to obtain a rule of the court for that purpose. These rules were granted as of course, and had at most only the effect of a notice to the party, that if he did not plead the particular pleading referred to, his adversary would sign a judgment against him. Afterwards, by a rule of all the courts, a written demand of the pleading in question was made necessary, and since the Common Law Procedure Act has been in force, some difficulty has arisen from there being three rules of court made at different times and also a provision made by that statute on this subject, and it was generally thought necessary that there should be both a notice to declare and a demand of declaration; however, by the new rules of court just issued, all former written rules of court are annulled, and no new rule is made on the subject; and, therefore, now there is simply the following provision of the Common Law Procedure Act, by which a notice is substituted for the rule: "Rules to declare or declare peremptorily, and rules to reply and plead subsequent pleadings, shall not be necessary; and instead thereof a notice shall be substituted, requiring the opposite party to declare, reply, rejoin, or as the case may be, within four days, otherwise judgment; such notice to be delivered separately, or indorsed on any pleading to which the opposite party is required to reply, rejoin, or as the case may be:" (sect. 53.)

(a) By George Tayler, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

The notice may be in this form:—

In the Queen's Bench.

A. B. plaintiff, against C. D. defendant.

Take notice that the defendant requires the plaintiff to declare herein within four days, otherwise judgment.

Dated the day of , 185 .

Yours, &c.

G. H. defendant's attorney.

To Mr. E. F. plaintiff's attorney.

ENTITLING PLEADINGS.

Until certain rules of court as to the entitling of pleadings (R. G. M. T. 3 Will. 4, r. 15, and H. T. 4 Will. 4, r. 1), pleadings were not entitled as of any day, but as of the term in which the writ was returnable. The practice established by these rules, with the addition that pleadings other than the declaration be entitled of the proper court, is now enacted by statute, so that every declaration and other pleading must be entitled of the proper court, and of the day of the month and the year when the same was pleaded, and must bear no other time or date; and every declaration and other pleading must also be entered on the record made up for trial, and on the judgment roll under the date of the day of the month and year when the same respectively took place, and without reference to any other time or date, unless otherwise specially ordered by the court or a judge; (sect. 54.)

It has been held that the pleading must be entitled on the face, and entitling it on the back merely is not sufficient (Ripling v. Watts, 4 Dowl. 290); and that the year must be preceded by the words "in the year of our Lord:" (Holland v. Tealdi, 8 Dowl. 320.) It was also held that if the pleading is not properly entitled, it is not a nullity, but only irregular (Hodson v. Pennell, 4 M. & W. 378), and it will probably now be amended without costs under sect. 222.

STATEMENTS NOT REQUIRING PROOF.

There were certain statements frequently occurring in pleadings which were merely formal; some were considered immaterial averments, and the proof of them was not essential to the maintenance of the case of the party using them; and others were statements of matters which the law presumed from certain other facts, and therefore needed no proof though required to be asserted: (Hayter v. Moat, 2 M. & W. 56.) Now, however, all statements which need not be proved, such as the statement of time, quantity, quality, and value, where these are immaterial; the statement of losing and finding and bailment, in actions for goods or their value; the statement of acts of trespass having been committed with force and arms, and against the peace of our lady the Queen; the statement of promises which need not be proved, as promises in indebitatus counts, and mutual promises to perform agreements; and all statements of a like kind, are to be omitted: (sect. 49.)

CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.

In cases where a party had to aver the performance of several things on his part, his pleading sometimes extended to a considerable length in consequence; and though this cause of prolixity would have been removed by another provision of the recent statute (the abolition of special demurrers), a substantive enactment has been made on this point: that the plaintiff or defendant in any action may now aver performance of conditions precedent generally, and the opposite party cannot deny such averment generally, but must specify in his pleading the condition or conditions precedent the performance of which he intends to contest: (sect. 57.)

It may perhaps be doubted whether this provision will make a general averment of performance sufficient in cases where there has been in fact only a readiness and willingness to perform some condition the actual performance of which has been prevented by the other party (Cort v. Amberyate Railway Company, 20 L. J. 465, Q. B.), though it seems to be generally thought that such averment will now be sufficient.

PROFERT AND OYER—INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS.

There was a very ancient practice, called "profert and oyer," which arose from the system of viva voce pleading above mentioned. It appears that at that time, when a person who relied on a deed produced it in court (profert in curiam) the other party might require to hear it read; which demand was called craving "oyer" (the Norman-French verb "to hear"). The officer of the court or the counsel who produced it then read it aloud, and it was entered on the pleadings.

The modern rule that arose from this practice was that, whenever either party stated in his pleading a deed which operated at common law or letters of administration, he was obliged to make profert thereof, that is, to state that he brought the document into court: the other party might then serve a written demand of oyer; and he was entitled to hear the document read. In practice it was exhibited to the party claiming oyer, and usually a copy was demanded as well as oyer, which was also supplied. These modern proceedings of course took place between the attorneys out of court; and the party claiming oyer was entitled to as many days for pleading after it had been given as he had unexpired at the time of demanding it. When a party had had oyer, he usually set out the document at the head of his next pleading, though this was optional with him; but by a rule of court, if the defendant omitted to do so, the plaintiff might insert it, and the costs were in the discretion of the Court.

Now however it is not necessary to make profert of any deed or other document mentioned or relied on in any pleading; and if profert is made, it does not entitle the opposite party to crave oyer of, or set out upon oyer, such deed or other document: (sect. 55.) And a party pleading in answer to any pleading in which any document is mentioned or referred to, is at liberty to set out the whole or such part thereof as may be material; and the matter so set out will be deemed and taken to be part of the pleading in which it is set out: (sect. 56.)

The proceeding really substituted for profert and oyer is that given by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 6, under which, on application by either party to the Court or a Judge in any case in which previous to that Act a discovery might have been obtained by filing a bill, or by any other proceeding in a Court of Equity, at the instance of the party so making the application, the Court or Judge may compel the opposite party to allow the party making the application to inspect all documents in the custody or under the control of such opposite party relating to such action, and, if necessary, to take examined copies of the same, or to procure the same to be duly stamped.

This application must be supported by affidavit, the contents of which will almost wholly depend on the circumstances of the particular case. The practice under the above section was fully considered and is stated at length in the judgment in Hunt v. Hewitt, 7 Ex. 286. The requirements of the affidavit in support of this application, and of that in answer, are there summed up as follows:—"The party applying therefore, who is in the same situation as a plaintiff in equity, must show, first, what is the nature of the suit, and of the question to be tried in it; and it seems, also, that he should depose in his affidavit to his having just ground to maintain or defend it; secondly, the affidavit ought to state with sufficient distinctness the reason of the application and the nature of the documents, in order that it may appear to the Court or Judge that the documents are asked for for the purpose of enabling the party applying to support his case, not to find a flaw in the case of the opponent, and also that the opponent may admit or deny the possession of them. To this affidavit the opponent may answer by swearing that he has no such documents, or that they relate exclusively to his own case, or that he is, for any sufficient reason, privileged from producing them; or he may submit to show parts, covering the remainder, on affidavit that the part concealed does not in any way relate to the plaintiff's case. The same course would be pursued in equity."

The declaration itself will next be considered.

THE MAGISTRATE,

AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

ANOTHER MAIDEN SESSIONS AT PONTEFRACT.—R. Boothby, Esq. the Recorder of Pontefract, held the Borough Quarter Sessions, on the 18th inst. There was again, however, as at the three preceding Quarter Sessions, not a single prisoner for trial.

BENEFICES.—A parliamentary paper which has just been issued contains several abstracts from the latest returns made by the archbishops and bishops in pursuance of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 156, s. 53. From these it appears that the total number of benefices in England and Wales was 11,728 in 1850, and upon 8214 of these there was a glebe-house. It also appears that 6132 clergymen were resident in the respective parsonage houses, 664 in the houses appointed by the bishop in his licence, and 1218 within the limits of the benefice, there being no parsonage house; making the total number resident 8077. The total number exempted from residence was 1861; but of these 329 performed the duties of their parishes. The principal grounds of exemption are residence in other benefices, official chaplaincies, and offices and masterships in the universities and public schools. The number exempted by licence, on the ground of infirmity and other causes, was 674, of whom 176 were doing duty in their parishes. Number nonresident without licence or exemption 917, of whom 522 were doing the duties in their parishes. The number of sequestrations was 51; and from 557 benefices no return was received.

POOR-LAW OFFICERS.—There has just been printed, by order of the House of Commons, an interesting document respecting the Tewkesbury Union. The Board of Guardians carried resolutions to reduce the salaries of the several officers on account of the "cheapness of provisions." The officers appealed to the Poor-law Board, and the reasons were required from the guardians that induced them to pass the resolutions. They urged that the value of agricultural produce had been diminished at least 30 per cent.; that the rates had increased, and that food was cheap. The Poor-law Board replied that they had "never recognised the principle that salaries should be liable to vary as the price of food fluctuates." The Poor-law Board thought that no sufficient reason had been assigned for the reduction, declaring that the fixed salaries of the medical officers remunerated them only for their ordinary duties.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

So many reports that were in type were omitted last week to make room for the New Rules of the Common Law Courts, that there are only two cases to be found there belonging to this branch of the law. In Re Northampton Charities, 20 Law T. Rep. 186, the Lord Chancellor held a general affidavit verifying the deaths of trustees of a charity, by a person acquainted with them, to be sufficient evidence of their deaths, without the production of certificates of burial.

In the Law of Mortgages, under the 48th section of the New Chancery Act (c. 86), the M. R. said that he was unwilling to order a sale, unless by consent, in a case where there was not such complication as to render it inconvenient to work out the common decree.

The same case has some interest for the Profession in its facts. A.'s solicitor, without his knowledge, arranged for a loan to B. of 1000*l.* on a second mortgage of a certain property already mortgaged for 1000*l.* The mortgage was prepared and executed by B.; but no money was paid. When A. was informed of what had been done, he refused to concur; but agreed to advance B. 2000*l.*, taking a transfer of the first mortgage by way of further charge. The deed of transfer and further charge was executed; but the deed of second mortgage was not cancelled, but remained in the hands of the solicitor, who fraudulently prevailed on C. to advance 1000*l.* upon a transfer of it, and thereupon the solicitor handed him the deed, which he had induced A. to sign, undertaking to transfer the second mortgage. Subsequently the solicitor induced A. to execute the transfer accordingly, and to sign a receipt for the 1000*l.*, which the solicitor applied to his own use. The deed of transfer was expressed in words sufficient to convey the legal estate, which was vested in A. by the deed of transfer and further charge. On whom should the loss fall? It was held that, as between A. and C., the former must bear the loss occasioned by the fraud which he had enabled his solicitor to commit; and that C. was entitled to half the benefit of the security of the deed of transfer and further charge, and to costs of the suit, to be paid by A., except the costs of the mortgagor and defendant, who ought not to have been made a party: (Hiorns v. Holtom, 20 Law T. Rep. 188.)

Queries on Points of Practice.

CHURCH PROPERTY.

I SHOULD feel obliged by any of your numerous correspondents replying to the following question:—

A client of mine is possessed of some property which he holds by lease for lives under a dean and chapter: is there any statute, new or old, or any means by which the dean and chapter are enabled to convert this leasehold into a fee simple? A SUBSCRIBER.

EXECUTORS.

IN 1847 a party died, leaving a will, by which she bequeathed the bulk of her property, consisting of about 1600*l.* in the Funds, to a relative for life, with remainder to other persons absolutely. The tenant-for-life is now dead. Her two executors are also dead; and the executors of the survivor are about to make the necessary distribution. I shall be obliged to any of your correspondents who will say whether it is customary in such a case to require a release to be executed, in addition to the legacy receipts which the parties will have to sign? T. B. C.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

NORWICH UNION LIFE OFFICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—In reply to the query of a "Subscriber" in your paper of the 8th inst., I am sorry to say I have met with a similar case, and in this same office.

In Nov. 1825, the policy was granted; the assured died in May 1852, having in the previous Nov. paid to Nov. 1852. The general meeting was held in June 1852, and a bonus declared, calculated on the profits made prior to June 1851, being nearly a year before the meeting was held, and a year and a half before the period covered by the payment of the premium.

The Norwich Union Office refused to pay, and referred to the deed of settlement as justifying such refusal; but when asked for an extract from such deed, they refer me to the solicitors.

If this society were a proprietary one I could understand its object, though I might doubt its policy; but, as it professes to be a mutual one, I am wholly at a loss to account for such a course of dealing. I know it is useless to apply to the solicitors, as I have already, on a technical ground, been driven to incur heavy costs, and pay those gentlemen their charges, before I could obtain the money due on a policy of upwards of twenty years' standing. I have therefore determined in no case to transact business with this society, nor will I again look at their policies.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
W. Manby.

Wolverhampton, 19th Jan. 1853.

WINDING-UP.

Monmouth and Glamorgan Banking Company.—Of the 15*s.* in the pound arranged to be paid to creditors under the winding-up of this company, which failed some time since to the extent of several hundred thousand pounds, 18*s.* 4*d.* has been paid over, leaving a further payment of 1*s.* 8*d.* due.

Tring and Reigate.—On Monday a meeting was held in this matter before Master Humphry. Mr. Torr (firm of Sudlow, Torr, and Kingdon) stated, that the terms of the proposed compromise having fallen through, it now only remained to settle the members of the managing committee on the list, with a view to making a call to liquidate the outstanding debts, and this having been done, a call will be declared.

Royal Bank of Australia.—On Monday a meeting was held before Master Richards, to examine Mr. J. N. Smith (firm of Campbell, Smith, and Co., Australian agents), Mr. Duncan Dunbar, Mr. Falconer (of the London Chartered Bank of Australia), and Mr. Millikin (of the Bank of Australasia), relative to the disputed charges of Messrs. Smith and Campbell, the late agents of the Royal Bank. Attention having been called by Mr. Walton to a certificate of Mr. Orr, of Sydney, touching a certain portion, amounting to some thousands, of Messrs. Smith and Campbell's accounts, Mr. Roxburgh and Mr. H. Harris, for Mr. Wryghte, the official manager, insisted that they had no advice on the subject. After a discussion of two hours the Master intimated that the parties might agree to the proposed reference of the question, involving about 27,000*l.*, to two merchants, on the understanding that if they found that Mr. Orr was authorised to make the certificate it should be binding on the official manager, otherwise that it should be void, and that his examination into the matter should be proceeded with.

Abortive Railway Schemes.—Of the 157 railway companies that lodged plans and sections in November, thirty are not able to proceed this session in consequence of not having also lodged the necessary deposits with the accountant-general, and other causes. These thirty are as follow: Albert Dock and Railway; Ayr, Maybole, and Girvan; Barnet and Willesden; Birkenhead Dock Branch; Birkenhead (Great Western), Corris, Machynlleth, Aberdovery, and Towyn; Dorchester and Exeter (Coast Extension); East and West Surrey Union; Glasgow, Earlwood, Busby, and Eaglesham; Hawick and Carlisle; Inverleithen and Peebles; Jedburgh; Kingroad Harbour; Lewes, Uckfield, and Tonbridge Wells; Mid-Kent; Newport, Abergavenny, and Hereford (Extension to Swansea); North and South Wales; Norwood, Streatham, and Wanstead; Rugby, Southam, and Banbury; St. George's Harbour and Railway; South Derbyshire; South Midlands Union; South and West London; Shrewsbury and Aberystwith; Staffordshire, Midland, and Mineral; Stockton and Hartlepool (Haswell Branch); Sunderland and Leeds Northern Junction; Torquay and South Devon; Vale of Clwyd; Yarmouth and Lowestoft.

PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and made, during the past week.]

Kollmann's Railway Locomotive and Carriage Improvement Company.—Meeting of contributories at Master's chambers on 24th inst. at two o'clock. Humphry.

Guadal Canal Silver Mining Association Company.—Appointment of R. P. Harding to be official manager, Jan. 13. Rose.

Ten Bells Club.—Petition to wind-up presented on Jan. 17. To be heard on Jan. 29.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

Equity Practice.—In the new practice, some points were reported last week. In Crofts v. Middleton, 20 Law T. Rep. 189, it was held, that the Court had power to appoint an examiner to take the viva voce examination of witnesses out of the jurisdiction. In Evans v. Bath, 20 Law T. Rep. 189, a solicitor not interested in the cause was appointed examiner of witnesses resident in a distant county, on an affidavit of the respectability and competency of such solicitor; and in Glengall v. Johnston, 20 Law T. Rep. 189, where a decree referring certain inquiries to the Master had been made previous to the passing of the Amendment Act, the Court, by consent, ordered the parties and witnesses to be examined viva voce. But where, after publication had passed, and the cause been set down for hearing, the plaintiff applied for leave to examine the defendant orally, as being important to the case and the discovery of the truth, V. C. Stuart refused. "The application had been resisted," he said, "on the ground that, under the 39th section, the Court could only upon the hearing, if it should then see necessary, require the attendance and oral examination of the party. That, in his view, was the more just construction; and although, upon the ground of convenience, the purposes of all parties might be better served by giving the defendant notice, his notions of what was convenient and proper did not justify him in stretching the construction of an Act beyond what the words authorized:" (May v. Biggenden, 20 Law T. Rep. 189.)

In Smith v. Harwood, 20 Law T. Rep. 190, V. C. Stuart made an order that the copy of a petition left for the use of the Court might be filed instead of the original petition, which had been lost.

In Balinhard v. Bullock, 20 Law T. Rep. 189, V. C. Turner, in chambers, dispensed with service of a decree made in an administration suit upon some of the parties, and ordered it to be made upon others. He said: "The form of order which was originally adopted on claims, directing what parties were to be summoned, and that when such parties had been served the accounts should be taken, is not now applicable to this case. * * The General Orders of the Court which have been made are well adapted to provide for any such difficulty as that which is represented to occur in this case. The Judge in chambers is enabled to dispense with service of the decree upon any party as to whom it shall appear to him that from absence or other sufficient cause it ought to be dispensed with, or cannot be made. The course is this—Having ascertained who are the parties interested in the estate, upon the first summons before the Judge in chambers to proceed with the decree, the Judge will consider any circumstances which may be brought before him with reference to any of the parties, and direct who are the parties to be served, and whether service on any of them may be dispensed with."

In a question as to jurisdiction, the new Lord Chancellor has held that a petition for the appointment of new trustees of a charity, if entitled under the General Trustee Act, may be heard by the M. R. or one of the Vice-Chancellors: (Re Northampton Charities, 20 Law T. Rep. 186.)

Common Law.—A point of practice in the service of a writ of mandamus arose in Reg. v. The Birmingham, &c. Railway Company, 20 Law T. Rep. 190. The defendant had never been served, and he made an affidavit to this effect and moved that the writ be set aside. The objection was that a copy of the writ had been served instead of the original. But the Court said, "Why may not a return be made to a copy? The Master tells us that it is constantly done, and unless there is authority for setting aside the service, I do not see why we should interfere."

In Price v. Hewett, 20 Law T. Rep. 191, the C. P. held that under the New Procedure Act it is competent to a defendant to plead and demur to the declaration at the same time.

Where a plaintiff had not proceeded to trial, for good reasons alleged in the affidavit, and the defendant's attorney had served plaintiff with a notice under sect. 101 of the Procedure Act to bring on the issue to be tried, it was held by Erle, J., in the Bail Court, that the notice mentioned in sect. 101, being merely a substitute for the old proceeding of a motion for judgment, as in case of a nonsuit (which is abolished by sect. 100), it was competent to the plaintiff to avail himself of the same defence on the new as on the old proceeding; and that, as the reasons now alleged for not going to trial would have been sufficient under the old practice to discharge the rule, the same excuse must be used now in the shape of a motion for a rule, calling upon the defendant to show cause why he should not be restrained from taking any further proceedings to compel the plaintiff to proceed to trial, or to show cause why the time for proceeding to trial should not be extended, with a stay of proceedings: (Farthing v. Read, 20 Law T. Rep. 192.)

In the Law of Attorneys there is to be noted the case of Re Smith, 20 Law T. Rep. 190, in which the Court of Q. B. discharged a rule for striking an attorney off the rolls, which had been obtained on the ground that he had been struck off the rolls of the Court of Chancery, as it appeared that he had been subsequently restored to the rolls in that court and suspended for six months. The Q. B. also refused to suspend him from practising for the same period. "We cannot say," observed Lord Campbell, C. J., "that the Lord Chancellor did not think that the punishment he inflicted in his own court was not a sufficient punishment. If we were to make it greater by any addition here, we might in fact be acting against the exercise of his discretion."

It will be seen by the decision of the Lords Justices in Ex parte Dufaur, 20 Law T. Rep. 186, that a solicitor is not a scrivener within the bankrupt law, merely because money has been occasionally lodged with him for investment. Lord Cranworth said: "Lord Eldon and Lord Chief Justice Gibbs have both plainly laid down that the fact of scrivening, isolated acts of scrivening, is not sufficient to support a commission against an attorney as a scrivener, but it must be shown that the general course of his business is of that nature."

In the Law of Evidence, under the new Evidence Act, the Lords Justices have held that the extracts from parish registers of entries of marriages, &c., purporting to be signed by the incumbents of the respective parishes, are admissible without further verification.

FEES IN THE COMMON LAW COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—Can any of your numerous readers inform me who is the usher at the Common Pleas Office; what services he renders that a shilling should be charged for him when a judgment is signed; and whether it is a legalised charge or not?

I see no mention made of this "one shilling for the usher" in the new scale of fees, but simply "paid signing judgment five shillings," while in fact six shillings is the sum demanded, for the reason above stated.

If the extra shilling be merely an exaction, I see no reason why the Profession should submit to it. Their fees have been, I think, of late quite sufficiently curtailed; and I for one have no desire, unless compelled, to recognise this officer's services, which, if they be not imaginary, should be paid for out of some other fund than that supplied from the pockets of the attorneys.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
A Subscriber.

CHANCERY ABUSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—in these times of Chancery reform, the following case may draw the attention of those to whose ability the public are indebted for such reform; and future measures may provide some alteration in the existing practice, which will meet the point in question. In 1844, bill filed by trustees for opinion of court on construction of will. Cause heard on further directions, &c. in 1845, and order made for distribution of estate; costs to be paid as directed, and charged on the trust estate. In 1845 and 1846 conveyances were executed to the parties entitled, who have since dealt with their interests in divers ways. Some portion of the estate so conveyed has been sold. Until this time, close on eight years from the hearing, no steps have been taken for the taxation of the costs. The parties now interested in the trust estate have notice of taxation, and that such estate will be chargeable with the deficiency between assets received by trustees and amount of taxed costs.

There is no resisting such taxation; the order of the court is still in force. Should not some reasonable limit be assigned, beyond which costs payable even under order of the court should be barred?

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
Jan. 11, 1853. Subscriber.

INVASION OF THE ATTORNEYS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—The Profession ought to be much obliged to you for exposing the inroads made upon us by persons out of the Profession, such as accountants, auctioneers, or agents, who not only arrogate to themselves the ability to do purely lawyers' work, but have the impudence to send in their bills in the same form, and make the same charges as the latter. I inclose the bill of another genus, "the Civil Engineer." This gentleman, you will see, charges 8*s.* 6*d.* each for his letters: he is not, however, satisfied with the simple 6*s.* 8*d.* for attendances, but charges 10*s.* 6*d.* or 1*l.* 1*s.* The aggregate account for letters and attendances is 48*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* His bill altogether is 195*5l.* 8*s.* for salary, surveying, and letter-writing. Surely he might have left the crumbs for the attorney!

Yours,
Worcester, Jan. 12, 1853. An Attorney.

[Inclosed is a copy of the bill, much too long for insertion; but our correspondent has accurately described the character of the charges.—Ed. Law. T.]

THE NEW RULES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—Amongst the new rules is one which will lead to great inconvenience: I allude to that which directs that there shall be but one summons on the same matter, in lieu of two as heretofore.

In the case of agency business, or of the client residing in the country, it will not be possible to have any communication on the subject of the summons previous to its return; and this, as you know, is frequently most essential. Besides which, when summonses are returnable at ten, or even at eleven, in the morning, many occasions will happen where an attorney or his clerk cannot be prepared in time to attend the summons. The rules direct that summonses, &c. shall be served before seven o'clock in the evening: this, however, is too late for post, and is, indeed, an hour after the time at which a large number of the attorneys' offices close. If an attorney leaves his office before seven, and is engaged (as frequently he must be) on business at the courts or elsewhere, away from his office, the following morning an order may be obtained before he is even aware that a summons has been served.

I apprehend this evil was not contemplated by the judges when framing the rules; and I hope by thus directing their attention to it through your columns they will alter it.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Jan. 20, 1853. AN ATTORNEY'S CLERK.

SERVICE OF WRITS IN THE COUNTRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I know from my own experience that the letters you have received complaining of many of the London attorneys not paying their country correspondents' charges are not without foundation.

I have often called at the offices of London attorneys for amounts due to me, sometimes about a month after the service of the writ, and then the excuse has been, "The costs are not taxed yet;" at other times, at later periods, and then the reply was, "The papers are put away, we will send you a Post-office order;" or, "The common law clerk is not within;" and this, after they have received a letter stating that I intended to call upon them on a day named. Such parties only deserve a County Court summons; and if that plan were always adopted wherever the facts justified it, I think you would not be troubled again upon this subject. I am, Sir, Yours, &c.

A COUNTRY ATTORNEY.

Queries on Points of Practice.

DUTIES OF AN ATTORNEY.

HAVING practised the Profession of the Law for twenty-five years, and having a moderate competency, I have determined to retire from the Profession, but find myself in this fix:—In the course of my practice I have accumulated a vast number of papers, which are carefully packed in boxes, and for the warehousing of which I am paying a rental. Now that which I desire one of your numerous correspondents to inform me is, When will my duty to preserve these papers cease? Am I a trustee for the production of them either to the parties for or against whom I have been employed, and if I am, then when will such trusteeship determine? and if I am not such trustee, then can I safely destroy all such papers (except drafts of deeds) as have not come to my hands within the last six years? A. B.

THE NEW PROCEDURE.

THE New Common Law Procedure Act has afforded facilities for proceeding against debtors resident in foreign parts. I have failed to find any provision therein for the following difficulty, which I will thank any of your readers to remove:—A debt is nearly barred by the Statute of Limitations, and the debtor is resident in New South Wales. To prevent the operation of the statute, a writ is issued, and forwarded to the colony for service; but on account of the migratory disposition of the colonists at the present time, it is feared that there may be some delay in effecting service. The point is this: Supposing service is not made immediately, before the writ can be transmitted to this country for re-sealing the six months allowed for service will have expired, and the statute will have taken effect.

Does the 18th section provide for such a case? Or could two concurrent writs be issued, one being retained here and re-sealed in the event of receiving advice that the other had not been served? C. W. C.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

Two Insolvency cases are all that are for noting this week. In Re Burgess, 20 Law T. Rep. 192, it was held that an insolvent owing debts contracted while in trade, must petition as a trader; and in Re Pritchard, 20 Law T. Rep. 192, that a creditor who has taken a warrant of attorney or other security in respect of a debt improperly contracted, is not thereby precluded from opposing the debtor's discharge, upon his application under the Act to get rid of such security and the debt for which it was given.

The proceedings with respect to the scale of costs for attorneys in the County Courts are noticed in a leading article, to which the reader's attention is directed.

LATE CASES ON THE LAW AND PRACTICE OF THE COUNTY COURTS. (a)

IX. CASES ON QUESTIONS OF REPLEVIN.

To replevy, is where a person distrained upon applies to the sheriff or his officers, and has the distress returned into his own possession, upon giving good security to try the right of taking it in a suit at law; and if that be determined against him, to return the cattle or goods once more into the hands of the distrainer. This is called a replevin.

The provisions contained in the statutes 8 Anne, c. 14, s. 1, and in the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, set forth in our last article on the Law and Practice of the County Courts, and which bear in part on the present subject, will be fresh in the recollection of the reader, and a reference to them will save the necessity of repeating them here.

By sect. 119 of the last-mentioned act, it is enacted, that all actions of replevin in cases of distress for rent in arrear, or damage faisant, which shall be brought in the County Court, shall be brought without writ in a court held under that act. Sect. 120 enacts, that in every such action of replevin, the plaint shall be entered in the court holden under that act for the district wherein the distress was taken. By sect. 121 it is enacted, that in case either party to any such action of replevin shall declare to the court in which such action shall be brought that the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditament, or to any toll, market, fair, or franchise is in question, or that the rent or damage in respect of which the distress shall have been taken is more than the sum of 20*l.* (extended by the County Courts Extension Act to 50*l.*), and shall become bound with two sufficient sureties, to be approved by the clerk of the court, in such sums as to the judges shall seem reasonable, regard being had to the nature of the claim, and the alleged value or amount of the property in dispute, or of the rent or damage, to prosecute the suit with effect and without delay, and to prove before the court by which such suit shall be tried that such title as aforesaid is in dispute between the parties, or that there was ground for believing that the said rent or damage was more than 20*l.*, then, and not otherwise, the action may be removed before any court competent to try the same in such manner as hath been accustomed. It was held in Mungeam v. Wheatley, 1 Cox & Mac. 445, that the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, does not apply to actions of replevin.

The first cases decided on this subject to which we shall refer are those which relate to the jurisdiction of the County Court in cases of replevin.

In the following case the declaration on a replevin bond set forth that A. H. levied his plaint in a County Court held under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, against the present plaintiff, and a judgment by that court that A. H. should take nothing by his writ, prout patet, &c. Plea: nul tiel record, and issue thereon. A minute of the proceedings of the County Court was produced, stating that the cause had been "struck out for want of jurisdiction, on the ground of a disputed title having been sworn to." It was held that, as this entry did not support the averment in the declaration, the defendant was entitled to judgment: (Tubby v. Stanhope, 1 Cox & Mac. 105.) In another case (Re the County Court of Lancashire, 1 Cox & Mac. 170) it was held that in replevin the County Court has jurisdiction, although the damages are laid above 20*l.*, and that it is no ground for a prohibition that a verdict is given for damages above that sum.

The jurisdiction of the Court Baron of the Honour of Pontefract was extended by 17 Geo. III. c. 15, which recognised its ancient right of granting replevins. The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, further extended the jurisdiction under the title of the Court of the Honour of Pontefract, and provided that six months after the passing of any general act for the recovery of small debts, the operation of which should interfere with the powers given by that act, that act should cease and determine; and the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, gave power to Her Majesty to appoint County Courts, and repealed all acts affecting the jurisdiction of such courts. It was held that the construction of these statutes was to destroy the newly constituted Court of the Honour of Pontefract. That the old court being previously put an end to, was not revived by the subsequent act, and therefore that no power remained to grant replevin: (Halliwell v. Eastwood, 1 Cox & Macrae, 452.)

In the above case, certain cotton-spinning machines were fixed by means of screws, some in wooden fastenings, and some fixed in stones with molten lead, and thereby fastened to the building. The machines were distrained for rent, and subsequently replevied. It was held that they were not a part of the freehold, but were properly distrainable. PARKE, B., in delivering the opinion of the court in this case, gave the following very able and learned exposition of the law, as to what articles, though fixed to the premises, are still distrainable. The question, he observed, was whether cotton-spinning machines, which were fixed by means of screws, some in wooden fastenings, some let in a molten state in stones, for the purpose of receiving the screws, were, by law, distrainable for the rent of the mill in which they were affixed. Before the machines were so attached, they were mere chattels, and undoubtedly they were distrainable chattels. The question is, whether they lost that character by being attached to the floor in the manner described? The question is to be determined exactly in the same way as it would have been if the statutes on the subject had not passed. No chattels could be distrained which were not the subject of distress at common law, except those provided for by the statute, and this description of chattels is not. Neither the power to sell a distress, given by the statute of Will. 3, nor the power to impound on the premises, given by the 11 Geo. 2, extends the right of distress to chattels not before the subject of it; still less does the right of the landlord for a year's rent before the goods taken in execution can be removed, afford a reason for holding that all goods that can be taken in execution can also be distrained. We must decide the case in the same way as if the distrainer was obliged to take the chattels distrained immediately to a public or private pound. At common law, things fixed to the freehold, and which become part of it, cannot be distrained, for two reasons. GILBERT, C. B. says, "whatever is part of the freehold cannot be distrained, for what is part of the freehold cannot be severed from it without detriment to the thing itself in the removal, consequently that cannot be a pledge which cannot be restored in statu quo to the owner. Besides, what is fixed to the freehold is part of the thing demised, and the nature of the distress is not to resume part of the thing itself for the rent, but only the inducta illata upon the soil or house. Hence it is that doors, windows, furnaces, &c., affixed to the freehold, are not distrainable" (Gilbert on Distress, 34—48). And on the sole ground that they were parcel of the freehold in the construction of law. Keys, windows, and shutters, concerning the realty are not liable to be distrained. It was, besides, a rule at common law that things which could not be restored in the same plight and condition cannot be distrained for rent; that is laid down in Comyn's Digest, 47, and Gilbert on Distress, in the part I have already cited. We have therefore to decide whether these machines fall within either of these categories, otherwise they were not protected. They do not fall within the latter, for, being taken to the pound, they might be brought back without damage to themselves. They are not of a perishable nature; they would not suffer by careful removal, If it were necessary to take some to pieces in order to remove them, that circumstance would make no difference, for that might occur to chattels with respect to which there is no question; as, for instance, a post bedstead, which could not be carried to a pound without being first taken to pieces, and the distrainer would have no reason to complain that they were restored to him in a disjointed state at the pound, where he must attend to receive them. Nor does it make any difference that the distrainee would be obliged to bear the expense of refixing the machinery. Precisely the same objection might be made to a distress on any article which it required expense to carry back from the pound and restore to its former position. A distrainee at common law must be at the trouble and expense of taking back his goods from the pound. This practical inconvenience is now obviated by the power of impounding upon the premises. The only question, therefore, is, whether the machinery, when fixed, was parcel of the freehold? and this is a question of fact depending on the circumstances of each case, and principally on two considerations; first, the annexation to the soil, or, if brick, the house to which it is united, whether it can be easily removed integra et salva, or not without injury to itself or the fabric of the building. Secondly, upon the object and purpose of the annexation, whether it was for the permanent and substantial improvement of the dwelling, in the language of the civil law, perpetui usus causâ, or that of the Year Book, 28 Hen. 7, 13, per resta en quel propriété remain, &c. en la possession, or merely for a temporary purpose, or the more complete enjoyment and use of it as a chattel. Now, in considering this case we cannot doubt that the machines never were part of the freehold, but were attached slightly to it, and were capable of being removed without the least injury to the fabric of the buildings. The object and purpose of annexation was not to improve the inheritance, but to render the machinery steadier, and for the more convenient use of the inheritance. They never were part of the freehold any more than a carpet would be which is attached to the floor by nails for the purpose of keeping it stretched out, or curtains, or looking-glasses, pictures, and other matters of an ornamental nature which have been slightly attached to the walls of a dwelling as furniture, and which is probably the reason why these and similar articles have been held in different cases to be removable. The machines would have passed to the executors: that is laid down by Lord Lyndhurst in Trappes v. Harter, 2 Cro. & M. 153. They would not have passed by the conveyance or demise of the mill; they never ceased to have the character of movable chattels, and were therefore liable to the distress.

A replevin bond conditioned for the party replevying to appear at the next County Court to be holden at, &c. that not being a County Court holden under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, and then and there to prosecute his suit with effect, is insufficient since that Act, It was held, also, that the whole amount of the rent distrained for was recoverable as damages: (Edmonds v. Challis, 1 Cox & Mac. 216.) In this case it was also held that an averment in the declaration that the said County Court had not, at the time of the taking of the said bond, any jurisdiction to hear or determine any action of replevin, is a sufficient allegation after verdict that it had not jurisdiction at the time of the plaint to the sheriff.

(a) By GEORGE HARRIS, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

COLTMAN, J. in delivering the judgment of the court, thus laid down the law applicable to the case. The bond, he observed, which has been taken in this case, is in a form often used before the passing of the Act 8 & 9 Vict c. 95. Now the question is, whether such a form, since the passing of that statute, is sufficient? By the 119th section of that Act, all actions of replevin in cases of distress for rent in arrear, which shall be brought in a County Court, shall be brought without writ in a court held under the Act; and by sect. 120, plaint shall be entered in the court holden in the district wherein the distress was taken. As this statute leaves the former statutes relating to replevin unrepealed, there is no reason why the sheriff, on complaint made to him, should not grant replevin as before, and take bond under the stat. 11 Geo. 2, as before, and if the bond were taken in the terms of the statute, conditional to prosecute the suit with effect, and without delay, and to make return, if return should be awarded, the sheriff would have been under no difficulty; but the bond being taken with a condition for the plaintiff to appear at the next County Court for Middlesex, to be holden at the Sheriff's Office in Red Lion-square, and then and there to prosecute her action with effect, and to make return, if return should be adjudged,—the question arises whether such a bond is sufficient? Various cases are to be found in which the courts have held that bonds strictly conformable to the statute of Geo. 2 are assignable within that statute, so as to enable the assignee to maintain an action on the bond, where there had been a breach of one of the branches of the condition which had been taken conformably to the statute. Thus, in the case of Short v. Hubbard, 9 Moore, 667, it was held to be no objection to such a bond that it was conditioned, inter alia, to indemnify the sheriff. So, in Dunbar v. Dunn, 10 Price, 54, where the bond was conditioned to prosecute with effect, and to make a return, if a return was adjudged, and to indemnify the sheriff, it was held that the assignee might sue on the bond, though it was not conditioned to prosecute his suit without delay. These were questions between the assignees of the sheriff and the obligors of the bond; but the question may be different where it arises between the party distraining and the sheriff who has taken a bond conformably to the statute. In order to determine this question, it will be convenient to consider the effect of a bond taken in the form here used before the passing of the stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. The object of taking a bond conditioned for the obligor to appear at the next County Court, and then and there to prosecute his suit, appears to be in order to secure the commencement of action without delay, so as to meet the requirements of the statute that the obligor shall prosecute his suit without delay; and if the obligor omitted to appear at the next County Court, and there prosecute his suit, it was an infringement of the statute, and the bond was forfeited, and might be put in suit by the assignee: (Dias v. Freeman, 5 T. R. 195.) The effect and meaning of a bond conditioned like the bond now in question was under the consideration of the Court of Exchequer in the case of Jackson v. Hanson, 8 M. & W. 487; and the court held the meaning of such a bond to be, that the obligor should appear at the next County Court, and then and there begin to prosecute his suit, and afetrwards prosecute it with effect; and by prosecuting with effect is meant prosecuting with effect not only in the County Court, but in every other court into which the cause may be removed in the ordinary course (Chapman v. Butcher, Carth. 248; Gwillim v. Holbrook, 1 B. & P. 410.) Now, the meaning which ought to be put on the bond is not altered by the passing of the statute 9 & 10 Vict. c. 15, and the question will be whether such a bond is a substantial compliance with the requisitions of the statute 11 Geo. 2, the condition of the bond being, first, that the obligor shall appear at the next County Court, and then and there begin to prosecute his suit. This branch of the condition will be merely idle if the effect of the statute of Victoria is to substitute a proceeding in the District Court in lieu of the old proceedings in the County Court; and it appears to us that such is the intention and effect of the act. The words of the act, sec. 119, are express, that all actions of replevin, in cases of distress for rent, shall be brought in a court held under the act; and can it be supposed that the plaintiff in replevin is to bring two concurrent actions, one in the old County Court, the other in the District Court? It may be said, however, that although this branch of the condition is idle, as imposing a duty on the obligor which the statutes do not any longer warrant, and for the breach of which the assignee of the bond could maintain no action, yet the rest of the condition is conformable to the statute of 11 Geo. 2, and may be enforced by the assignee of the bond. Now the remaining branch of the condition is, that the obligee will prosecute his suit with effect; and the proceeding in replevin having been well commenced in the first instance by the plaint to the sheriff out of court, and the bond entered into by him, and the proceedings being in effect, by force of the act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, directed to be transferred to the District Court, and then and there prosecuted; the effect of this portion of the condition may be to bind the obligee to prosecute with effect in the District Court, on the same principle on which it was held that such a condition bound him to prosecute, not only in the Sheriff's Court, but in every other court into which the case might be removed in due course of law. Still, there is another requisite of the statute which the bond does not comply with; for the bond shall be conditioned to prosecute without delay. As the law stood before the passing of the 9 & 10 Vict. this was considered as sufficiently provided for by requiring the obligor to appear at the next County Court, and then and there to prosecute his suit; but this provision is no longer applicable; the suit is no longer to be prosecuted in the County Court, but in the District Court. The District Courts are to be held by sect. 56, at such times as the judge shall appoint; and it may well be, that the court of the district within which the distress was taken, and in which the plaintiff ought to enter his plaint, will be holden before the holding of the next County Court, in the Sheriffs' Office in Red Lion-square. And be that as it may, there are no conditions requiring the plaintiff to prosecute his suit at the next or any other District Court, and the proceeding may be indefinitely delayed without any breach of the condition of which the assignee of the bond can take advantage. We think, therefore, the bond is insufficient, and consequently the defendants are not entitled to have a verdict entered for them.

On the removal of an action of replevin from the County Court into a Superior Court, under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 121, 127, the judge of the County Court, instead of taking the bond to the other party to the suit, as directed by the latter of these sections, took it through mistake to himself, as trustee for him. That party having succeeded in the court above, it was held: 1. That the bond, though irregular, was not void, but might be sued on by the judge as a voluntary bond. 2. That by declaring in the court above, the opposite party had waived the objection to the want of a regular bond; and, 3. That the obligee of the bond was entitled to recover under it, as trustee of the party, the amount of the costs incurred by him in the replevin suit: (Stansfield v. Hellawell and others, 16 Jur. 817, Ex.)

SUPERIOR COURTS AND COUNTY COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—In your last number was a letter from Mr. Preston, of 23, New Bond-street, on the comparative costs and advantages of these courts, in which letter are statements not founded on facts.

Mr. Preston says, "To recover a debt over 20*l.* in Superior Courts, the costs allowed, including attorney and all fees, is 3*l.* 8*s.* in town, and 4*l.*, in a country cause, whereas the actual money out of pocket in the County Courts to sue for any sums between 20*l.* and 50*l.* is, summons 2*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and hearing, &c. 3*l.* 5*s.*, in all 5*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*, and mileage in addition 2*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.*"

As I understand the practice in Superior Courts, the 3*l.* 8*s.* in town and 4*l.* in country causes are the costs indorsed on the writ first issued; and if debt and such costs be paid within four days from service, further proceedings will be stayed.

In County Courts the costs for any sum between 20*l.* and 50*l.* are—summons 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; if settled before cause called in court no further costs are incurred; if neither party appear when cause called, it is struck out and no fee payable; if cause be heard, the hearing fee is 2*l.* 5*s.*; in all 3*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*, including everything but attorneys and witnesses.

I do not understand Mr. Preston's "mileage in addition 2*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.*;" if defendant reside more than two miles from court-house an addition is charged of 6*d.* per mile on each mile beyond two. I do not know of any other mileage.

Take the following specimen of County Court proceedings:—On Nov. 29 last, plaintiff entered a plaint in the Trowbridge court against a defendant who had carried on trade in partnership at Trowbridge, and a separate trade at Frome. At the hearing on Dec. 10, an order was made for immediate payment—Debt 22*l.* 13*s.* 8*d.*; court fees 3*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*; attorney and witnesses 1*l.* 15*s.*; total 27*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.* On Dec. 9 defendant's property at Trowbridge had been removed. On Dec. 10 plaintiff took out execution, which was immediately transmitted to Frome, reissued, and on same day the bailiff seized defendant's goods at Frome just as defendant's relation was loading them to be carried away.

Defendant's relation gave notice of his claim to the goods; interpleader summonses were issued; the cause was tried at Frome on Jan. 5; the claim disallowed; claimant was ordered to pay all court fees and costs of plaintiff's attorney and witnesses in attending the trial at Frome, amounting to 6*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.*, which were paid on Jan. 15; and the proceeds of the sale of the goods paid over to plaintiff. Had plaintiff proceeded in a Superior Court in November last, defendant could have pleaded, and sent plaintiff to trial at the assizes in March next. Execution might then have issued, and the goods seized being claimed by a third party would leave plaintiff a right to try the interpleader cause at the next August assizes, when some legal question might arise to be decided in the court above in the following Michaelmas Term or some other subsequent term. Perhaps Mr. Preston can guess better than I can what the costs would have been in this case.

That the costs of County Court proceedings ought to be lowered I agree with Mr. Preston. On the summons above-named half the 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* goes to the Government Fund; nineteen-twentieth parts of the other half, as also of the entire hearing fees, are paid to the treasurer in the name of judge's fees; whilst there is no class of men holding such responsible situations so badly paid for their services as the clerks who have been induced to keep their posts on promise of fair fixed salaries.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
GEORGE MESSITER,
Chief Clerk of the Frome County Court.
Jan. 18, 1853.

COUNTY COURT FEES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—In the LAW TIMES of the 15th instant you have published a letter, signed "W. Richard Preston." He states that in the County Courts "to recover a debt between 20*l.* and 50*l.* the summons fee is 2*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; and the hearing fee, 3*l.* 5*s.*; in all, 5*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*" This statement is most strangely incorrect. The summons fees are really 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, as below; and the hearing fee, 2*l.* 5*s.*; making together 3*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* instead of 5*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* Mr. Preston may perhaps reply, that in causes tried by a jury the hearing fees would be 3*l.* 5*s.* This is true; but he knows very well, or might know, that in the County Courts there is not one action in five hundred tried by jury; and then only in such cases as would otherwise have been tried by a jury at Nisi Prius, at ten times the expense. It therefore appears that the fees are only 3*s.* 8*d.* (instead of 2*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.*) more than are allowed in the Superior Courts. But it must be borne in mind, that for these costs the plaintiff may obtain final judgment, and have leave to issue execution immediately, and the defendant may avoid the payment of the hearing fees, 2*l.* 5*s.*, by payment of debt and summons fees into court before trial.

I am Sir, yours, &c.
Kidderminster, Jan. 17, 1853. FRED. TALBOT.

Fees in an action in the County Courts for debt exceeding 19*l.* and not exceeding 50*l.*:—

SUMMONS.	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
General Fund	0	13	4
Summons fee	0	11	8
Bailiff's fee	0	1	8
				1	6	8
HEARING.
Hearing fee	2	3	4
Bailiff's fee	0	1	8
				2	5	0
				£3	11	8

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

THE Lords Justices have held, in Re Dufaur, 20 Law T. Rep. 186, that a solicitor who deals only occasionally with money for the purpose of investment, is not a scrivener within the bankrupt law; to make him such, that must have been the general course of his business.

In Ex parte Eyre, 20 Law T. Rep. 187, it appeared, on the petition coming on for hearing, that the petitioning creditor had been unable personally to serve the bankrupt, who had gone out of the jurisdiction. The petition was dismissed with costs as against the assignees, but without costs as against the bankrupt, on the petitioners undertaking not to file another petition.

Another case of considerable interest in Bankruptcy is reported from the Court of Ex. A. assigned goods to B. as security for advances, but remained in possession as apparent owner, and afterwards, in August 1850, committed an act of bankruptcy. On 4th Sept. B., with notice of the act of bankruptcy, took possession. On 9th Sept. A. was adjudged a bankrupt and C. was appointed official assignee, and on the 20th the trade assignees were appointed, who, on Oct. 7, took possession of the goods. After this the Court of Bank. made an order for their sale under sect. 125. B. brought an action of trover, and the question now was to what period the order of the court had reference back, whether to the date of the act of bankruptcy, or the adjudication. It was held that the order related to the date of the act of bankruptcy, from which time the assignees became entitled for the creditors, and that in order to vest the property in them the Court of Bank. must make an order under the 125th section; (Heslop v. Baker, 20 Law T. Rep. 191.)

COURT PAPERS.

ORDER OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS,

APPOINTING EXAMINERS.

January 7, 1853.

WHEREAS, by an order made by the Right Honourable the Master of the Rolls, on the 18th day of January, 1844, it was, amongst other things, ordered, that every person who has not previously been admitted an attorney of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, or one of them, should, before he be admitted to take the oath required by the statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, to be taken by persons applying to act as solicitors of the High Court of Chancery, undergo an examination touching the fitness and capacity to act as a solicitor of the said Court of Chancery, and that twelve solicitors of the said court, to be appointed by the Master of the Rolls in each year, be examiners for the purpose of examining and inquiring touching the fitness and capacity of any such applicant for admission as a solicitor; and that any five of the said examiners shall be competent to conduct the examination of such applicant.

Now, in furtherance of the said order, the Right Honourable the Master of the Rolls is hereby pleased to order and appoint that Benjamin Austen, Keith Barnes, Edward Savage Bailey, William Loxham Farrer, John Swarbreck Gregory, William Henry Palmer, Edward Rowland Pickering, William Sharpe, John James Joseph Sudlow, Augustus Warren, William Williams, and John Young, solicitors, be examiners until the 31st December, 1853, to examine every person (not having been previously admitted an attorney of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, or one of them), who shall apply to be admitted a solicitor of the said Court of Chancery, touching his fitness and capacity to act as a solicitor of the said court. And the Master of the Rolls doth direct, that the said examiners shall conduct the examination of every such applicant, as aforesaid, in the manner and to the extent pointed out by the said order of the 13th day of January, 1844, and the regulations approved by his Lordship in reference thereto, and in no other manner and to no further extent.

(Signed) JOHN ROMILLY, M. R.

ADMISSION OF ATTORNEYS.

Hilary Term, 1853.

ADDED TO THE LIST PURSUANT TO JUDGE'S ORDER.

QUEEN'S BENCH.

Baty, Isaac, Hexham, articled to C. Head, Hexham
Borini, John, 91, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury; and Flanders—M. Davis, jun. Usk; Flanders
Lewis, Edward John, 10, Ely-place, Holborn—J. G. Lewis, Ely-place
Pummer, William, jun. 34, Southampton-street, Russell-square; and Canterbury—S. Plummer, jun. Canterbury Williams, William Henry, Denbigh; and Carnarvon—T. Hughes, Denbigh; and P. Morris, Denbigh.

TAKING OUT AND RENEWAL OF ATTORNEYS' CERTIFICATES.

QUEEN'S BENCH.

On 20th January, 1853.

Parkin, William, Staines-road; Hounslow.

For 1st February, 1853.

Barrell, William, 14, Robert-street, Manchester
Biller, George, 1, Onslow-terrace, Walworth
Bourne, Henry, Wolsingham, Durham
Carter, Joseph, 9, Hanover-street, Walworth
Clark, Alfred, Moulton; and Kingston-upon-Hull
Dalby, John Francis, West Bromwich
Darke, Samuel Wallwyn, Grove-lane, Camberwell; and Great Newport-street
Farrar, Frederick Augustus, 47, Charlwood-street, Belgrave-road
Gough, Charles Souldern, Oxon.; and Lantisillio, near Llangollen
Gwynne, Sampson, Southampton-street, Camberwell.
Gwyn, William Horatio, of Bungay
Hall, James Turbutt, 18, Eagle-street, City-road
Hall, Lawrence Robert, Bramcote-grove, Nottinghamshire
Hardy, Edward Webb, West Wickham
Harrington, John Joseph, 8, North-street, Westminster
Haynes, James Haynes, 11, Grafton-terrace, Kentish Town; and Gower-street
Juckes, James, Augustine, 36, Goswell-street
King, Charles Stafford, 15, Serjeant's-inn, Fleet-street
Langston, Henry, 16, Northampton-place, Canonbury-square
Law, Robert Dalton, Manchester
Llewellyn, John, Bristol
Ottaway, Philip Watson, New Sarum
Poole, David, 27, Albany-street; and Harrington-street
Phillips, William, 6, Stonefield-terrace, Islington; and Stoke
Raper, Robert George, 41, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury; Lansdowne-place; and Wakefield-street
Rattenbury, Charles Thomas, Orange Grove, New Cross
Reynard, Francis, 7, Gordon-place, Kensington
Rhoden, Frederick Jackson, Market Rasen
Richards, James George, 57, Great Portland-street
Sanderson, Charles, 28, Parliament-street; Surrey-street; Denbigh; and Wellingboro'
Shattock J., 55, Alfred-road, Paddington; Tilchester-road; and Alfred-road
Smallwood, Thomas, Shrewsbury, Salop
Smart, Samuel Walton, near Lutterworth; and Cape of Good Hope
Spencer, Robert, Gateshead
Summers, William Henry, 1, Caversham-street, Chelsea; Lower Belgrave-place; Warwick-street; Cottage-road; and Upper Eaton-street
Sykes, William, Heckmondwike; and Millbridge, near Leeds
Tooth, Robert, 156, Strand
Wells, Thomas, 18, St. Alban's-street, Lambeth; Mile End-road; Baker's-row; and Chapel-street, Pentonville
Williams, Henry, 11, Dudley-place, Paddington; North-street, Belgrave-street; and Westbourne-park Villas

Legal Observer.

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

THE judges have appointed the 28th Jan. for the hearing of errors from the Court of Queen's Bench, on which day judgment will be given in two cases from that court. They also appointed the 1st and 2nd Feb. for hearing errors from the Court of Exchequer; and the 3rd Feb. for errors from the Court of Common Pleas.

THE SPRING CIRCUITS.

On Wednesday morning the judges assembled in the Exchequer Chamber for the purpose of selecting their respective circuits for the ensuing Spring Assizes. The following is the result of the selection:—

Norfolk.—Lord Campbell and the Lord Chief Baron.

Midland.—Lord Chief Justice Jervis and Mr. Baron Parke.

Home.—Mr. Baron Alderson and Mr. Justice Coleridge.

Northern.—Mr. Justice Cresswell and Mr. Baron Martin.

Western.—Mr. Justice Erle and Mr. Justice Crompton.

Oxford.—Mr. Justice Williams and Mr. Justice Talfourd.

North Wales.—Mr. Justice Maule.

South Wales.—Mr. Justice Wightman.

Mr. Baron Platt will remain in town.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Jan. 14.

CAUNT, THOMAS, coal merchant, Newark-upon-Trent, Nottinghamshire, Jan. 28 and Feb. 18, at ten, Birmingham Court held at Nottingham. Off. as. Bittleston. Sols. Hodgkinson, Newark-upon-Trent, and Rawlins and Rowley, Birmingham. Petition, Jan. 10.

COSTERTON, GEORGE BENJAMIN, merchant, dl. & ch. Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, Jan. 24, at half-past one, Feb. 24, at two, Basinghall-st. Off. as. Johnson. Sols. Bell & Co. Bow Church-yd. Petition, Jan. 1.

EVANS, STEPHEN, grocer, Troedyrhiw, near Merthyr Tydfil, Glamorganshire, Feb. 1 and March 1, at eleven, Bristol Court. Off. as. Acraman. Sol. Pridaux, Bristol. Petition, Jan. 8.

FORD, JAMES, cattle dealer, Wolverhampton, Staffordshire, Jan. 20 and Feb. 19, at ten, Birmingham Court. Off. as. Whitmore. Sol. Hayes, Wolverhampton. Petition, Jan. 13.

JAMES, BENJAMIN, and HARDIE, THOMAS GIRDWOOD, builders, copartners, both of Newport, Monmouth, Jan. 26 and Feb. 23, at eleven, Bristol. Off. as. Hutton. Sols. G. Bachelor, Newport, W. Bevan, Bristol. Petition, Jan. 8.

LOCKYER, JOHN, metal tool, steel and iron warehouseman, Clerkenwell-green and St. John's-sq. Jan. 24, at eleven, Feb. 24, at one. Off. as. Johnson. Sol. Pearce, Giltspur-st. Petition, Jan. 14.

PETRIE, JOHN, confectioner, Cornwall-st. Plymouth, and Catherine-st. Devonport, Jan 20 and Feb. 17, Plymouth. Off. as. Hernaman. Sol. J. E. Elworthy, Plymouth. Petition, Jan. 5.

PRIES, ROBERT FERDINAND, merchant, Crosby-hall-chambers, Bishopsgate-street Within, Jan. 28, at eleven, and Feb. 25, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Johnson. Sols. Van Sandau and Cumming, King-street, Cheapside. Petition, Jan. 10.

THORNTON, PETER, plumber, Preston, Lancashire, Jan. 28 and Feb. 18, at twelve, Manchester Court. Off. as. Lee. Sol. Dodge, Liverpool. Petition, Jan. 12.

Gazette, Jan. 21.

BENNISON, STEPHEN, miller and corn and flour dealer, Bridlington-quay, Yorkshire, Feb. 16 and March 9, at twelve, Hull. Com. Ayrton. Off. as. Carrick. Sols. Messrs. Wood, York; and Wilson, Hull. Petition, Jan. 10.

CLAYBURN, HENRY, builder, Hulme, Manchester, Feb. 1 and March 1, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Pott. Sol. Hardman, Manchester. Petition, Jan. 15.

GRANT, HENRY, wine merchant, Lowther-arcade, Jan. 31, at one, March 4, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Graham. Sols. Messrs. Linklaters, Sise-lane, City. Petition, Jan. 8.

GUDE, SAMUEL, innkeeper and brushmaker, Exeter, Jan. 27 and Feb. 24, at one, Exeter. Com. Bere. Off. as. Hirtzel. Sol. Terrell, Exeter. Petition, Jan. 12.

GUNNING, HENRY JAMES, surgeon and apothecary, Okehampton, Devonshire, Feb. 2, at eleven, Feb. 24, at one, Exeter. Com. Bere. Off. as. Hirtzel. Sols. Hawkes and Bragg, Okehampton; and Stogdon, Exeter. Petition, Jan. 13.

KERSHAW, THOMAS, stone quarry worker and stone merchant, Crossland, near Huddersfield, Yorkshire, Jan. 31 and Feb. 22, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Fraser. Sols. Dearden, Rochdale; and Potter, Manchester. Petition, Jan. 11.

PARKER, EDWARD, stationer, Cheapside, and 17, Chadwell-street, St. John-street-road, Feb. 4, at twelve, March 4, at eleven, Basinghall-street. Com. Holroyd. Off. as. Groom. Sols. Jones, Spyer, and Son, Broad-street-buildings. Petition, Jan. 20.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

Gazette, Jan. 21.

GABRIELLI, ANTONIO, and EDMOND, THOMAS, merchants, Broad-street, City, and Bombay, May 22.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Barnsdall, N. timber merchant, first, 10½d. Bittleston, Nottingham.—Beach, J. apothecary, second, 1s. Young, Leeds.—Boyce, W. sen. hotel keeper, first, 5s. 2d. Edwards, London.—Canning, C. H. draper, first, 2s. 7d. Christie, Birmingham.—Cooke, V. cabinet maker, first, 1s. 4d. Christie, Birmingham.—Crook, T. manufacturer, first, 3s. 3d. Lee, Manchester.—Cullen, J. grocer and tea dealer, second, 8½d. Bittleston, Nottingham.—Higginbotham, W. silk manufacturer, first, 2s. 6½d. Lee, Manchester.—Hucks, J. cooper, first, 11d. Edwards, London.—Hunter, R. linen draper, first, 3s. 6d. Miller, Bristol.—Lampleigh, T. grocer, first, 1s. 8d. Carrick, Hull.—Long, F. importer of foreign lace, second, 1s. 1½d. Groom, London.—Lucas, Wilkinson, and Bond, calico printers, final, 6s. Lee, Manchester.—Meadowcroft, W. cotton spinner, first, 10s. 5d. and as the surviving partner of J. Butterworth, first, 11s. 4½d. Lee, Manchester.—Parker, J. innkeeper, second, 7s. 7½d. Lee, Manchester.—Parrett, T. C. money scrivener, third, 2s. 6d. Carrick, Hull.—Scott and Thompson, iron founders, first, 4s. 8½d. Whitmore, London.—Smith and Irvine, merchants, first, 3½d. sep. of A. Smith. Bird, Liverpool.—Stafford, W. H. painter and paperhanger, first, 1s. 6d. Freeman, Sheffield.—Stocks, A. L. draper, first, 3s. 4d. Freeman, Leeds.—Thomas, J. grocer, first, 2s. 4d. 1-6th. Christie, Birmingham.

INSOLVENTS' ESTATES.

Corthorn, C. currier and leather seller, first, 6s. 3d. Apply at the County Court, Lincoln.—Ware, H. boot and shoe maker, 3s. 10½d. Apply at the County Court, Lincoln.

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Jan. 11.

Evans, E. dealer in wines and spirits, Ludlow, Salop, Jan. 1. Trusts. M. Evans, innkeeper, and J. Evans, draper, both of Ludlow. Sols. G. and R. Anderson, Ludlow.—Meader, G. C. and Foot, C. wine and spirit merchants, Idol-lane, City, Dec. 11. Trusts. W. H. Mogford, wine and spirit merchant, Fenchurch-street; and S. W. Tucker, solicitor, St. Mildred's-court, Poultry.—Price, C. commission agent, Eglwysilan, Glamorgan, Jan. 3. Trust. W. Price, Eglwysilan. Sols. R. O. Maugham, Paris; W. Perkins, Groscade.—Pust, R. woolcomber and shopkeeper, Modbury, Devon, Jan. 8. Trusts. C. Trick, miller, Ashford Mills, Aveton Gifford; and H. King, butcher, Modbury. Sol. J. T. Savery, Modbury.—Shears, A. and Gowland, J. linen drapers and hosiers, under the firm of Shears and Gowland, both of Huddersfield, Yorkshire, Dec. 24. Trusts. A. Moon, staff merchant, Bradford; F. Turner, accountant, Huddersfield; and W. Gowland, butcher, Knottingley. Sols. Clough and Bantoft, Huddersfield.

Gazette, Jan. 14.

Borton, H. currier, Leamington Priors, Warwickshire, Jan. 5. Trust. T. Green, plumber, Leamington Priors. Sol. A. T. Forder, Leamington Priors.—Colt, W. beer brewer and maltster, North Walsham, Norfolkshire, Jan. 10. Trusts. M. J. Shepheard, Esq. and J. Barcham, gentleman, both of North Walsham. Sols. Tillett and Mendham, Norwich.—Devenish, M. H. stationer and printer, Southampton, Dec. 16. Trusts. J. Platch, wine merchant, and J. Bailey, builder, both of Southampton. Sol. W. H. Mackey, Southampton.—James, E. druggist, Lampeter, Cardiganshire, Dec. 16. Trusts. T. J. Hughes, Llwyngroes, Llanwenon, surgeon, W. Rees, Velindre, Pencarreg, and D. Morgan, gentleman, Lampeter. Sol. P. Vaughan, Lampeter.—Kicks, G. carpenter and joiner, Soham, Cambridgeshire, Dec. 21. Trusts. Rev. W. Clack, Unitarian minister, and C. Mainprice, auctioneer, both of Soham. Sol. T. Hustwick, Soham.—Meader, G. C. and Foot, C. wine and spirit merchants, Idol-lane, City, Dec. 11. Trusts. W. H. Mogford, wine merchant, Fenchurch-street, and S. W. Tucker, solicitor, Saint Mildred's-court, Poultry. Sols. Phillips and Sons, Abchurch-lane.—Taylor, E. confectioner, of Cooper-street and Princess-street, Manchester, Dec. 18. Trust. E. Moore, builder, Greenheys, near Manchester. Sol. C. Heywood, Manchester.—Traylen, A. farmer, Gamlingay, Cambridgeshire, Dec. 23. Trust. M. Traylen, spinster, Whittlesey. Isle of Ely. Sols. Bullivant and Whitlesey, Whittlesey.—Wright, A. carpenter and builder, Poland-street, Oxford-street, Dec. 14. Trusts. E. Shums, timber merchant, Pimlico, and O. Wood, cement merchant, Market-wharf, Regent's Park-basin. Sol. J. F. Reed, New-inn, Strand.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette Jan. 11.

Allnutt, J. and J. jun. and Arbouin, J. wine and spirit merchants, Mark-la. Jan. 1, as regards Arbouin. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Bembridge, E. and Haynes, W. B. G. saddlers' ironmongers, Birmingham. Dec. 31. Debts paid by Bembridge.—Brooke, T. S. and Greaves, J. coalmasters, Dewsbury, Jan. 1, 1849.—Bushby, H. G. and Jennings, G. woollen and linen drapers, Moreton-in-Marsh, Jan. 8. Debts paid by Jennings.—Carver, J. and G. and Brierley, W. card setting and general machine makers and iron founders, Cleckheaton, Jan. 6.—Cooper, T. and Howlett, B. attorneys, solicitors, and conveyancers, Congleton, Jan. 4.—Cottle, E. and Doogood, T. plumbers, glaziers, and painters, Cheltenham, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Doogood.—Dakin, E. and Waterhouse, A. tea dealers and merchants, St. Paul's Churchyd. Dec. 31.—Edge, T. and F. Millington, W. and Laing, W. (trustees and executors of Thomas Edge, deceased) and Hill, J. and Sandland, W. jewellers, Hatton-garden and Birmingham, Jan. 6. Debts paid by Hill and Sandland.—Eglington, R. Dearie, C. Hunter, R. H. McEwen, H. and Eglington, R. L. Calcutta, as regards R. Eglington and Hunter. Dec. 31, 1851.—Fairbrother, W. and Tanner, R. linen drapers, Banbury, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Fairbrother.—Foster, F. and Mann, W. T. brokers, Liverpool, Dec. 31. Debts by Foster.—Foster, S. and B. drapers, Nottingham, Jan. 7. Debts paid by S. Foster.—Foster, T. and S. and Furniss, M. lace manufacturers and lace merchants, Mansfield, Nottingham, as regards Furniss, Jan. 1. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Gray, E. and J. common brewers and maltsters, Tanfield, Jan. 1. Debts paid by J. Gray.—Griffiths, E. L. and Blake, F. attorneys, solicitors, and conveyancers, Newport and Cowes, Dec. 31.—Hamilton, J. and Fowles, R. coal fitters, ship brokers, and commission agents, Sunderland, Jan. 6. Debts paid by Hamilton.—Hinchliffe, A. Wimpenny, S. Woodhead, J. Clayton, E. Dyson, J. McClellan, A. Mellor, A. Riley, W. Brearley, S. Bocock, T. Child, W. Ellis, J. Hale, M. Robinson, B. Ward, S. Shaw, S. and Robinson, G. proprietors of The Huddersfield and Holmfirth Examiner newspaper, Huddersfield, Jan. 31. Debts paid by Woodhead.—Hooper, W., H., and W. W. limeburners, Exeter, Dec. 31.—Hughes, S. and F. and Hales, J. dealers in earthenware, china, and glass, Dublin, Jan. 1.—Hutchingson, E. and Needham, T. coal merchants, Liverpool, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Hutchingson.—Jeffreys, L. Miles, A. and J. H. Greenville-street, Brunswick-square, Sept. 30. Debts paid by J. H. Miles.—Johnson, W. and Hardy, J. manufacturing chemists, Church Bridge, Jan. 8.—Kay, J. and T. grocers, tea-dealers, and ship chandlers, Sunderland, Jan. 5. Debts paid by J. Kay.—Kilner, J. H. stuff manufacturer, Hipperholme, Halifax, and Barker, J. card cutter, Thornton, Bradford, Jan. 6.—Kirk, J. and Shuttleswood, F. hosiers and coal dealers, Sileby, Dec. 28.—Lees, A. and Barnes, S. machine makers and iron founders, Soho, Oldham, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Lees.—Mumford, B. and J. mining share brokers, Adams-court, Old Broad-street, Jan. 8.—Neame, A. and Green, J. tea dealers and grocers, Canterbury, Jan. 1.—Popplewell, R. J. and Lea, J. wholesale clothiers, Union-court, Old Broad-street, Jan. 7. Debts paid by Popplewell.—Syddall, S. Lomax, J. and Rushton, W. spindle and fly makers, Farnworth, Jan. 8. Debts paid by Syddall and Lomax.—Travies, G. and Armitage, W. S. tailors and woollen drapers, Barnsley, Jan. 7.—Tucker, J., H., and W. silk printers, Gresham-street, as regards J. Tucker, Dec. 27.—Wilkinson, J. S. Clayton, T. Clayton, M. widow, Shuttleworth, J. Slack, J. Temperton, T. Wise, T. sen. and T. jun. and Sharpe, J. owners and proprietors of three steam packets, called the "Wave," the "Eclipse," and the "Commerce," plying between Lincoln and Boston, for passengers and goods, and also carriers, Jan. 3. Debts paid by Wilkinson.—Williams, E. O. and J. coal and coke merchants, Luton and Houghton Regis, Jan. 31. Debts paid by John Williams.

THE FOLLOWING NEW PRACTICAL WORKS FOR THE OFFICE ARE JUST ISSUED AT THE LAW TIMES OFFICE.

THE NEW RULES and ORDERS, the NEW TABLE of FEES, and the NEW RULES relating to the ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS and the EXAMINATION of ARTICLED CLERKS, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, by E. MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 4s. (This may be had also as a Supplement to "Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act," having marginal references to the pages of that work.)

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, with all the Rules, Orders, Costs, Decisions, &c. to this time, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, the Orders being placed with the Sections of the Statute to which they relate. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 8s. bds.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS, with the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, and Notes of all the Cases decided on its construction. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of 1849, containing all those ever required in Practice, omitting the Repealed and the Scotch, Irish, Colonial, and Sessional Statutes, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction; thus presenting the whole Law as it is, in a compact form for ready use, and with a copious Index. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. (This is in continuation of the Practical Statutes of 1850, 1851, and 1852, which may still be had.)

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI. with a copious collection of Precedents of Indictments. This part contains Forms of Indictments at Quarter Sessions under the New Law. By J. E. DAVIES, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 5s. 6d.

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanac, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax, and the other Information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 1s. 1 or stamped for post, 1s3d. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanack and Time of the Moon's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 6d.

On Tuesday.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, containing all the New Rules and Orders, the New Table of Fees, and Cases decided to the end of Michaelmas Term. Price 15s. cloth.

On Thursday,

THE LAW DIGEST for the Half-Year ending January 1. By E. WISE and D. T. EVANS, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. Price 8s. 6d. bds.; 9s. cloth.

[This work gives every case, wherever reported, during the half-year, arranged so that the practitioner may find in a moment what is the latest law on any subject on which he may be engaged.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"S. S. N."—The officers of the chapel might lawfully remove by force, if necessary, a person actually disturbing the congregation or the company.

"C. E.'s" query is one of pure law, not of practice; and it is the latter alone that can be admitted here, for obvious reasons.

"PHILO;" "VIVIAN."—There is the same objection to these queries. They are purely points of law.

"J. S." (Cowbridge.) We know nothing of the case named; the letter has been sent to the reporter of the court, and if it be a point of any importance it will doubtless be reported. But, in the selection of reports, as all cannot possibly appear at once, precedence is always given to those of most immediate practical interest.

THE NEW TABLE OF FEES AND NEW RULES.

THE issue during this week of a revised Table of Fees, and of the Rules for the Admission of Attorneys, has necessarily delayed the issue of Mr. Kerr's edition of the New Rules and Orders, to which they will now be added, making that work a complete Supplement to both editions of his Procedure Act.

With these additions the work will be issued on Monday, in the following forms:—

1st. The New Rules and Orders of Hilary Term, 1853, with the New Table of Fees and the New Rules for the Admission of Attorneys, and for the Examination of Articled Clerks, with Practical Notes and new Forms. Price 4*s*.

2nd. The same, for the use of those who already possess Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act, with marginal references to the first and second editions of that work, showing the sections of the statute and pages of the book to which the several new rules relate, so as to facilitate reference. Price 4*s*.; to be ordered as the Supplement to Kerr's Procedure Act.

3rd. The SECOND EDITION of Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act, containing all the New Rules and Orders, the New Table of Fees, and the New Rules for the Admission of Attorneys, with Index, Notes, and References. Price 14*s*. 6*d*. cloth.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 29, 1853.

TO READERS.

THE unexpected issue of a new and revised Table of Fees in the Common Law Courts, and of other Orders and Rules, which it is of the first importance to our readers that they should possess immediately, has compelled us, at the last moment, not only to resort again to a double number, but to omit a very considerable quantity of reports, correspondence, legal intelligence, and the usual leading articles, which were in type.

On this occasion, however, the double number is only charged as a single one, the additional pages being presented to the reader.

VOL. XX.—No. 513.

NEW TABLE OF FEES.

WE refer the Profession to the new Table of Fees, which was issued on Wednesday last by the Judges of the Common Law Courts, and which will be found in its proper place among the Court Papers in this number. It will be seen that it effects very considerable improvements upon the former one, the Judges having, with the good feeling and good sense that distinguish them, listened to criticism and complaint, and amended the defects of the Fee Table issued at the beginning of Term.

ATTORNEYS' COSTS IN THE COUNTY COURTS.

WE cannot appeal too earnestly to the Judges who are engaged in revising the Scale of Costs to be allowed in the County Courts as between party and party, and between Attorney and Client, against any considerable curtailment of the figures that were proposed by the Committee of County Court Judges after long and anxious deliberation.

Strange as it may appear, it is strictly true, that it is for the interest of the suitors, at least as much as for that of the Profession, that the allowance for professional services should be sufficiently liberal; and it is in this aspect that we are desirous of presenting the case to the consideration of the Judges of the Superior Courts.

They will doubtless admit that, in litigation, the costs should fall upon the loser, except under very special circumstances. Justice demands it. If I wrongfully withhold some debt or right to which another is lawfully entitled, and resist his legal claim, it would be very unjust that I should be allowed to put upon him the costs necessarily incurred in pursuing his right. If, on the other hand, I prosecute a wrongful demand, I ought to pay the costs which I have thus wrongfully imposed upon my neighbour. Such is the practice of all civil tribunals in all parts of the civilised world—except in England—and in England of all the tribunals—except the County Courts.

Strange to say, these Courts, which were professedly established to be a boon to the community by enabling them to obtain justice cheaply and speedily, in practice have failed to do justice, because no sufficient provision was made in them for payment by the losing party of the costs to which he had wrongfully put the other party. Only a very small fee was allowed for professional assistance, however necessary, or whatever its amount. The consequence of this omission was, that suitors were compelled to pay their own costs, even though victorious. Often it was more expensive to win a suit than to lose one. The County Courts almost realised VOLTAIRE's witty saying, "I never was ruined but twice; once when I lost a law suit, and once when I gained one." In the famous case that decided the right of an attorney to charge his client for business done out of court in the preparing of a case for trial, the costs incurred were upwards of 15*l*., of which only about 2*l*. were recoverable from the other party, and the unfortunate plaintiff was compelled to pay the remainder out of his own pocket—having thus gained a loss of 7*l*. or 8*l*. by his verdict; and the triumphant defendant paid his debt and the small costs, and laughed at his victim.

It was to remedy this state of things that the clause was framed, adopted by Lord BROUGHAM, supported in the House of Lords by Lord LYNDHURST, and carried unanimously through both Houses of Parliament. The County Court Judges were directed to frame a scale of costs as between party and party, and submit it for the approval of the Judges of the Superior Courts. They have done so with much labour and consideration; but the latter object to the scale so prepared, as being too high.

Now we again entreat the Judges of the Superior Courts to bear in mind that there is for them one question only—What are the fair costs which ought to be paid to a respectable Attorney for his skill and trouble in conducting a suit to trial?—and those should be the costs allowed to be charged by him and recovered by his client as costs in the cause. Anything less than that would be unfair to the Attorney, but still more unjust to the client, because it would practically throw upon the client the costs to which he had been put by the other party, and which should always be borne by the loser. It is a great mistake to suppose that the Attorneys have the principal, or even a considerable, interest in this matter. On the contrary, it is a question of very secondary interest to them. They will not lose their costs; they will only receive them from the wrong party. If the costs cannot be recovered as between party and party in the suit, the Attorney will charge them to his client, who must pay them. It is the suitors who are really so deeply affected by the existing arrangements, and whom it most concerns that the scale which the Judges are now settling should not be so low that the Attorneys they are obliged to employ should have to make a charge upon them, instead of recovering it from the opposite party, as they do in the Superior Courts.

We trust we have now shown to the satisfaction of their Lordships that there is no solid reason for objecting to a fair and liberal scale of professional costs in the County Courts.

WHO IS HE?

WE have received the following printed circular from Manchester. Probably the Profession would like to know who is "the solicitor," who has made this most unprofessional agreement with the committee. When his name is ascertained, we shall be happy to give it the widest circulation. So much generosity should not be unknown to fame.

MANCHESTER SOCIETY OF GUARDIANS FOR THE PROTECTION OF TRADE.

DEBT COLLECTING DEPARTMENT.

28, Brazenose-street, 22nd Nov. 1852.

SIR,—I am desired by the Committee to announce to you the following new arrangements for this department, which are now in operation:

Those Members who agree to pay an extra Annual Subscription of 10*s*. 6*d*. will be entitled to have twenty debts twice applied for by the Secretary without further charge; beyond that number a small commission will be charged.

Debts not paid will, with the plaintiff's consent, be handed over to a Solicitor, with whom the Committee have arranged as follows:—For all Debts of Five Pounds and upwards, that he shall make legal application—take out summons—prepare the case—and pursue it through the County Court free of charge to the plaintiffs—he receiving only the Court fees: if under that amount (in which cases no fees are allowed by the Court), and also where the debt is paid to the plaintiff, and the debtor is excused the costs,—in these cases a charge of one shilling will be made for letter, and two shillings and sixpence for summons, as the case may be.

Where no money is recovered the Solicitor will make no charge.

Should you wish to avail yourself of the advantages of this department, please to return the annexed Circular to my office, signed by yourself.

I am, yours obediently,
SAMUEL COTTAM, Secretary.

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY. (a)

OF FILING, SETTING DOWN, AND ARGUING PLEAS.

A PLEA, after having been settled by counsel, must be engrossed on parchment and filed, having been previously sworn before the Master, a Clerk of Records and Writs, or the Clerk of Enrolments, and signed by defendant. Under the old practice it was necessary in certain cases to have a commission to take a plea; but now the practice of the court, of issuing commissions to take pleas in causes and matters pending therein, are, with respect to pleas taken within the jurisdiction of the Court, abolished; and they may now be filed without any further or other formality than is required in the swearing and filing of an affidavit: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 21.)

All pleas in causes or matters in the High Court of Chancery are now to be sworn and taken in Scotland, Ireland, or the Channel Islands, or in any colony, island, plantation or place under the dominion of her Majesty in foreign parts, before any judge, court, notary public, or person lawfully authorised to administer oaths in such places, or before any of her Majesty's consuls or vice-consuls in any foreign parts out of her Majesty's dominions, and the judges and other officers of the Court of Chancery are to take judicial notice of the seal or signature, as the case may be, of any such court, judge, notary public, person, consul, or vice-consul (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 22); and there are penalties for falsely swearing, &c. (1b. sect. 23), or for forging the signature or official seal of any such judge, notary public, &c. (1b. sect. 24). And pleas, whether taken by commission out of the jurisdiction of the Court or otherwise, may be filed without the oath of a messenger; and any alteration made therein previously to the taking thereof is to be authenticated according to the practice in use with respect to affidavits (sect. 25).

(a) Continued from page 178.

Whether the plaintiff in any suit in the Court commenced by bill does or does not require any answer from the defendant, or any one or more of the defendants to the bill, such defendant or defendants may, without any leave of the Court, put in a plea, answer, or demurrer, within the time allowed to the defendant for demurring alone to the bill, or within the time to be fixed by general order of the Lord Chancellor: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 13.) By the 19th of the Orders of Aug. 7, 1852, a defendant required to answer a bill must put in his plea, answer, or demurrer thereto, not demurring alone, within fourteen days from the delivery to him or his solicitor of the copy of the interrogatories which he is required to answer; but the Court is to have full power to enlarge the time from time to time, upon application being made to the Court for that purpose.

It is, however, provided that if the Court shall grant any further time to a defendant for pleading, answering, or demurring to the bill, the plaintiff's right to move for a decree under the provisions hereinafter contained shall in the meantime be suspended: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 13.)

Applications for time to plead are to be disposed of by the Master of the Rolls and the Vice Chancellors, while sitting at Chambers (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 26.)

Some pleas are not usually argued, as—1, pleas of outlawry; or 2, of a former decree; or 3, of another suit depending; because the first, being pleaded sub sigillo, the truth cannot be disputed, and the two others were generally under the old practice referred to a Master, and if the Master found the facts true, the bill stood instantly dismissed, unless the Court otherwise ordered: (see Mitf. Pl. 305.) It is presumed the Judge in chambers would now make the same inquiries as to those pleas as the Master formerly did.

No step can be taken in the cause until the plea has been disposed of; but the Court will expedite the hearing of a plea so that a motion for an injunction may be heard on the same day: (Humphreys v. Humphreys, 3 P. Wms. 397.) Nor where an answer is put in with a plea can exceptions be taken to the answer until the plea has been disposed of (Darnell v. Reyny, 1 Vern. 344), unless, perhaps, when the plea is merely to the relief, and the answer goes to the whole of the discovery: (Pigot v. Stace, 2 Dick. 496.) If the plaintiff's solicitor considers the plea good, he may, before the time for setting down the plea has expired, submit to the same, and obtain an order as of course to amend his bill, upon payment of 20*s.* costs.

After the plea has been set down, however, the order is made upon payment of taxed costs: (Ayck. 126.)

If the plea requires to be argued, upon the filing thereof by the defendant, either party is at liberty to set down the same for argument immediately (44th Order, May 1845.) Within three weeks after the filing of a plea to the whole or part of a bill, the plaintiff desiring to submit such plea to the judgment of the Court is to cause the same to be set down for argument; if he does not, such plea is to be held good to the same extent, and for the same purposes, as a plea allowed upon argument, and the plaintiff is to be held to have submitted thereto: (16th Order, May 1845, Art 19.)

Where a plea to the whole or part of a bill is not set down for argument within three weeks after the filing thereof, and the plaintiff does not within such three weeks serve an order for leave to amend the bill, or does not within such three weeks, by notice in writing, undertake to reply to the plea, the plea is to be held good to the same extent and to the same purposes, and the same costs are to be paid by the plaintiff, as in the case of a plea to the whole or part of a bill allowed upon argument; and where the plea is to the whole bill, the defendant by whom such plea was filed may, at any time after the expiration of such three weeks, obtain as of course an order to dismiss the bill:" (49th Order, May 1845.)

If the plaintiff neither amend the bill, undertaking to reply to the plea, nor set it down for argument, the defendant may move that he pay the costs of the plea and the suit; but it seems that such motion must be after notice, in order that the plaintiff may have an opportunity of replying to the plea (Roberts v. Jones, 7 Beav. 57); but an order for the dismissal of the bill may be obtained as of course: (49th Order, May 1845.)

The effect of the plaintiff filing a replication is to admit the validity of the plea, if true.

Upon the argument of a plea it may be either allowed simply, or the benefit of it may be saved to the hearing, or it may be ordered to stand for an answer. The effect of such different determinations will be now considered.

OF ALLOWING PLEAS.

If upon argument of a plea it is allowed, the effect of the decision is that it will be considered as a bar to so much of the bill as it covers. The effect of the plaintiff submitting to it without argument is the same; but in either case, whether the Court has decided or the plaintiff has admitted the plea to be good in form and substance, if the plaintiff thinks it untrue in point of fact, he may take issue upon it (Mitf. Pl. 301) by filing a replication in the manner which will be hereafter pointed out. Upon the issue thus taken the defendant must prove the facts suggested by the plea (Ord v. Huddleston, 2 Dick. 510); and if he fail in doing so, so that at the hearing of the cause the plea is held to be no bar, if it extend to discovery sought by the bill, the plaintiff will not lose the benefit of that discovery, as the Court will order the defendant to be examined on interrogatories: (Mitf. Pl. 302.)

If the defendant prove the truth of the plea, the suit, so far as it extends, is barred, even though the plea is not good in point of form or substance: (Wichalse v. Short, 3 Bro. P. C. 558.) Thus, where a person put in the plea of a purchase for valuable consideration, but omitted to deny notice of the plaintiff's title, it was held that the plea had been admitted by the replication to be good, and that, the fact of notice not being put in issue, the defendant, upon proof of the truth of the plea, was entitled, although it was irregular to have the bill dismissed: (Harris v. Ingledew, 3 P. Wms. 94, 95.)

It should be here mentioned that a replication should not be filed to a plea of the pendency of a former suit for the same matter. The proper course in such a case under the old practice was to obtain a reference of the plea to the Master (Jones v. Segueira, 1 Ph. 82); and it is presumed that under the new system the question would be disposed of at chambers.

Where a plea is allowed, it is considered as a full answer, and an injunction obtained, till answer, will be dissolved upon application, as a matter of course: (Philips v. Langhorn, 1 Dick. 148.)

With regard to costs, "where a plea to the whole or part of a bill is allowed, upon argument the plaintiff, unless he undertakes to reply to the plea, or the Court orders to the contrary, is to pay to the party by whom the plea is filed the costs of the plea, and if the plea be to the whole bill, the costs of the suit also; and in such last-mentioned case the order allowing the plea is to direct the dismissal of the bill:" (48th Order, May 1845.)

OF SAVING THE BENEFIT OF A PLEA TO THE HEARING.

The Court occasionally, upon argument by order, saves the benefit of a plea to the hearing, when it is considered that so far as appears to the Court it may be a defence, but that there may be matter disclosed in evidence which would avoid it, supposing the matter pleaded to be strictly true; and the Court, therefore, will not preclude the question: (Mitf. Pl. 303.) In such case the part of the bill covered by the plea will not require an answer: (For. Rom. 64.) With regard to costs, unless otherwise provided for, they must abide the result of the hearing: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 664.)

OF ORDERING A PLEA TO STAND FOR AN ANSWER.

Where a plea is ordered to stand for an answer, it is merely determined that it contains matter which may be a defence, or part of a defence, or it has been informally offered by way of plea, or it has not been properly supported by answer, so that the truth of it is doubtful: (Mitf. Pl. 665.) It will then be allowed to be a sufficient answer to so much of the bill as it covers (Coke v. Wilcocks, Mos. 73; 3 Atk. 815), unless by the order liberty is given to except (Maitland v. Wilson, 3 Atk. 814; Dryden v. Robinson, 2 S. & S. 529); but the exceptions must be taken within six weeks, otherwise the answer will be deemed sufficient: (16th Order, Art. 22, May 1845.) Liberty to except may be qualified, so as to protect the defendant from any particular discovery which he ought not to be compelled to make: (King v. Holcombe, 4 Bro. C. C. 439; Bayley v. Adams, 6 Ves. 586.) If, however, a plea is accompanied by an answer, and is ordered to stand for an answer, without liberty to except, the plaintiff may yet except to the answer, as insufficient to the parts of the answer not covered by the plea: (Coke v. Wilcocks, Mos. 73.) If a plea accompanied by an answer is allowed, the answer may be read at the hearing of the cause to counterprove the plea: (Mitf. Pl. 304.)

The plaintiff is entitled to the usual costs of overruling a plea, where a plea is ordered to stand for an answer: (Howling v. Butler, 2 Madd. 245.)

OF OVERRULING PLEAS.

If the Court, on argument, thinks the plea cannot under any circumstances be made use of as a defence, it is simply overruled (Dan. Ch. Pr. 666); and the defendant must make a new defence, either by a second plea, which however must not be of the same kind as the first (Freeland v. Johnson, 2 Anst. 407), or by putting in an answer, in which he may insist upon the same matter as was contained in his plea: (Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450; 1 Cox, 228.)

On a plea being overruled, the plaintiff may proceed to have his costs taxed, and issue process for the recovery of them: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 666).

OF AMENDING PLEAS AND PLEADING DE NOVO.

The Court will in some cases, where it is apparent that there is a substantial defence, and there has been evidently a slip or mistake, allow a plea to be amended: (Beames on Pleas, 321; and see Pope v. Bish, 1 Anst. 59; Merewether v. Mellish, 13 Ves. 437; Waters v. Mayhew, 1 S. & S. 220.) And where an amendment would be difficult or impossible, leave to withdraw it and plead de novo will sometimes be given: (Nobkissen v. Hastings, 2 Ves. jun. 84; 4 Bro. C. C. 253; Watkins v. Stone, 2 S. & S. 560.) It seems a second amendment will not be permitted: (1 Ves. jun. 372.) Previous to leave to amend being given, the Court will require to be informed of the precise nature of the proposed amendment, and how the slip or mistake occurred; and this must be shown to the Court, not upon the argument (Nabob of Arcot v. The East India Company, 3 Bro. C. C. 292, 300; 1 Ves. jun. 371), but on a subsequent motion, supported by affidavit: (Wood v. Strickland, 2 V. & B. 150, 157; Jackson v. Rowe, 4 Russ. 514).

Where an amended plea is put in and allowed, the defendant is not entitled to the costs of correcting his own mistake; but is entitled to the costs he would have had if the plea which was allowed had been the plea which was first filed: (Clayton v. Meadows, 2 Hare, 26.)

DISCLAIMER.

By a disclaimer, which is put in upon oath, the defendant may deny that he has any right or title to the matter in demand by the plaintiff's bill, or any part of it. He could, as we have before seen, demur, if his want of interest appeared on the face of the bill; but if it be alleged that he has an interest, and he wishes to avoid putting in a full answer, if he does not put in a plea, he must disclaim: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 288, 670; Plummer v. May, 1 Ves. 426.)

A disclaimer cannot, however, often be put in alone; for instance, where a defendant may have had an interest which he has parted with, the plaintiff may require an answer sufficient to ascertain whether that is the fact or not; and if the defendant has had an interest which he has parted with, an answer may also be necessary to enable the plaintiff to make the proper party, instead of the defendant disclaiming: (Mitf. Pl. 318.) So the defendant must answer as to fraud alleged against him (Bulkeley v. Dunbar, 1 Anst. 37); and as to facts by which the plaintiff endeavours to charge him with the costs of the cause: (9 Sim. 103; Graham v. Coape, 3 Myl. & Cr. 638.) If he puts in a disclaimer inconsistent with his answer, the matter will be taken most strongly against the defendant upon the disclaimer (Mitf. Pl. 320); and upon an application to the Court, on making out a proper case by affidavit, he will be allowed to withdraw a disclaimer which he has put in through ignorance or mistake: (Seton v. Slade, 7 Ves. 265, 267; Sidden v. Lediard, 1 Russ. & My. 110.)

Exceptions for insufficiency (the nature and form of which will be noticed when answers are treated of) may be taken to a disclaimer when an answer ought to have been put in, or to a disclaimer and answer: (Bulkeley v. Dunbar, 1 Anstr. 37; Glassington v. Thwaites, 2 Russ. 458.)

Where the defendant disclaims, the plaintiff ought not to file a replication: (Williams v. Longfellow, 3 Atk. 582.)

Where a disclaimer has been filed, the plaintiff ought either to dismiss the bill as against the party disclaiming with costs, or amend the bill; or set down the cause upon the disclaimer and answer, if he thinks he is entitled to costs (Cash v. Belcher, 1 Hare, 313); and it seems that where the person disclaiming has been made a party vexatiously, he may apply for his costs by motion (Dan. Ch. Pr. 672); but where the suit has been occasioned by the improper claim of the party who afterwards disclaimed, he will have to pay the costs of the suit: (Deacon v. Deacon, 7 Sim. 378.)

THE MAGISTRATE,
AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

A POOR-RATE was made under a local Act which only gave a power to commit for nonpayment where the goods had been removed to evade payment, and no sufficient distress can be found. Have the justices power to commit under the General Act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 14, in default of sufficient distress, although it was not suggested that there had been any fraudulent removal of the goods? The Q.B. have held, in Reg. v. The Justices of New Sarum, 20 L. T. Rep. 207, that they might do so, the local Act not limiting the powers given to the justices by the general Act.

An indictment for libel was tried at the Spring Assizes, 1852. After the following Summer Assizes, the costs were taxed under the provisions of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 9. In Hilary Term, 1853, an application was made to ERLE, J, one of the judges of oyer and terminer, before whom it was tried, to review the taxation; but ERLE, J. held that he had no jurisdiction. He said, "The two judges of oyer and terminer would have had jurisdiction down to the time of a new commission appointing their successors. In this case a fresh commission has issued for the last Summer Assizes, and I have, therefore, no further power in this matter: (Reg. v. Newhouse, 20 L. T. Rep. 212.)

CALLING OUT THE MILITIA.—We understand that it is the intention of the Government to call out the whole of the militia of England, for one lunar month's training, in April or May next. The force is to be out all over the country at the same time, with the object of checking the double, and even triple enlistments, which it is suspected have taken place. The appointment of an adjutant-general of militia is only postponed till the force is raised. Lord Palmerston so perfectly understands the working of the militia that since his accession to office matters have been adjusted which needed the master's hand. All now promises well.—Naval and Military Gazette.

THE CONVICT KIRWAN.—Mr. John Wynne, the late Under-Secretary, states, under his hand, that Lord Eglintoun was induced to commute the capital sentence pronounced upon this wretched criminal at the suggestion of the two judges who tried him, the late Lord Chancellor concurring in the recommendation. No other person or party had anything to say in the affair.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

IN the Law of Mortgage there are some decisions which it is important for the practitioner to notice. We briefly state the substance of them. In Bycroft v. Sibel, 20 L. T. Rep. 197, it was held, that a mortgagee is not obliged to produce the title-deeds of property mortgaged to him, because he could not be obliged to show his title, and that the rule extends also to drafts and copies of deeds. In the Practice of Foreclosure, under the new Equity Reform Act, there are two decisions. In Goldsmid v. Stonehewer, 20 L. T. Rep. 202, an estate was twice mortgaged. The first mortgagee filed a claim for foreclosure. The second mortgagee (a defendant) was trustee for parties under a marriage settlement. The mortgagor was tenant for life under the settlement; and the children were infants. It was held, that under rule 9 and section 42 the infant cestui que trusts were sufficiently represented by the trustee, but that the adults must be parties. But where some of the shares of the children had been assigned to trustees, they were not necessary parties. In Hanman v. Riley, 20 L. T. Rep. 203, a claim was filed by a mortgagee of a term against the mortgagor's executors and the devisees in trust of the mortgaged premises, and a sale prayed for instead of foreclosure; and that under rule 9 the Court would order that the cestui que trusts need not be further represented. The Court so ordered; and the decree directed an account to be taken of the debt due on the mortgage, then a general account of the personal estate and debts, and, if deficient, an account of real estate and incumbrances; and that after the report the Court would give plaintiff the benefit of his security, and such right as he might have against the general estate. In Smith v. Robinson, 20 L. T. Rep. 204, where a mortgagor had appeared to a suit instituted against him for foreclosure, but did not appear at the hearing, the Court refused to direct an immediate sale of the property.

In Roberts v. Collett, 20 L. T. Rep. 205, where the share of a married woman in some property was not ascertained, but would certainly be less than 300*l.*, the Court ordered, without an examination of the wife, that it should be paid to the husband.

At Common Law it has been decided that, in a declaration in debt for rent, the statement of the time when it became due is material, and must be proved, though laid under a videlicit; and therefore, where the declaration stated that, on a certain day, the rent for three quarters of a year then elapsed became due, it was held, that plaintiff could only recover the three quarters next preceding the day mentioned, although no particulars of demand had been delivered, and the day was stated under a videlicit: (Johnson v. Gibson, 20 L. T. Rep. 206.)

In Ingram v. Knowles, 20 L. T. Rep. 208, it was held by the C. P. that the fact of a tenancy may be proved by parol evidence, although there is a written agreement, but not the duration of the tenancy; and in the same Law of Landlord and Tenant it was held, in Blyth v. Dennett, 20 L. T. Rep. 209, that a mere demand for rent accrued due after notice to quit, without acceptance of such rent, is not a waiver of the notice to quit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Birmingham, 25th Jan. 1853.

SIR,—In the last LAW TIMES, there is a report of a case headed Powell v. Spencer. This is a mistake; it should have been Spencer v. Powell, our Mr. Spencer being the plaintiff.

We beg herewith to send you a report of a case decided (Re Burt) bearing upon a point as to the power of trustees to devise such estates. It seems to be at variance with a decision reported in your last number, where A. and B. were chosen trustees. A. declined to act, but did not formally renounce, and, after having survived B. bequeathed his trust estates to C. and D., who acted under his own (A.'s) will, but submitted that they were not committed to the trusts of the testator of A. B.; the court holding that they were so committed.

Indeed, our case seems to go further as to the effect of a devise of trust estates than any reported one, for it places the trust in mitibus until the Court of Chancery comes to its assistance.

We are, Sir, yours, &c.

SPENCER and SARGANT.

Re BURT.

Power of trustee to bequeath trust estates.

Burt bequeathed to Richards and Potter, their executors and administrators (not their assigns), personal property upon certain trusts, and he appointed them his executors.

Both proved Burt's will.

Potter, the survivor, bequeathed his first estates to Eborall and Watson, and he appointed them, jointly with his wife, his executors.

All three proved Potter's will.

Part of Burt's trust estates consisted of certain Consols, and Eborall and Watson petitioned that the dividends might be paid to them as Burt's trustees.

Sargant, for the petition.

KINDERSLEY, V. C.—I do not see that the present petitioners are the trustees of Burt's will. Potter had no authority to bequeath the execution of the trust. He could only pass the legal estate.

Sargant then applied for leave to amend, by joining Elizabeth Potter's name to those of the present petitioners, thus making the petition that of the executors of Potter. If Potter had not attempted to bequeath this trust, his executors would unquestionably have been competent trustees.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR.—But Potter has declared that those executors shall not be trustees. By the bequest he has taken away the legal estate from those persons who ought otherwise to have been the trustees.

Sargant.—By amending the petition, and making Eborall, Watson, and Elizabeth Potter all petitioners, the petition will be that of both classes—that of the legatees of the legal estate, and also that of Potter's executors. Is not your Honour of opinion that these two classes together can exercise the trust?

The VICE-CHANCELLOR.—No. You may amend by making this petition for the appointment of new trustees, with a further prayer for the payment of the dividends to such new trustees.

Queries on Points of Practice.

PROGRESSIVE DUTY.

SIR,—In the new Stamp Act, under the head Progressive Duty, are the following words:—"Where any deed or instrument of any description whatever chargeable with any stamp duty, together with any schedule, &c. endorsed thereon shall contain 2160 words or upwards, then for every entire quantity of 1080 words contained therein over and above the first 1080 words, there shall be charged the further progressive duty," &c. I have a draft which contains about forty folios, and it is contended that three skins will be required under the above clause. It has always been the practice with me and other solicitors in such cases only to use two skins. It will be obliging if any of your experienced readers will give their opinion of the construction of this clause.

T. H.

Answers to Queries.

IT appears to me that the case of King v. Mallings, 20 L. T. Rep. 178, answers the question of T. B. C. in your number of the 22nd instant. H.

Liverpool, 26th Jan. 1853.

SALE OF CHAPTER PROPERTY.

THE statute 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, gives power to any ecclesiastical corporation to sell to any lessee under any lease granted by such corporation, the reversion, estate and interest of such corporation in all or any of the lands comprised in such lease. A. T. STEAVENSON.

Darlington, 23rd Jan. 1853.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

IN the judgment of the Lords Justices, in the case of Ex parte Wood, 20 L. T. Rep. 196, the Lord Justice K. Bruce drew this distinction between the powers of ordinary partners and the powers of directors of companies to waive or vary the terms of the deed. He said, "In ordinary partnerships, any clause of a deed may be departed from or waived, where two, or three, or four partners alone are interested; and thus it often happens, on winding up such concerns, a different course is pursued from that pointed out by the deed. The same course, attended with the same results, is not absolutely impossible in cases of larger companies, called joint-stock companies, in which, as it is impossible for every proprietor to interfere directly in the management of the business, it is delegated to a chosen body of directors. There is a difference in acting in such case, because agents (as the directors are) must carry their instructions exactly into effect and cannot depart from their deed." This should be noted by Directors and their Solicitors.

It has been decided by the Court of Ex. that the mere payment of deposit upon shares does not constitute the payer a member of the company, so as to be liable to calls, until he has executed the deed of settlement. Referring to the Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act, MARTIN, B. said,—"I have very little doubt that it was intended that a contract of some sort should be signed, and the jury are not to draw an inference, from the mere payment of a deposit, that the person thereby intended to bind himself as a subscriber:" (The Dublin &c. Railway Company v. Pidcock, 20 L. T. Rep. 210.)

WINDING-UP.

WINDING-UP cases are happily becoming rare; that fearful litigation is fast drawing to a close, the costs being found in almost every instance to exceed the estate divided, and even the debts proved. Still, a few questions as to the liability of contributories linger in the reports. Last week presented two. Ex parte Wood, 20 L. T. Rep. 196, was a point as to the liability of a legatee of shares, where it appeared that the executor had not assented to the legacy, and the directors had not approved of the legatee as a proprietor, as was required by the deed of settlement. It was held that the legatee was not a contributory, and that the executor was such. In Ex parte Meyer, 20 L. T. Rep. 197, it appeared that the company had been projected in 1836, and a prospectus issued. It was established in 1837, but on a plan essentially different from the original one. A. took ten shares in the original company, and paid his deposit, but did not sign the deed. He took no shares in the altered company, except that he agreed to have all the deposits he had paid considered as having been paid upon one share, and he paid up the balance due on that share and the other nine shares were cancelled. This was done by a resolution of the Board in 1838, which was passed at one meeting and confirmed at the following. A.'s name was placed by the master on the list of contributories in respect of the nine shares, on the ground that the Board had not power to cancel them. But now, upon appeal, it was held that he was not liable in respect of the nine shares, but only in respect of the one share, A. not having done any act to make himself a shareholder in the new company.

RAILWAY AND OTHER BILLS ON STANDING ORDERS.

On Tuesday, Mr. Smith and Mr. May, the barristers appointed by the House of Commons to inquire into compliance with the standing orders, in the case of railway and other bills in session 1853, met for the first time at eleven o'clock, in Committee Rooms, Nos. 15 and 16. The various parliamentary agents, engineers, solicitors, and other parties interested, were in attendance, and the standing orders were declared to be complied with in the following cases:—

Woodford Railway.—For power to incorporate a company to make a line from the East and West India Docks and Birmingham Junction Railway, at Hackney, to Woodford.

East and West India Docks and Birmingham Junction Railway.—For consolidation, dissolution, and re-incorporation of company under a new name, power to construct new works and raise additional capital, and to convert debentures into a perpetual preference stock.

Bangor and Carnarvon Railway.—For power to sell or lease to the Chester and Holyhead Railway, and erect hotel at Bangor.

Londonderry, Coleraine, and Belfast Junction.—Construction of line from Coleraine to Castle Dawson, with branch to Randalstown.

Eastern Counties Railway.—Line from Loughton to Woodford.

Crystal Palace Company.—For incorporation and establishment.

Her Majesty's Theatre Association.—For incorporation of company and purchase of the lease of Her Majesty's Theatre.

Great Extramural Cemetery Association.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

Equity Practice.—Again we have to note a number of points decided upon the new practice. In Lowes v. Lowes, 20 L. T. Rep. 196, the Lords Justices reversed the decision of V. C. Stuart in a case of an administration suit, on the death of the sole plaintiff, and, under sect. 52, made an order on behalf of a person not a party to the suit, but found a creditor by the Master's Report. In Brooks v. Levey, 20 L. T. Rep. 200, V. C. Kindersley held the Act to be retrospective in its provision (s. 22); that pleas, &c. by persons resident in the colonies may be taken before our Consuls, Justices, &c. Where plaintiff had obtained an order for service of copy of bill on defendants out of the jurisdiction, and a time was fixed for appearance, the Court, in Chatfield v. Berchtolott, 20 L. T. Rep. 204, ordered the indorsement on the bill to be altered so as to correspond with the time mentioned in the order. Where a case was about to be brought before the Court upon motion for a decretal order, it was held not to be necessary to file a replication pursuant to the 36th sect. of c. 86, and order 28; but otherwise where the motion has been made and failed: (Duffield v. Sturgis, 20 L. T. Rep. 205.)

Where the sole surviving trustee of a fund had become imbecile, on a bill filed by parties interested, the Court refused to appoint a nephew, who acted as family solicitor, guardian ad litem, to put in the answer. The M. R. said, "He could find no precedent for making a solicitor guardian ad litem to a lunatic defendant: (Patrick v. Andrews, 20 L. T. Rep. 197.) In Penny v. Cooke, 20 L. T. Rep. 200, V. C. Kindersley refused a motion to produce documents not in the absolute possession of the defendant. "If," he said, "they are in the possession or control of other persons, I cannot order them to be produced." It seems that under the new practice, witnesses de bene esse are to be examined like other witnesses, and it is no sufficient reason for departing from this practice that the evidence is not to be published: (Cook v. Hall, 20 L. T. Rep. 202.)

In Warwick v. Cox, 20 L. T. Rep. 204, where a bill had been filed to which executors and trustees were parties, and a compromise was proposed, the Court refused to permit the bill to be dismissed until satisfied that the arrangement was such as executors or trustees could consent to. But such a bill might be dismissed simply by consent.

Where some depositions had been taken in the handwriting of the Examiner, and signed by the witness but not by the Examiner, who died before all the witnesses had been examined, the Court ordered the depositions to be received without his signature: (Bryson v. The Warwick, &c. Canal Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 205.)

In Somerville v. Jamieson, 20 L. T. Rep. 205, where the usual papers had not been left with the Court, the plaintiff's solicitor was ordered personally to pay to defendant the costs of the day.

Common Law.—In the new practice as to the inspection of documents, there is a case to be noted. A Judge in Chambers had made an order on defendant to allow plaintiff to inspect a bill of costs and letter stated to have been sent by plaintiff to defendant, but defendant swore that he did not recollect ever receiving them; that he could find no trace of them, and that it was impossible for him to comply with the order if made. The Court, nevertheless, refused to rescind the order. "That," said Campbell, C. J. "would be an answer to an attachment for disobeying the order:" (Powell v. Spencer, 20 L. T. Rep. 207.)

The Judges have made a rule with respect to the time for issuing executions after verdict in term. They are not to issue within fourteen days as a general rule, but subject to exceptions in special circumstances, such as defendant making away with his goods, and so on: (Bail Court, 20 L. T. Rep. 212.)

In Theobald v. Cotterell, 20 L. T. Rep. 212, it was stated by Erle, J. at Nisi Prius, that "if writs are lodged with the Sheriff for execution they are entitled to priority over writs subsequently deposited with him, unless such prior writs have been kept unexecuted by fraudulent collusion."

In the Law of Attorneys there is a very important case to be noted by the practitioner. In Cook v. Gillard, 20 L. T. Rep. 205, where a bill of costs contained items for business done in one of the Superior Courts, but there was no information as to which Court it was, and defendant did not show at the trial that any further information was practically wanted for the purpose of taxation, it was held to be sufficient under sect. 37 of the Attorneys Act. The meaning of the statute was thus stated in the judgment. "The defendant who undertakes to prove that the bill is not a bonâ fide compliance with the Act cannot found an objection upon the want of information in the bill, if it appears that he is already in possession of that information. It seems to us probable that the Legislature changed the law relating to attorneys bills from having perceived that a clerical error or an accidental oversight often worked the forfeiture of the remuneration due for many years of professional services, and therefore meant, while it secured to the client a right to reasonable information respecting the bill before an action should be brought upon it, at the same time to give the attorney security that the delivery of a bill, intending to give and giving all requisite information, should be a compliance with the Act, unless the client could show that information which was really wanted, was withheld."

Where, in an action of debt defendant called on the attorney of a third party to produce a deed of assignment from him (defendant) and his partner to A. for the purpose of showing that at the date of this deed the partnership, and therefore the liability of him (defendant) had ceased, the attorney refused as being the title deed of his client, and secondary evidence of its contents was rejected. It was held now that the attorney was justified in his refusal to produce it, and that the Judge was right in not looking at the deed to ascertain whether it was or was not a title deed: (Volant v. Soyer, 20 L. T. Rep. 238.)

SERVICE OF WRITS IN THE COUNTRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—Absence from home prevented my replying last week to the letter in your journal of the 15th inst. signed "A London Attorney," which is intended, I presume, to answer the complaint I made on the 1st inst. against many of the London attorneys for not paying the charges of the country agents for serving writs.

Your correspondent seems to assert that the fault lies at our own door, from the practice we adopt of sending the affidavits direct to the attorney in London and requesting a remittance by a post-office order, instead of forwarding the affidavits to our agents, and instructing the attorney to call for same and pay the charges. And your correspondent is actually bold enough to confess that any such request as a remittance by a post-office order is disregarded by him, and "hopes others will do likewise;" but that a desire to pay the charges to the London agent immediately receives his attention. I am afraid this only further exposes the shuffling system of many of the London attorneys employed in issuing writs. I have long since adopted the system of transmitting the affidavit through my agents when the party instructing me is an entire stranger; but I have always understood it to be highly objectionable to the Profession in London, and on one occasion of my doing so I received a strong letter of remonstrance and indignation from the worthy gentleman for putting him to the inconvenience of calling at my agent's. And I should like to know what "A London Attorney" would say if (supposing his offices are near the Strand or Regent-street, and my agent's in Tokenhouse-yard) I gave him a journey into the city for the purpose of obtaining possession of the affidavit. He would immediately condemn me for not instructing him to remit my charges by a post-office order.

However, I am resolved never to send any affidavit of service direct to the attorney (unless an acquaintance) however great the inconvenience may be to him, but to transmit it through the hands of a third party; and I hope others will do likewise. But still this does not get rid of the difficulty of obtaining payment of charges where appearances are entered and no affidavit required; and I see no general and better mode of securing the payment than as suggested in my letter of the 1st inst.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
Jan. 26, 1853. A Country Attorney.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST BRITISH SUBJECTS ABROAD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—As by the 18th section of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, any defendant, being a British subject, residing out of the jurisdiction of the Superior Courts (except in Scotland or Ireland) can be proceeded against for debts contracted in this country, and consequently a residence abroad is now no protection to parties wishful to evade payment of their debts, I beg to suggest, in order to facilitate service process of under the above-mentioned section, that a correct list of attorneys resident in the principal cities and towns of our Colonies should be from time to time published either in the "Law List" or in some other shape which would be easily accessible to the profession in this country. A similar list of professional gentlemen resident in the principal cities and towns on the Continent, who may be conversant with the English Law and Practice, would also be desirable for the same purpose. And I hope that you or some other competent authority will take up the matter so as to make the above provision of the new Act really available. I also hope that any of my professional brethren, to whom the subject is of moment, will express their opinions on the matter through your valuable columns.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
Windermere, Jan. 25, 1853. G.

FEES IN THE SUPERIOR COURTS OF COMMON LAW.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—I tried, and was successful in, a cause in the Queen's Bench at Westminster last week, and paid in court the following fees:—

	£	s.	d.
Associate	1	0	0
Tipstaff, jury, and ushers ...	1	2	0
Officer of court	0	2	6
	2	4	6

In the Law Times of Nov. 27 last are Tables of "Fees in the Superior Courts of Common Law," as recently settled by the judges, from which it appears that I should have paid 1*l.* only for (as expressed in the table relating to the Associate's fees) "every trial of a cause from plaintiff." At the foot of this table is the following memorandum:—"All other fees than those before mentioned are abolished, and are not to be taken by any person in the Associate's office under any pretence whatever." Can any of your readers explain this singular discrepancy?

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
London, Jan. 26, 1853. One, &c.

SERVICE OF PLEADINGS, &c.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—By the 164th of the new common law rules, it is provided, that "service of pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings, shall be made before seven o'clock p. m. If made after that hour the service shall be deemed as made on the following day." Now if a "pleading, notice," &c. were served after seven o'clock p. m. on Saturday, as it would, pursuant to the above-mentioned rule, be deemed to have been served on the following day (Sunday), the service would, I apprehend, be wholly void, as being deemed to have been made on a dies non.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.,
24th Jan. 1853. M. Nordon.

THE NEW RULES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—Among the recent Common Law Rules there is one that is likely to cause so much inconvenience and loss to attorneys in small practice, that I can scarcely think the judges would have sanctioned it, had they considered the probable effect; I allude to the 153rd rule, providing that it shall not be necessary to issue more than one summons for attendance before a judge. I pass over the loss of the service and attendance; we are so used to reductions that I am surprised at none which stop short at allowing us the expense of shoe-leather and our annual certificates; but this alteration goes beyond, and is not the less mischievous because apparently trifling. Many cases might be cited to show how inconveniently it will work; I will content myself with selecting one, a summons for time to plead. Most offices now close at six o'clock; a summons may be served up to seven. Suppose the attorney is absent from office the following day, through business or pleasure, until after eleven o'clock; if his business is too small to allow him to keep a clerk competent to manage it in his absence (and how many, alas! now are so), he may find on his arrival that an order of great importance has been obtained by his opponent without his knowledge, which can only be set aside, if at all, on payment of costs. In this way an order for a month's time to plead (the time inserted in the printed forms of summonses) may be obtained on the eve of the Assizes, or the 10th Aug. Surely the old practice must be restored, or service should be made at least one clear day before the return of the summons. In Chancery, where the first summons is also peremptory, it must be served two clear days before the return.

I think the judges might have taken the opportunity of increasing the almost nominal costs allowed by the Masters under the new Act on judgments for want of appearance, at least to the extent of the 5s. 6d. which has been added to the outlay since the trumpery sum was fixed; and also have reduced the office fees at least in actions under 20l., as the attorneys' fees are so much less in those actions.

I subjoin an account of what I submit would be but a reasonable scale of allowance:—

	Under 20l. £	s.	d.	Above. £	s.	d.
Letter before action	0	2	0	0	3	6
Instructions	0	3	4	0	6	8
Writ of summons, and paid ...	0	12	6	0	14	6
Bill and copy to indorse... ...	0	2	0	0	2	0
Drawing and indorsing statement of particulars	0	2	6	0	5	0
Copy and service of writ and particulars	0	5	0	0	5	0
Searching for appearance and paid	0	3	10	0	3	10
Affidavit of service, and paid	0	5	0	0	6	0
Copy of writ and particulars to annex	0	2	0	0	2	0
Paid for filing writ and affidavit, and attending	0	7	4	0	7	4
Drawing judgment	0	3	4	0	3	4
Engrossing on paper	0	3	4	0	3	4
Entering on Roll and paid for ditto	0	4	4	0	4	4
Paid for signing and attending	0	9	4	0	9	4
Letters	0	2	0	0	4	0
	3	7	10	4	0	2
Present allowance	2	14	0	3	8	0
Proposed increase	0	13	10	0	12	2

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Jan. 17, 1853. N. S.

SERVICE OF WRITS IN THE COUNTRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I am not surprised that you have received several letters on this subject. I have been honoured with the agency of many London solicitors, and had a list of about thirty owing me money. A short time since I wrote to all of them, having previously written twice or thrice to several, and I have only been favoured with replies from four. With your permission I will insert in your periodical the names and addresses of such as I find immovable after two more applications. I think this will be a better course than a County Court summons, as their conduct will be more exposed.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

X. Y. Z.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

A COUNTY COURT appeal, involving an interesting point of practice, on the trial of an interpleader, was last week reported from the Ex. The plaintiff (the claimant of the goods in dispute, as against the execution creditor) put in and proved an assignment by way of mortgage to him of the goods in question. The defendant then proceeded to prove the deed to be fraudulent as against creditors. The Judge held it to be fraudulent. The plaintiff proposed to put in evidence to show that it was not fraudulent, but the Judge refused to receive it. Itwas now held that he was wrong in rejecting this evidence, and a new trial was directed. PARKE, B. in his judgment, said,—

After the case of Wright v. Wilcox, in the C.P. I will not say it is not in the Judge's discretion; but the Judge ought to have exercised that discretion in this case by receiving the evidence. Browne v. Murray, Ry. & Moo. 254, was a decision by Abbott, C.J. and is in my opinion quite correct. That was an action for a libel, where the general issue was pleaded, and also special pleas in justification; it was there held the plaintiff may, in the outset, give all the evidence he intends to offer to rebut such justification, or he may do so in reply to evidence produced by the defendant; but he is not entitled to give part of such evidence in the first instance, and to reserve the remainder for reply to the defendant's case. That is the rule generally acted on in the Superior Courts, and should be adopted in the County Courts. Certainly there are no pleadings, as all is there by parol; the bailiff having seized the goods for the execution creditor, the plaintiff claims them by virtue of this deed which he gives in evidence. If fraud be imputed to the plaintiff by the defendant, it is incumbent on him to prove it; and when he has done so, it was then competent to the plaintiff to give evidence to negative that alleged fraud. No consideration was necessary to support the deed, and the deed therefore was primâ facie good. It was incumbent on the defendant then to prove fraud, which he appears to have done to the Judge's satisfaction, and I am far from saying he was wrong in that as far as it went; but it certainly was open then to the plaintiff to be allowed to tender evidence to disprove the fraud; the Judge refused the evidence offered, in which I think he was wrong.

This should be noted in the books of practice, as the point is not unlikely to recur: (Shaw v. Beck, 20 L. T. Rep. 211.)

THE NEW SCALE OF COSTS IN THE COUNTY COURTS.—A CASE IN POINT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I have read your article in the LAW TIMES of the 22nd inst. with considerable interest, and have a case which completely exemplifies the truth of your remarks. A client of moderate means has just sustained a loss of about 30l. through the gross neglect of the officers of a certain railway company, and unless the company make proper compensation, I shall bring an action on his behalf against them, not in the Superior Courts at Westminster, or for our next county assizes, but in the monthly County Court, held at the scene of the loss, a very few miles from us, and where all the evidence is to be had,—this mode of bringing the point to an issue being very much cheaper, more convenient, and speedier, with the great advantage, too, of having the case decided by a painstaking, sensible, and impartial judge, instead of being exposed to the piebald, capricious, and guess-kind of verdicts which my experience teaches me to fear as too probable from a county, or even a Middlesex jury. Indeed, I think, but for the County Court, we should leave the matter alone, as a powerful company, having the public money to sport with, would not feel our apprehensions of the mazes, costs, delays, and uncertainties of an action in the Superior Court. I shall (entirely sharing in your views upon the separation of duties of attorney and advocate), for the sake of having the case properly argued before the judge, and the various points and cases properly raised and cited at the trial, employ a counsel, previously getting up the evidence and preparing my brief, in addition to a case for his opinion and advice thereon. If we succeed, I, as the attorney, shall be entitled to the single fee prescribed by the Act, i. e. so far as the defendant's liability to pay extends; but my client must, hard enough, pay me all other charges necessarily incurred, by way of penalty, as it were, for preferring the more convenient mode of redress provided by the County Court. It must be remembered that a case of this kind, one which involves important public principles and professional trouble and responsibility equal to that bestowed if the action were to be tried before a judge and jury at Westminster, is quite exceptional to those generally tried in County Courts. No injustice, but much advantage, as well as common fairness, would attend the speedy settlement of a proper scale of costs to meet such cases. It is quite an error to suppose that parties will be driven to the Superior Courts, though they are unfairly dealt with by placing the successful suitor in the local courts on an unjust and unequal footing compared with suitors in the higher courts; and, from what I have seen of County Courts, I feel convinced that your reasoning on the subject, and results of the two distinct classes of cases which now come before them, is perfectly correct. Those sitting in high places know very little of the real estimation in which these local jurisdictions, with all their real or fancied defects, are held by the multitude, or of their moral influence and striking effects in the country.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

AN ORIGINAL SUBSCRIBER, AND ATTORNEY OF SEVENTEEN YEARS' STANDING.

P.S.—Is there any prospect of the new scale being settled and coming into operation within a month?

Jan. 24, 1853.

COUNTY COURT ABUSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—My object in addressing you upon the above subject, was with a view of showing the variance between the moneys payable actually out of pocket in the conduct of causes in the Superior and County Courts, and with a hope that some member of the Profession might suggest a remedy which would render the course of procedure in the latter less expensive to the suitor, and yet remunerative to the professional man. I am exceedingly obliged to your correspondents, Mr. Messiter and Mr. Talbot, for their correction of my errors as to the amount of fees payable to recover a sum between 20l. and 50l. in the County Court; no doubt they will be equally obliged to me for the correction of some of theirs. Mr. Messiter says, "As I understand the practice in Superior Courts, the 3l. 8s. in town, and 4l. in country cases, are the costs indorsed on the writ first issued, and if debt and such costs be paid in four days from service further proceedings will be stayed." Therefore, as Mr. Messiter understands the Superior Court practice, he understands it wrongly; the scale of costs payable in four days from service of the writ is not different under the new scale of fees to what it always has been, with the exception of one item—the indorsement of special particulars being allowed at 5s. over, and 2s. 6d. under 20l.; whereas, before the scale was framed, 2s. only for costs to indorse was allowed in all cases; the 3l. 8s. and 4l. is, therefore, the whole costs allowed for a judgment by default, including all fees to the attorney and the court. Mr. Messiter can, with little trouble, inform himself of the correctness of this statement. Mr. Messiter next tells us, "In County Courts the costs for any sum between 20l. and 50l. are—summonses, 1l. 6s. 8d.; if settled before cause called in court no further costs are incurred." This is one of the abuses I complain of, for the whole 1l. 6s. 8d. goes in court fees, and is all the defendant is called on to pay, when (as in many instances is the case) a plaintiff may have been compelled to employ an attorney to draw and engross two fair copies of his particulars of demand to be issued with the summons, and for which he must pay out of his own pocket. Why should not 5s. be charged for issuing all summonses as for all writs, and the difference paid to the attorney (if there be one) as in the Superior Courts? And, further, I presume the settlement Mr. Messiter means is payment of debt and costs "instantur," for if time be given to pay by instalments, a hearing-fee of 2l. 5s., instead of settling, as in the Superior Courts, by a judge's order, at an expense of 4s. out of pocket, must be paid. Mr. Messiter next gives us the full particulars of some cause tried in the Trowbridge County Court, and says, "Had plaintiff proceeded in a Superior Court in November last, a legal question might have arisen to be decided in Michaelmas Term next. No doubt a legal question "might" have arisen, and if it had, the action being to recover more than 20l., was there not a right of appeal, which "might" have been decided next Michaelmas Term. It is to be presumed that the legal question did not arise, or it "might" have gone into the much dreaded Superior Courts. Mr. Messiter next tells us that he agrees with Mr. Preston that the fees ought to be lowered, and concludes by stating that no class of men are so badly paid as County Court clerks. Why does not Mr Messiter resign? and let all others who are dissatisfied follow his example; and when the Legislature finds that men of adequate ability cannot be found without adequate remuneration, their salary will be increased. Now, a word with Mr. Talbot (and let him bear in mind I am complaining of moneys out of pocket); he admits that to recover a judgment by default between 20l. and 50l., the fees in the County Court are 3s. 8d. more than in the Superior Courts; now let us see how much is out of pocket in each case. In the County Court all the 3l. 11s. 8d. is paid out of pocket; the attorney does not receive one shilling; in the Superior Court the fees paid are 1l. 0s. 6d., which leaves 2l. 7s. 6d. profit for the attorney. Mr. Talbot is perhaps aware that in the County Courts a plaintiff is bound to prove his case whether the defendant appears or not, and let the expense of doing so be what it may. "He knows very well, or might know" also, if he liked, that to try a cause with a jury in the County Court over 50l. the fees are, summons 2l. 6s. 8d. and hearing fee 8l. 2s., and that it does not "quite" cost ten times as much in fees out of pocket in the Superior Court as in the County Court. In conclusion he tells us that it must be borne in mind that on payment of these most exorbitant demands, the plaintiff is entitled to final judgment and may have leave to issue execution immediately. I wish him to understand that on payment of 1l. 0s. 6d. money out of pocket in the Superior Court, instead of 3l. 11s. 8d. in the County Court, he is entitled to the same advantage in the case of a judgment by default without being compelled to take the debt and costs at 5s. or 10s. per month.

In conclusion allow me to apologize for writing so long a letter, and assure you that your regard for the interests of the profession is my only excuse for requesting its insertion.

I am Sir, yours, &c.

W. RICHARD PRESTON.

23, New Broad-street, Jan. 25, 1853.

COUNTY COURTS CLERKS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I beg through the medium of your columns to bring under the notice of the profession the circumstances following, which, if not absolutely illegal, are at all events very irregular, and I believe I am correct in stating, that at almost every County Court for which this gentleman acts as clerk, there appears an attorney from a town twelve miles distant, with a brief made out in the clerk's office, and who can in most cases never have previously seen the parties he appears for.

A client of mine some time ago applied to this clerk of the County Court, in some County Court business, and merely as clerk; and some time afterwards was served with a signed bill, containing (amongst other similar charges) the items following:

	s.	d.
Yourself
Attending, consulting, &c.	6	8
Drawing and making three copies of particulars of your claims	5	0
Attending you as to the evidence to be given in this case. Drawing minutes of same, and making copy thereof	7	6

I purposely abstain from all remark at present, but submit the circumstances to our profession; and may add, that attempts have been privately made to stop this irregular practice, hitherto without effect.

AN ATTORNEY.

SITTINGS FOR HEARING DEFENDED CAUSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—It has occurred to me that a great boon would be conferred upon both branches of the Profession, and the public generally, if the judges of the County Courts would set apart a specified portion of the day during the sittings for the hearing of defended causes intended to be argued by counsel or attorney, after the practice at judges' chambers.

This would enable the suitor, in many cases, to obtain the assistance of solicitors of the highest respectability and good practice, who, under the present system, cannot undertake a case in these courts for their clients without in most cases suffering a positive loss, owing to the impossibility of ascertaining at all when any cause is likely to come on, and the trifling fee allowed for appearing compared with the great loss of time. This would of course secure the attendance of a more numerous Bar, and be a great step towards giving to these courts that high position in the estimation of the public to which, as a branch of the judicial administration of this country, they are entitled.

Practically this might easily be done, by requiring all parties appearing by counsel or attorney to signify their intention of so doing within a specified number of days previous to each sitting, so that a cause list might be made out by the proper officer of the court.

I enclose my card, and remain, Sir, yours, &c.

E. C.

COURT PAPERS.

Privy Council.

Colonial Appeals.

REGULATIONS OF THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE.

AT the court at Windsor, the 27th Nov. 1852. Present, the Queen's most excellent Majesty, in Council.—Whereas by an Act passed in the session of Parliament, holden in the seventh and eighth years of her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for amending an Act passed in the fourth year of the reign of his late Majesty, intituled 'An Act for the better Administration of Justice in his Majesty's Privy Council, and to extend its Jurisdiction and Powers;'" it was amongst other things provided, that it should be competent for Her Majesty, by an order or orders, to be from time to time for that purpose made, with the advice of her privy council, to provide for the admission of any appeal or appeals to Her Majesty in council, from any judgments, sentences, decrees, or orders of any court of justice within any British colony or possession abroad, although such court shall not be a Court of Errors or a Court of Appeal within such colony or possession; and it shall also be competent to her Majesty, by any such order or orders as aforesaid, to make all such provisions as to her Majesty in Council shall seem meet for the instituting and prosecuting any such appeals, and for carrying into effect any such decisions or sentences as her Majesty in Council shall pronounce thereon: provided always, that it shall be competent to her Majesty in Council to revoke, alter, and amend any such order or orders as aforesaid, as to her Majesty in Council shall seem meet.

And whereas it is expedient that provision should be made in pursuance of the said recited enactment to enable parties to appeal in civil causes from the decisions of the Supreme Court of the province of New Brunswick to her Majesty in Council, the same not being a Court of Error or of Appeal;

It is hereby ordered by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, that any person or persons may appeal to her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in her or their Privy Council, from any final judgment, decree, order, or sentence of the said Supreme Court of the province of New Brunswick, as a Court of Civil Judicature, or as a Court of Revenue or of Escheat, in such manner, within such time, and under and subject to such rules, regulations, and limitations as are hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, in case any such judgment, decree, order, or sentence shall be given or pronounced for or in respect of any sum or matter at issue above the amount or value of 300*l.* sterling, or in case such judgment, decree, order, or sentence shall involve, directly or indirectly, any claim, demand, or question to or respecting property in any civil right amounting to or of the value of 300*l.* sterling, or in case the matter in question relates to the taking or demanding any duty payable to her Majesty, her heirs and successors, or to any fee of office, or other such like matter or things, whereby the rights of her Majesty, her heirs or successors, may be bound, the person or persons feeling aggrieved by any such judgment, decree, order, or sentence, may, within fourteen days next after the same shall have been pronounced, made, or given, apply to the said court by motion for leave to appeal therefrom to her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in her or their privy council, or if the said court be not sitting, then by petition to either of the judges of the said court. And in case such leave to appeal shall be prayed by the party or parties who is or are directed to pay any such sum of money, or perform any duty, the said court or such judge as aforesaid, shall and is hereby empowered either to direct that the judgment, decree, order, or sentence, appealed from shall be carried into execution, or that the execution thereof shall be suspended pending the said appeal, as to the said court or such judge as aforesaid may appear to be most consistent with real and substantial justice. And in case the said court, or such judge as aforesaid, shall direct such judgment, decree, order, or sentence, to be carried into execution, the person or persons in whose favour the same shall be given, shall, before the execution thereof, enter into good and sufficient security, to be approved by the said court, or such judge as aforesaid, for the due performance of such judgment or order as her Majesty, her heirs and successors, shall think fit to make upon such appeal. And that in all cases, security shall also be given by the party or parties appellant in a bond or mortgage or personal recognizance, not exceeding the value of 500*l.* sterling, for the prosecution of the appeal and for the payment of all such costs as may be awarded by her Majesty, her heirs and successors, or by the judicial committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council, to the party or parties respondent; and that such security as aforesaid for the prosecution of the appeal, and for the payment of all such costs as may be awarded, be completed within twenty-eight days from the date of the motion or petition for leave to appeal; and the party or parties appellant shall then, and not otherwise, be at liberty to prefer and prosecute his, her, or their appeal to her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in her or their privy council, in such manner and under such rules as are or may be observed in appeals made to her Majesty from her Majesty's colonies and plantations abroad.

And it is further ordered, that it shall be lawful for the said court, at its discretion, on the motion, or if the said court be not sitting, then for either of the judges of the said court, upon the petition of any party who considered himself aggrieved by any preliminary or interlocutory judgment, decree, order, or sentence of the said court, to grant permission to such party to appeal against the same to her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in her or their privy council, subject to the same rules, regulations, and limitations, as are herein expressed respecting appeals from final judgments, decrees, orders, and sentences.

Provided also, that if in any action, suit, or other proceeding, it shall so happen that no final judgment, decree, order, or sentence can be duly given in consequence of a disagreement of opinion between the judges of the said court, then and in such case the final judgment, decree, order, or sentence may be entered, pro formâ, on the petition of any of the parties to the action, suit, or other proceeding, according to the opinion of the chief justice, or in his absence, of the senior puisne judge of the said court: provided that such judgment, decree, order, or sentence shall be deemed a judgment, decree, order, or sentence of the court for the purpose of an appeal against the same, but not for any other purpose.

Provided always, and it is hereby ordered, that nothing herein contained doth or shall extend or be construed to extend to take away or abridge the undoubted right and authority of her Majesty, her heirs and successors, upon the humble petition of any person or persons aggrieved by any judgment or determination of either of the said courts, at any time to admit his, her, or their appeal therefrom, upon such terms, and upon such securities, limitations, restrictions, and regulations as her Majesty, or her heirs or successors, shall think fit, and to reverse, correct, or vary such judgment or determination as to her Majesty, her heirs or successors, shall seem meet.

And it is further ordered, that in all cases of appeal made from any judgment, order, sentence, or decree of the said court to her Majesty, heir heirs or successors, in her or their privy council, a true and correct copy of all evidence, proceedings, judgments, decrees, and orders, had or made, in such cases appealed against, so far as the same have relation to the matters of appeal, such copies to be certified under the seal of the said court. And that the said court shall also certify and transmit to her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in her or their privy council, a copy of the reasons given by the judges of such court, or by any of such judges, for or against the judgment or determination appealed against. And it is further directed and ordained, that the said court shall, in all cases of appeal to her Majesty, her heirs or successors, conform to and execute, or cause to be executed, such judgments and orders as her Majesty, her heirs or successors, in her or their privy council, shall think fit to make in the premises, in such manner as any original judgment, decree, or decretal orders, or other order or rule of the said court, should or might have been executed.

And the Right Honourable Sir John Pakington, Bart., one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is to give the necessary directions herein accordingly.

C. C. GREVILLE.

Equity Courts.

Lord Chancellor's Court.

ORDER OF COURT.

"WHEREAS the Right Hon. Sir George James Turner, Knight, hath resigned his office of Vice-Chancellor of the Court of Chancery, and whereas the Hon. Sir William Page Wood, Knight, hath been appointed by her Majesty Vice-Chancellor of the said Court of Chancery, and whereas it is necessary to make provision for the hearing of the causes and matters which at the time of such resignation were attached to the court of the said late Vice-Chancellor, now I do hereby order,—

"1. That every cause and matter which at the time of the said resignation was attached to the Court of the late Vice-Chancellor Sir George James Turner be transferred to the Court of the Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood, and every such cause and matter is henceforth attached to the Court of the said Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood, unless removed therefrom by any special order to be made by the Lord Chancellor, or the Lords Justices of Appeal.

"2. That all pleas, demurrers, causes, claims, rehearings, further directions, exceptions, and petitions now standing for hearing in the paper of the late Vice-Chancellor Sir George James Turner be transferred to the paper of the Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood, unless removed therefrom by any special order to be made by the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Justices of Appeal.

"3. That all motions, petitions, and further proceedings in causes and matters to which the foregoing orders refer shall (subject to the provisions of the 15th of the General Orders of the 5th of May, 1837) be heard before the judges to whose court the same are, under the provisions of these orders, respectively attached, unless removed therefrom by any special order of the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Justices of Appeal.

"CRANWORTH, C."

ADMISSION OF SOLICITORS.

The Master of the Rolls has appointed Monday, Jan. 31, at the Rolls Court, Chancery-lane, at four in the afternoon, for swearing solicitors.

Every person desirous of being sworn on the above day must leave his common law admission or his certificate of practice for the current year at the Secretary's office, Rolls-yard, Chancery-lane, on or before Saturday, the 20th instant.

Common Law Courts.

HILARY TERM, 1853.

DIRECTIONS TO TAXING MASTERS, AND SCALE OF COSTS.

(In lieu of directions now in force.)

1. Between the 1st day of September and the 24th day of October in each year, one of the Masters of the Court of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer shall have authority to tax bills of costs, take references, and perform other necessary and immediate matters arising in or appertaining to any or either of the said courts at the office of his own court; and for such purpose one of the said Masters shall attend on certain days in each week, as may be found necessary, and of which due notice shall be affixed in the judges chambers and in the respective offices of the Masters of each court; and such Master shall be considered as the vacation Master.

2. In order to diminish as much as possible the costs arising from the copying of documents to accompany the briefs of counsel, the Masters are to allow only the copying of such documents, or such parts of documents, as they may consider necessary for the instruction of counsel, or for use at the trial.

3. No fee to counsel to be allowed on writs of trial, except on trials before the judge of the Sheriffs' Court of London, or of other Courts of Record where attorneys are not allowed to practise, and then one guinea only.

4. The Masters shall have discretion in all cases to allow as between party and party the fees of counsel or special pleader for drawing pleadings or other proceedings, whether special or otherwise, and advising.

5. When judgment is signed on a cognovit, or on a judge's order authorising the plaintiff to sign judgment, no declaration to ground judgment shall be necessary or allowed on the taxation of costs.

6. The costs of attendance by counsel or special pleader before a judge at chambers shall in no case be allowed as between party and party, unless the judge shall certify for such allowance.

7. In all actions on contract, other than cases wherein by reason of the nature of the action no writ of trial can by law be issued, where the sum recovered or paid into court, and accepted by the plaintiff in satisfaction of his demand, or agreed to be paid on the settlement of the action, shall not exceed twenty pounds (without costs), the plaintiff's costs as against the defendant shall be taxed according to the lower scale of allowances in the schedule of costs hereunto annexed. Provided, that in case of trial before a judge of one of the Superior Courts, or judge of assize, if the judge shall certify on the postea that the cause was proper to be tried before him, and not before a sheriff or judge of an inferior court, the costs shall be taxed on the higher scale.

8. Where in like actions the sum endorsed on the summons shall be more than twenty pounds, but the plaintiff fails to recover more than that sum, and the judge does not certify as aforesaid, the plaintiff's costs against the defendant, whether between party and party or as between attorney and client, shall be taxed as upon a writ of trial before a judge of a Court of Record where attorneys are not allowed to act as advocates, as hereinafter provided for, but the defendant's costs, if any, are to be taxed upon the higher scale: provided, that in cases triable before the sheriff or judge of an inferior court, where the judge shall refuse to make an order for such trial, the judge may, if he shall think fit, direct at the time of such refusal on what scale the costs of each party shall be taxed, and in default of such direction the costs of both parties shall be taxed on the higher scale.

9. At the head of every bill of costs taken to the taxing officer to be taxed, it shall be stated whether the sum recovered, accepted, or agreed to be paid exceeds the sum of twenty pounds, or not, in the following form:—

Debt above twenty pounds.
Debt twenty pounds or under.

GENERAL ALLOWANCE FOR PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS; AND IN CASES UNDER 20*l.* AS WELL BETWEEN ATTORNEY AND CLIENT AS BETWEEN PARTY AND PARTY.

WRITS.	Above 20*l.* £ s. d.	Under 20*l.* £ s. d.
Summons	0 12 6	0 10 0
Concurrent summons	0 10 0	0 7 6
Renewed summons	0 10 0	0 7 6
Capias	0 12 6	—
Alias	0 10 0	—
Pluries	0 10 0	—
Capias ad satisfaciendum	0 12 0	0 11 0
Renewed ca. sa.	0 9 6	0 8 6
Ca. sa. for the residue	0 14 0	0 13 0
Renewed	0 11 6	0 10 6
Fieri facias	0 12 0	0 11 0
Renewed	0 9 6	0 8 6
Renewed for the residue	0 14 0	0 13 0
Renewed	0 11 6	0 10 6
Fi. fa. de bonis ecclesiasticis	0 14 6	—
Renewed	0 12 0	—
Habere facias pos. and fi. fa. or ca. sa. for costs in one writ	0 18 0	—
Habere fa. pos. alone	0 15 0	—
Special indorsements on writs of summons	0 5 0	0 2 6
Writ of revivor	0 12 6	0 10 0
Ejectment	0 15 0	—
Of trial, exclusive of fee		0 8 0
Subpœna ad test.	0 7 0	0 5 0
Subpœna duces tecum	0 9 0	0 7 0
If above four folios, additional per folio	0 0 8	0 0 4
Exigi facias	1 1 0	—
Capias utlagatum	1 1 0	—
Elegit, Nos. 9, 10, and 11, in New Rules	0 15 0	—
Ditto, Nos. 12, 13, and 14	1 0 0	—
Attachment	0 12 0	—
Detainer	0 12 6	—
Habeas corpus obtained by plaintiff, including allowance	1 0 0	—
Procedendo	0 15 0	—
Venditioni exponas	0 13 6	—
Supersedeas, if not issued by a prisoner	0 11 0	—
COPY AND SERVICE OF WRITS.
Of summons, the defendant being served in London, Middlesex, or Surrey, within two miles of the place of business of the attorney, for each defendant	0 5 0	0 5 0
If beyond that distance, additional for every mile, but in cases under 20*l.* not to exceed ten miles	0 1 0	0 0 6
If the defendant should be served in any other county, the same allowance, but the distance to be calculated from the office of the attorney employed to effect service.

	Above 20*l.* £ s. d.	Under 20*l.* £ s. d.
Of writ of revivor, the same as summons.
Of writ of ejectment, the same as of writ of summons for each defendant And in addition, for every folio of copy beyond three	0 0 4	—
Correspondent's charges for service of writ, including affidavit of service, and exclusive of mileage in cases in which the fixed sum for costs does not apply	0 18 0	0 12 0
The like for service of subpœnas	0 8 6	0 5 0
Extra for subpœnas duces tecum	0 2 0	0 2 0
Notice of writ for service on a foreigner out of jurisdiction	0 3 0	0 3 0
Agents charges according to circumstances, &c.
In cases in which the defendant shall avoid service, and an order shall be made to proceed, a sum will be allowed for attendances to serve according to circumstances.
Of subpœna ad test.	0 5 0	0 3 0
Of subpœna duces tecum	0 7 0	0 5 0
Mileage as before.
INSTRUCTIONS.
Instructions to sue or defend, for pleadings, special affidavits where allowed, and to counsel on special matters	0 6 8	0 3 4
To counsel in common matters	0 3 4	0 3 4
For brief	0 13 4	0 6 8
If difficult, and many witnesses or documents, discretionary		Nil.
For every suggestion	0 6 8	0 3 4
For plea of suggestion	0 6 8	0 3 4
For issue in fact by consent	0 13 4	0 6 8
For suggestion to revive, or writ of revivor when no rule necessary	0 6 8	0 3 4
For rule for writ of revivor, when necessary	0 6 8	0 3 4
For proceeding in error	0 6 8	—
To defend for executor, after suggestion of death of original defendant	0 6 8	0 3 4
For agreement of damages	0 6 8	0 3 4
For grounds of error	0 6 8	—
For assignment of errors after notice	0 6 8	—
For confession of action in ejectment as to the whole or in part	0 6 8	—
To reduce special jury	0 13 4	—
DRAWING PLEADINGS, &c.
Declaration, inclusive of instructions and engrossing, and of attendance to file or deliver	1 5 0	0 10 0
If above ten folios, for every folio	0 1 0	0 1 0
One or more pleas, if three folios or under, exclusive of instructions but inclusive of ingrossing	0 4 0	0 3 0
If above three folios, for every folio drawing	0 1 0	0 1 0
Joinder of issue, inclusive of ingrossing	0 4 0	0 3 0
Demurrer inclusive of ingrossing	0 4 0	0 3 0
Joinder in demurrer, inclusive of ingrossing	0 4 0	0 3 0
Marginal statement of matter of law for argument, exclusive of copies for the judges	0 6 8	0 3 4
Replications, new assignments, grounds of error, assignment of errors, pleas to assignment of errors, and other pleadings, the same as the foregoing charges for pleas.
Issue or demurrer book	0 6 8	0 3 4
Record	Nil.	Nil.
Postea, when drawn by attorney, including engrossing, for every folio	0 1 0	0 1 0
Judgment, whether by default or final	0 3 4	0 3 4
Authority to receive moneys out of court	0 3 0	0 2 0
Suggestions, pleas to suggestions, and subsequent pleadings, of three folios or under, inclusive of ingrossment	0 4 0	0 3 0
If above three folios, for every folio drawing	0 1 0	0 1 0
Issue for the trial of facts by agreement, for every folio	0 1 0	0 1 0
Special case, per folio	0 1 0	0 1 0
Agreement of damages and copy, if five folios or under	0 6 8	0 3 4
Above five folios, for every folio drawing	0 1 0	0 1 0
And copy per folio	0 0 4	0 0 4
Drawing writ of inquiry	0 3 4	Nil.
Special particulars of demand or set-off and copy, per folio	0 0 8	0 0 4
Short ditto, and copy	0 5 0	0 2 6

	Above 20*l.* £ s. d.	Under 20*l.* £ s. d.
Abstract of pleas, when necessary, and fair copy, and copy for judge	0 5 4	0 3 4
Bill of costs and copy for taxation, per folio	0 0 8	—
Copy for the opposite party	0 0 4	—
Drawing bill of costs and copy, per folio 4*d.*, not to exceed		0 4 0
Copy for the opposite party, per folio 4*d.*, not to exceed		0 4 0
Drawing and ingrossing common cognovit, and attendance thereon	0 13 4	0 6 8
If special and long	1 0 0	0 10 0
Replication accepting money out of court in full of demand, inclusive of instructions	0 4 0	0 3 0
Similiter or joinder of issue to obtain order to try before sheriff		0 3 0
INGROSSING AND COPYING.
Declarations, above ten folios, per folio	0 0 4	0 0 4
Other pleadings before enumerated, above three folios, per folio	0 0 4	0 0 4
Issue (pleadings), if fifteen folios, or under	0 5 0	—
If above fifteen folios, for every folio	0 0 4	0 0 4
Issue (pleadings), if ten folios or under		0 3 4
Above ten folios, per folio		0 0 4
All proceedings on paper, per folio	0 0 4	0 0 4
The like on parchment, per folio	0 0 6	0 0 4
Judgments for non-appearance on specially indorsed writs, or writs of revivor, and in ejectment, to be taken as nine folios, including the writ in actions above 20*l.* and six folios under 20*l.*
The allowance of 1*l.* 3*s.* 2*d.* for interlocutory judgments will be discontinued, and the drawing, entry, and other charges will for the future be according to this scale.
The length of interlocutory and final judgments will be allowed as heretofore.
NOTICES.
To declare, reply, and subsequent pleadings, copy and service	0 4 0	0 3 0
By defendant to bring issue to trial, copy and service	0 4 0	0 3 0
For special jury to opposite attorney, copy and service, pursuant to section 109	0 5 0	0 3 0
The like to sheriff, pursuant to section 112	0 5 0	0 3 0
To executor or administrator of sole defendant deceased, to appear to writ and suggestion	0 5 0	0 3 0
To sheriff of renewal of execution exclusive of any payment	0 5 0	0 3 0
To plaintiff in error to assign errors	0 5 0	0 3 0
Of discontinuance of error	0 4 0	0 3 0
Of confession of error	0 4 0	0 3 0
Of plaintiff's in error intention to proceed to personal representatives of defendant deceased	0 5 0	0 3 0
Of appearance when appearance duly entered and notice given on the day of appearance, but not otherwise	0 4 0	0 3 0
Of appearance to writ of revivor	0 5 0	0 3 0
To plead	0 4 0	0 3 0
Of declaration when necessary, copy and service	0 5 0	0 5 0
Of objection for misjoinder or nonjoinder of plaintiff, copy and service	0 4 0	0 3 0
To sheriff to discharge a prisoner out of custody, copy and service	0 5 0	0 4 0
Notice in ejectment to defend for part of premises and service	0 5 0	—
If above three folios, for every folio additional	0 1 0	—
Notice of admission of right and denial of ouster by a joint tenant, &c.	0 6 0	—
If above three folios, for every folio	0 0 4	—
Discontinuance by claimant in ejectment and service	0 5 0	—
Of confession of action of ejectment as to the whole or in part, and service	0 10 0	—
Of trial, inquiry, demand of residence of plaintiff, of authority for issuing writ, and all other common notices	0 4 0	0 3 0
To admit or produce, if short	0 7 6	0 5 0
The like, if long	0 10 0	0 5 0

	Above 20*l.* £ s. d.	Under 20*l.* £ s. d.
If very long and special, a larger allowance may be made in cases above 20*l.*
Additional allowance for mileage, as upon the service of a writ.
COPY AND SERVICE.
Of special and common rule	0 5 0	0 4 0
Of special rule, above three folios, per folio additional	0 0 4	0 0 4
Of summons or order of a judge	0 3 0	0 3 0
Of order to charge a prisoner in execution	0 5 0	—
Of Master's note of receipt and of affidavits in error in fact	0 7 0	—
Of Master's note of receipt in error in law	0 5 0	—
Mileage on services as upon a writ of summons.
EJECTMENT.
Instructions to sue, and examining deeds	0 13 4	—
If a question of title	1 1 0	—
ATTENDANCES.
To search for appearance to writ of summons	0 3 4	0 3 4
Two searches will be allowed, if necessarily made.
To obtain undertaking to appear to process	0 5 0	0 5 0
To give undertaking to appear	0 5 0	0 5 0
Deponent to be sworn (where allowed) for rules where no attendance in court, to enter exception to bail, to leave writ at sheriff's office, to obtain return to writ, to alter or amend pleadings, to file any proceeding, to obtain office copies, consent to any summons, for postea (if necessary), to set down case, or demurrer, each judge with demurrer book or special case, to deliver points to each judge, to ascertain if books delivered, and other like attendances	0 3 4	0 3 4
To set down causes for trial	0 6 8	0 3 4
On each counsel with brief at trial, fee under twenty guineas, to reduce special jury, summons before a judge, and to pay money into court	0 6 8	0 3 4
On counsel with brief, fee twenty guineas and above	0 13 4	—
To receive money out of court	0 10 0	0 6 8
Counsel with brief on motion, if above one guinea fee	0 6 8	0 3 4
If one guinea only	0 3 4	0 3 4
Consultation with counsel	0 13 4	Nil.
Conference with counsel	0 6 8	—
Fee on every record or writ of trial	0 6 8	0 3 4
For common jury panel	0 3 4	0 3 4
For special jury panel	0 6 8	0 3 4
To obtain names of viewers	0 6 8	0 3 4
To enter any suggestion on roll when necessary	0 3 4	0 3 4
Attending court cause made remanet	0 13 4	0 6 8
Attending for fresh panels after remanet as before.
Attendances incidental to agreement of amount of damages according to the circumstances.
Attendance in pursuance of notice to admit	0 6 8	0 3 4
For every hour beyond one	0 6 8	0 3 4
Attending making admissions, except under special circumstances	0 6 8	0 3 4
On reference to Master upon common matters, such as to compute upon a bill or bond	0 6 8	0 6 8
Special matters	0 13 4	0 6 8
For every hour after the first	0 6 8	0 3 4
If counsel in attendance, attorney attending	0 6 8	0 3 4
Above one hour	0 13 4	0 6 8
To attest confession in ejectment	0 6 8	—
To file memorandum of error and obtain Master's receipts	0 6 8	0 3 4
Assizes each day, exclusive of expenses, but inclusive of all matters transacted except one attendance upon each counsel with brief	2 2 0	—
Expenses, exclusive of travelling, for each day	1 1 0	—
Travelling expenses, the amount actually and reasonably paid, but in no case to exceed 1*s.* per mile one way.
If two causes, in each per day for attendance	1 11 6	—
If three causes or more, each	1 1 0	—
If more than one cause, expenses at 1*l.* 1*s.* each day, and travelling expenses to be divided equally.
Clerk's attendance discretionary if more than one cause, or in special cases not exceeding per day, inclusive of expenses, except travelling	1 1 0	—
In assize towns in which two lists are made, and in special jury causes, the attendance of the attorney will not be allowed from the commission day, but only from such period as his attendance became proper.
On writ of inquiry or writ of trial at a distance, if no other business, inclusive of expenses, per day	2 2 0	1 1 0
If two cases, each	1 11 6	0 13 4
If more than two cases, each	1 1 0	0 13 4
Travelling expenses as before, and to be apportioned if more than one cause.
In London or Middlesex or in same town, on trial or writ of inquiry, when cause in paper and not tried, per day	0 13 4	0 6 8
On trial	1 1 0	0 13 4
Ditto, if occupied the whole day	2 2 0	—
Managing clerk to conduct cause at a distance when only one cause, per day	1 11 6	0 13 4
If more than one cause, each	1 1 0	0 10 6
Travelling and other expenses the same as attorney.
Court on motion rule nisi granted	0 6 8	0 3 4
The like on rule absolute after rule nisi	0 13 4	0 6 8
The like previous to argument, per day	0 6 8	0 3 4
The like in cases set down in the paper, not exceeding for a whole term	2 0 0	1 0 0
After term when sittings, not exceeding	1 0 0	0 10 0
Taxation on postea	0 13 4 to 1 0 0	0 3 4 to 0 6 8
More according to time occupied.
Ditto, costs of cause otherwise than on postea	0 6 8 to 0 13 4	0 3 4
Ditto, costs of judgment only, and ordinary interlocutory matters	0 3 4	0 3 4
BRIEFS.
Minutes of evidence		0 13 4
Brief and one fair copy where cause tried before a judge of a Court of Record where attorneys are not allowed to act as advocates, not exceeding		2 0 0
In the like case, fee to counsel and clerk		1 3 6
For drawing, per folio	0 1 0	—
Copying	0 0 4	—
TERM FEES AND LETTERS.
Proper business	0 13 0	0 10 0
Agency	0 15 0	0 12 0
Letters when no term fee proper business	0 3 0	0 2 0
Agency	0 5 0	0 3 0
Letters in interlocutory matters proper	0 2 0	—
Agency	0 3 0	—
In actions under 20*l.* no allowance will be made for "letters" for the vacation preceding the term in which a term-fee shall be allowed.
LETTERS.
Letter before action and other letters	0 3 6	0 2 0
Circular letters after the first	0 1 6	0 1 0
AFFIDAVITS.
Drawing special affidavits, per folio	0 1 0	0 1 0
Ingrossing same, exclusive of affidavits of increase	0 0 4	Nil.
Common affidavits, of five folios or under, including ingrossing and oath	0 6 0	0 5 0
Affidavit of increase, including ingrossing and oath		0 5 0
Copy for the other side		0 2 0
SEARCHES.
All common searches, exclusive of payment	0 3 4	0 3 4
If very long	0 13 4	0 6 8
COUNSEL.
To attend reference to Master, not exceeding, except on examination of witnesses	2 2 0	Nil.
To settle special indorsement on writ	Nil.	Nil.
WARRANT OF ATTORNEY.
Costs of signing judgment	3 10 0	—
DEFENDANTS.
Appearance	0 7 0	0 6 0
For each additional defendant, inclusive of payment	0 1 6	0 1 6
A second summons and order for time to plead shall be allowed in special cases above 20*l.* when necessary.
COUNSEL'S CLERK'S FEES.
The fees to be allowed to counsel's clerk not to exceed as under :—
Upon a fee under 5 guineas	0 2 6	—
5 guineas and under 10 guineas	0 5 0	—
10 guineas and under 20 guineas	0 10 0	—
20 guineas and under 30 guineas	0 15 0	—
30 guineas and under 50 guineas	1 0 0	—
50 guineas and upwards	2 10 0 per cent.	—
ON CONSULTATIONS.
Senior's clerk	0 7 6	—
Junior's clerk	0 2 6	—
On general retainer	0 10 6	—
On common retainer	2 2 0	—
On conference	0 5 0	—

ALLOWANCE TO WITNESSES.

	If resident in the town in which the cause is tried. £ s. d.	If resident at a distance from the place of trial. £ s. d.
Common witnesses, such as labourers, journeymen, &c. per diem	0 5 0	0 5 0 to 0 7 6
Master tradesmen, yeomen, and farmers, per diem ... from	0 7 6 to 0 10 0	0 10 0 ... 0 15 0
Auctioneers and accountants, per diem	0 10 6 to 1 1 0	0 10 6 to 1 1 0
Professional men, per diem	1 1 0	—
Ditto inclusive of all, except travelling expenses, per diem	...	2 2 0 to 3 3 0
Attorneys or other clerks, per diem	0 10 6	0 15 0 to 1 1 0
Engineers and surveyors, per diem	1 1 0	1 1 0 to 3 3 0
Notaries ... per diem	1 1 0	1 1 0
Gentlemen	1 1 0 with subpœna, but no daily allowance, except after the first day, and then a reasonable sum for refreshment and conveyance.	1 1 0 per diem
Esquires
Bankers
Merchants
Females according to station in life, per diem ... from	0 5 0 to 0 10 0	0 5 0 to 1 0 0
Police Inspector, per diem	0 5 0	0 7 6 to 0 10 0
Police Constable	0 3 0	0 5 0 to 0 7 6

If the witnesses attend in one cause only they will be entitled to the full allowance. If they attend in more than one cause they will be entitled to a proportionate part in each cause only.

The travelling expenses of witnesses shall be allowed according to the sums reasonably and actually paid, but in no case shall exceed 1*s.* per mile one way.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Close copy of proceeding in agency cases, 4*d.* per folio, according to actual length.

In cases under 20*l.* no allowance will be made in respect of the following matters :—

Attending deponent to be sworn to affidavit.
Advice on evidence.
Maps, plans, or models.

For maps or plans, when used in cases above 20*l.*, from 1*l.* 1*s.* to 3*l.* 3*s.*

All other allowances will be made as heretofore, except so far as it may be necessary to reduce or increase the same conformably to the scale of fees published on the 24th November, 1852.

CAMPBELL.
JOHN JERVIS.
FRED. POLLOCK.
E. H. ALDERSON.
W. WIGHTMAN.
T. J. PLATT.
W. ERLE.
T. N. TALFOURD.
27th January, 1853. SAML. MARTIN.

GENERAL RULES OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS RESPECTING THE ADMISSION, &c. OF ATTORNEYS.

THE subjoined regulations, dated Jan. 20, 1853, have lately been issued to the public:—

EXAMINATION, ADMISSION, AND RE-ADMISSION OF ATTORNEYS.

Whereas by sect. 15 of the statute 6th & 7th Vict. c. 73, it was enacted "That it shall be lawful for the judges of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, or any one or more of them, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and required, before he or they shall issue a fiat for the admission of any person to be an attorney, to examine and inquire by such ways and means as he or they shall think proper touching the articles and service, and the fitness and capacity, of such person to act as an attorney; and if the judge or judges as aforesaid shall be satisfied by such examination or by the certificate of such examiners as hereinafter mentioned, that such person is duly qualified, and fit and competent to act as an attorney, then, and not otherwise, the said judge or judges shall, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and required to administer or cause to be administered to such person the oath hereinafter directed to be taken by attorneys and solicitors in addition to the oath of allegiance, and after such oaths taken, to cause him to be admitted an attorney of such court;" and by sect. 16 of the said statute it was further enacted, for the purpose of facilitating the inquiry touching the due service under articles as aforesaid, and the fitness and capacity of any person to act as an attorney, "That it shall be lawful for the judges of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer (or any eight or more of them, of whom the chiefs of the said courts shall be three), from time to time to nominate and appoint such persons to be examiners for the purposes aforesaid, and to make such rules and regulations for conducting such examination as such judges shall think proper."

And whereas, in order to carry the said statute more fully into effect, it is expedient annually to appoint examiners, subject to the control of the judges, in manner hereinafter mentioned:

And whereas, pursuant to the said statute, certain rules, orders, and regulations were made by the judges of the said courts in Easter Term, 1846; and other rules, orders, and regulations of the said courts, or one of them, have been from time to time previously made relating to the examination, admission, and readmission of attorneys and their annual certificates; and whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the said rules, orders, and regulations, in manner hereinafter mentioned:

It is therefore ordered, that from and after the first day of Trinity Term next, all rules, orders, and regulations relating to the examination, admission, and re-admission of attorneys, and the taking out and renewal of their annual certificates, be, and they are hereby annulled: provided that all notices, appointments, and other steps and proceedings duly made, had, or taken, or to be had or taken under and by virtue of the rules, orders, or regulations, or any of them hereby to be annulled, shall be valid, and may be carried into effect, anything herein to the contrary notwithstanding; and it is ordered that the following rules, orders, and regulations shall, from and after the said first day of Trinity Term next, be substituted in lieu of all such former rules, orders, and regulations whatsoever.

I. The several Masters for the time being for the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer respectively, together with sixteen attorneys or solicitors to be appointed by a rule of court in every year to be examiners for one year, any five of whom (one whereof to be one of the said Masters) shall be competent to conduct the examination; and that, subject to such appeal as hereinafter mentioned, no person who shall not have been previously admitted a solicitor of the High Court of Chancery shall be admitted to be sworn an attorney of any of the courts, except on production of a certificate signed by the major part of such examiners actually present at and conducting his examination, testifying his fitness and capacity to act as an attorney, and in the usual business transacted by an attorney; such certificate to be in force only to the end of the term next but one following the date thereof, unless such time shall be specially extended by the order of a judge.

II. The examiners so to be appointed shall conduct the said examinations, under regulations to be first submitted to and approved by the judges.

III. In case any person shall be dissatisfied with the refusal of the examiners to grant such certificate, he shall be at liberty within one month to apply for admission by petition, in writing, to the judges, to be delivered to the clerk of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, upon which no fee or gratuity shall be received; which application shall be heard in Sergeant's-inn Hall by not less than three of the judges.

IV. And whereas the hall or building of the Incorporated Law Society of the United Kingdom in Chancery-lane is a fit and convenient place for holding the said examinations, and the said society have consented to allow the same to be used for that purpose:

It is ordered, that until further order such examinations be there held on such days as the said examiners, or any five of them, shall appoint; and that any person not previously admitted an attorney of any of the three courts, and desirous of being admitted, shall give notice to the said examiners before the commencement of the term next preceding that in which he shall propose to be examined, of his intention to apply for examination by leaving the same with the secretary of the said society, at their said hall; which notice shall also state his place or places of residence or service for the last preceding twelve months, and in case of application to be admitted on a refusal of the certificate, shall give ten days' notice, to be served in like manner, of the day appointed for hearing the same.

V. Three days at the least before the commencement of the term next preceding that in which any person not before admitted shall propose to be admitted an attorney of either of the courts, he shall cause to be delivered at the Master's office a written notice, which shall state his place or places of abode or service for the last preceding twelve months, and the name and place of abode of the attorney or attorneys to whom he was articled and assigned (if any such assignment has been made), and the Master shall reduce all such notices as in this rule first mentioned into an alphabetical table or tables under convenient heads, and affix the same on the first day of term in some conspicuous place within or near to and on the outside of each court; and such person shall also for the space of one full term previous to the term in which he shall apply to be admitted, enter or cause to be entered in two books kept for that purpose, one at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice or Chief Baron of the Court in which he applies to be admitted, and the other at the chambers of the other judges or barons of such court, his name and place or places of abode; and also the name or names and place or places of abode of the attorney or attorneys to whom he shall have been articled and assigned (if any such assignment has been made.)

VI. Every person so proposing to be admitted an attorney of either of the said courts, who shall have given such notice of his intention to apply for examination and admission as aforesaid, or as authorised by this rule, and who shall not have attended to be examined, or not have passed the examination, or not have been admitted, may within one week after the end of the term for which such notices were given, renew the notices for examination or admission for the then next ensuing term, and so from time to time as often as he shall think proper; and that all such renewed notices shall be added to the list of notices of admission and re-admission, and placed up on the first day of the term in the said courts, chambers, and offices; and the applicants named in such renewed notices may be examined in the ordinary way in pursuance of such last-mentioned notices, but shall not be admitted until the last day of the term, unless otherwise ordered by one of the said courts, or a judge thereof.

VII. On an application to re-admit an attorney who has been struck off the rolls, the applicant shall, before the commencement of the term next preceding that in which he intends to apply to be re-admitted, give notice thereof, as in the case of an original admission; and the affidavits in support of which application shall be filed at the office of the Master, and a copy thereof left at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench before the term on the last day of which the notice for re-admission is intended to be made, and the rule for such re-admission shall be drawn up on reading such affidavit, and an affidavit of such copy having been left and notices given in compliance with this rule.

VIII. A printed copy of the list of the admissions and re-admissions shall be stuck up in the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer offices, and at the judges' hall or chambers of each court in Rolls-gardens.

REGULATIONS, APPROVED BY THE JUDGES, FOR THE EXAMINATION.

I. Every person applying to be admitted an attorney of any of the said courts pursuant to the said rules shall, within the first seven days of the term in which he is desirous of being admitted, leave or cause to be left with the secretary of the said Incorporated Law Society his articles of clerkship, duly stamped, and also any assignment which may have been made thereof, together with answers to the several questions hereunto annexed, signed by the applicant, and also by the attorney or attorneys, London agent, barrister, or special pleader, with whom he shall have served his clerkship.

II. In case the applicant shall show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the examiners why the first regulation cannot be fully complied with, it shall be in the power of the said examiners, upon sufficient proof being given of the same, to dispense with any part of the first regulation that they may think fit and reasonable.

III. Every person applying for admission shall also, if required, sign and leave, or cause to be left, with the secretary of the said society, answers in writing to such other written or printed questions as shall be proposed by the said examiners touching his said service and conduct, and shall also, if required, attend the said examiners personally, for the purpose of giving further explanations touching the same; and shall also, if required, procure the attorney or attorneys with whom he shall have served his clerkship as aforesaid to answer, either personally or in writing, any questions touching such service or conduct, or shall make proof to the satisfaction of the said examiners of his inability to procure the same.

IV. Every person so applying shall also attend the said examiners at the hall of the said society, at such time or times as shall be appointed for that purpose, pursuant to the said rule, as the said examiners shall appoint, and shall answer such questions as the said examiners shall then and there put to him, by written or printed papers, touching his fitness and capacity to act as an attorney, and in the usual business transacted by an attorney.

V. Upon compliance with the aforesaid regulations, and if the major part of the said examiners actually present at and conducting the said examination (one of them being one of the said Masters) shall be satisfied as to the fitness and capacity of the person so applying to act as an attorney, the said examiners so present, or the major part of them, shall certify the same under their hands in the following form, namely:—

"In pursuance of the rules made in Hilary Term 1853 of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, we, being the major part of the examiners actually present at and conducting the examination of A. B. of, &c. do hereby certify that we have examined the said A. B. as required by the said rules, and we do testify that the said A. B. is fit and capable to act as an attorney of the said courts, and in the usual business transacted by attorneys."

Questions as to due service of articles of clerkship to be answered by the clerk:—

1. What was your age at the date of your articles?

2. Have you served the whole term of your articles at the office where the attorney or attorneys to whom you were articled or assigned carried on his or their business, and if not, state the reason?

3. Have you at any time during the term of your articles been absent without the permission of the attorney or attorneys to whom you were articled or assigned, and if so, state the length and occasion of such absence?

4. Have you, during the period of your articles, been engaged or concerned in any profession, business, or employment other than your professional employment as clerk to the attorney or attorneys to whom you were articled or assigned?

5. Have you, since the expiration of your articles, been engaged or concerned, and for how long time, in any and what profession, trade, business, or employment, other than the profession of an attorney or solicitor?

Questions to be answered by the attorney, agent, barrister, or special pleader with whom the clerk may have served any part of the time under his articles:—

1. Has A. B. served the whole time of his articles at the office where you carry on your business, and, if not, state the reason?

2. Has the said A. B. at any time during the term of his articles been absent without your permission, and, if so, state the length and occasions of such absence?

3. Has the said A. B., during the period of his articles, been engaged or concerned in any profession, business, or employment other than his professional employment as your articled clerk?

4. Has the said A. B., during the whole term of his clerkship, with the exceptions above-mentioned, been faithfully and diligently employed in your professional business of an attorney or solicitor?

5. Has the said A. B., since the expiration of his articles, been engaged or concerned, and for how long time, in any and what profession, trade, business, or employment, other than the profession of an attorney or solicitor?

And I do hereby certify that the said A. B. has duly and faithfully served under his articles of clerkship (or assignment, as the case may be), bearing date, &c., for the term therein expressed, and that he is a fit and proper person to be admitted an attorney.

TAKING OUT AND RENEWAL OF ATTORNEYS' CERTIFICATES.

Whereas by sect. 25 of the stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, it was enacted, that if any attorney shall neglect to procure an annual stamped certificate, authorising him to practise as such within the time by law appointed for that purpose, then and in such case the registrar of attorneys and solicitors shall not afterwards grant a certificate to such attorney without the order of one of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, or of one of the Judges thereof to issue such certificate.

And whereas it is expedient, that upon the application of an attorney having neglected for the space of one whole year to procure or to renew an annual stamped certificate, the Judges should have the means of inquiring as to the circumstances under which he has omitted to commence, or has discontinued to practice, and as to his conduct and employment during the term of such omission or discontinuance:

It is ordered that, from and after the last day of Trinity Term next, every person who shall intend to apply on the last day of term, or in vacation, for such order shall, three days at the least previous to the first day of the term on the last day of which the application is intended to be made, or in case the application is to be made in vacation, shall, previous to the first day of the preceding term, leave at the office of the Masters of the court in which he intends to make the application, a notice in writing, containing his name and place of abode for the last preceding twelve months; and that before the said first day of term he shall enter, or cause to be entered, a like notice in two books kept for that purpose, one at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice or Chief Baron, and the other at the chambers of the other Judges or barons; and shall before the said first day of term cause to be filed the affidavit upon which he seeks to obtain or renew his said certificate at the office of the Masters aforesaid, and a copy thereof to be also left at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench.

2. The Masters shall reduce such notices into alphabetical order, and add the same to the list of admissions and re-admissions; and the order for the granting the certificate shall be drawn up on reading such affidavit of such copy having been left in compliance with this rule.

3. Upon an application to dispense with the usual notice, and to take out or renew the certificate of an attorney, as aforesaid, the summons shall be served on the registrar of attorneys, calling on him to show cause within ten days why such certificate should not be issued; and, if no cause be shown to the satisfaction of the judge, an order may be made for issuing such certificate, if the judge shall think proper.

(Signed) CAMPBELL.
JOHN JERVIS.
FREDERICK POLLOCK.
J. PARKE.
E. H. ALDERSON.
J. T. COLERIDGE.
C. CRESSWELL.
W. ERLE.
CHARLES CROMPTON.

ATTORNEYS TO BE ADMITTED.

Easter Term, 1853.

QUEEN'S BENCH.

Adye, Arthur, 38, Norfolk-street; Great James-street; Devonshire-street; and Bradford—articled to W. Stones, Bradford, Wilts
Allen, William, 4, Southampton-street; Mornington-crescent; and Derby—W. Williamson, Derby
Appleton, Henry, Stokesley—J. P. Sowerby, Stokesley
Aspinall, Clarke, New Ferry, Cheshire—J. Collenson, Doncaster; R. Radcliffe, Liverpool
Atkinson, Richard Mathew, 38, Grove-place, Brompton; and Northallerton—J. C. Atkinson, Northallerton
Babington, John, 37, Store-street, Bedford-square—E. Babington, Horncastle; J. Scott, Lincoln's-inn-fields
Banks, Charles Edmund, 4, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square; and Louth—H. Pye, Louth
Barber, William, Birmingham—W. P. Allcock, Birmingham
Barker, Horace Isaac, Beeston, Bedfordshire—E. Ayles, Biggleswade
Bartleet, William Smith, Stourbridge; and Blakedown—G. C. Vernon, Bromsgrove; L. Minshall, Bromsgrove Baugh, George, 11, Blomfield-terrace, Pimlico; and Broseley—G. Potts, Broseley
Bell, Octavius, 31, Frederick-street, St. Pancras; Newcastle; and Much Hadham—C. N. Lewis, Newcastle
Bell, John Leonard, 2, Vernon-place, Bloomsbury; University-street; and Bourn—W. D. Bell, Bourn
Bellas, Thomas, 12, Compton-street, East, Brunswick-square—J. Coverdale, Bedford-row
Bentley, S. Green Beverley, Fitzroy-square, Kentish Town; Deadmanstone, near Huddersfield—J. Freeman, Huddersfield
Berridge, Robert Bristow, 18, Ampton-street, Gray's-inn-road; and Leicester—S. Berridge, Leicester
Booker, George, jun., 14, Ampton-street, Gray's-inn-road; and Allerton, near Liverpool—S. Booker, Liverpool
Boucher, Benjamin, 52, Frederick-street, Gray's-inn-road; and Wivelscombe—T. N. Bower, Wivelscombe
Braund, Marwood Kelly, 15, Upper Park-street, Islington; and Exeter—E. H. Roberts, Exeter
Brutton, Charles, jun., 2, Abbey-terrace, St. John's-wood; and Plaistow—C. Brutton, Exeter; T. H. Law, Barnstaple; F. Impey, Bedford-row
Burch, Arthur, 5, Pilgrim-street, Ludgate-hill; and St. Thomas-the-Apostle—W. Lambert, jun., Exeter: C. H. R. Rhodes, Chancery-lane
Butler, Francis George, Lincoln's-inn-fields; and St Neot's—O. R. Wilkinson, St. Neot's Calthorp, Thomas Downie, 4, Upper-park-place, Blackheath-park—J. S. Hymer, Whitehall
Carr, Edward Slater, 32, Gloucester-place, Hyde-park; and Leamington Priors—J. Newbold, Bedford-row; A. S. Field, Leamington Priors
Carrington, Charles James, 2, Cambridge-terrace, Barnsbury-park; and Manchester—J. Barlow, jun., Manchester
Chisholm, John, 29, Edward-street, Hampstead-road—J. C. Hall (since dead) Lincoln's-inn-fields
Clark, Frederick, 12, Wilmot-street, Russell-square; and Snaith—E. E. Clark, Snaith
Clarke, Edmund J. H. W., 55, Acton-street, Gray's-inn-road; and Lower Calthorpe-street—T. Rogers, Helston
Coates, John, 8, Everett-street, Russell-square; and Clifton—C. Savery, Bristol
Cobb, William Wise, 1, Soley-terrace, Amwell-street—C. F. Cobb, Moorgate-street
Cooke, John Thomas, 6, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry; and Tamworth—J. Shaw, Tamworth
Cooper, Thomas, Kidderminster—W. Boycott, Kidderminster
Cope, Arthur, 58, Euston-square—N. Bridges, Red-lion-square
Cotterill, William Henry, jun., 32, Throgmorton-street; and Croydon—W. H. Cotterill, Throgmorton-street
Cotton, Stapleton, 82, Judd-street, Brunswick-square; and Tavistock-place—W. J. Grane, Bedford-row
Dixon, Albert, Staple-inn; and Fulham—W. Dixon, Staple-inn
Drake, Montague W. T., 47, Baker-street—H. Maltby, Bank-buildings
Earle, Henry Benjamin, 47, Lincoln's-inn-fields—H. Erle, Andover Edge, James Henry, 7, Denmark-street, Islington; Bedford-row; and Liverpool—J. Atkinson, Liverpool
Edwin, William, Baydon-house, Walworth—M. Cooper, Southwark; G. Ade, High-street
Evans, Asa Johnes, 18, Upper Marylebone-street, Portland-place; and Kilgerran—J. Smith, Cardigan
Evans, Edward, 7, King's-bench-walk, Temple—F. Boydell, Chester
Fewster, John Reed, 10, Gordon-street, Islington; Alfred-street; and Durham—R. J. Shafto, Durham
Fitter, Matthew Alexander, Edgbaston, near Birmingham—W. S. Harding, Birmingham
Froom, Charles Poole, 6, Oxford-square, Hyde-park—W. W. Aldridge, Gray's-inn
Garrod, John James, 3, Belgrave-street, South Pimlico; and Wells—E. Davies, Wells
Giraud, Francis Fred., 23, Calthorpe-street, Gray's-inn-road, and Ashford—R. Furley, Ashford; S. C. Venour, Gray's-inn-square
Glubb, Albert Charles, Lyne, 10, Essex-street, Strand; Chadwell-street; and Liskeard—P. Glubb, Liskeard
Goodman, William Benjamin, King's Lynn—C. Rollings (since dead) Birmingham
Greenhill, Charles Pope, 38, Woburn-place, Russell-square; and Lewes—J. E. Fullagar, Lewes
Haddelsey, George Robert Foster, Calstor; and Kingston-upon-Hull—C. R. Haddelsey, Calstor
Hannay, William, 8, Tichborne-street, Edgeware-road; Goulden-terrace; and Nottingham—W. Enfield, Nottingham
Hargreaves, Joseph, Bradford—J. Wood, Bradford, Yorkshire
Haye, James, 20, Chadwell-street; Myddleton-square; and Launceston—N. H. P. Lawrence, and S. R. Pattison, both of Launceston Heathcotes, Edward, 9, Albion-place, Hyde-park—S. Bellamy, Gainsborough; C. Bell, Bedford-row
Hodgson, James Leyland, Pendleton, near Manchester—T. Dodge, Liverpool; and A. L. Hardman, Manchester
Hyde, Jas., Trevelyan, 1, Highgate-rise, Middlesex—C. Hyde, Ely-place
Jackson, Samuel, jun., York—E. R. Anderson, York
James, Richard, 10, Warwick-court, Holborn; and Aberystwith—W. H. Thomas, Aberystwith
Jebb, John Joshua, 17, Chester-terrace, Eaton-square; and Boston—S. H. Jebb, Boston
Jennins, Charles, 26, Bryanstone-street, Portman-square; and Bath—P. H. Watts, Bath
Jessop, Richard, 13, North-crescent, Bedford-square; and Huddersfield—W. Jacomb, Huddersfield
Johnson, Edward, jun., 5, Goulden-terrace, Barnabury-road: and Saffron Walden—G. S. Burdett, Saffron Walden; N. C. Milne, Temple
Jones, Josiah, Worcester—J. Jones, Worcester
Jones, Thomas, 60, Stanhope-street, Hampstead-road—G. Wray, Percy-street; T. Robinson, South-square; G. Wray, Percy-street
Kelsall, Frederick Henry, 14, Upper Porchester-street, Paddington; and Chester—J. Robinson, Liverpool
Kendall, Edmund, 17, Lower Calthorpe-street, and Upper Bedford-place—R. H. Rolls, Banbury; E. W. Field, Bedford-row; W. Kendall, Bourton
Kent, Alfred Clement, 22, Everett-street, Russell-square; and Thanet-place, Liverpool—E. J. Kent, Liverpool; W. K. Tyrer, Liverpool
Lenke, John, York—L. Thompson, York
Leigh, Arthur William, Collumpton, Devon—F. Leigh, Collumpton; R. R. Crosse, Collumpton
Lott, Thomas Edward, 10, Carlton-villas, Camden-road, Holloway—T. Lott, Bow-lane, Cheapside
Lovett, Philip William, Chertsey—D. Grazebrook, Chertsey; H. G. Grazebrook, Chertsey
Lowe, Francis, 12, Chapel-street, Bedford-row; and Nottingham—J. Wadsworth, Nottingham
Lucas, Thomas Edward, 9, Taunton-place, Regent's-park—J. Ingram, Lincoln's-inn-fields
Mallon, William Davies, 36, Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square; and Carey-street—W. F. Baynes, Carey-street
Markby, Henry, 63, Charlewood-street, Belgrave-road—Messrs. Crabtree and Cross, Halesworth
Marett, Edmund Rowe, 1, Staple-inn—W. Clarke, Colemon-street
Maclure, Edward Wade, Sandbach—E. Lewis, Manchester; A. Maclure, Nantwich; and J. Romer, Sandbach
Miller, Mark Benjamin, 18, Calcott-villas, Haverstock-hill—M. B. Miller, Clifford's-inn
Moss, Alfred, 6, Clixton-place, Camberwell—J. Gurney, Nicholas-lane; J. H. Torr, Clifford's-inn
Murray, Andrew, 23, Davies-street, Berkeley-square—H. S. Lawford, Throgmorton-street
Nairn, Henry Pearson, Twickenham—E. Watts, Hythe; and J. Kingsford, Essex-street
Nash, Alfred Dormor, 14, Great Coram-street, Russell-square—A. Mayhew, Carey-street
Naters, Henry Trewhitt, 17, King Edward-street, Islington; and Nassau-street, Middlesex—G. W. Wright, Sunderland; and J. Turner, Aldermanbury
Neate, Albert, 40, Duke-street, Manchester-square—J. Neate, Orchard-street
Nickolls, William, 39, Keppell-street, Russell-square; and Chew Magna—C. Mullins, Chew Magna Noble, John Gould, 7, Claremont-terrace, Pentonville—W. G. Bolton, Austin Friars Pain, John David, Newport; Christchurch, Monmouth—T. M. Llewellin, Newport
Payne, John Brown, Manchester—A. Oliver, Manchester
Perrin, Edward Hayward, 2, Dorset-cottages, Dalston; and Temple Cloud, near Bristol—J. R. Mogg, Temple Cloud, near Bristol
Pollock, Alfred Atkinson, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry—P. R. Alderson, Norfolk-street; P. J. T. Pearse, jun. Frederick's-place
Powles, Kenneth, 50, Upper Albany-street—A. Lace, Liverpool
Price William Greene, 28, Bedford-square; Brompton-square; Woburn-place; and Ben-hall, near Ross—T. G. Norcutt, Gray's-inn-square; and J. F. Isaacson, Norfolk-street
Prudence, Stanley George, Clapham-common—G. F. P. Sutton, Basinghall-street
Ranson, Thomas Wilson, 14, Featherston-buildings; and Sunderland—G. S. Ranson, Sunderland
Reade, George William, 4, Ordnance-road, St. John's-wood—G. Reade, Congleton; G. F. Hudson, Bucklersbury
Rhodes, Abraham, 41, Granville-square—S. W. Johnson, Gray's-inn-square
Rhodes, Arthur Charles, Denmark-hill—C. H. Rhodes, Chancery-lane
Richardson, Robert, 10, Charlwood-place, Pimlico—M. Pearson, and T. Hawdon, Selby
Richardson, William Rodgers, 27, Frederick-street, Gray's-inn; and Hatton-garden—F. Short, Bristol
Robson, John, jun. 7, Clarence-terrace, Regent's-park—J. Robson, Castle-street, Leicester-square
Rudge, Edmund, jun. 10, Chepstow-place, Kensington; and Tewkesbury—J. Thomas, Tewkesbury
Scott, George William, 2, Great Dean's-yard, Westminster—J. Scott, Lincoln's inn-fields
Senior, Frederick Bernard, 3, Warwick-square, Kensington; and Kew—W. Chapman, Richmond, Surrey
Shelton, Richard, 12, Bryanstone-street, Portman-square; and Birmingham—C. Ingleby, Birmingham
Sheppard, Augustus Frederick, Bellfield-house, Parson's-green, Fulham—W. Parsons, Charing-cross; and J. King, North buildings
Simpson, James Tennant, 5, Montague-place, Russell-square—J. A. Simpson, Moorgate-street
Smale, Arthur William, 2, Lincoln's-inn-Fields—C. Smale, Bideford
Snowball, George, 2, Henrietta-street, Brunswick-square; and Sunderland—G. W. Wright, Sunderland
Sparrow, William D. Lloyd, 6, Waverley-place, St. John's-wood; and Derby—J. B. Simpson, Derby
Steward, Thomas, 15, Everett-street, Russell-square; and Ipswich—C. Steward, Ipswich
Stiffe, Francis William Everitt, 8, Clement's-inn; Percy-circus; and Bristol—A. Cox, Bristol
Stringer, Charles, West Bromwich—G. Hinchliffe, West Bromwich; G. F. Hinchliffe, ditto
Talbot, William Henry, 40, Stanhope-street, Hampstead-road; and Tenterden—J. Munn, Tenterden
Thomas, Richard Aubrey, 14, Featherstone buildings; Surrey-street; Hall-street, Greenhall—G. Thomas, jun. Carmarthen
Thurgood, Henry John, Battle, Sussex—M. Lane, Braintree, Essex; R. Young, Battle
Tindell, William Frederick, 7, Rockingham-row, East; and New Kent-road—M. Cooper, High-street; G. Ade, ditto
Walter, Charles, Kingston-upon-Thames—J. Johnson, Chancery-lane; W. Walter, sen. Kingston
Walter, James, Kingston-upon-Tames—W. Walter, Kingston; and H. Chester, Newington
Weatherall, Frederic, 2, St. Mary's place, Highbury—E. Weatherall, King's-bench-walk
Whitefield, John Charles, Bristol—W. Gresham, Castle-street, Holborn; W. B. Cooper, Hatton-garden; G. W. Whittaker, Heathcote-street; W. B. Bartholomew, Gray's-inn; W. Bevan, Bristol
Wightwick, William, Spencer-place, Brixton-road; Newgate-street, Brunswick-street; and Dover-road—P. W. Fry, Cheapside
Wilkinson, Edward, 15, Margaret-street, Cavendish-square; and Horbling—G. Wiles, Horbling
Wilkinson, George, jun., 15, Everett-street, Russell-square; and North Walsham—G. Wilkinson, sen. North Walsham
Williams, Ebenezer Robins, 40, Upper Cumming-street, Pentonville; Claremont-square; and Edgbaston—R. Gillam, sen. Worcester; I. O. Jones, Liverpool; and R. Gillam, jun. Birmingham
Withers, James Tuck, Sherborne, Dorset; and Bristol—H. W. Ravenscroft, Gray's-inn-square; and W. Craven, Guildhall-chambers
Wright, Egerton Leigh, 37, Woburn-square; and Wigan—R. Bloxham, New Boswell-court: R. Darlington, Wigan; and T. T. Taylor, Wigan
Wrigley, Barton, 5, Grove-terrace, Grove-road; Bernard-street; and Liverpool—J. Eden, Liverpool
Wyatt, William, 12, Cavendish-road, Wandsworth-road; and 21, Stratford-place, Camden-town—N. Mason, 23, Red-lion-square

Added to the List pursuant to Judge's Orders.

Mander, Charles John, 38, Ladbroke-square; and Little Ealing, Middlesex — J. J. Millard, Cordwainer's-hall, London
Carter, Thomas, St. Peter's-terrace, Hammersmith; and Kingston-upon-Hull — T. Holden, jun., Kingston-upon-Hull

At the Rolls.

APPLICATION TO BE RE-ADMITTED.

Easter Term, 1853.

Marshall, William, George-street, Aston, Warwickshire—J. Moss, Derby

Queen's Bench.

APPLICATION TO BE RE-ADMITTED.

Last Day of Easter Term, 1853.

Marshall, William, George-street, Aston, Warwickshire—J. Moss, Derby

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

SOCIETY FOR AMENDMENT OF THE LAW.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

On Monday, at the usual meeting of the Law Amendment Society, Mr. Pitt Taylor in the chair, the question as to the best mode of dealing with the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical and Peculiar Courts in matters relating to the grant of probate and letters of administration, which had been discussed by the society on two previous occasions, was again taken into consideration.

There were four propositions before the meeting on this subject. 1. The original resolutions, which proposed to transfer the jurisdiction of these courts to the Court of Chancery, with increased powers, and to give a subsidiary jurisdiction to the County Courts. 2. An amendment by Dr. Waddilove, which proposed a distinct tribunal to be called "Her Majesty's Court of Probate and Succession for England and Wales," which was to have full legal and equitable jurisdiction in all matters relating to wills and intestacies. 3. An amendment by Mr. Collier, M.P., which proposed to give this jurisdiction to the County Courts, with liberty to either party, in cases of dispute involving a sum beyond a certain amount, to remove the bill into one of the Superior Common Law Courts; and 4. An amendment by Mr. Stewart, which proposed the establishment of a new court, with the full and conjoined powers of a Court of Law and Equity, to be clothed with jurisdiction over wills of real and personal estate, in case no existing court could be found to which such enlarged powers could be properly entrusted.

The discussion was opened by Mr. Crawford, who avowed his preference for the proposition of Mr. Collier, with an appeal to a Superior Court in order to insure uniformity of procedure. Mr. M'Queen, Mr. Webster, Dr. Spinks, Mr. Field, Mr. Pitt Taylor, and others, addressed the meeting, but with a view rather of sending back the whole question to the committee for reconsideration. Dr. Spinks moved a resolution for referring the original resolutions and the several amendments thereto to the committee for reconsideration, in conjunction with a more extended inquiry as to what should be done with the Ecclesiastical and Peculiar Courts, and the jurisdiction exercised by them. This proposition having been carried, Mr. Stewart proposed his resolution in the form of an instruction to the committee. It was also moved that the further consideration of the subject should be postponed till after the committee had made their report. This motion was put and carried in the midst of some confusion, during which Mr. Taylor and a great number of the members left the room. Mr. Stewart then moved Mr. Webster into the chair, and proposed his resolution. Mr. Field said it would not be seemly, after the first chairman and several members had retired, to put the resolution. Mr. Stewart having persisted, Mr. Jackson moved and Mr. Crawford seconded a motion for the adjournment of the meeting, which, on a show of hands, was declared to be carried by ten to seven. Mr. Stewart called for a division, when it appeared there were eleven against and ten for the adjournment. Mr. Stewart again moved his resolution, when a second motion of adjournment was made by Mr. Crawford. A division was taken, and the adjournment declared to be carried by eleven to ten.

The meeting then broke up, it being past eleven o'clock.

WOLVERHAMPTON LAW ASSOCIATION.

At the annual general meeting of the members, held at the Alliance Club and Hotel, Wolverhampton, on Friday, the 14th day of Jan. 1853, Mr. Crisp in the chair, the report of the committee at their meeting held on the 31st Dec. last having been read, it was unanimously resolved:—

First. That the report of the committee read at this meeting be received and entered on the minutes.

Second. That Mr. Crisp be elected to fill the office of president, and Mr. Pinchard the office of vice-president of the association and library until the general meeting of 1854.

Third. That Mr. A. H. Browne be elected honorary secretary and treasurer of the association until the general meeting in 1854.

Fourth. That Mr. Deakin and Mr. Thorne be re-elected members of the committee, and that Mr. Rutted, Mr. Manby, and Mr. Underhill, be elected in lieu of those who go out and are ineligible under rule 8, and that Mr. Lilley be also elected a member of the committee.

Fifth. That the report of the committee, and the resolutions of this meeting, be printed, and a copy thereof sent to each member of the society, including the honorary members, and also to the solicitors residing within the district, and to the secretaries of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Societies, and that the portion relating to auctioneers, law stationers, and accountants be extracted and sent to each person carrying on business in those respective callings in Wolverhampton.

Sixth. That the thanks of the meeting be given to the president, vice-president, honorary secretary, and committee of the past year for their attention to the interests of the society.

Report of the Committee, 1852.

The labours of your committee during the past year have been light: they have been in some degree lessened by the work of recent legislation. The session which has just closed, was signalized above all others in modern times, for great and fundamental alterations in the practice of the Superior Courts of Law and Equity. The Court of Chancery Procedure, and the Common Law Procedure Acts, of 1852, are remedial reforms which had been long and loudly called for in the administrative machinery of our courts. The avenues to justice have been for generations thronged with technicalities and useless forms which disgraced our jurisprudence, and brought the law themselves, and the great principles of equity on which they are founded, into ill repute. Few were or could be better acquainted with these irrational and costly impediments to justice than the country attorneys, who participated with the public as well in the grievance as in the loss, and many in their ranks, in past and present times, have laboured to remove or modify the evils. Those fetters on social progress in England, as well in the legal as in other departments, vested interests in sinecures and fees, have hitherto impeded attempts at amelioration, but to the hour of the late administration, Government has at last applied the power of Parliament to break the barrier, and an earnest and practical reform has commenced. The injurious distinction which has so long prevailed between the principles of the law (the morality of which, as lately remarked by V. C. Kindersley, in the case Bodenham v. Hoskins, is of a higher character than that which originally prevails amongst mankind,) and the practice of the courts, which enforced a lower tone of morals will, it is trusted, soon cease to spoil the suitor or perplex the jurist. The lustre of our laws, administered by a simple practice, will shine the more clearly and become the better fitted for their great end and purpose.

Whilst acknowledging, with commendation, the accomplishment of measures calculated to free the course of justice from reproach, your committee deem it right to reiterate their condemnation of one in abeyance, which is in their opinion fraught with contrary tendencies. "The Registration of Assurances" is still a somewhat popular panacea for the grievances supposed to be inflicted by the present mode of investigating titles to land, and dealings on its transfer and transmission. This subject was considered in the report of last year, and the Profession need only to be reminded, by way of warning, that the learned author of a masterly pamphlet in condemnation of this scheme, has ceased to occupy the woolsack, and that the present ministry contains members by whom it was introduced or supported in 1851. They cannot conclude this sketch without expressing a hope that the good work begun at Westminster will soon reach Doctors' Commons. The abuses of the Ecclesiastical Courts exceed those so lately swept from the Superior Courts. The former are moreover an anomaly in our Constitution. Foreign in their origin, and antagonistic to our national principles of jurisprudence, their sufferance since the Reformation in the midst of our social and political progress is a problem. Your committee consider that the only remedy is the entire abolition of these courts, and the transference of their jurisdiction to the tribunals from which it was withdrawn by the power long repudiated in every other department of our institutions.

Your committee has not been required to decide any disputed point, or to arbitrate on any question affecting the practice or conduct of the members of your society; but with regard to the practice of parties within the surveillance of the society, a case occurring in October last has been investigated, to which it is considered expedient to refer. It has been long known to practitioners individually, that accountants, law stationers, and the lower class of auctioneers, unconscientiously invade the privileges of the Profession, and infringe the provisions of the statute, by preparing agreements, bills of sale, and other documents, without having qualified themselves for such duties. In the case referred to, a communication has been made to the person who prepared the instrument in question, and the society has determined in future to report all cases brought within their knowledge to the authorities at Somerset-house. The practice has been too long suffered to prevail with impunity, and parties who thus offend (many of whom are indebted to the legal profession for much of their legitimate business), must be taught that to "stick to their last" is not only more honest but better policy.

The attention of your committee has been given to the subject of costs in the County Courts, as one not only affecting suitors and practitioners in those courts, but the question of actions generally, and the practice in the Courts at Westminster. The judges appointed to frame a scale of costs under the provisions of the "County Courts Amendment Act" having caused a circular to be issued to this society amongst others, inviting suggestions on the subject, a list of such costs as appeared desirable to be considered was prepared by the secretary, and laid before your committee. After consideration, and an adjustment of the items, the scale was submitted to the opinion of gentlemen practising as advocates in the Wolverhampton County Court, and, on being revised and settled in committee, was forwarded to the judges as directed by their circular.

The annual statement and professional protest in regard to the Class-Capitation-Tax, imposed on the Profession for war purposes and continued against good faith during more than thirty years of peace, was duly made in the late Parliament. The presentation of petitions on the subject has hitherto yielded no fruit, and till of late has been but a stereotyped ceremony; Lord Robert Grosvenor, however, by his exertions on the question, has won for us a position, from which, on the approaching revision of taxation, we may reasonably hope to obtain redress.

The attention of your committee has been also directed, at the instance of some of the members, to the practice of fees on declarations and oaths. It has been urged that, as a matter of principle and fairness, although the result may be trifling, the attorney as the commissioner taking the declaration or administering the oath, and not the attorney in the matter in which either is required, ought to receive the fee; that the contrary practice is more particularly disadvantageous to the younger members of the Profession, to the benefit so far as it goes of the older or more extensive practitioners. Your committee consider the practice that has obtained is in strictness objectionable for the above reasons, and think the fees should be placed on the same footing as those taken under the other professional commissions, for example, on the acknowledgment of deeds by married women, and they accordingly recommend the members of this society, and the attorneys generally practising in Wolverhampton, to alter the practice in this respect.

Your committee have the pleasure to report the election of an additional honorary member.

The members of the retiring committee, ineligible for election under rule 8, are Mr. Bolton, Mr. Corser, and Mr. Price.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

The Practical Statutes for 1849, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their Construction, and a copious Index. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Crockford.

THE series of Practical Statutes is well known to most of our readers. Their design is simple and useful. It is to give in a compact shape, and of a size convenient for carrying to Courts or for reference, all the statutes the English Practitioner can ever require, verbatim, omitting the Scotch and Irish and Colonial statutes, and those which are called Sessional, and simply re-enacted every year. These are printed in a small volume, with occasional explanatory Notes, and a copious general Index. Of those which are brought out at the end of each Session, the volumes for 1850, 1851, and 1852 have regularly appeared.

It is now designed to go backwards, and to publish the previous volumes in like manner, omitting non-practical statutes, and also all the repealed statutes and parts of statutes, and to increase its value by giving in notes the constructions which the Judges have put upon the words of the Acts. In this manner all the present volume has been annotated by Mr. HERTSLET, so that it contains the whole law as it is—the very words of the statute-book, and the meanings which the Courts have put upon those words when called upon to construe them. This union of the Statute and Case Law in one page is precisely what the practitioner wants, and is especially useful in Courts, where compactness and completeness are the two requisites of a law-book for reference.

It will be seen from the list of contents in the Advertisement that this volume contains many statutes of great importance and frequently in request—and foremost among them the Bankruptcy Consolidation Act and the Second Winding-up Act.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

INNER TEMPLE, JAN. 26.—The undermentioned gentlemen were this day called to the bar by the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple:—Mr. Frederick Ross Vallings, M.A., Mr. Thomas Chandless, the younger, Mr. Robert George Moncreiff Sumner, M.A., Mr. Charles Dudley Robert Ward, Mr. Charles Samuel Bagot, Mr. William Finnie, B.C.L., Mr. John Bell Brooking, Mr. William Finch Edwards, M.A., Mr. James Christie Traill, Mr. Henry John Simonds, Mr. Franklin Lushington, M.A., Mr. Charles Penruddocke, Mr. Nathaniel Simpson, Mr. Felix Vincent Raper, B.A., Mr. William Pearson, Mr. William George Harrison, B.A., Mr. John Lindsey Reed, Mr. Frederick Hoare Colt, B.A., Mr. William Ernst Browning.

MIDDLE TEMPLE, JAN. 26.—The undermentioned members of this society have been called to the bar, and were sworn in this evening before several of the benchers:—Edward Godman Kirkpatrick, Esq. Wilfrid Hudlestone Simpson, Esq. Charles Smith, Esq. Stephen Martin Leake, Esq. William Talfourd Salter, Esq. Albany Fonblanque, Esq. Owen Saunders Wilson, Esq. John Henry Patteson, Esq. James Maurice, Esq. John Thornely, Esq. John William Grigg, Esq. Edmund Macrory, Esq. Thomas M'Enteer, Esq. Robert Orridge, Esq. John Price, Esq. Edward William Hornby, Esq. Henry Stephen Hansler, Esq. Boswell Hensman, Esq. Roger Gadsden, Esq. and George Pringle, Esq.

GRAY'S INN, JAN. 26.—At a pension of the Honourable Society of Gray's Inn, holden this day, Leonard Hill, Gent., Esq. was called to the degree of barrister-at-law.

LINCOLN'S INN, JAN. 26.—The undermentioned members of this society have been called to the bar, and were sworn in this evening before several of the benchers:—Henry Bonham Carter, Esq., George Norman Maule, M.A., Elphinstone Barchard, M.A.

The Right Honourable Sir John Jervice, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, has appointed Thomas Gold Edwards, of Denbigh, in the county of Denbigh, Gent., to be one of the Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, under the Act passed for the abolition of fines and recoveries, and for the substitution of more simple modes of assurance, in and for the county of Denbigh, also in and for the county of Flint.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CHRISTMAS BOXES IN THE TEMPLE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Permit me through your columns to complain of the tax imposed upon all who have chambers in the Temple, in the shape of demands for Christmas-boxes. Every well-paid servant of the Benchers comes begging. The porters, warders, sweeps, dustmen, postmen, and I know not how many more, levy a contribution upon us poor lawyers, who are already overburdened by enormous rents and an increased house-tax. I am told the Benchers of the Middle Temple have prohibited this toll gathering by their servants. Why has not the Inner Temple done the same? Doubtless the servants are well paid; why should they be permitted also to prey upon such as,

Yours, &c.

Inner Temple, Jan. 26. A POOR TEMPLAR.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Jan. 25.

COLE, WILLIAM, wine merchant, North Walsham, Norfolk, Feb. 5, at eleven, March 11, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Whitmore. Sols. Messrs. Linklater, Size-lane, Bucklersbury. Petition, Jan. 14.

TATE, ROBERT, jun. miller, Uxbridge-moor, Hillingdon, Jan. 31 and March 7, at eleven, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Stansfeld. Sols. Messrs. Linklater, Size-lane. Petition Jan. 22.

BROOKS, JOHN, coal merchant, Eling, Southampton, Feb. 4 and March 8, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Edwards Sols. Philbrick, Basinghall-street, and Deacon and Co. Romsey, Hampshire. Petition, Jan. 11.

COCK, ROBERT CHARLES ROSWALL, merchant, Liverpool-road, Islington, Feb. 4, at eleven, March 12, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Pennell. Sol. Jewitt, Lime-street. Petition, Jan. 19.

ALLEN, HERBERT, tailor, Birmingham, Feb. 8 and March 2, at twelve, Birmingham. Off. as. Bittleston. Sols. Barrett, Leeds, and Benson, Birmingham. Petition, Jan. 22.

SIMMONS, HENRY, innkeeper, Leicester. Feb. 4 and 25, at ten, Nottingham. Off. as. Bittleston. Sols. Ashurst and Sons, Old Jewry, and Motteram and Co., Birmingham. Petition, Jan. 3.

FLETCHER, CHARLES, cardboard and silk manufacturer, Derby, Feb. 4 and 25, at ten, Nottingham. Off. as. Harris. Sol. Balguy, Nottingham. Petition, Jan. 24.

PASS, JOHN, innkeeper, Far Town, Huddersfield, Yorkshire, Feb. 18 and March 11, at eleven, Leeds. Off. as. Young. Sols. Messrs. Sykes, Huddersfield; and Bond and Barwick, Leeds. Petition, Jan. 21.

FLETCHER, JOHN, cattle dealer, Bradford, Yorkshire, Feb. 7 and March 7, at eleven, Leeds. Off. as. Hope. Sols. Upton and Yewdall, Leeds. Petition, Jan. 24.

COLDWELL, GEORGE, bootmaker, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancashire, Feb. 8 and March 1, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Fraser. Sol. Brooks, Ashton-under-Lyne. Petition, Jan. 21.

DONALD, WILLIAM, Hayton, Cumberland, Jan. 31, at eleven, and March 7, at one, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. as. Wakley. Sols. Bischoff and Coxe, Coleman-street, City; Steel, Cockermouth; and Watson, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Petition, Jan. 6.

Gazette, Jan. 28.

ANDREWS, WILLIAM WARD, ironmonger, Wolverhampton, Feb. 15 and March 8, at twelve, Birmingham. Com. Daniell. Off. as. Bittleston. Sols Thorne, Wolverhampton; and Motteram, Knight, and Emmit, Birmingham. Petition, Jan. 22.

BOSLAL, TALES, merchant, Mogadore, Ribat, and Mansell-street, Goodman's-fields, Feb. 5, at half-past eleven, March 11, at half-past one, Basinghall-street. Com. Fane. Off. as. Whitmore. Sol. Cotterill, Throgmorton-street. Petition, Jan. 24.

BOTTERILL, JOHN, miller, corn factor, maltster, and coal merchant, Marton, Lincolnshire, Feb. 16 and March 9, at twelve, Kingston-upon-Hull. Com. Ayrton. Off. as. Carrick, Hull. Sol. Stamp, Hull. Petition, Jan. 12.

BOWLES, RICHARD, confectioner, Langley-place, Commercial-road, and Botolph-lane, City, Feb. 8, at two, March 8, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Holroyd. Off. as. Edwards. Sols. Wright and Bonner, London-street, Fenchurch-street. Petition, Jan. 19.

CANNAN, THOMAS and JOHN, livery stable keepers, Little Moorfields, Cripplegate Without, Feb. 7 and March 11, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Fane. Off. as. Cannan. Sols. Keddell and Smith, Lime-street, City. Petition, Jan. 26.

COHEN, ABRAHAM, wholesale clothier, Houndsditch, Feb. 8, at one, March 11, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Graham. Sols. Sold, Turner, and Turner, Aldermanbury. Petition, Jan. 23.

GREENWOOD, JOSEPH and BENJAMIN, worsted spinners and stuff manufacturers, Bradford, Feb. 18 and March 11, at eleven, Leeds. Com. West. Off. as. Freeman. Sols. Wavell, Philbrick, and Foster, Halifax. Petition, Jan. 14.

POWELL, WILLIAM JOHN, and HIND, CHARLES, linen drapers, Carnaby-street, Golden-square, Feb. 5, at two, March 12, at one, Basinghall-street. Com. Goulburn. Off. as. Edwards. Sol. Buchannan, Basinghall-street. Petition, Jan. 26.

SMITH, GEORGE, hatter, Manchester, Feb. 11 and March 4, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Lee. Sol. Faulkner, Manchester. Petition, Jan. 21.

Dividends,

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Ashworth, J. gardener and confectioner, first, 1s. 1d. Fraser, Manchester.—Bentley, J. cheesemonger, first, 4s. 9d. Graham, London.—Burnip, T. draper, second, 3s. 6d. Baker, Newcastle.—Calvert, H. woollen draper, second, 5s. Pennell, London.—Coleman, S. L. draper, first, 5d. Groom, London.—Collingwood, T. butcher, second, 1¼d. Graham, London.—Colquhoun, J. money scrivener, second, 2s. Nicholson, London.—Croulson, J. money scrivener, first, 1s. Fraser, Manchester.—Daw, R. jun. linendraper, first on new proofs, 2s. 1-12ths of 1d. Pennell, London.—Fray, T. check manufacturer second, ¼d. Fraser, Manchester.—Fuller, J. glass merchant, second, 2s. 8d. Pennell, London.—Guillaume, L. manufacturer of artificial flowers, second, 10d. Graham, London.—Gurney, H. victualler, first, 3s. 2d. Graham, London.—Hall, E. packer and innkeeper, first and final, 1s. 4¼d. Fraser, Manchester.—Ingram, J. seedsman, 3s. 6d. Nicholson, London.—Knight S. cheesemonger, first, 3s. 2¼d. Whitmore, London.—Lawson, T. draper, first, 4s. Fraser, Manchester.—McLean, H. C. clerk, first, 1s. Pennell, London.—McQueen, F. merchant, second, 1¾d. Pennell, London.—Moulton, J. joiner and builder, first, 1s. 4d. Pott, Manchester.—Pearman, and Pearman, silk dyers, first, 2s. Pennell, London.—Peters, R. T. hotel keeper, first, 4¼d. Pennell, London.—Rumsey, W. S. druggist, second, 1s. 11d. Graham, London.—Rust, E. brickmaker, second, 1s. 5d. Graham, London.—Staley, T. grocer, first, 1s. 6d. Fraser, Manchester.—Thomas, J. builder, first, 9d. Graham, London.—Wall, A. B. apothecary and surgeon, first, 10d. Pennell, London.—White, C. H. dealer in china, &c., second, 3¼d. Nicholson, London.—Winstanley, G. H. and E. chemists, first, 10s. Nicholson, London.

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Jan. 18.

Benson, W. silversmith and jeweller, Cheapside, London, Jan. 13. Trusts. A. Alexander, Hatton-garden, J. Stokes, Birmingham, and F. Haslack, Hatton-garden, jewellers. Sol. W. Stopher, Cheapside.—Brake, J. tailor, Broad-st., Birmingham, Jan. 5. Trusts. M. Jones, warehouseman, and T. Holroyd, woollen draper, both of Birmingham. Sol. R. Cheshire, Birmingham.—Easlea, J. miller, Wetherden, Suffolk, Jan 6. Trusts. S. W. Hunt, auctioneer, Wetherden, and W. Boulter, miller, Stowmarket. Sol. J. Gudgeon, Stowmarket.

Gazette, Jan. 21.

Church, J. W. hat manufacturer, Redcross-st., Southwark, Jan. 12. Trusts. E. Galibert, French silk plush impoter, Bridge-st., Southwark, and E. E. Molladay, hat manufacturer, Warwick. Sols. Lepard, Bannatyne, and Gammon, Cloak-la.—Frost, G. builder, Broad-st.-buildings, London, Dec. 30. Trusts. T. E. Jones, North-buildings, Finsbury-sq., and J. Horne, ironmonger, Hayes-pl., Kingsland. Sols. Beaumont and Thompson, Lincoln's-inn-fields.—Johnson, W. tailor and draper, Cateaton-st., Manchester, Dec. 26. Trusts. R. Acheson, agent, Manchester, and E. Walker, accountant, Huddersfield, Sol. C. Heywood, Manchester.—Lakin, W. hosier, Leicester, Dec. 24. Trusts. T. Sunderland, commission agent, and A. Burgess, worsted-spinner, both of Leicester. Sol. G. Stevenson, Leicester.—Lee, H. watchmaker, Worthing, Sussex. Dec. 30. Trusts. C. Scott, watchmaker and jeweller, Ely-pl., Holborn. Sols. Taylor and Collisson, Bodford-row.—Priestman, F. innkeeper, Staindrop, Durham, Jan. 14. Trusts. R. Heslop and T. Smith, cabinet maker, both of Darlington. Sol. F. Newburn, Darlington. Smith, T. innkeeper, West Teignmouth, Devonshire,, Jan. 15. Trusts. J. H. Martin, brewer, East Teignmouth, and W. Stooke, ironmonger, West Teignmouth, Sol. R. W. Templer, Teignmouth.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Jan. 14.

Archer, T. and Pryke, H. W. tailors and drapers, Braintree, Dec. 31.—Ashton, J. and B. cotton spinners and manufacturers, Werneth, Bredbury, and Manchester, Dec. 31.—Bancroft, J. and J. and Harrop, J. cotton spinners, Bardsley, Ashton-under-Lyne, Jan. 1, 1851.—Bayley, H. T. and Cole, W. L. linendrapers, Canterbury, Jan. 14. Debts paid by Bayley.—Bontoft, C. and H. stationers, booksellers, and printers, Boston, Jan. 1. Debts paid by H. and J. A. Bontoft.—Booth, T. and C. merchants, Liverpool, Jan. 11.—Bramley, W. and Derbyshire, J. ironfounders, Old Accrington, Jan 12. Debts paid by Bramley.—Brooks, J. W. and Whalley, C. J. attorneys and solicitors, Gray's-inn, Nov. 13. Debts paid by Mr. H. Johnson, solicitor, Great James-street.—Catling, F. J., Beerbohm, J. E. and Chittenden, H. corn factors, Mark-lane, as regards Chittenden, Dec. 31.—Chapman, G. and Hansell, H. attorneys and solicitors, Norwich, Dec. 25.—Cordeux, J. and T. S. linen manufacturers, Barnsley, Jan. 1, 1850.—Dearden, J. and C. painters, Leeds, Jan. 6. Debts paid by C. Dearden.—Foster, S. and Scholes, A. joiners and cabinet makers, Lindley, Huddersfield, Jan. 8.—Hall, B. and Maltby, C. painters and decorators, Bradford, Jan. 10. Debts paid by Maltby.—Handford, G. and Howard, C. lace manufacturers, Birmingham, Jan. 12. Debts paid by Handford.—Hecht, M., S. and P. merchants, Seething-lane, as regards M. Hecht, Dec. 31.—Hodgkinson, J. and G. wine and spirit merchants, Chesterfield, and victuallers, Black Princerow, Walworth, Jan. 12.—Horton, E. G. and Marsh, H. surgeons, Leeds, Jan. 11. Debts paid by Horton.—Little, W. H. and J. timber merchants and saw mill proprietors, Brighton-place and Edwards-place, Hackney-road, Dec. 31.—Matthews, S. A. and Chamberlain, C. M. dealers in Berlin wool and fancy articles, Worcester, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Mathews.—Perrens, W. K. and Wakefield, C. millwrights and engineers, Porto Bello, Stourbridge, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Wakefield.—Roberts, E. and Matthews, T. frame smiths, Leicester, Jan. 1.—Salusbury, G. T. and Saunders, E. wharfingers, Devizes, Dec. 31.—Stephens, P. and Crane, J. H. leather sellers, Cross-street, Islington, Jan. 4. Debts paid by Stephens.—Sudlow. J. J. J. jun. and Gunnell, A. V. parliamentary agents, Great George-street, Westminster, Jan. 6. Debts paid by Sudlow.—Waddington, J., W. E. and R. E. umbrella and parasol manufacturers, Coleman-street, as regards R. E. Waddington, Jan. 13. Debts paid by J. and W. E. Waddington.

Gazette Jan. 18.

Allanit, J. and J. jun. and Arbouin, J. wine and spirit merchants, Mark-lane, as regards Arbouin, Jan. 1, 1849. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Allanit, J. and J. jun. wine and spirit merchants, Mark-lane. Jan. 10. Debts paid by J. Allanit, jun.—Brenner, G. W. and J. A. oil merchants, Manchester, Jan. 4. Debts paid by A. Brenner.—Buchanan, J. and Gibson, P. ship builders, ship owners, and timber merchants, Sunderland-near-the-Sea, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Buchanan.—Burd, W. and Baker, E. L. British wine manufacturers, Manchester, Jan. 13. Debts paid by Burd.—Cain, R. and Owens, T. common brewers, Liverpool, Jan. 14. Debts paid by Cain.—Colquhoun, L., E., S., A., and J. woollen cloth manufacturers, Holmfirth, Jan. 1.—Cook, T., Haworth, R., Procter, J. and Bowker, J. cotton manufacturers, Greenfield-mill, Bury, Jan. 6. Debts paid by Cook.—Crook, R. and Sharpe, M. milliners and dress makers, Conduit-street, Bond-street, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Crook.—Dodsworth, M. and Percy, J. joiners and cabinet makers, New Malton, Jan. 1.—Draper, M. and Burn, T. tailors, High-street, Huddersfield, Dec. 31. Debts paid by W. Golden.—Hutton, Southwark, Aug. 21. Debts paid by Draper.—Friend, R. and Beckwith, C. woollen factors and warehousemen, Gresham-st. Jan. 17.—Golden, W. and C. gun makers, A. and Whitworth, J. commission merchants and shipping and insurance agents, Liverpool, Jan. 13.—Hyslop, J. and Hindley, H. silk manufacturers, Leigh, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Hyslop.—Kay, M. and W. and Barnes, L. woollen manufacturers, Walmersley-cum-Shuttleworth, near Bury, Jan. 14.—Maddy, W. G. and Bull, J. outfitters, Liverpool, Jan. 15.—Mounsey, W. H. and Farrer, J. wine and spirit dealers, Liverpool, Jan. 14.—Mutchinson, S. and Applebee, J. K. boot and shoe manufacturers, Northampton, Jan. 18. Debts paid by Muddiman.—Muir, M. M. and Meegan, E. pattern designers, Kidderminster, Jan. 13.—Pyslop, J. and Hindley, H. silk manufacturers, Leigh, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Hyslop.—Ray, M. and W. and Barnes, L. woollen manufacturers, Walmersley-cum-Shuttleworth, near Bury, Jan. 14.—Maddy, W. G. and Bull, J. outfitters, Liverpool, Jan. 15.—Mounsey, W. H. and Farrer, J. wine and spirit dealers, Liverpool, Jan. 14.—Mutchinson, S. and Applebee, J. K. boot and shoe manufacturers, Northampton, Jan. 18. Debts paid by Muddiman.—Muir, M. M. and Meegan, E. pattern designers, Kidderminster, Jan. 13.—Pussavant, P. J., Beckenbach, F. W. and Pussavant, P. J. commission agents, Bradford, as regards Beckenbach, Jan. 15. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Pelton, R. T. and F. tailors, hatters, and undertakers, Dartford, Dec. 1.—Salisbury, E. G. and Virtue, G. publishers of certain works called the Art Journal and the Vernon Gallery, Jan. 14.—Saul, T. and Harverson, F. sawyers, Norwich, as regards Haverson, Dec. 18. Debts paid by Saul.—Watson, J. jun. and Haggarth, H. land agents and land surveyors, Kendal, Jan. 10. Debts paid by Haggarth.—Whitehead, J. and Hudson, W. painters, glaziers, and paper hangers, Davenham and Hartford, Jan. 7. Debts paid by Whitehead.—Whittaker, J. and Greenhalgh, T. and W. engravers to calico-printers, Hulme within Manchester, Jan. 14. Debts paid by T. and W. Greenhalgh.

Gazette, Jan. 21.

Armitage, T. and Milnes, J. stone masons, Huddersfield, Jan. 19.—Barker, J. and W. cotton spinners and manufacturers, Barewise, near Todmorden, Jan. 15.—Baylis, J., Bristed, H. R. and Morley, W. P. crape manufacturers, Luton and Dunstable, Jan. 16.—Blackburn, J. and Teall, W. iron founders and millwrights, Wakefield, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Teall.—Booty, R. and J. drapers, Piccadilly, Westminster, Jan. 17.—Clarke, T. T. and J. linen and woollen drapers, Stalybridge, Jan. 17. Debts paid by J. Clarke.—Craig, H. and Main, G. commission merchants, Liverpool, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Craig.—Crowshaw, J. and Ainsworth, R. glue and size manufacturers, Manchester and West Leigh, Jan. 17. Debts paid by Ainsworth.—Cuthbertson, J., Chorley, J. jun. McLeod, D. and J., Brown, J., Miller, W., Hendry, W., Ayre, G., McKendry, J. and T., McLackland, S., Coltman, R., Willis, R., Thompson, W. and Edmundson, J. glass bottle makers, under the firm of The Seaham Harbour Bottle Company, as regards D. McLeod, J. McLeod, J. Brown, W. Miller, W. Hendry, G. Ayre, S. McLackland, R. Coltman, W. Thompson, and J. Edmundson, Jan. 3. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Dugard, W. jun. and H. plate, factors, and lamp manufacturers, Upper Priory, Birmingham, Jan. 18. Debts paid by W. Dugard.—Goodband, J. and Pickling, T. merchants, Leicester and New York, Jan. 10.—Goodyear, J. sen. and J. jun. schoolmasters, Barnet, Jan. 20.—Gunn, T. and W., printers and engravers, Hand-court, Holborn, Jan. 19. Debts paid by W. Gunn.—Harrison, J. and J., and Boddington, H. common brewers, Strangeways, Manchester, Jan. 18. Debts paid by Boddington.—Jackson, E. and Neild, J. timber merchants, Oldham, Jan. 17.—Keeling, J. S. and Porter, F., colonial brokers, Mincing-lane, Jan. 19.—Lloyd, J. and Blythe, J. H. mercers, Shrewsbury, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Lloyd.—Mankelow, T. and Alder, T. W. zinc workers, Cumberland-place, Newington, Jan. 17.—Marsden, T., Swingler, J. and Taylor, J. S. engineers and ironfounders, Derby, Jan. 16. Debts paid by Marsden and Taylor.—Mason, J. and E. C. colour and graining tool manufacturers, Derby, Jan. 1. Debts paid by E. C. Mason.—Meyer, J. and J. and Mortimer, J. army and navy contractors, George-street, Edinburgh, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Mortimer.—Miller, H. M. and Beck, F. wine-merchants, Eastcheap, Jan. 1.—Mills, T. sen. and T. jun. builders, Brewers-green, Westminster, Dec. 31.—Pussavant, P. J., Preller, E. and Beckenbach, F. W. commission agents, Bradford, Dec. 31.—Phillips, M. A., C. T. and A. brush manufacturers, King-street, Soho, as regards A. Phillips, Jan. 20. Debts paid by M. A. and C. T. Phillips.—Pigott, D. W., D. S. and C. button-manufacturers, Gresham-street, Jan. 19.—Reynolds, F. and J. J. hatters, Strand, Jan. 20.—Rodgers, R., Russell, T. and Horsfield, H. R. saw manufacturers, Sheffield, Dec. 31 Debts paid by Horsfield.—Schotz, G. L. and Genth, F. merchants, Manchester, Dec. 9. Debts paid by Genth.—Small, T. and Fry, D. H. shipping and general commission agents, Lowestoft, Jan. 1.—Startin, G., Calder, T. and Fry, J. jun. sugar factors, and dealers in colonial produce, Glasgow, as regards Startin and Fry, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Calder.—Startin, G., Fry, J. jun. and Startin, J. sugar factors and coffee merchants, Liverpool, as regards Fry, Dec. 31. Debts paid by G. and J. Startin.—Startin, G. and Fry, J. jun. commission merchants, and dealers in sugar and colonial produce, Fenchurch-street, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Startin.—Stephenson, I., Barker, J., Stephenson, R. and Ellison, C. commission wool combers, Bradford, Dec. 31. Debts paid by I. Stephenson and Barker.—Urch, W. and Springford, W. knit hose manufacturers and general shopkeepers, Nettlebridge, Jan. 8.—Vieyra, A. and Repington, A. watch and clock makers, and jewellers, Regent-street, June 30. Debts paid by Repington.—Whitehead, M. and J. joiners and builders, Sheffield, Jan. 17. Debts paid by M. Whitehead.—Wilkinson, W. Bibby, T. and Monk, W. cotton-piece manufacturers, Padiham, March 9.—Debts paid by Wilkinson and Monk.—Williams, J. and Trevethan, J. farmers, Beer Barton, Beerferris, Jan. 12. Debts paid by either. Walden, J., Simmons, G. and Newton, J. iron-founders and pattern makers, Hyde. Jan. 11.—Yarwood, R. B. and Fryer, W. H. tailors, Leeds, Jan. 14.

THE FOLLOWING NEW PRACTICAL WORKS FOR THE OFFICE ARE JUST ISSUED AT THE LAW TIMES OFFICE.

THE NEW RULES and ORDERS, the NEW SCALE of FEES, and the NEW FORMS relating to the ADMINISTRATION of JUSTICE and the REGULATION of ARTS of the COMMON LAW, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Tables. By R MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 2s. (This may be had also as a Supplement to "Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act," having marginal references to the pages of that work.)

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, with all the Rules, Orders, Cases, Regulations, &c. to this time, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Tables, the Orders being placed with the Sections of the Statute to which they relate By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law Price 8s. 6d.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS, with the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, and Notes of all the Cases decided on its interpretation By C J B HERSCHELL, Esq., Barrister-at-Law Price 7s 6d cloth

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of 1849, containing all those ever required in Practice omitting the Repealed and the Revised, Local, Colonial, and Boundary Statutes, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction; thus presenting the whole Law on it, in a compact form (generally also) and with a good Index By C J B HERSCHELL, Esq., Barrister-at-Law Price 15s cloth (This is in continuation of the Practical Statutes of 1850, 1851 and 1852, which may still be had.)

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I of Vol. VI with a copious collection of Precedents in Note cases. This part contains Forms of Indictments at Quarter Sessions under the New Law By J E DAVIES, Esq., Barrister-at-Law Price 3s 6d

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising in addition to the regular information of an Almanac Those Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice Stamp and Tax Tables Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax and the other Information required for immediate reference in all Offices Price only 1d, or stamped for post, 1½d A payment to any person including thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanac and Time of the Moon's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year a variety Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy and much other matter required for Reference in Courts Price only 6d.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT containing all the New Rules and Orders the New Table of Fees, and Cases decided to the end of Michaelmas Term Price 10s cloth

THE LAW DIGEST for the Half Year ending December 1 By H WISE and D I EVANS Esqrs Barristers-at-Law Price 6s 6d bds or 7s cl th.

This work gives every case, whether reported during the half year arranged so that the practitioner may find in one volume all the latest law on any subject on which he may be engaged

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1853.

THE NEW SCALE OF COSTS

With reference to the New Scale of Costs, and the Directions to the Taxing Master in lieu of those now in force, which we published last week there is one point to which we think it desirable to call early attention, as its practical operation will largely affect two branches of the Profession, relieving the attorneys of great responsibility, and maintaining the position of the special pleaders—a body whose practical value has always been acknowledged not merely in carrying on the purely formal proceedings of a suit and in advising, but in the education of both the higher and the lower branches of the Profession.

The 4th Direction to the Masters, here alluded to, is as follows —

"4 The Masters shall have discretion in all cases to allow, as between party and party, the fees of counsel or special pleader, for drawing pleadings or other proceedings, whether special or otherwise, and advising

We invite the attention of our readers to the following note on the subject by Mr THOMAS CHITTY —

This is a most beneficial direction and will be received with great satisfaction by all branches of the Profession It will tend to remove a hardship which has been severely felt, particularly since the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, came into operation For although it must be obvious that the Act in providing short forms of pleadings could not impart the special knowledge necessary for their application, yet the Attorney has reasonably hesitated to seek the assistance of his Counsel or Special Pleader in many cases falling properly within their province in consequence of the uncertainty which existed as to whether the Masters would feel justified in allowing the fee for such assistance upon taxation The Attorney therefore, was generally obliged either to undertake the duties of another branch of the profession, in addition to the complicated labours and responsibilities already devolved upon him, or to incur the expenditure of a fee which might eventually fall upon his own client, although successful, or perhaps upon himself The Special Pleader, on the other hand found that the range of "questions" which he had been in the habit of answering gratuitously for the general guidance of his client, was being gradually extended beyond the accustomed limit Thus he was often asked as to the applicability and sufficiency in given cases of the forms of pleadings prescribed by the Act although it was obvious, and it still must be that it is the proper business of Counsel or Special Pleader to prepare such pleadings (no matter how short the form into which they are resolved), if his knowledge or experience is in any way required in order to frame or apply them The tendency of this state of things as regarded the Pleader in particular, was to deprive him of that proper business in the sense which was remunerative, and to leave him only that which was gratuitous, and thus, too, at a time when the working out of a new system made the latter branch of his duties doubly onerous It would seem, from the above direction that the learned judges have determined to put an end to this hardship, and although a discretion is given to the Masters, yet the direction will no doubt be carried out liberally, and it is hoped, will be found to be an adequate remedy. The necessity for this great alteration, and the advantage of it to all branches of the Profession and to the suitors, will be at once apparent It is clear that, although the late statute has happily shortened and simplified the forms of special pleadings yet the same exact knowledge of the law and the same acquaintance with the latest authorities are still as necessary as formerly to secure the rights of the parties It is also still of primary importance with reference to the pleadings, that the claim and defence should be framed in the most advantageous and correct form, and equally so with a view to costs that parties should not unadvisedly as has hitherto been too often the case "join issue" on the opponent's pleading Although amendments may be made more easily than formerly yet it will be very desirable to avoid the necessity for them as the expense of an amendment at almost any stage, will often exceed the costs of employing Pleaders on both sides throughout the whole cause The Pleaders fees, in fact, are altogether an inconsiderable item in the general costs, and bear no comparison to the advantages which are generally derived from their connection with the cause. Even in a case where it may eventually turn out that it was not absolutely necessary to employ a Pleader the general assistance required in the cause and which hitherto could be paid for only by the pleadings is often wanted in the simplest as in the heaviest cases —so that the suitor in any event receives the full benefit of the fee It will be observed that the Direction extends not only to the framing of pleadings and proceedings but also to advising. So that although the Attorney will now continue to receive from the Pleader that general assistance which the latter has hitherto given the Attorney will be warranted in other cases in becoming within the range of more questions in obtaining regular advice for his guidance By these means the best interests of the suitor will be consulted and the Attorney will be protected from an undue amount of responsibility, which ought not to be cast upon him Whenever he reasonably thinks that the matter is within the province of Counsel or Pleader rather than within the range of his own duties it is believed that the Masters will under the above direction, sanction the exercise of the Attorney's discretion

We think the Profession generally will concede with the views expressed by Mr CHITTY For the present we shall leave them to speak for themselves, but in our next number we propose elucidating and enforcing them by some further observations of our own

CONVEYANCING REFORM

Although undoubtedly something may be done to lessen the cost of conveyancing, by establishing a better system of charges and abbreviating needless verbosity, no substantial improvement can be made without material alterations in the law of real property

When Radical M P s and democratic newspapers talk of making the transfer of land as inexpensive as that of a bale of cotton, they but show the most profound ignorance of the subject, and the only answer to their wild and visionary rhapsodies is that the scheme is simply impossible

The cost of conveyancing does not consist so much in the conveyance itself as in the investigation and proof of title The drawing, engrossing, and execution of the deed is usually but a fraction of the whole costs of a purchase or mortgage We presume that no purchaser would be content to pay his money without a previous investigation of the title, that title must be investigated so far back as the law allows a claim to exist without being barred by lapse of time, every transaction within that interval must be carefully traced, to be sure that there are no claims not extinguished In sixty years there are many changes Sixty years comprise almost two generations. Hence births and deaths, wills and administrations, insolvencies and bankruptcies must be sought for and seen to be correct Here it is that costs arise, this is the main cause of the expenses so much complained of. But the law destroyers are either ignorant of this or they carefully keep it out of sight, while they set all down to the account of the Lawyers Not one of them has ever attempted to explain how he would grapple with the true difficulties of the case what changes he would introduce into the law of real property, so as to make more possession a good title; and nothing short of that could accomplish the design of making a transfer of land as cheap as a transfer of merchandize.

But does it follow that there can be no improvement, and that the law of real property is to continue unchanged, and that conveyancing is always to be so burdensome as now? By no means It is capable of very considerable improvements, without tearing it up by the roots and destroying it, and some of these we propose to suggest,—with deference, but not without hope that there is something practical in these hints.

The foundation of all the difficulties and consequently of the expenses, of the transfer of real property, undoubtedly lies in the extensive powers which the law gives to the owner to charge his Properly to understand the character of these powers it is necessary to bear in mind what are the natural rights of property in land. These are strictly limited to the life of the possessor. But society, for its own peace, has permitted owners to dispose of their lands after their decease So with incumbrances. Naturally there can be no right of property apart from possession, but for certain purposes of convenience, society has permitted the possessor to give to others certain claims upon it, which the law will enforce

Now it is in the extent to which the law of society permits a departure from the law of nature, that the more or less of difficulty (and consequently of cost) in the transfer of land will be found to consist, and the obvious and only remedy is to restrict those powers

Nor is there anything new or alarming in such a proposition It has been the steady aim of the administrators of the law from the earliest times to the present endeavours have always been made by our landowners to extend their power over their lands, and by our Courts to restrain them. The reason why this duty fell upon the Courts, instead of being undertaken by the Legislature, was, that the landowners were, until lately, the law makers But the time is come when the Legislature should do what the Courts have sought to do and have done, but partially, namely, to adapt the powers permitted to be exercised over the soil by its possessors to limits more rational in themselves and better suited to the present condition and requirements of the community

The power of disposal after death is too extensive and so also is the power of charging

It would suffice for all necessary uses of property in land that the power of devising it should be strictly limited to some person or persons living at the time of the devisor's death. This would simplify titles somewhat

But the expenses of investigations, which are the costly part of a conveyance do not so much arise from difficulties in the proofs of a devise as from the necessity for guarding against charges, and hence no substantial improvement can be made in conveyancing without a revision, and a large restriction, of the power of charging lands.

We cannot go nearly the length of those who advocate the entire suppression of the power of imposing any charge of land without actual possession, placing it in this respect upon the same footing as personal property. But we are quite ready to go a great way towards attaining the same object We would not forbid a charge unaccompanied with possession, but we would make provision for any charge being easily ascertained, and for its easy discharge

We propose to secure the first object, that a ready knowledge of any charge by any person dealing with the land so charged, by the very simple process of requiring an indorsement of the fact of such charge, with the amount and the name and abode of the person in whose favour it is made, upon the last deed under which the owner holds the property, declaring all charges to be invalid that are not so indorsed. This would effectually prevent the purchaser from being defrauded, and would limit the cost of investigation as to charges to the title-deeds themselves

Then, for the more easy discharge of lands from charges and incumbrances, the Legislature should give in absolute power to the party who is in actual rightful possession for the time being to go to the Court and claim to have the value of the charge assessed, and to pay the amount into court upon the trusts of the instrument creating the charges, and this power should not be limited by any act of the owner, or require the assent of the parties interested, but be an absolute right to all lawful possessors of the land.

We believe that, by the combined effects of these two provisions, simple though they be, a vast improvement would, ere long, be effected and the costs of transfer of land be materially lightened.

With these changes in the law we would combine a voluntary Encumbered Estates Court, similar in its powers to that which is working so well in Ireland, with this only difference, that the English court should not be a compulsory but a voluntary resort. If any man has a title which he desires to clear, let him resort to this court, which, after seeing that all existing interests are properly protected, would give him an indefeasible parliamentary title with which to start afresh. As such a court would be for the advantage of individuals more than for the general public, let its expenses be paid by those who use it. Possibly it might have little to do at first, until its utility was understood by the landowners; but whenever a complicated title is offered for mortgage or sale, we might be sure that it will be required to be passed through the court, and thus in time would the greater portion of the land come to be cleared of its accumulated difficulties in title.

Such are the rational and moderate reforms in the law of real property which we, looking at the question practically, would propose. It is only the wildest dream or the sheerest ignorance that could hope for any conceivable revolution by which land could be made as easily and cheaply transferable as merchandise.

LAW AND EQUITY.

The distinction between Law and Equity which, from early habit, lawyers had learned to look upon as a natural division, is rapidly losing its prestige, and it is beginning to be very generally understood in the Profession that it is only an artificial and ideal distinction; that there is no essential difference—that the law ought to be one rule of right, and not two rules—that if Law and Equity agree there is no need for the distinction; and, if they differ, one must be wrong and ought not to be suffered to exist.

It is wonderful what progress this opinion has made of late: it has penetrated to the highest places; many of the Judges have embraced it; the Attorney-General proclaimed it long ago; we believe that it is an article of faith with our able and eloquent Solicitor-General and proximate Chancellor, Mr. Bethell; and now we hear that the Common Law Commissioners, in the report they are about to issue, are going to recommend the addition of a very considerable equity jurisdiction to the Courts of Common Law—such as the powers of injunction and, so it is said, the conduct of Winding-up Cases. This is but a step, it is true, but it is in the right direction, and the ideal barrier that separates equity and law being once overstepped, it cannot be long maintained. Many of us will yet live to see the complete fusion of equity and law.

That this subject is making way among the public, as well as in the Profession, is proved by the following sensible petition, which has been circulated and extensively signed in the country.

To the Hon. the House of Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled.

The humble petition of, &c.

Showeth,—That it is the duty of the State to provide a just system of civil jurisprudence for the nation, sure and accessible to every citizen, and as far as possible, simple, expeditious, and costless.

That while bearing willing testimony to the general liberty of the subject, and especially to the pure administration of the law by its judges, your petitioners are of opinion that the civil jurisprudence of this country is incommensurate with the just expectations of a free and enlightened people.

That, without entering into professional details, with which many of your petitioners are necessarily unacquainted, they are of opinion that the defects of our civil jurisprudential system reduce themselves chiefly to the following, that is to say, the redress administered to the suitors is either—1. Incomplete; 2. Uncertain; 3. Dilatory; or, 4. Expensive.

That such defects are not the peculiar misadventure of any isolated cases, but the habitual and inevitable effects of the application to practice of the principles which govern respectively the courts of law equity.

Co[illegible] in seeking to discover the causes of such ano[illegible] in a country conspicuous in general for the [illegible] of its social institutions, and the jealousy which it protects the right of individuals, your Co[illegible]oners are struck with the distinctive administration of law and equity as a feature peculiar to the al establishment of this country.

That in such distinctive administration your petitioners can clearly trace the existence of the above-mentioned heads of defect, for example—

That the courts of common law, by systematically excluding cognizance of those equitable principles which enter into so large a proportion of all social rights, often close their doors against really deserving suitors, and thereby frustrate that administration of justice, which courts of justice are expressly designed to dispense.

That even in cases to which the courts of common law do extend redress, such redress is frequently of an incomplete character, falling short of that extensive, specific, equitable relief to which the suitor is of right entitled.

That courts of equity themselves, although originally intended to supply the defects of the common law courts, have by degrees been moulded into a system as inflexible as the common law courts themselves, and suitors whose cases fall within the scope of their principles are yet denied relief in those courts, because of the concurrent jurisdiction which the common law courts may chance to exercise on the particular subject matter.

That the distinction between law and equity being arbitrary in its creation, and not arising from any recognition of its abstract propriety, the limits of legal and equitable jurisdiction are so ill defined that in many cases great uncertainty prevails in ascertaining the wrongs which form the subject matter for redress in the respective courts.

That the necessary result of two systems of jurisprudence, of different origin, antagonistic in their respective jurisdictions, and employing different modes for the attainment of one and the same end, is, by the multiplication of labour, to increase the cost, and by the encouragement thereby afforded to technicality and subtlety of pleadings, to aggravate the complication of lawsuits.

That for the above-mentioned disadvantages occasioned by the distinct administration of law and equity, your petitioners are unable to discover any compensating advantages.

That understanding by "equity" the real beneficial right as contrasted with the more legal control over property, your petitioners are of opinion, that the basis of the principles of the courts of common law may be advantageously enlarged, so as to comprise all cases demanding relief, including such as have been reached hitherto only by the equity courts.

That such an extension, while it would leave untouched to the legal owners of property such control as he has hitherto possessed, and the possession of which it might be expedient he should retain, for the purposes of the due management and settlement of property, would cause the claim of the beneficial owner to be recognised and prevail, wherever the ends of substantial justice so required, in every court in the kingdom.

That your petitioners are further of opinion, that such an unity of the principles of jurisprudence might be advantageously accompanied by an uniformity of procedure, selecting from each of the existing systems of pleading and practice whatever specific merit they may possess, and combining therefrom one single scheme of litigation applicable to and governing the conduct of every civil suit.

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray your hon. House to pass such an act, or to adopt such other measures for abolishing the distinctive administration of the courts of common law and equity, and for giving to them one common procedure, as to your hon. House shall seem meet.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray," &c.

WHO IS HE?

We have received the following letter in answer to this question in our last. We leave it to our readers to say if they think that such an arrangement with the society, as was described in the circular, is or is not in accordance with the recognised rules of professional etiquette.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—The last number of your paper has just been put into into my hands, and in answer to your question of "Who is he," I refer to my signature and address below.

The general arrangements I made with the Guardian Society, and which it appears enabled them to offer to their subscribers the terms stated in their circular relating to the County Courts, I think would little interest your subscribers.

I am too well known to the respectable part of the Profession in Manchester and the neighbourhood, to fear your accusation of acting unprofessionally in anything I have done or am likely to do. But a friend has pointed out an ambiguity in the circular which had not struck me, inasmuch as by the circular it would appear that I was doing the business for individuals instead of the Society—the fact is otherwise. I have nothing to do with any individual member, and only act as one of the solicitors to the society. I am, Sir, yours, &c.

73, Princes-street, S. TUFFLEY HARDING.
Manchester, Feb. 1, 1858.

In justice to Mr. HARDING we subjoin a letter received from another correspondent, on the same subject, who considers that such an arrangement and announcement are at least not uncommon.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—Referring to the article under this head in the LAW TIMES of last Saturday, I beg to state that the arrangement between the Manchester Society of Guardians for the Protection of Trade and their solicitor, is similar in effect to the arrangements which exist between every Trade Protection Society in England and their solicitor; and it therefore seems to me rather unfair to select in particular the solicitor of the Manchester Society of Guardians for the Protection of Trade for attack.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
London, Feb. 1, 1858. W. B.

If such be the general practice, Mr. HARDING of course stands exonerated. But is the practice itself justifiable? Much of course depends upon the bona fides of the society, and whether it was got up by the attorney for his own benefit, or really by tradesmen and others, who appoint their solicitors in the regular way.

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY. (a)

WHERE a defendant cannot protect himself by a demurrer or plea, and has not disclaimed, he must, if required, put in an answer to the whole of the plaintiff's bill, or to such parts of it as are not covered by the demurrer or plea. For it is the right of the plaintiff to have a discovery from the defendants of the matters stated in his bill, provided they are necessary to ascertain facts material to the merits of his case, and to enable him to obtain a decree. The plaintiff may require this discovery, either because he cannot prove the facts, or in aid of proof, and, to avoid expense. (Mitf. Pl. 306.)

It must be borne in mind that no defendant is called upon or required to put in any answer to a bill, unless interrogatories have been filed and a copy delivered to him or his solicitor, as we have before shown. (See ante p. 148.)

But, whether the plaintiff in any suit commenced by bill, does or does not require any answer from the defendant, or any one or more of the defendants to the bill, such defendant or defendants may, without any leave of the Court, put in an answer to the plaintiff's bill, within the time allowed for demurring alone (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 13); and by the 19th of the Orders of 7th Aug. 1852, a defendant required to answer a bill must put in his answer within fourteen days from the delivery to him, or his solicitor, of a copy of the interrogatories which he is required to answer. After that time a defendant not required to answer is not to be at liberty to put in an answer without leave of the Court; but the Court is to have full power to enlarge the time, from time to time, upon application being made to the Court for that purpose. If, however, the Court grants any further time to any defendant for answering the bill, the plaintiff's right to move for a decree under the provisions thereinafter contained are in the meantime to be suspended. (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 13.)

Applications for time to answer are to be disposed of by the judge sitting at chambers: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 26.)

The answer has a twofold object. First, that of giving discovery to the plaintiff, by answering the interrogatories put to him by the plaintiff founded on the statements in the bill. Secondly, that of stating to the Court the defence upon which the defendant means to rely; or, in other words, the defendant's case.

It is desirable in framing an answer to keep these two objects distinct, though it is not often practicable to do so.

With regard to the latter, the defendant must let the plaintiff know by his answer the nature of the defence he means to set up; for if he does not, he cannot avail himself of matter which he might have urged by his answer, although it appears in his evidence: (Harrison v. Borwell, 10 Sim. 382; Stanley v. Robinson, 1 Russ. & My. 527.)

A defendant may by his answer insist upon the same benefit as if he had demurred or put in a plea. He may, for instance, insist by his answer upon the benefit of the Statute of Limitations (Norton v. Turvill, 2 P. Wms. 144); or a purchase for valuable consideration without notice: (Mitf. Pl. 309.)

With regard to the answer to the plaintiff's case, where interrogatories have been delivered, the defendant must put in a full answer; he may however object to making discovery of what might subject him to any pain, penalty, or forfeiture (Mitf. by Lor. 241); or of what is immaterial to the relief prayed (Lyon v. Kensit's Canal Company, Sir Geo. Coop. 219; Codrington v. Codrington, 3 Sim. 539); or of what relates only to the private affairs of the defendant (Francis v. Wigsell, 1 Madd. 258); or of what is the subject of professional confidence.

(a) Continued from page 181.

It must, however, be remembered, that as a general rule a defendant who answers must answer fully: (Lancaster v. Evor, 1 Ph. 349.) This rule, however, was very much cut down by the 38th Order of Aug. 1841, which provides "that a defendant shall be at liberty by answer to decline answering any interrogatory, or part of an interrogatory, from answering which he might have protected himself by demurrer; and that he shall be at liberty so to decline, notwithstanding he shall answer other parts of the bill from which he might have protected himself by demurrer."

FORM OF ANSWER.

The answer of the defendant may contain, not only the answer of the defendant to the interrogatories so filed as aforesaid, but such statements material to the case as the defendant may think necessary or advisable to set forth therein, and such answer is also to be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively, each paragraph containing as nearly as may be a separate and distinct statement or allegation: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 14.)

The following is the form of answer given in schedule D. to the Orders of 7th Aug. 1852, though it is to be varied as the nature and circumstances of each particular case may require.

In Chancery.

John Lee, plaintiff.

James Styles and Henry Jones, defendants.

The answer of James Styles, one of the above-named defendants, to the bill of complaint of the above-named plaintiff.

In answer to the said bill, I, James Styles, say as follows:—

1. I believe that the defendant, Henry Jones, does claim to have a charge upon the farm and premises comprised in the indenture of mortgage of the 1st of May, one thousand eight hundred and fifty, in the plaintiff's bill mentioned.

2. Such charge was created by an indenture, &c.

3. To the best of my knowledge, remembrance, and belief, there is not any other mortgage, charge, or incumbrance affecting the aforesaid premises.

M. N.

(Name of Counsel.)

Answers are either joint or separate, and persons having the same interests and appearing by the same solicitor ought to put in a joint answer. By the 27th Order of 1828 it is provided, "that where the same solicitor is employed for two or more defendants, and separate answers shall have been filed, or other proceedings had by or for two or more defendants separately, the Master shall consider in the taxation of such solicitor's bill of costs, either between party and party, or between solicitor and client, whether such separate answers or other proceedings were necessary and proper; and if he is of opinion that any part of the costs occasioned thereby has been unnecessarily or improperly incurred, the same shall be disallowed."

In the case, however, of trustees, if they sever their defences, they will not, unless a good reason is given for the severance, or unless one of them has a beneficial interest, be allowed the costs of separate defences: (Tarbuck v. Woodcock, 3 Beav. 289; Dudgeon v. Corley, 4 Drur. & W. 158. If an answer is wrongly entitled, the plaintiff may move to have it taken off the file for irregularity: (Pieters v. Thompson, Sir Geo. Coop. 249.) So may also the defendant, or he may leave it there, and put in another answer: (Griffiths v. Wood, 11 Ves. 62; Upton v. Sowton, 13 Sim. 45; Fry v. Mantell, 4 Beav. 485.)

An answer must in general be signed by counsel (Brown v. Bruce, 2 Mer. 1); but that was unnecessary when, under the old practice, the answer was taken by commission: (Barley v. Pearson, 3 Atk. 429.)

OF TAKING AND FILING ANSWERS.

Under the old system, unless the defendant resided within twenty miles of London, or could attend at the Record Office in London, to swear the answer there, a special commission was directed to certain solicitors, as Commissioners of the Court, to take the answer. But, under the new practice, commissioners to examine witnesses within the jurisdiction are abolished, and an answer may be filed without any further or other formality than is required in the swearing and filing an affidavit: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 21.) They may be sworn and taken out of the jurisdiction in the manner before mentioned as the mode of taking demurrers and pleas. And, whether taken by commission out of the jurisdiction of the Court or otherwise, they may be filed without the oath of a messenger; and any alterations made therein previously to the taking thereof are to be authenticated according to the practice in use with respect to affidavits: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 25.)

It may here be observed that though in general answers must be sworn to, persons who have the privilege of peerage put in an answer upon attestation of honour; other persons, as Quakers or Moravians, may put them in upon solemn affirmation or declaration.

Sometimes by consent an answer is allowed to be put in without oath or signature: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 699.)

An infant's answer is put in by a guardian appointed by the court; that of a lunatic by his committee; that of a corporation under its seal.

OF EXCEPTIONS TO ANSWERS.

Answers may be excepted to for scandal (Dan. Ch. Pr. 721), and formerly they could have been excepted to on account of impertinence, but that practice is now abolished; the Court, however, may direct the costs, occasioned by any impertinent matter introduced into any proceeding, to be paid by the party introducing the same, upon application to the Court for that purpose, which must be made at the time when the Court disposes of the costs of the cause or matter, and not at any other time: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 17, Order XXX., 7th Aug. 1852.) Exceptions may also be taken to an answer for insufficiency; that is to say, when it does not fully answer the interrogatories of the plaintiff: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 725.) They must be in writing, and be properly entitled, otherwise they will be taken off the file (Earl of Lichfield v. Bond, 6 Beav. 88; Bradstock v. Whatley, 6 Beav. 61), and signed by counsel: (Yates v. Hardy, Jac. 223.)

By the 8th of the Orders of Nov. 2, 1850, after the filing of a defendant's answer, the plaintiff has six weeks within which he may file exceptions for insufficiency; and if he do not file them within that time the answer will be considered sufficient: (Nicklin v. Patten, 4 Beav. 126.) A defendant has eight days within which he may submit to the exceptions (Order IX. Nov. 2, 1850); and he has thereupon three weeks, within which he may put in his further answer (Order X.), except in election or injunction cases. Exceptions for insufficiency are not to be set down for hearing till eight days from filing of exceptions, but within fourteen days. If he does not, the answer on the expiration of such fourteen days is to be deemed sufficient: (Orders XI. and XIV.)

After the filing of exceptions after further answer, the plaintiff has fourteen days from the filing thereof within which he may set down the old exceptions. If the old exceptions be not set down within fourteen days after such further answer put in, the answer is, on the expiration of such fourteen days, to be deemed sufficient: (Ord. XVI.)

Where exceptions for insufficiency being set down are allowed or submitted to, the Court may appoint the time within which such defendant is to put in his further answer.

If such defendant does not obtain time from the Court, or does not answer within the time which the Court allows, the plaintiff may sue out process of contempt against such defendant: (Ord. XVII.)

The answer of a defendant is to be deemed sufficient:

1. If no exceptions for insufficiency be filed thereto within six weeks after the filing of such answer.

2. If, exceptions being filed, the plaintiff does not set them down within fourteen days after the filing thereof.

3. If, within fourteen days after the filing of the further answer, the plaintiff does not set down the old exceptions: (Ord. XVIII.)

If, after a defendant's second or third answer is filed, the plaintiff sets down the old exceptions for insufficiency, then the particular exception or exceptions to which he requires a further answer is or are to be stated in the notice of setting down such exceptions: (Ord. XIX.)

If, upon the hearing of exceptions, the answer is held to be sufficient, it shall be deemed to be so from the date of the order made on the hearing; and if the defendant submit to answer without an order from the Court, the answer shall be deemed to be insufficient from the date of the submission: (Ord. XX.)

The Court, holding a first or second answer to be insufficient, may appoint the time within which a defendant, who is not in contempt, is to file a further answer: (Ord. XXI.)

Upon a third answer being held to be insufficient, the Court may order the defendant to be examined upon interrogatories to the points held to be insufficient, and to stand committed until he shall have perfectly answered the interrogatories; and the defendant is to pay such costs as the Court shall think fit to award: (Ord. XXII.)

OF SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWERS.

The Court will occasionally allow a defendant who has made a mistake or error to put in a supplemental answer; but it is very cautious in allowing it to be put in, and always requires an affidavit of what the defendant wishes to put upon the record, in order that it may judge whether it be reasonable: (Livesey v. Wilson, 1 V. & B. 149; Greenwood v. Atkinson, 4 Sim. 54; Haslar v. Hollis, 2 Beav. 236; Smith v. Hartley, 5 Beav. 432.)

AN ACTION AT LAW UNDER THE NEW PRACTICE. (a)

ARTICLE VIII.

TIME FOR DECLARING:—JUDGMENT OF NON PROS.

THE declaration begins the pleadings between the parties, and in the first place the time allowed for declaring has to be considered. If the plaintiff does not declare before the end of the term next after the term or vacation in which the appearance was entered, and has not obtained further time to declare, and if the defendant has given a notice requiring him to declare (b) (ante, p. 174), the defendant may sign judgment against the plaintiff for his costs. This judgment is commonly called judgment of non pros. from non prosequitur, because the plaintiff does not follow up his action, and it is founded on a provision made by stat. 13 Car. 2, st. 2, c. 2, s. 3.

If the plaintiff has issued a writ of summons against several defendants, and omitted one or more in the declaration, it seems that the omitted defendants may severally proceed to obtain judgment of non pros. against the plaintiff (Hamlet v. Bresdon, 4 M. & G. 909); and so also it would seem that in cases within the 38rd section of the Common Law Procedure Act (ante, p. 132), where one or more of several defendants has appeared to a writ specially indorsed, and others have not, and the plaintiff has signed judgment against those who have not appeared, the other defendant or defendants will be entitled severally to sign judgment of non pros. for their costs.

The plaintiff may declare immediately the defendant appears, although this is before the expiration of the eight days allowed for appearance. If no judgment of non pros. is signed against him, it seems he may declare at any time after the appearance within twelve months from the return day of the writ (Barnes v. Jackson, 3 Dowl. 404); and the return day of the writ, as has been said, is now considered to be the day of service. But a plaintiff is deemed out of court, unless he declare within one year after the writ of summons is returnable (sect. 58), and after that time the defendant cannot sign judgment of non pros. against him: (Cooper v. Nias, 3 B. & Ald. 271.)

If the plaintiff is unable to declare before the end of the term next after the appearance is entered, to prevent his being liable to have judgment of non pros. signed against him, he should obtain further time to declare by a rule of Court or an order of a Judge at chambers. Time could formerly be obtained by taking out from the Master's office what was called a side bar rule for time to declare, and successive rules might be obtained. They were granted as of course, and were in reality a mere mode of authorising the plaintiff to delay the action, and each of them extended over a term or a vacation. They cannot now be obtained: (R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 7.)

THE DECLARATION.

Next as to the contents of the declaration:—It is the statement by the plaintiff of the wrong which he alleges the defendant has done to him. It was said by Lord Coke to be "an exposition of the writ, and addeth time, place, and other circumstances that the same may be triable." But it has been found that in the majority of cases litigated at the present day time and place are not necessary, and that all the declaration need add to the notice of action given by the writ is a brief statement of the cause of the action, and the amount of damages claimed (which has been also indorsed on the writ in cases of debt). Before commenting on the different parts of a declaration, it will be well that two or three forms should be seen.

(a) By George Tayler, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

(b) It may be doubted whether, in the Queen's Bench, at any rate, a notice is now necessary previous to signing judgment of non pros. for want of a declaration; but it will be safer for the present to give it.

Every declaration must commence as follows, or to the like effect—

(Venue.) A. B. by E. F. his attorney (or in person, as the case may be), sues C. D. for ; and must conclude as follows, or to the like effect :—

And the plaintiff claims £ , (or, if the action be brought to recover specific goods, the plaintiff claims a return of the said goods or their value, and £ for their detention). (Sect 50.)

Between these two parts the cause of action has to be stated, and this completes the declaration. The following is the complete form of a declaration for the price of goods sold :—

In the Queen's Bench.

The day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty .

Middlesex. A. B. by E. F. his attorney sues C. D. for money payable by the defendant to the plaintiff for goods bargained and sold by the plaintiff to the defendant; and the plaintiff claims £ .

For money lent it is—

Same. A. B. in person sues C. D. for money payable by the defendant to the plaintiff for money lent by the plaintiff to the defendant; and the plaintiff claims £ .

For the wrongful conversion of goods, the body of the declaration is—

Lancashire, } A. B. by E. F. his attorney
Southern Division. } sues C. D. for that the defendant converted to his own use, or wrongfully deprived the plaintiff of the use and possession of, the plaintiff's goods, that is to say, iron (or hops, or household furniture, or as the case may be) ; and the plaintiff claims a return of the said goods or their value, and £ for their detention.

For the breach of a covenant to repair a house it is—

London. A. B. by E. F. his attorney sues C. D. for that the plaintiff, by deed, let to the defendant a house [No. 25, Cheapside], to hold for years, from the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ; and the defendant by the said deed covenanted with the plaintiff well and substantially to repair the said house during the said term (according to the covenant), yet the said house was during the said term out of good and substantial repair ; and the plaintiff claims £ .

In an action by the payee against the maker of a promissory note, the statement of the cause of action is :—

for that the defendant, on the day of , in the year of our Lord 185 , by his promissory note now overdue, promised to pay to the plaintiff £ , [two] months after date, but did not pay the same.

And in an action by the payee against the drawer of a bill of exchange, it is—for that the defendant, on the day, &c., by his bill of exchange directed to A., required the said A. to pay to the plaintiff £ [two] months after date ; and the said bill was duly presented for acceptance, and was dishonoured, of which the defendant had due notice, but did not pay the same.

The above are sufficient as instances of the present prescribed forms of declaration, the substantial difference in them being in the statement of different causes of action. From these it will be easy to draw similar ones in analogous cases ; thus in an action by an indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, the statement of the cause of action might be—for that A. on the day, &c., by his bill of exchange, now overdue, directed to the defendant, required the defendant to pay to the said A. or order (or, as the case may be) £ , [two] months after date, and the defendant accepted the same, and the said A. afterwards indorsed the said bill of exchange to B., and the said B. afterwards indorsed the said bill of exchange to the plaintiff, but the defendant did not pay the same.

These forms seem strangely brief, even to those whose experience is confined to the forms used since the pleading rules of 1834, but on careful examination they will be found to contain all the requisites of the declaration, concisely put together. Many other statements of causes of action are given in schedule (B.) to the Common Law Procedure Act, which it is advisable to adopt verbatim where applicable. That statute provides that the forms contained in the schedule (B.) shall be sufficient, and those and the like forms may be used with such modifications as may be necessary to meet the facts of the case ; but nothing therein contained shall render it erroneous or irregular to depart from the letter of such forms, so long as the substance is expressed without prolixity : (sect. 91.)

There is, however, a special form of commencement of declaration given by the statute for all cases in which, after a plea in abatement of the nonjoinder of another person as defendant, the plaintiff shall, without having proceeded to trial on an issue thereon, commence another action against the defendant or defendants in the action in which such plea in abatement shall have been pleaded, and the person or persons named in such plea in abatement as joint contractors, or shall amend by adding the omitted defendant or defendants; and in these cases the commencement of the declaration must be in the following form, or to the like effect:—

(Venue.) A. B. by E. F. his attorney (or in his own proper person) sues C. D. and G. H., which said C. D. has heretofore pleaded in abatement the nonjoinder of the said G. H. for, &c. : (sect. 60.)

The different parts of which the declaration is composed, and which have been the subject of much discussion and technical learning, are still distinguishable, and each deserves a separate mention. They are the Title, the Venue, the Names of the Parties, the Statement of the Cause of Action, and the Statement of Damages.

The present mode of entitling the declaration as well as other pleadings has already been mentioned: (ante, p. 174.)

THE VENUE.

The venue requires more explanation, though it is now simply the name of the county or other other local district in which the cause of action arose if it be what is called a local cause of action, or, if it be a transitory cause of action (the meaning of these terms will be presently explained), then that in which the plaintiff proposes that the action shall be tried. Its history is very interesting, and is curiously interwoven with that of the most valuable of our jurisprudential institutions—trial by jury. To trace its history in detail, even briefly, would require more space than can conveniently be devoted to it in this article; but the mention of one or two prominent points will help to explain it.

The venue or visne, from vicinetum, originally meant the place or neighbourhood in which the transaction in dispute took place, and the jury anciently consisted of persons who were in some measure personally cognisant of the facts. This was so much so that total ignorance of the facts was a complete disqualification, though at the present time it is almost considered an essential qualification. The consequence was, that the venue was the place from which the jury were to be summoned ; and hence it became a rule that every allegation in the pleadings which the other party could with effect deny should state, not merely the county, but the parish or place at which it was alleged to have happened. The marginal venue, or venue in the action as it used to be called, was then simply a memorandum showing the county into which the original writ had issued, and in which the trial must take place.

Gradually a change took place in the constitution of the jury, and in consequence of a provision by 16 & 17 Car. 2, c. 8, for curing what was then a mere formal ground of error, it became the established practice that the jury of the venue in the action tried the issues raised even on facts laid with a venue different to that in the action. And in consequence of a subsequent statute (4 Ann. c. 16, s. 6) the sheriff was directed to summon all the jury from the county at large named in the margin, and none are now summoned from any particular part of it.

When the change had taken place in the constitution of the jury, a distinction began to be made between cases in which the truth of the venue was material and cases in which it was not so, and hence arose an important classification of actions into local and transitory actions. Local facts are, in law, such as carry with them the idea of some certain place, comprising all matters relating to real property, and hardly any others; transitory facts are such as may be supposed to happen anywhere, and comprise the incurring a debt, the making an express contract, and all matters relating to the person or personal property. An action is local if all the principal facts on which it is founded be local, and transitory if any principal fact be transitory : (Step. Plead. p. 120.) Ever since this distinction has been established the rule has been, that the plaintiff must in a local action lay the venue in the action in the county where the land lies, but that in a transitory action he may lay it in any county he pleases; and this appears still to be the rule.

He must bear in mind, however, that if he lay it in a county in which it is likely that an impartial trial cannot be had, or where the expenses of witnesses will be unnecessarily great, he exposes himself to an application by the defendant to the court, in a transitory action to change the venue, or in a local action to order the trial to take place in another county.

Beside the distinction between local and transitory facts, there are many actions which are in effect made local by statute. In penal actions, that is, actions brought for the recovery of penalties imposed by statute, it is enacted by 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 2, that "the offence against any penal statute shall not be laid to be done in any other county but where the contract or other matter alleged to be the offence was in truth done." So also actions against public officers, for anything done in the execution of their office, are now usually required by statute to be laid in the county where the cause of action arose: (See list of many of these in Lush's Pract. p. 342, note n.)

NAMES OF THE PARTIES.

The declaration should correspond as to the names of the parties with the appearance if there has been one, and if not, then with the writ. It must contain the names of all the plaintiffs mentioned in the writ, or explain why it does not, or it may be set aside. If one of the several plaintiffs has died before declaration, it may commence thus :—

A. B. by, &c. comes and informs the Court that since the issuing of the writ of summons at the suit of the said A. B. and E. F. against C. D., the said E. F. died, and the said A. B. hath survived him, and thereupon the said A. B., by, &c. sues C. D. &c.

As to the names of the defendants, however, it is not objectionable if the declaration omit one or more inserted in the writ (Coldwell v. Blake, 3 Dowl. 656), though it must not include any not in the writ : (sect. 4.) But if any defendants included in the writ be omitted from the declaration, the plaintiff cannot afterwards declare against them separately : (Rogers v. Jenkins, 1 Bos. & P. 383.)

If either of the parties sue or is sued as executor or assignee this special character should be stated in the declaration, though it is not necessary to describe them so in the writ (Ashworth v. Ryal, 1 B. & Ad. 19); but if the writ show the action to be brought in or against the special character, it seems that the declaration must not omit it : (Anon. 1 Dowl. 97, n. a.) The rule appears to be that the writ may be more comprehensive or more general than the declaration, but that the declaration must not be more so than the writ.

THE MAGISTRATE,
AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

In the law of Lunatic Paupers, it has been held by the Q. B. that sect. 5 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 103 (which throws the charges upon the common fund in certain cases) does not apply to the case of a pauper lunatic removed to an asylum by an order made by the officiating clergyman and the relieving officer under sect. 48 of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, and therefore that the costs of maintenance are chargeable on the parish of settlement, and not on the common fund : (Reg. v. Inhabitants of St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, 20 L. T. Rep. 218.)

In the Law of Settlement, it has been decided that a pauper who was born a bastard after the passing of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, has the settlement of his mother only until he attains the age of sixteen. After that age his birthplace becomes his place of settlement, unless he has acquired one in his own right : (Reg. v. Churchwardens, &c. of St. Andrew, Worcester, 20 L. T. Rep. 221.)

In the Law of Rating, it has been decided that market tolls are not rateable, and that the fact that they are and always have been payable in a particular room in the market-house, of which the owner of the tolls is also the owner, does not make them so. But the lessee of stallage dues is rateable in respect of them ; these being connected with the actual use of the soil : (Roberts v. Churchwardens, &c. of Aylesbury, 20 L. T. Rep. 219.)

At length the question has been formally submitted to the Courts as to clerks to justices under the Municipal Act conducting prosecutions. A clerk was sued for the penalty of 100*l.* for so doing, the 142nd sect. of the Municipal Act having prohibited the justices from appointing any alderman, councillor, clerk of the peace, or person employed in the office of clerk of the peace for the same borough, to be their clerk; and the clerk to the justices is prohibited from being employed or interested in the prosecution of any offenders committed by the justices. The section then imposes a penalty of 10*l.* on any person who, being an alderman, councillor, clerk of the peace, or person employed, &c., shall act as clerk to the justices, or otherwise offend on the premises." It was held that the intention of the Legislature was not sufficiently expressed, and that a clerk conducting a prosecution did not forfeit the penalty unless he was also an alderman, councillor, &c. as above described. Thus the statute only prohibits; there is no penalty, because the law is clumsily framed. But an indictment will lie for disobedience of a statute: (Cox v. Lawrence, 20 L. T. Rep. 222.)

In Criminal Law there is a curious and interesting question reported from the Appeal Court, viz., whether, when a man took a lamb by mistake, and, after having discovered his mistake, sold it, he is guilty of larceny? The Judges held him to be so, drawing the distinction between this case and that of a finder; with the latter the original possession is lawful; in this case the possession is unlawful from the beginning (Reg. v. Riley, 20 L. T. Rep. 228); and in Reg. v. Dugdale, 20 L. T. Rep. 219, a count in an indictment charging defendant with having possession of indecent prints, with intent afterwards to sell them, was held to be bad; but a count charging him with procuring indecent prints with intent to sell, is good, because the procuring is an act done.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

ANOTHER case involving the question as to the validity of a purchase by an attorney from his client in embarrassed circumstances, was decided by Lord ST. LEONARD'S. The sale was sought to be set aside upon this ground and that of inadequate consideration. A further question was raised whether, if such sale was in itself impeachable, it could be subsequently confirmed when the client is aware that he had a right to set it aside. "What," said his Lordship, "is the interest of a man in an estate which he has conveyed to his attorney in a manner which the attorney cannot maintain—that is, which he cannot maintain as a conveyance? Why he is still, in the view of this Court, owner of his own estate, subject to the repaying to his attorney, when he impeaches the transaction, the money which the attorney has paid; he remains owner subject to the estate which he had conveyed away to his attorney for an improper price." Then as to the confirmation he observed, "It is said that a conveyance to an attorney may or may not be good in this Court; it is certainly good at law, beyond all question, where there is no absolute startling fraud; such as that upon which a jury would find there was no deed at all executed; but a deed properly executed by a client to his solicitor is primâ facie good, and you can only impeach it in this Court on equitable grounds under certain circumstances." By his will the person entitled to take advantage of the defect confirmed the deed. His Lordship said upon this, "I am clearly of opinion he had an equitable estate. It is beyond dispute that a man may confirm, if he pleases, a voidable conveyance which he has made. If I deal with my attorney, and he commits what in this Court may be considered a fraud in obtaining my estate, and he afterwards claims and obtains from me a confirmation, he has to show fair dealing upon that confirmation, and that he communicated to me all knowledge that I could set aside the first deed, and that I confirmed with a knowledge of all the circumstances of my right to set it aside:" (Stamp v. Gaby, 20 L. T. Rep. 213.)

In the Law of Vendor and Purchaser there is an important case, Roberts v. Berry, 20 L. T. Rep. 215, in which the conditions of sale stipulated that the abstract should be delivered within seven days, and objections to the title were to be made within eight days from delivery of abstract. Owing to the absence of the mortgagee on the Continent, the title-deeds could not be procured in time, and consequently the abstract was not delivered till long after. The purchaser wanted to rescind the contract on this ground; but the Court of Appeal held that time was not of the essence of the contract, and that the excuse for non-delivery of the abstract was sufficient.

A testator by will gave property to two persons by name, one of whom he described as "my first cousin V. B. son of my late uncle P. B." He had no cousin named V. B.; but he had a cousin named G. V. B. son of his uncle J. B., and another cousin F. B. son of his uncle V. B. G. V. B. was held to be the fortunate cousin: (Bernasconi v. Atkinson, 20 L. T. Rep. 217.)

Stamp cases are very rare since the improvements effected by the last Stamp Act, and the facilities thereby given for securing proper stamps. But there was a stray case in our last, Lord Canning v. Roper, 20 L. T. Rep. 218. The question was, as put by Lord Campbell, C. J., "whether the assignment of chattels to secure to the assignee an indemnity in case he should be called upon to pay the amount secured by a bond which he had entered into as security for the assignor, is a mortgage liable to an ad valorem stamp?" It was held to be so.

In Markes v. Harwick, 20 L. T. Rep. 223, it was held that an action on the case will lie for waste by a lessee, even although there is an express covenant against waste, the remedies being accumulative.

In the Law of Administrators there is reported the case of Morgan v. Thomas, 20 L. T. Rep. 225. The widow of a tradesman, who died intestate, carried on her husband's business, and incurred a debt, for which execution issued against her. The sheriff seized her late husband's goods. The son, who lived with her, took out administration to the effects of his late father, and claimed the goods. He was held to be entitled to do so, for that administration does not relate back to the death of an intestate, except in cases which must be for the lawful benefit of the estate, and in the rightful course of administration.

Queries on Points of Practice.

COSTS.

Can any of your readers refer me to any authority as to the right of an intended mortgagee, in the absence of any express agreement on the subject, to recover from the intended mortgagor his costs respecting the investigation of the title and other preliminary business, where the business has been broken off and the mortgage not been completed in consequence of a defect in the title to the property?

A SUBSCRIBER.

Answers to Queries.

PROGRESSIVE DUTY.

In answer to the inquiry of T. H in your last number under this head, I beg to point out to him what in my opinion is the proper construction of the clause quoted, which will clearly show that his deed of forty folios will only require to be stamped as of two skins.

The statute, in effect, says, where a deed contains 2160 words or upwards, then for every entire quantity of 1080 words over and above the first 1080 there shall be charged a further duty. Now in his deed there is only one entire quantity of 1080 words over and above the first, and consequently but one follower stamp is necessary.

The words "entire quantity" mentioned in the statute appear to admit of no other construction.

HENRY JONES.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

GOODS were delivered in Staffordshire, directed to the ship Melbourne, East India Docks. Subsequently a countermand was given to a clerk at the London station, and they were desired to be sent to Bell-wharf, Ratcliffe-highway. By mistake they were delivered to the original address. The railway company was held to be liable for the loss: (Scothorne v. The South Staffordshire Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 225.)

The Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act prohibits any contract being made by a director of a company incorporated by Act of Parliament with the company. It was held in Barker v. The Oxford, &c. Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 224, that this does not invalidate the contract, but only vacates the office of such director.

RAILWAY AND OTHER BILLS ON STANDING ORDERS.

Wednesday the standing orders of the House of Commons were complied with in the case of the following undertakings:—

WORCESTER AND HEREFORD RAILWAY.—For construction of railway between Worcester and Hereford, at an estimated cost of 560,000*l.*

SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.—For power to enable the South-Eastern to extend the Reading, Guildford, and Reigate Railway, to the Great Western at Reading, or to use the station of the Great Western, or construct a separate one, at an estimated expense of 10,000*l.*

AMBERGATE, NOTTINGHAM, AND BOSTON AND EASTERN JUNCTION RAILWAY.

SEVERN VALLEY RAILWAY.—For a railway from the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, near Hartlebury to the Shrewsbury and Chester at Shrewsbury, with branches to Madeley and Ironbridge Works, with power to use connecting railways, at an estimated cost of 600,000*l.*

SOUTH DEVON AND TAVISTOCK RAILWAY.—The standing orders inadvertently reported not complied with, were in this case complied with.

SWANSEA VALE RAILWAY AND BRANCHES.—The standing orders were declared not complied with, on the ground of some errors in levels and books of reference. The estimated cost of construction is 120,000*l.*

The other bills that passed muster were Sheffield Waterworks (extension of works), Lowestoft Water, Gas, and Markets, Preston Waterworks, Ormskirk Gas Light Company, Evesham-bridge and Blackpool Improvement.

PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and made, during the past week.]

London and Birmingham Extension, and Northampton, Daventry, Leamington, and Warwick Railway Company.—To consider proposal of Mr. Weiss and managing committee on 9th Feb. Blunt.

London Conveyance Company.—Petition to dissolve presented on 1st Feb.: to be heard on the 11th.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

EQUITY PRACTICE.—The new procedure has been again the subject of several decisions. In an Anonymous case, 20 L. T. Rep. 214, an appearance had been entered to a bill by a plaintiff for a defendant who had absconded. The Lords Justices directed that notice of filing replication should be served at defendant's last place of abode, and an advertisement in the Gazette and two country newspapers.

In Holland v. Harper, 20 L. T. Rep. 216, the solicitor in the cause was allowed to receive money out of court on account of a lady who had been appointed attorney for certain parties in America to recover it, and who was too ill to attend, on her receipt given for it, and her signature verified by affidavit.

In Edmonston v. Harrison, 20 L. T. Rep. 216, V.C. Kindersley said that the Judges had determined that in future all unopposed applications for stop-orders, where the parties did not object, would be disposed of by summons in chambers.

Where, before the passing of the new statute, a cause had been referred to the Master, and after the statute came into operation a petition was presented under sect. 42, that the prosecution of the decree might be transferred to a Judge at chambers, in order to have the assistance of an accountant, V. C. Turner held this to be the proper course. He added—"I have no power to authorise the Master to employ an accountant. . . It has already been held that the Act does not give the Master any authority to call in the assistance of such persons:" (Morrell v. Tinkler, 20 L. T. Rep. 217.)

A. directed a sale of his estate and division of the produce. A bill was filed for the administration of the trusts, and the trustees of the will and the parties entitled to the produce were made parties. One of these persons had married, and her share was settled for her benefit and that of her husband and the children of the marriage. It was held that, under rule 9 and sect. 42 of the new statute, the trustees of the settlement must be parties, and the interests of the children would be sufficiently represented by them: (Densem v. Elworthy, 20 L. T. Rep. 217.)

Where the Court held certain persons to be entitled for life, and at their deaths their then surviving children were entitled to their shares, it was held to be a case wherein the Court would, under the 50th section of the new statute, declare the future rights—thus saving, perhaps, the cost of another suit: (Fletcher v. Rogers, 20 L. T. Rep. 218.)

COMMON LAW.—Already a case has arisen upon the new rules. Rule 67 provides that after suggestion entered of error in law, alleged and denied, as prescribed by sect. 49 of the Procedure Act, either party may set down the case for argument and forthwith give notice in writing to the opposite party, and proceed to the argument thereof as on demurrer, without any rule or motion for a concilium. What was the limit of time for setting down the case for argument? The Ex. held that it may be set down four days before the day of hearing: (North-Eastern Railway Company v. North-Western Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 226.)

The following cases have been decided upon the Procedure Act. On sect. 210 it was held by the Ex. that upon motion for judgment in ejectment, an affidavit was sufficient that stated "that three quarters of a year's rent were in arrear, and that there was no sufficient distress to be found upon the premises countervalling the said arrears of rent then due:" (Cross v. Jordan, 20 L. T. Rep. 226.)

To an action on two mortgage deeds and collateral bonds, the defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations; replication, acknowledgment within twenty years. On an application under sect. 52, the Court ordered the replication to be amended, so as to show on what description of acknowledgment the plaintiff intended to rely, but refused to put him on terms as to giving dates and stating particulars of such acknowledgment: (Forsyth v. Bristowe, 20 L. T. Rep. 226.)

It was held in Boodle v. Davis, 20 L. T. Rep. 225, that sect. 128 (which provides for the issuing of execution upon a judgment in certain cases without reviving it by sci. fa.) is retrospective, and applicable to a judgment more than a year and a day old when that Act came into operation.

In Farthing v. Reed, 20 L. T. Rep. 228, it was ruled by Erle, J. that under sect. 101, plaintiff is not bound to wait until a suggestion has been entered by defendant, but may come to the court at once, on being served with the notice to proceed to trial, with reasons for not doing so.

WINDING-UP.

It has been recommended that all appeals from the Master's decisions in winding-up cases should be taken at once before the Lords Justices, who were stated to be willing to hear the appeals in the first instance: (Re the Worcester Corn Exchange, 20 L. T. Rep. 217.) We trust that this recommendation will be adopted, and thus the costs of two appeals saved to the parties.

FEES IN THE COMMON LAW COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Now the Common Law Procedure Bill has become law, and the lawyers' fees have been reduced in pursuance of the intention of that Act, allow me to ask, how it comes to pass that the fees paid out of pocket to the different officers of the common law offices and courts, have not de facto been likewise reduced. Surely it was intended that such should have been the case. Instead of being lessened, they are positively in many instances increased more than twofold. Fees are moreover now required where they never before were thought of, and on the whole are far more oppressive, than they were before the recent alterations. What makes the case still worse is, the fees are so arranged that they fall unnecessarily heavy in the commencement of an action, so that in most cases extravagant fees are squandered contrary to the benefit and expectations which the suitors were led to expect.

Surely such a state of things cannot be permitted to exist without an attempt to rectify the grave injustice done; the result moreover is most injurious, the enormous fees paid out of pocket swell the attorneys costs to a very unjust extent. And the public will ere long find that the extra costs paid to the officers of the different offices greatly negative and reduce the advantages which have been gained by the reduction of the lawyers' fees. The whole Profession, without a dissenting voice, I believe, are aware of, and are constantly denouncing, the present system; still nothing that I am aware of has been done or attempted to be done to rectify it.

I feel sure that the facts have only to be placed before the judges in a proper manner, and they will, with their ever just sense of right, be ready and desirous to put things on their proper footing. Another question if you please. Can you inform the Profession what is to be done with respect to the 153rd of the new Common Law Rules, providing that it shall only be necessary to issue one summons for attending before a judge?

The practical inconvenience and injurious results are so evident, that the entire Profession exclaim against it. Either there should be two summonses, as before, or at least twenty-four hours notice of the single summons should be given.

The only gainers by the present system are a nameless set of men, who exercise any opportunity and power they may have to take parties by surprise and obtain an undue advantage whenever opportunity offers.

As this letter is intended for those practically acquainted with the subject, I have dealt thus generally with it, and venture to hope that with your assistance the grievances above alluded to will at once meet with attention by those who have influence enough to succeed in their removal. I beg to apologise for troubling you to this extent.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

A LONDON SOLICITOR.

London, Feb. 3, 1853.

SERVICE OF WRITS IN THE COUNTRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Your paper has been inundated lately with complaints made by country solicitors of nonpayment of their charges for service of writs by London correspondents. Have we London solicitors, though, no cause of complaint? I think we have; for I have heard many complain that their country brethren seldom charge what is allowed on taxation, but generally claim more; and if so, I think they do rightly in delaying payment. I have issued some fifteen or twenty writs in the country lately; but in every case but one or two the charges have been more—in one or two much more—than are allowed; and on my remitting either the proper sum, or sometimes more, I have had angry letters in reply for not remitting the amount demanded. Surely country solicitors ought not to expect more than taxed costs, except under extreme circumstances; for if they do, as they must well know, they come out of the London attorneys' pockets.

Yours, &c.

A LONDON ATTORNEY.

SALARIES OF LAWYERS' CLERKS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Might I, through the medium of your valuable paper, call the attention of the law profession to the state in which we (lawyers' clerks) are as regards our salaries. We have low salaries and must appear respectable, which I (one of the lawyers' clerks), as well as several of my fellow clerks, find it impossible to do, and in several offices there are youths employed, each of whom is kept to do a man's work to save paying higher wages. Thus it is that clerks not having sufficient salaries are, through want, placed in such a position that they must either commit some crime or starve.

Surely something might be done to rescue us from our awful and pitiable state. Trusting that the members of the profession will take this as a hint in good part, and give us (the lawyers' clerks) the benefit of it.

I remain, Sir, yours, &c. (for self and others),

ONE WHO HAS TOO LOW A SALARY.

Manchester, Jan. 21, 1853.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

Two questions of jurisdiction have been raised upon appeals. Before we notice their particulars, let us direct the attention of the judges' clerks and practitioners to a dictum of Jervis, C. J. in Winch v. Winch, 20 L. T. Rep. 223, that "he should have thought that where the judge entertained doubts about his jurisdiction, he would have exercised it." This, we believe, is opposed to the rule usually observed by the Judges, who, if they have a doubt about their jurisdiction, decline to exercise it. Perhaps his Lordship is right. If it should prove that the judge has not jurisdiction, and the parties are dissatisfied with his decision, they have their easy remedy in prohibition. But if he should refuse to act because he has doubts about his jurisdiction, he incurs the hazard of denying justice, or putting the parties to cost and trouble to satisfy his own scruples. The former course is certainly the least of two evils. In this case an action had been brought in the County Court to recover a legacy of 50*l.* from executors. It involved a question of devastavit. Nevertheless, it was held to be within the jurisdiction of the County Court, under sect. 65 of the County Court Act, extended in amount by the Extension Act, c. 61.

It was otherwise with Walsh v. Jonides, 20 L. T. Rep. 218. There a cargo was sold to A., to be delivered at any port in the United Kingdom, the price to be paid on delivery of the shipping notes and policy of insurance. A demand of them was made at Liverpool and refused, but the cargo was ordered to be delivered at Drogheda. Thereupon A. sued in the County Court of Liverpool, claiming damages for the non-delivery of the cargo. It was held, now, that no cause of action for non-delivery of the cargo arose within the jurisdiction of the Liverpool Court; but that plaintiff had a cause of action there for not delivering the shipping notes and policy. The prohibition, therefore, was not to be a general oneas to the whole cause, for the plaintiff could apply to the County Court to amend his particulars of claim.

DEFENDED CAUSES—COUNTY COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Observing in the LAW TIMES of the 29th of last month a letter signed "E. C.," respecting sittings for hearing defended causes in these courts, I think if an order were made such as the one I enclose, and which is strictly adhered to in this circuit, throughout the other courts in England, great advantage would accrue both to the attorney and client. At least the Profession in the county appear to think so; and I think other professional men would consider if it were so generally acted on.

I enclose my card, and remain, Sir, yours, &c.,

A COUNTRY ATTORNEY.

Feb. 3, 1853.

(COPY.)

County Courts of Gloucestershire and Wiltshire, holden at Cheltenham, Cirencester, Dursley, Gloucester, Malmesbury, Newent, Newnham, Northleach, Stow, Stroud, Tewkesbury, and Winchcomb.—Circuit 54.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That after the 31st day of December 1852, at every sitting of each of the above-named County Courts, the Cause List will be called over twice; that every cause which on the first calling shall appear to be undefended, and also every summons after judgment, will be then heard and disposed of; and that on the second calling of the list, all the other causes will be taken in the order in which they are entered.

Parties intending to prosecute or defend their suits should not be guided by the numbers on their plaint notes or summonses, nor by their position in the Cause List, but should attend the court at the hour appointed for its sitting.

By order of the Judge.

COUNTY COURT COSTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—As the subject of attorneys' costs in the County Courts is now justly occupying your attention, permit me to instance a case in point.

An action for breach of warranty of a horse has been recently brought in this neighbourhood, the hearing of which occupied about six hours. No less than nine witnesses were called and examined, and having already intimated that it was a horse case, further comment upon its tedious intricacy would be superfluous. When it is remembered that each of the plaintiff's witnesses was probably examined previously even to the issue of the summons, and that this process must have been repeated in the interval between that stage of the proceedings and the hearing, and when, moreover, the trouble incidental to the preparation of such a brief is taken into account, your readers will, I think, feel with me that a regulation awarding a fee of 30*s.* as a compensation to a skilful attorney for conducting such a case (a pittance insufficient to remunerate him for his services at the hearing alone) calls for extensive and liberal amendment.

I am Sir, yours, &c.,

Yeovil. AN ATTORNEY.

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

ONE of the most important cases on the Law of Copyright that has come before the Court for a long time, was reported a fortnight since (Murray v. Bogue, 20 L. T. Rep. 198.) It was a motion for an injunction for piracy of one of MURRAY'S famous Handbooks, and it failed because, although the extracts were numerous, it was considered that no unfair use had been made of the plaintiff's book. But it involved also a point under the Copyright Act, as, whether a book of which the first edition had appeared before that Act required registration for the protection of the second edition, and this was decided in the affirmative; at least, that if subsequent editions are not registered, the new matter contained in such new editions is not protected, although the matter contained also in the first edition would be so.

A Court of Equity will not sanction a legal liability that had been obtained by undue influence. Thus, in Espey v. Lake, 20 L.T. Rep. 203, a stepfather had applied for a loan of 500*l.* from a party who required that the stepdaughter, who had lived with the borrower from infancy, should join in a note for payment of principal and interest. She was not twenty-two years old, and entitled to a property of 550*l.* which the lender knew. The lender sued her on the note, and obtained judgment at law; but a Court of Equity granted an injunction to stay execution on account of undue influence, arising out of the relative positions of the parties.

Under the Copyright of Designs Act, there was the case in the Q.B. of Heywood v. Potter, 20 L.T. Rep. 207. It was held that by the 4th sect. of that statute, the proprietor of a registered design for paperhangings is bound to put the letters "Rd." and the number on the pattern-pieces containing the whole design published to the world, though such pieces may be of a size so small as to be inapplicable to papering walls, such pieces being deemed by the Court to be articles of manufacture within the section. But from this construction of the Act COLERIDGE, J. dissented.

A charter-party between A. & B. agreed to carry cargo to Calcutta on the usual and customary terms. It appeared that usual and customary terms gave the consignee a right to send a cargo home, and entitled him to commission on such return cargo. It was held in Robinson v. Wait, 20 L. T. Rep. 210, that the consignor might sue for such commission.

In Rossiter v. Cobbaun, 20 L. T. Rep. 211, it was held that the Weights and Measures Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 63, did not apply to a contract made to supply palm oil at so much per gallon, old measure, by the plaintiff on the coast of Africa to defendant, who was to send his vessel there for it.

A. had, between his shop and the backdoor, a dangerous opening. Whilst B. was in his shop as a customer, it was closed, and she was directed to go out at the back door, and she fell into the hole. Another person had previously fallen in, and the defendant had been cautioned of the danger. He was held to be liable to B. in damages for the injury done: (Clapson v. Allen, 20 L. T. Rep. 212.)

An interesting case is that of Peachy v. Rowland, 20 L. T. Rep. 208. A. had contracted to make a sewer, and had sub-contracted with B. to excavate it. A.'s carts were to carry away the surplus earth. B. left a heap of earth, which overturned the plaintiff's carriage, and he brought an action against A. for the damage; but the C.P. held that it would not lie. MAULE, J. said, "If a man employs another to do a thing, and there are several ways of doing it—one criminal and another innocent—and he does it in a criminal manner, the employer is not liable."

The liability of a boarding-house keeper for loss of a lodger's goods was defined by ERLE, J. at Nisi Prius, in Dancey v. Richardson, 20 L. T. Rep. 213: "It is," he said, "very different from the care required from an innkeeper. By law an innkeeper is responsible for goods brought to his inn, and would be responsible for them if stolen, unless the owner had contributed to their loss; but there is no such extensive responsibility with respect to the keeper of a boarding-house; in such a house a person must look after his own goods to a much greater extent. A person keeping a boarding-house is bound to use such care as a prudent owner would use with regard to his own premises. If he does so he will not be responsible for any loss.

A ship bound from Nantes to Dublin was obliged, from stress of weather, to run into the Bay of Palais. The ship lost her anchors, and it was necessary for her preservation to run into the tidal harbour of Sanzon, where she took the ground in consequence of its being low water. She was detained there a month, and floated only eight days, and these at the top of the spring tides. Was that a stranding within the meaning of the usual memorandum in the policy? It was held by the Q. B. so to be. COLERIDGE, J. thus defined the principle:—"Where the vessel takes the ground by reason of something which is ordinary and regular, as, where she is in her proper place in a tidal harbour, and is expected to take the ground when the water falls, in such a case there is no stranding; but if the event arises from something out of the ordinary course, it is a stranding: (Corcoran v. Gurney, 20 L. T. Rep. 221.)

It was held in Platt v. Else, 20 L. T. Rep. 226, that, to an action for the infringement of a patent, the defendant may plead non concessit, and also a traverse of the specification.

Another case under the Law of Patents is Shaw v. The Bank of England, 20 L. T. Rep. 227. The plaintiff, having brought an action for the infringement of a patent, was permitted an inspection. He subsequently discontinued the action, and having begun a fresh one, applied under sect. 42 of the Patent Law Amendment Act for a second inspection. The Court of Ex. refused it.

THE LAW OF DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.—A most important view of the law of debtor and creditor was recently announced at an Edinburgh jury trial. The case itself was one between Mr. M'Cowan, as trustee on the sequestrated estate of Mr. James Howie, merchant, in Glasgow, as pursuer, and Mr. John Wright, merchant, in Naples, as defender. The verdict, under the direction of the court, as to the law, was given to the pursuer. We now understand that the case is to be reheard on a bill of exceptions, before the court of session, and appealed to in the House of Lords, if necessary, in order to determine whether or not the law was rightly laid down by the presiding judge. The defender in the action was proved to be a creditor to the extent of about 16,000*l.*, and about ten months before the bankruptcy he received from the debtor certain stocks and property in security of his debt. It was laid down by the presiding judge, that if at that time the debtor was insolvent, he had no power to pay any of his creditors, however honest, in full, and that no creditor could take such property in payment of his debt, even although he were entirely ignorant of the insolvent condition of his debtor. Accordingly, his lordship told the jury, that though the defender's honour was not impugned in the slightest degree, yet he must give back the property if the debtor was in insolvent circumstances, and knew it at the time it was given. The bill of exceptions challenges this law. The law stated by the presiding judge strikes very widely indeed. If it be correct, can a creditor be in safety to take payment from his debtor, and give him a discharge, without ascertaining whether or not he is insolvent at the time? Upon the faith of the payment or security which the creditor has received, the debtor may have obtained further credit, and thus, in the end, leave the creditor in the lurch, both as regards the former and subsequent debt. His lordship further stated it was a mistake to suppose that if a party were not made bankrupt for sixty days after he had given security or payment to his creditor for a prior debt, such payment or security would be sustained. According to his lordship, the law now is, that if upon investigating the debtor's books at the time of giving the security (although it should be months or years before), it turn out that he was insolvent (that is to say, unable to meet his debts at the time), the creditor must give up the security he got. This is a most important and, at the same time, a startling view of the law of debtor and creditor, more especially in a speculative and commercial country, where a man's books may show him to be to-day below the world, while the result of to-morrow's speculations may place him far above it.—Glasgow Constitutional.

COURT PAPERS.

Equity Courts.

Rolls Court.

SITTINGS AFTER TERM,

Tuesday....	Feb. 8	Motions.
Wednesday	9	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions, and Exceptions
Thursday	10
Friday	11
Saturday	12
Monday	14
Tuesday	15
Wednesday	16
Thursday	17
Friday.....	18
Saturday	19
Monday	21
Tuesday	22	Motions
Wednesday	23	Petitions in General Paper.
Thursday	24	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions and Exceptions.
Friday	25
Saturday	26
Monday	28
Tuesday....	Mar. 1	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions, and Exceptions
Wednesday	2
Thursday	3
Friday	4
Saturday	5
Monday	7
Tuesday	8	Motions.
Wednesday	9	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions, and Exceptions.
Thursday	10
Friday	11
Saturday	12
Monday	14
Tuesday	15	Petitions in General Paper
Wednesday	16	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions, and Exceptions.
Thursday	17
Friday	18	Motions.
Saturday	19	Pleas, Demurrers, Causes, Claims, further Directions, and Exceptions.
Monday	21
Tuesday	22
Wednesday	23
Thursday	24

Short Causes, Short Claims, Consent Causes, Unopposed Petitions and Claims, every Saturday at the sitting of the court.

NOTICE.—Consent petitions must be presented, and copies left with the secretary, on or before the Thursday preceding the Saturday on which it is intended they should be heard.

TAXATION OF COSTS OF REFERENCE TO CONVEYANCING COUNSEL.

LORD ST. LEONARDS, on the 24th December, intimated to the Taxing Masters that, in his Lordship's opinion, "where, in pursuance of any direction by the court or judge or of any request by a Master in Ordinary, drafts are settled by any of the conveyancing counsel under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 41, the expense of procuring such drafts to be previously or subsequently settled by other counsel is not to be allowed on taxation, as between party and party, or as between solicitor and client, unless the court shall specially direct such allowance. This intimation, however, is not to prevent the allowance of the expense in cases which may have already occurred, where, in the judgment of the Taxing Master, there has been a reasonable ground for laying the papers before other counsel."

Common Law Courts.

Queen's Bench.

MIDDLESEX SPECIAL JURY APPOINTMENTS.

Saturday, Feb. 5.

Reg. v. Jackson and Sulari.

Monday, Feb. 7.

Anderton v. House	Bullock v. The Midland Railway
Reg. v. Hunter	Reg. v. Hunter.

Tuesday, Feb. 8.

Reg. v. Orchard and Cox	De Vaney v. Fane
Dunn v. Coutts	Metcalf v. Booth.

Wednesday, Feb. 9.

Mary Kane v. The Queen, and James Child and others.

Court of Exchequer.

Saturday, Jan. 22.

This Court will, in addition to the sittings already appointed for Saturday, the 12th day of February next, hold a sitting on Monday, the 14th day of February next, and will at such sittings on Saturday the 12th and Monday the 14th days of February next, proceed in disposing of the business then pending in the Paper of New Trials, and in the Special Paper, and also in giving judgment in cases then standing for judgment.

FRED. POLLOCK. E. H. ALDERSON.
J. PARKE. SAML. MARTIN.

QUESTIONS AT THE EXAMINATION,

Hilary Term, 1853.

I. PRELIMINARY.

1. Where, and with whom, did you serve your clerkship?

2. State the particular branch or branches of the law to which you have principally applied yourself during your clerkship.

3. Mention some of the principal law books which you have read and studied.

4. Have you attended any, and what law lectures?

II. COMMON AND STATUTE LAW, AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

5. Is a civil action maintainable in any case in which the cause of action constitutes an indictable offence?

6. When are specialty and simple contract debts respectively barred by the Statute of Limitations, if no proceedings have been taken to prevent that statute from operating?

7. When the Statute of Limitations is, in point of time, a bar to the recovery of such debts, state some of the most usual requisites to be proved to take such debts out of the operation of the statute, and will a verbal promise to pay be sufficient?

8. Is it necessary in any, and what, cases, previous to commencing an action, to give notice in writing to the opposite party of the cause of action and claim for damages? And if any notice is necessary, what would be the consequence of the plaintiff failing upon the trial to prove the giving such notice?

9. Is there any, and if any, what, difference between the liability of bail above, i. e. bail to the action, and bail on a writ of error?

10. Where an executor is sued for a debt owing by his testator, and pleads plene administravit only, and the plaintiff cannot disprove that plea, but there is other personal estate of the testator to be got in, what course should the plaintiff take?

11. A. commits an assault upon B.; B. dies before action brought: Can B.'s executors sue A. for the recovery of damages in respect of the assault committed by A.?

12. If a plaintiff recover a verdict against two joint defendants, should he issue execution against each defendant for half? or if he issue execution against one for the whole, would the other be thereby exonerated entirely?

13. In an action on a bill of exchange, Drawer v. Acceptor, and the defendant pleads payment only, has the plaintiff anything, and what, to prove?

14. Can a plaintiff be compelled upon a trial to be nonsuited against his will? and if he cannot, what should he do to prevent it? And in what respect is a plaintiff's position better by a nonsuit than by a verdict against him?

15. State some of the most usual grounds upon which new trials are granted, and when generally upon payment of costs, and when without costs.

16. When the rule granting a new trial is silent as to costs, and the verdict on the second trial is the same as on the first, how are the costs of the first trial and of the motion for the new trial disposed of?

17. What are the means of enforcing an award where there is no cause pending, and the submission contains no clause for making it a rule of court?

18. What is the effect of withdrawing a juror on a trial as to costs? and can the plaintiff bring another action for the same cause?

19. After what period does a deed prove itself, without calling the attesting witness?

III. CONVEYANCING.

20. What is an estate in tail? and by what words is it created; and what words constitute an entail general, and what an entail special?

21. What power of disposition has a tenant in tail over entailed lands, both as regards his own estate tail, and all remainders over? and distinguish the case where there is a protector of the settlement from the case in where is no such protector.

22. What is a copyhold or customary estate, and by what description of assurance is it created, and afterwards passed from one party to another?

23. How can the dower of a woman married before the late Dower Act came into operation be now defeated? and how can the dower of a woman married subsequent to that Act be defeated?

52. Will a covenant for production of title-deeds in respect of land, taken run with the land?

53. What are the general rules as to the descent of freehold lands of inheritance?

54. By what means are the respective species of property usually conveyed or transferred?

55. What are the proper modes of mortgaging freehold, copyhold, and leasehold estates? State each severally.

56. A. is mortgagee in fee, and dies without devising the security, and the mortgage debt is applicable by his executor to the payment of the testator's debts; suppose the heir-at-law of the mortgagee to be unwilling or incapable to reconvey the premises, to whom is the mortgagor to pay the principal money and interest, and how is he to obtain an effectual reconveyance of those premises?

57. Is a lessee, under the usual covenants to repair, liable to rebuild in case of fire?

58. State some of the principal points in which the law relating to wills was altered by a late statute.

59. If a person dies intestate, how is his personal estate distributed?

60. What covenants is it usual for trustees or mortgagees to enter into?

61. Can the printed particular and conditions of sale of an estate by auction be varied by parol at the sale?

62. What interest and power does the husband take in and over the following property of the wife:—her freehold estates, her personality in possession, her freehold estates real, her choses in action? and what effect has the death of husband and wife, or wife, on this interest?

IV. EQUITY, AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

63. State the nature of an equity of redemption, and give a general description of the parties entitled to it.

64. Describe "tacking," and in what cases it applies.

65. What is the distinction between legal and equitable assets, and in what order are each applicable to the payment of debts?

66. Can a married woman bind herself by contract in equity, in any, and what, case?

67. State the measures to be adopted by an executor or administrator in order to relieve himself from liability for debts due from the estate, of which he has no knowledge at the time when he is about to transfer the residue of the estate to the parties entitled.

68. If a creditor has omitted to take the necessary proceedings for recovering his debt from an executor or administrator who has relieved himself from the liability, can such creditor recover his debt, and from whom?

69. Is a mortgagee who has taken possession of the mortgage estate liable to account for any, and what, sums of money beyond those which he has actually received out of the estate?

70. State the general purposes for which a mortgagee in possession may expend money upon the mortgaged estate which will be allowed to him by a court of equity in taking the account between mortgagor and mortgagee.

71. State the proceedings to be adopted under the Act of last session, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, by a creditor seeking the assistance of a court of equity to obtain payment of his debt, or by a legatee seeking to obtain payment of his legacy out of personal estate.

72. State the alteration made by the Act of last session in cases where parties seek equitable relief under a legal title or right which has not been established at law.

73. State the course to be adopted under the Act of last session in cases where a suit becomes abated by death or marriage of parties, or defective by reason of any change or transmission of interest.

74. State the course of the present practice to compel appearance and answer, and the proceeding to be taken in case of default.

75. State the mode by which a defendant can, under the Act of last session, obtain discovery from the plaintiff, and how such discovery was obtained under the former practice of the court.

76. State the modes in which, under the Act of last session, evidence may be taken in suits commenced by bill, and what option is reserved to the parties in this respect.

77. What alteration was made by the Act of last session in the remedy given in suits for foreclosure?

V. BANKRUPTCY, AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

78. What proceedings must be taken to obtain an adjudication in bankruptcy?

79. What facts must be proved to entitle the petitioning creditor to an adjudication?

80. Has the bankrupt any, and what time, to dispute the adjudication, and how must he proceed for that purpose?

81. State the extent of the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy in London.

82. How are the creditors to prove their debts before the Commissioners?

83. What property held by the bankrupt passes to the assignees, and are there any, and what, exceptions?

84. Suppose a creditor to possess some security for his debt, but which he deems to be insufficient, what steps must he take to enable him to receive a dividend on the balance?

85. What should be done by the holders of bills of exchange not due at the time of the bankruptcy?

86. What is the rule in bankruptcy as to debts barred by the Statute of Limitations?

87. Is any priority given to any, and what, debts?

88. Is a settlement made by a trader in favour of his wife, before his bankruptcy, valid in any, and what, circumstances?

89. What is the law with respect to partnerships where one only of several members of a firm becomes bankrupt?

90. What are the rights of assignees, either to retain or relinquish property of the bankrupt held on lease?

91. Where a bankrupt has entered into a contract relating to land or buildings, which the assignees consider not to be beneficial to the creditors, what course may they pursue?

92. State the practice under the last Act as to the bankrupt's certificate.

VI. CRIMINAL LAW, AND PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES.

93. What are the ordinary steps taken in prosecuting a criminal charge up to the trial of the party charged?

94. Under what circumstances may depositions taken before the magistrates be used in evidence on the trial of the party accused?

95. What is the principle upon which a party charged with a criminal offence may be admitted to bail; and will a party charged with murder be admitted to bail?

96. According to the law as it now stands, what are the variances between the evidence and the statements in the indictment which may be amended at the trial, and subject to what restrictions or limitations?

97. If, upon the trial of a person charged with a felony, it is found that he only attempted to commit the felony, but did not succeed, what will be the result?

98. If a party be charged only with the attempt to commit such offences as those referred to in the last question as a misdemeanor, and the offence is proved to amount to felony, what is the course to be pursued?

99. In cases where it is doubtful whether the facts to be proved against the prisoner amount to an actual larceny, or to the receiving of goods, knowing them to be stolen, what is the course to be pursued?

100. Define the offence of embezzlement, and state how many acts of embezzlement may be charged in one indictment, and within what period of each other the acts so charged must have occurred.

101. Define the respective offences of forgery and uttering forged documents, and state whether either or both of these offences may be tried at quarter sessions.

102. State the course of proceedings in bringing error in criminal cases, and in what cases the plaintiff in error is entitled to be admitted to bail.

103. What is the principle upon which the rateable value of property assessed to the poor-rate is ascertained?

104. Enumerate the various modes by which, under the law as it now stands, a settlement may be obtained.

105. State what provisions have been recently made to prevent the removal of paupers in certain cases, and how far the same affect the question of settlement.

106. Upon whom is the liability to repair highways cast by the common law? How may this liability be altered by custom, prescription, or otherwise?

107. What is the nature of a criminal information? What is the course of proceeding to be taken for obtaining a criminal information? In whose name, and in what court, must it be filed, and what are the essential requisites for obtaining it?

USHERS, COURT-KEEPERS, &c. OF THE SUPERIOR COURTS.—TREASURY ORDER.

WHEREAS, by an Act passed in the session of Parliament holden in the fifteenth and sixteenth years of the reign of her present Majesty, c. 73, intituled "An Act to make Provision for a Permanent Establishment of Officers to perform the Duties at Nisi Prius in the Superior Courts of Common Law, and for the payment of such Officers and of the Judges' Clerks, by Salaries, and to abolish certain Offices in those Courts," it was amongst other things enacted, that it should and might be lawful for the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, and they were thereby empowered and required, by and with the sanction of the Lord Chief Justices of the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas and the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, as soon as conveniently might be, to ascertain and fix the number of ushers, court-keepers, messengers, and other subordinate officers and assistants in the said Superior Courts, and of attendants on the judges (other than the judges' clerks), which should be sufficient for the due performance of the duties required to be rendered in respect of such subordinate offices and appointments, and for the necessary attendance on the judges; and a list or lists of the offices and appointments, when so fixed and ascertained, should thereupon be published by and under the authority of the said Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, in the London Gazette, and from and after such publication such of the said offices and appointments as continued in such list or lists should be, and the same were, thereby declared to be abolished:

In pursuance of the said statute, the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, by and with the sanction of the Lord Chief Justices of the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas and the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, have ascertained and fixed the number of ushers, court-keepers, messengers, and other subordinate officers and assistants in the said Superior Courts, and of attendants on the judges (other than the judges' clerks), to be as set forth in the following list, which are considered to be sufficient for the due performance of the duties required to be rendered in respect of such subordinate offices and appointments, and for the necessary attendance on the judges; and the said Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury authorise and direct the said list of officers and appointments to be published in The London Gazette, namely:—

Court of Queen's Bench.

4 Ushers and Criers.
3 Tipstaffs.
1 Court-keeper.
1 Messenger and Porter.
1 Trainbearer.

Court of Common Pleas.

4 Ushers and Criers.
1 Tipstaff.
1 Court-keeper.
1 Messenger and Porter.
1 Trainbearer.

Court of Exchequer.

4 Ushers and Criers.
1 Tipstaff.
1 Court-keeper.
1 Messenger and Porter.
1 Trainbearer.

PUBLIC EXAMINATION OF THE STUDENTS OF THE INNS OF COURT, held at Lincoln's-Inn Hall, on the 22nd, 24th, and 25th days of January, 1853.

THE Council of Legal Education have awarded to WILLIAM WHITTAKER BARRY, Esq., Student of Lincoln's-inn, a Studentship of Fifty Guineas per annum, to continue for a period of three years.

Mr. E. GRANT DUFF, Esq., Student of the Inner Temple, a Certificate of Honour, as having passed the second best examination.

WM. O'CONNER MORRIS, Esq. Student of Lincoln's-inn, and JOHN PALMER, Esq. Student of the Inner Temple, Certificates that they have satisfactorily passed a Public Examination.

By Order of the Council,
(Signed) RICHARD BETHELL, Chairman.
Council Chamber, Lincoln's-inn,
29th Jan. 1853.

THE WELSH CIRCUITS OF THE JUDGES, 1853.

NORTH WALES AND CHESTER.

MR. JUSTICE MAULE, the judge appointed to proceed on this circuit, finally fixed the days and signed the precepts for holding the several assizes throughout the circuit, as senior judge, fixing Saturday, the 2nd of April, to meet Mr. Justice Wightman, who proceeds on the South Wales Circuit, at Chester, to hold the assizes for that ancient city and county. The following are the days and places named:—

Montgomeryshire.—Monday, March 14, at Welchpool.
Merionethshire.—Thursday, March 17, at Bala.
Carnarvonshire.—Saturday, March 19, at Carnarvon.
Anglesey.—Wednesday, March 23, at Beaumaris.
Denbighshire.—Saturday, March 26, at Ruthin.
Flintshire.—Wednesday, March 30, at Mold.
Cheshire.—Saturday, April 2, at the Castle at Chester.
City of Chester.—Saturday, April 2, at the Guildhall of the city of Chester.

SOUTH WALES AND CHESTER CIRCUIT.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Wightman, the learned judge appointed to proceed on this circuit and meet Mr. Justice Maule at Chester, has appointed the following days for holding the assizes for this portion of the principality:—

Glamorganshire.—Wednesday, March 2, at Swansea.
Pembrokeshire.—Wednesday, March 9, at Haverfordwest.
Town of Haverfordwest.—Wednesday, March 9, at Haverfordwest.
Cardiganshire.—Monday, March 14, at Cardigan.
Carmarthenshire.—Friday, March 18, at Carmarthen.
Brecknockshire.—Thursday, March 24, at Brecon.
Radnorshire.—Wednesday, March 30, at Presteign.
Cheshire and City of Chester.—Saturday, April 2, at the Castle and Guildhall, Chester.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

MRS. SLOANE.—Mrs. Sloane, whose case has excited so much public interest, and whose husband (who was imprisoned with her) died some time back, has been discharged from Newgate. She was in a bad state of health, and looked very weakly.—Globe.

THE BOOKSELLER'S, PUBLISHER'S, STATIONER'S, BOOKBINDER'S, AND LAW-STATIONER'S ASSISTANT.

THE NEW RULES, and CHEQUERS, the NEW TABLE of FEES, and the NEW STATUTE relating to the ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS, with the ALPHABETICAL LIST of ARTICLED CLERKS, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, by J. MACRAE EVANS, Clerk of Records and Writs. This Volume will also contain Amendments to the Pleading Act, having reference to the pages of this work.

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, with all the Rules, Orders, Cases, Statutes, &c. to this time, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, the Orders being printed with the Sections of the Statute to which they relate. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 12s. cloth.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS, with the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, and Notes of all the Cases decided thereon. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 1s. 6d. sewed.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of 1849, 1850, and 1851, with those now repealed in Practice, omitting the Repealed and Obsolete Parts, Local, Colonial, and Sectional Statutes, with Notes of all the Cases decided on the Consolidation; thus presenting the whole Law now in force in a compact form, and amply supplied with a copious Index. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. (This is the completion of the Practical Statutes of 1846, 1847, and 1848, which may still be had.)

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI. with a copious collection of Precedents of Indictments. This part contains Forms of Indictments at Quarter Sessions under the New Law. By J. E. DAVIES, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 3s. 6d.

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanack, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Tables for easily Calculation of Income Tax, and the other Information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 2d.; or stamped for post, 3d. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanack and Time of the Moon's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 6d.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, containing all the New Rules and Orders, the New Table of Fees and Cases decided to the end of Michaelmas Term. Price 12s. cloth.

THE LAW DIGEST for the Half-Year ending December 1. By E. WISE and D. T. EVANS, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. Price 6s. 6d. bds.; 8s. cloth.

This work gives every case, wherever reported, during the half-year, arranged so that the practitioner may find in a moment what is the latest law on any subject on which he may be engaged.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"ENQUIRER."—The Company is not bound to do either.

"CUR," &c. — The advertisement is a legitimate one. The existence of conveyancers who are not lawyers is a great wrong to the real lawyers, who are taxed for the privilege of practising and compelled to prove their competency; but it is legal.

"A. A. C."—There will be no alteration in the examination itself.

"ENQUIRER" will find the information he seeks in "Tudor's New Chancery Practice," and in the second edition of "Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act."

"C." (Eye).— When we have a little more space at command.

"A SUBSCRIBER."—The point has not been decided.

"A. C. S." might amuse himself gratuitously, or be paid for playing on Sundays. But it must not interfere at all with his office duties.

"A. J. W."—Gurney's system, we avoided, is preferred by the reporters.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1853.

TO READERS.

THE unprecedented quantity of "Court Papers" that have poured in upon us in a continual stream since the beginning of the legal year, consequent on the great changes effected during the last Parliament in the practice of the law, has completely dislocated all our usual arrangements for giving variety and interest to the pages of THE LAW TIMES. Week after week have our columns been claimed for New Rules and Orders, which would not bear postponement, and to which all other matters were obliged to give place. This week a considerable space is occupied with documents of the same class, again thrusting out divers articles of interest to the Profession and much correspondence, which have been a long time in type, waiting for an opportunity to appear. We hope, however, that the stream is now nearly exhausted, and that we shall have room to bring up this arrear, as well as a still larger one of reports, that has accumulated from the same cause. We can only pray our readers' patience, should our hopes of a clearance be disappointed by more arrivals of Rules, Orders, or Blue Books.

A series of practical papers on the New Rules, pointing out the changes made by them, from the pen of an able Pleader, will be commenced next week, for the instruction of students as well as for the information of Practitioners.

These, with the papers now in progress, describing an "Action at Law," and a "Suit in Equity," as they are under the new statutes, rules and orders, will amply perform the promise we made to our readers, that THE LAW TIMES should enable them to keep pace with the changes in the law, however numerous and rapid.

THE NEW PLEADING RULES.

It should be understood that the New Rules of Pleading laid before Parliament for its approval are not framed under the Common Law Procedure Act, nor connected with it, but under the provisions of a statute passed two years ago. The New Rules and Orders lately issued complete the Procedure Act; and so far as that measure is concerned, no further changes are likely to be made for many years.

THE LAW REFORMS OF THE SESSION.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR is to state on Monday what law reforms are to be introduced by the new Government during the present session.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL has announced in the House of Commons that, on receipt of the Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Ecclesiastical Courts, a measure will be introduced for their reform.

Lord CAMPBELL has laid upon the table of the House of Lords the proposed New Rules for the regulation of pleading. They will lie there for three months, and then, if not objected to, they will come into operation.

Lord ST. LEONARDS has lost no time in introducing his promised measures of Law Reform; but how far they will be adopted by the Government will not be known until Monday. He proposes a further reform in Chancery, an amendment of the Law of Lunacy, an extension of the privileges of the Bankruptcy Courts to insolvents desirous of dealing honestly with their creditors, and a codification of a part of the Criminal Law. Lord CAMPBELL objects to this being done by bits, and there is reason in the objection.

It is reported, that among the measures to be proposed by the Government is the revival of the unlucky Bill for the Registration of Deeds. But, as The Times truly says, we have passed beyond that now. It is a clumsy and costly expedient. The only cure is the more statesmanlike one of improving the Law of Real Property, and we have sought to show how that may be done with simplicity and effect.

Lord BROUGHAM is returning, and he will doubtless press forward his Bill for giving an equity jurisdiction to the County Courts. That will be the greatest boon to the public in the way of Law Reform that has been yet proposed, and no less a benefit to the profession, especially to the solicitors in the country; and it is pleasant to find a measure that will thus do good to all—to the Lawyer as well as to the Client. We will give our readers due notice when their assistance may be of service to promote the success of this to them most important Bill.

THE LAST TERM.

ANOTHER term has concluded, and we are now enabled to form some estimate of the effect of the recent changes in the law upon the business of the Superior Courts.

Manifestly, it has suffered a great diminution. The Judges have sat in Error and heard County Court appeals during term. The Q. B. holds but two sittings after term; the C.P. none; the Ex. one, to give judgment in every case remaining on the list, so that the next term will witness the strange scene in that court of no arrears. Mere motions have been enormously reduced in number, and to that extent the juniors have suffered; they have suffered no less in the better business, for there has been an evident economy in the employment of Counsel. Juniors are not wanted now that so many of the formalities of the law have been swept away; the junior was employed for that laborious work which a senior would not or could not do. His occupation is gone now.

At Nisi Prius there has been no such falling off. The cause lists have been as full as ever. Herein we see the good effects of diminishing the costs and hazards of procedure. Now that there is little danger of pitfalls in pleading, and, above all, now that the parties are admitted as witnesses, there is not the disinclination that formerly existed among prudent men to go to law, preferring rather to submit to a wrong than pursue redress through such hazards. It may be anticipated, therefore, that as the public discover the facilities that have been given to them to try their disputes upon the merits, at a lessened cost, the Nisi Prius Courts will be more and more frequented. If a single County Court district can provide some hundreds of causes in a year out of a jurisdiction of 50*l.*, surely there must be disputes and demands enough above that sum to provide tenfold the present list of causes for the Superior Courts. It can scarcely be that quarrelling ceases exactly at 50*l.*; and if the sums above 50*l.* do not yield their proportion, it is only because people, who would readily fight in the County Courts, will not fight in the Superior Courts. The reason of this is plain: they consider it too hazardous and too costly a game. When they find that the hazard is reduced to nothing, and the costs are comparatively trifling, they will be as pugnacious in the Superior Courts as they are in the County Courts, and therefore we look for a steady increase in the number of causes tried there.

This will be an advantage to the Attorneys, but it will not save the Bar from its decline. No increase in the number of causes will compensate to the juniors for what they have lost in the business growing out of the technicalities. Nisi Prius business will of necessity in every court be limited to a few. Except in rare cases, there will not be the array of counsel in a cause that was formerly seen. It is not wanted. The "heavy junior" is no longer needed to sift the pleadings or "get up" the cases. Now every cause is tried upon its merits alone; and to bring out the merits we do not want a learned lawyer, but a clever advocate, a man of business, who knows the world, who can examine a witness well, and make a good speech to the jury. These are qualities possessed by few; at least, they can only be developed by experience; the Attorney, therefore, will always give his briefs to the man in practice who has had experience, rather than to the cleverest junior who has had none. Hence it is that in every court advocacy ever was and ever will be monopolised by a few; and therefore the increase in the number of trials will in no way increase the business of the juniors, nor improve their condition or prospects.

Yet, in spite of these facts and warnings, staring them in the face, and proclaiming that there is not a livelihood for a tenth part of the existing Bar, nearly forty new Barristers were called last term! At a time when it is impossible that those who are at the Bar can subsist by it, forty new competitors have entered themselves for this hopeless race.

To the Attorneys, as we have shown before, the changes in the law will not bring ultimate disadvantage; but they have exhibited more prudence. The list of those admitted last term shows a considerable decline in numbers.

Such is the experience of Hilary Term, 1853.

THE NEW SCALE OF COSTS.

THE PLEADERS, THE ATTORNEYS, AND THE TAXING MASTERS.

IT will be remembered that last week we directed the attention of our readers to the 4th of the new directions by the Judges to the Masters, under which it is ordered that "the Masters in all cases shall have discretion to allow, as between party and party, the fees of counsel or special pleader for drawing pleadings or other proceedings, whether special or otherwise, and advising." We believe we are warranted in saying that, at the time when this direction was given, the learned Judges expressed to the Masters their wish that it should not be carried out in a narrow spirit, but that the Masters should be liberal in the allowance of pleaders' fees. We are, indeed, in a position to know that a strenuous endeavour was made to procure from the Judges a direction that the discretion as to the employment of counsel or pleader, in cases of pleadings and entries, should rest with the attorney and not with the Master—that is to say, that whenever the attorney should think it necessary to employ a pleader, the minimum fee usually marked should be allowed on taxation as a matter of course. In our opinion this is the real footing upon which the practice should be based. It is equally a hardship upon the attorney, and unfair to him, that he should be subject to an ex post facto law in this respect. It surely might have been left with safety to a body of gentlemen so well educated and so respectable as the attorneys of this kingdom to determine what matters are within their own province, and in what cases the real interests of their clients require the assistance of counsel or special pleader. The fee paid to the pleader is not a profit, but an outlay, to the attorney; and it cannot be supposed that for the small pittance allowed for his clerk's attendance he would recklessly incur an unnecessary expense. No one can be so competent to judge in what cases it is proper and advisable to employ the higher branches of the Profession as the attorney. It is he who feels the difficulty when it arises, and he is the only person really competent to judge of the necessity of the case, because he has to judge of it before, while the Master is only called on to judge as to such necessity after, the event; and it is for this reason that the discretion of the latter has been frequently exercised in such a manner as to operate with equal harshness and injustice upon the attorney. It is not because a case founded upon a special contract has been resolved into a common count for work and labour, the consideration having been executed, nor because a complicated state of circumstances has resulted in a count for money had and received, that it was unnecessary à priori to employ a pleader to prepare or settle the declaration. And when we find that eighteen years of judicial exposition, from the case of Cousins v. Paddon, 2 Cr. M. & R. 547, down to the date of which we write, have not sufficed to fix the limits of the general issue in debt and assumpsit,—and that only a fortnight ago the effect of Not guilty, in case, as decided in Tanner v. Little, 5 Bing. N. C. 678 was shaken by the C. P., as will seen by reference to our report of Mitchell v. Crassweller, 20 L. T. Rep. 287,—it must be obvious that it is unjust to question the discretion of the attorney in employing a special pleader or counsel, because the technical form of the defence has resulted in the general issue. Yet this has been hitherto but too frequently the case. The Masters endeavoured to justify the course adopted; on the ground that they had no power to allow the fee except in special cases; and they seem to have supposed, curiously enough, that deep waters could not present a smooth surface. Under the new direction they will no longer have any pretence for such illiberality.

We believe that some of the learned Judges were disposed to frame the fourth direction in the form to which we have above alluded, and to vest the discretion as to the employment of counsel or special pleader, in case of pleadings and entries, entirely in the attorney; and it is certain that the present rule (although in terms vesting the discretion in the Master) was given with a view to the same end, and for the purpose of remedying (as pointed out by Mr. Chitty in the note we published last week) the evil which has hitherto obtained. Unless the Masters carry out this direction liberally, they will certainly not effect the intention of the Judges, and they will inflict a serious injury upon the Profession, and in too many cases, a still greater injury upon the Suitors. Regarding the question in a pecuniary point of view, they will place the attorney in an unfair position, or otherwise expose him to a responsibility he ought not to bear. Indeed, with this direction before them, the Masters will, to some extent, throw a personal imputation upon the attorneys, if they disallow a fee which has been actually and bonâ fide paid. The Master will bear in mind that the simplicity or length of the form is no test of the learning or labour which has been required in order to judge and determine of its applicability—for the latter may have involved the perusal of a long correspondence, the unravelling of complicated circumstances, and the anxious consideration of conflicting authorities. The Masters should remember also (and this is a point which cannot be too strongly insisted upon) that the mere pleadings by no means represent all the benefit which the attorneys and the suitors have derived from the special pleader in the course of the cause. We well know that some of the Masters complain of the trouble they are exposed to, by the questions put to them day by day by the attorneys; and they are in a position to judge how much more frequently the attorney has recourse to the gratuitous assistance of his pleader throughout the cause, and how much of time and labour are expended by the latter in this obligation. We will venture to say that in many cases the suitor derives, from the learning and experience of his pleader, an amount of advice and assistance, never appearing in the bill of costs, which alone would be ill repaid by the trifling fees which are marked, and objected to, for the pleadings. All this requires consideration and amendment. The matter is now in the hands of the Masters, and the responsibility rests with them. We think we have shown that the interests of the suitor, as well as the protection of the attorneys from a responsibility they ought not to bear, require the application of this direction in a liberal spirit! At all events, it behoves the Profession to watch narrowly how the direction is carried out; and we are fully warranted in saying that it will give general dissatisfaction if the Masters do not, in its application, evince greater liberality than many of them had shown in other particulars before this important direction was promulgated.

ADVERTISING LAWYERS.

The following advertisements appear in succession in The Times of Jan. 24th. One we know is an Attorney, of whom the Chancery Association could give some curious particulars. Who are Messrs. Poole and Co. and Messrs. Herne? If not Attorneys, they should be looked to, and if they do a single act that belongs properly to the Attorney, their names should be sent to the Stamp Office:—

To the Embarrassed.—Persons labouring [under] pecuniary difficulties, desirous of effecting an honourable arrangement, will find it to their interest to avail themselves of the gratuitous advice of Messrs. Poole and Co. of forty years' practical experience in these matters. Hours of conference from four to eight p.m. daily. Offices, 9, Spital-square, Bishopsgate.

Protection to the Embarrassed.—There are thousands of persons who have long struggled against the force of misfortune; but few are aware that, under very recent Acts, all small traders owing less than 300*l*., clergymen, farmers, private and professional men, and all others to any amount (the latter without any publicity), can be entirely raised from their difficulties at small expense, and without imprisonment or bankruptcy. All such Mr. Weston (late Secretary to the Chancery Reform Association) begs will apply to him, by letter or personally, at 3, Leadenhall-street, City, next to Mechi's.

Bankruptcy and Insolvency.—Messrs. Herne, from their long practical experience, invite all persons who are struggling against the force of misfortune to apply to them, when, at a small expense, they will be entirely raised from their difficulties, without imprisonment, and in most instances without having recourse even to bankruptcy or insolvency. All small traders owing less than 300*l*., and clergymen, farmers, private and professional gentlemen, owing to any amount, may, without any publicity or difficulty, be relieved under very recent Acts. Strict confidence guaranteed, and high references given. 58, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY. (a)

JOINDER OF SEVERAL DEFENCES.

A defendant may demur to one part of the bill, plead to another, and disclaim as to another. See Mitf. Pl. 313, where Lord Redesdale says: "But all these defences most clearly refer to separate and distinct parts of the bill; for the defendant cannot plead to that part to which he has already demurred; neither can he answer to any part to which he has either demurred or pleaded; the demurrer demanding the judgment of the Court whether he shall make any answer, and the plea whether he shall make other answer than what is contained in the plea. A plea or answer will therefore overrule a demurrer, and an answer a plea."

The practice, however, as it existed when Lord Redesdale wrote, has been considerably altered by the 36th and 37th Orders of August 1841, which direct that no demurrer or plea shall be held bad and overruled on argument only because such demurrer or plea shall not cover so much of the bill as it might by law have extended to, or only because the answer of the defendant may extend to some part of the same matter as may be covered by such demurrer or plea.

MOTION FOR A DECREE IN A SUIT COMMENCED BY BILL.

The plaintiff in any suit commenced by bill may, at any time after the time allowed to the defendant for answering the same has expired (but before replication) may move the court, upon giving one month's notice to the defendant or defendants, for such decree or decretal order as he may think himself entitled to; and the plaintiff and defendant respectively are to be at liberty to file affidavits in support of and in opposition to the motion so to be made, and to use the same on the hearing of such motion; and if such motion is made after an answer filed in the cause, the answer for the purposes of the motion is to be treated as an affidavit: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 15.)

The affidavits to be used in support of such motion are to be filed before the service of such notice, and a list of such affidavits is to be set forth at the foot of such notice: (Orders 7th Aug. 1852, XXIII.)

The defendant, within fourteen days after service of such notice, is to file his affidavits in answer, and to furnish the plaintiff or his solicitor with a list thereof: (Ib. XXIV.)

Within seven days after the expiration of such fourteen days the plaintiff is to file his affidavits in reply, which affidavits are to be confined to matters strictly in reply, and he is to furnish the defendant or his solicitor with a list thereof; and except so far as these affidavits are in reply, they are not to be regarded by the Court, unless upon the hearing of the motion the Court gives leave to the defendant to answer them; and in that case the costs of such affidavits, and of the further affidavits consequent upon them, are to be paid by the plaintiff, unless the Court otherwise orders: (Ib. XXV.)

No further evidence on either side is to be used upon such motion for a decree or decretal order, without leave of the Court: (Ib. XXVI.)

Every notice of motion for a decree or decretal order is to be entered with the registrar, who is to make out a list of such motions, and the same are to be heard according to such list, unless the Court shall make order to the contrary: (Ib. XXVII.)

Upon any such motion for a decree or decretal order, it is discretionary with the Court to grant or refuse the motion, or to make an order giving such directions for or with respect to the further prosecution of the suit as the circumstances of the case may require, and to make such orders as to costs as it may think right: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 16.)

The motion for a decree or decretal order introduced in the practice of the Court by the legislation of last session will be productive of much good; and where formerly, statements, interrogatories, answers, and all the semblance of contentious litigation, even when the suits were of a friendly character, were required, a concise bill, with a few affidavits on either side, will be sufficient to determine the question in dispute. Claims will, in all probability, be in almost all cases superseded by bills when so speedy a result can be obtained; and, as a declaratory decree can now be made under the 50th section of the Act, Sir George Turner's Act will not be much resorted to for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of the Court upon a case. It may be here mentioned that a plaintiff in a suit commenced by bill, before as well as since the statute 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86 came into operation, may move for a decree under the 15th section of that statute: (Cousins v. Vasey, 9 Hare, Append. 1, xxxi.)

MOTIONS TO DISMISS.

Motions to dismiss a bill may be made either by the plaintiff or by the defendant. Motions to dismiss by the defendant are made either for want of proper prosecution by the plaintiff, or when the suit abates, or becomes otherwise defective, or when a party proceeding both at law and in equity, is put to his election in which court he will proceed.

MOTIONS TO DISMISS ON PART OF THE PLAINTIFF.

A plaintiff may, as a matter of course, at any time before decree (Curtis v. Lloyd, 4 My. & Cr. 194), apply to the Court by motion to dismiss his bill, either as against all of the defendants or against such of them as he thinks he can dispense with, with costs (4 Ann, c. 6, s. 23); and the Court will not dismiss the bill without costs on the mere agreement of the parties (Fidelle v. Evans, 1 Cox 27; 1 Bro. C. C. 267), but only upon the consent of the defendant actually given in court: (Dixon v. Parks, 1 Ves. Jun. 402.)

There is an exception in the case of a person suing in formâ pauperis, who may move for the dismissal of his bill without costs, unless he has been admitted to sue in formâ pauperis after the filing of his bill: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 765.)

Another exception is, where the plaintiff has, by his own conduct, as by his absconding, or transferring the property to obtain which was the object of the suit, rendered the motion to dismiss advisable: (Knox v. Brown, 2 Bro. C. C. 486; 1 Cox 359.)

After decree, a plaintiff cannot, without consent, move to dismiss his own bill, as all the parties have an interest in the decree, unless an issue only has been directed; even if the issue has been decided in favour of the defendant: (Curtis v. Lloyd, 4 My. & Cr. 194; Gulbert v. Hawles, 1 Ch. Ca. 40; Carrington v. Holly, 1 Dick. 281.)

If the plaintiff, after the cause is set down to be heard, causes the bill to be dismissed on his own application, or if the cause is called on to be heard in court, and the plaintiff makes default, and by reason thereof the bill is dismissed, then and in such case such dismissal is, unless the Court otherwise orders, to be equivalent to a dismissal on the merits, and may be pleaded in bar to another suit for the same matter: (117th Order of May 1845.)

(a) Continued from p. 193, ante.

MOTION BY DEFENDANT TO DISMISS FOR WANT OF PROSECUTION.

Any defendant may, upon notice, move that the bill may be dismissed with costs for want of prosecution, and the Court may order accordingly,

1. "If the plaintiff, having obtained an order to enlarge the time, does not obtain and serve an order for leave to amend the bill, or does not file a replication, or set down the cause to be heard on bill and answer, within four weeks after the answer, or the last of the answers is found or deemed to be sufficient, or after the filing of a traversing note;" or,

2. If the plaintiff, having undertaken to reply to a plea to the whole bill, does not file his replication within four weeks after the date of his undertaking; or

3. "If the plaintiff, having obtained no order to enlarge the time, does not amend the bill within fourteen days after the date of the order for leave to amend;" or,

4. "If the plaintiff, having obtained no order to enlarge the time, does not set down the cause to be heard, and obtain and serve a subpœna to hear judgment within four weeks after publication has passed:" (114th Order of May 1845.)

The plaintiff, not obtaining an order to amend his bill, must either fill his replication or set down the cause to be heard on bill and answer, within four weeks after the last answer is deemed or found sufficient, otherwise any defendant may move to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution: (16th Order of May 1845, Art. 37.)

Where the plaintiff has, after answer, amended his bill without requiring an answer to the amendment, any defendant may, upon notice, move to dismiss the bill with costs for want of prosecution, if the plaintiff, having obtained no order to enlarge the time, does not file the replication, or set down the cause to be heard on bill and answer, within the time following, viz.:—

1. "Within fourteen days after service of notice of the amendment of the bill, in cases where the defendant does not desire to answer the amendments."

2. "Within fourteen days after the Master's refusal to allow further time, in cases where the defendant desiring to answer has not put in his answer within eight days after the service of notice of the amendment of the bill, and the Master has refused to allow further time."

3. "Within fourteen days after the filing of the answer, in cases where the defendant has put in an answer to the amendment, unless the plaintiff has, within fourteen days, obtained from the Court special order for leave to re-amend the bill:" (115th Order of May 1845.)

Where the plaintiff amends his bill without requiring an answer to the amendments, and no answer is put in thereto, and no warrant for further time to answer the same is served within eight days after the service of the notice of the amendment of such bill, the plaintiff is, after the expiration of such eight days, but within fourteen days from the time of such service, either to file his replication or set down the cause to be heard upon bill and answer. Otherwise any defendant may move to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution: (16th Order of May 1845, Art. 39.)

Where the plaintiff amends his bill without requiring an answer to the amendments, and a defendant, within eight days after service of the notice of the filing of the amended bill, serves a warrant for further time to answer the amendments, but the Master refuses to grant such further time, the plaintiff is, within fourteen days after such refusal, either to file his replication, or set down the cause to be heard on bill and answer, otherwise any defendant may move to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution:" (Art. 40.)

And "if a defendant puts in an answer to amendments to which the plaintiff has not required an answer, the plaintiff must, within fourteen days after the filing of such answer, either file his replication or set down the cause to be heard on bill and answer, unless in the meantime he obtains from the Court a special order for leave to except to such answer, or to amend the bill, otherwise any defendant may move to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution (Art. 41); and the vacations are not to be reckoned:" (14th Order of May 1845, Art. 4.)

"A defendant is not to be at liberty to move to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution until after the expiration of the time within which a plaintiff may obtain an order to amend such bill:" (118th Order of May 1845.)

Where a defendant to a suit commenced by bill shall not have been required to answer the bill, and shall not have answered the same, such defendant shall be at liberty to apply for an order to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution at any time after the expiration of three months from the time of his appearance, unless a motion for a decree or decretal order shall have been set down in the meantime, or the cause shall have been set down to be heard; and the Court may, upon such application, if it shall think fit, make an order dismissing the bill, or make such other order or impose such terms as may appear just and reasonable: (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 27; 29th Order of 7th Aug. 1852.)

MOTION BY THE DEFENDANT TO DISMISS ON THE SUIT BECOMING ABATED OR DEFECTIVE.

In cases where a suit abates by the death of a sole plaintiff, the Court, upon motion of any defendant, made on notice served on the legal personal representative of the deceased plaintiff, may order that such legal representative do revive the suit within a limited time, or that the bill be dismissed (63rd Order of May 1845); and when, in consequence of the suit becoming defective, the plaintiff is ordered to file a supplemental bill, he is bound effectually to prosecute the supplemental bill as well as to file it; or, in default, the defendant may move to dismiss: (Ward v. Ward, 8 Beav. 397.) On a motion to dismiss by a defendant, who had become bankrupt after answer, the Court granted the order without costs: (Findlay v. Lawrance, 12 Jur. 934.) And where, after service of notice of motion to dismiss, the plaintiff became bankrupt, on the motion coming on, and the plaintiff not appearing, an order of dismissal was made: (Gibson v. Edyeworth, 12 Jur. 972.)

MOTION BY THE DEFENDANT TO DISMISS IN CASES OF ELECTION.

As a general rule, when a plaintiff is proceeding, both at law and in equity, for the same matter, the defendant may move that the plaintiff may elect in which court he will proceed: if in equity, that proceedings at law may be stayed by injunction; if at law, then that the defendant's bill should thenceforth stand dismissed out of court as against the defendant, with costs. For instance, a person cannot, except in a very special case (Fennings v. Humphery, 4 Beav. 1), proceed at law and in equity upon an agreement (Carrick v. Young, 4 Madd. 437; Reynolds v. Nelson, 6 Madd. 18.) So for a debt (Barker v. Smark, 3 Beav. 64), except in the case of a mortgage, where the mortgagee may proceed in equity by bill of foreclosure, and at law on the bond of the mortgagor for the mortgage debt at the same time: (Schoole and Wife v. Sall, 1 S. & L. 176.)

So a person must elect when he is proceeding in equity, and in a foreign court of competent jurisdiction for the same matter: (Pieters v. Thompson, Coop. 294.) This motion to dismiss cannot be made before the defendant has put in his answer (Tillotson v. Ganson, 1 Vern. 103); and by the 16th of the Orders of May, 1845, art. 20, it is directed, "that a defendant whose answer is not excepted to, or referred back on former exceptions, alleging that the plaintiff is prosecuting him in this court and also at law for the same matter, may, upon the expiration of eight days after his answer or further answer is filed, obtain as of course, on motion or petition, the usual order for the plaintiff to make his election in which court he will proceed. By the 21st article it is directed, "that a defendant whose answer is excepted to or referred back on former exceptions, alleging that the plaintiff is prosecuting him in this court and also at law for the same matter, may, by notice in writing, require the plaintiff to procure the Master's report upon the exceptions within four days from the service of the notice. And if the plaintiff does not obtain the Master's report within such four days, such defendant is entitled as of course, on motion or petition, to obtain the usual order for the plaintiff to make his election in which court he will proceed." The 51st Order directs "that the plaintiff may move to discharge such order, on the merits confessed in the answer."

The order to elect is of course; and not in the discretion of the Court: (Royle v. Wynne, Cr. & Ph. 255.)

Elections and agreements to proceed at law or in equity may be signed by the solicitor (16th Order of October 1842), and must be filed, and notice thereof given to the defendant's solicitor: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 794.)

THE LEGISLATOR.

NOTICES RELATING TO THE LAW ON THE ORDER-BOOK OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MR. COLLIER.—Ecclesiastical Courts.

Mr. W. WILLIAMS.—To call the attention of the House to the injustice of exempting real property from paying probate and legacy duties, while personal property of every description is subjected to the payment of the said duties; and to move that, in the opinion of this House, real property should be made to pay the same probate and legacy duties as are now payable on personal property.

Mr. WISE.—To call the attention of the House to the present law of settlement, with a view to its total repeal, and to a more equitable mode of assessing the rates for the relief of the poor.

Mr. RICE.—Select committee to consider the expediency of adopting a uniform system of police in England and Wales.

Lord HOTHAM.—Bill to preclude the judges of the Superior Courts of Law and Equity, and the judges of the Ecclesiastical Courts, from sitting and voting in the House of Commons.

Mr. H. DRUMMOND.—Bill to facilitate the transfer of land.

Mr. HEADLAM.—To ask whether it is the intention of her Majesty's Government to introduce any measure for the alteration of the Laws of Mortmain.

Mr. PHILLIMORE.—Address, that her Majesty will be pleased to appoint commissioners to digest the law of England into a code.

Lord R. GROSVENOR.—Bill to repeal the attorneys and solicitors' annual certificate duty.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

COMMON LAW PROCEDURE.

THURSDAY, Feb. 10.—Lord CAMPBELL said he had to lay upon their Lordships' table a document of considerable importance, to which he wished briefly to call their attention. By the Common Law Procedure Bill of last session power was given to her Majesty's justices to frame a set of rules and regulations for the purpose of carrying into effect the intentions of the Legislature with reference to their respective courts, under this modification, however,—that the rules and regulations so made should be laid before both Houses of Parliament, and that they should not become law until the expiry of three months, by which time it was supposed that the members of both Houses would have had ample opportunity of examining them and forming their opinion on them. In the exercise of the powers thus conferred upon them, her Majesty's justices had, with the greatest care and anxiety, prepared a set of rules and regulations with reference to the procedure of the Superior Courts of Law in Westminster-hall. He ventured to say that no body of men could be more anxious than her Majesty's judges that the laws should be administered with all possible simplicity, expedition, and economy; and it was with this view, and upon that principle, that the rules and regulations which he held in his hand had been framed. He had also the satisfaction to say that the Procedure Bill of last session had worked admirably. It had greatly improved the practice of the Superior Courts; and it was with the view of still further carrying out the intentions of the Legislature in these respects that these regulations had been framed by her Majesty's justices. He should move that they be printed, and their Lordships would have ample time for considering them, and for disallowing or modifying them, if in their wisdom they should see fit to do so; but, if neither House of Parliament thought proper to interfere with them, they would, by next Trinity Term, become law.

LAW REFORM.

The LORD CHANCELLOR gave notice, that on Monday next he would state to the House the intentions of her Majesty's Government with respect to legal reform.

BANKRUPTCY—LUNACY.

Lord ST. LEONARDS introduced his Bills for amending the law of lunacy, and for enabling insolvents to take the benefit of the bankruptcy law by voluntary cession.

CRIMINAL LAW.

Lord ST. LEONARDS also introduced a Bill for the Digest and Consolidation of part of the Criminal Law.—Lord CAMPBELL was of opinion that the whole law should be codified at once, and not by piecemeal.

THE NEW CRIMINAL CODE.

FRIDAY, Feb. 11.—Lord ST. LEONARDS expressed a hope, as we understood, that before the Government abolished transportation they would consider the important question of secondary punishments.—Lord

Campbell, agreed that the subject of secondary punishments should be fully considered and settled, but he hoped it would not be settled by abolishing transportation, which for his experience, he could say, was the best punishment that had ever been devised, as well for the protection of the public as the reformation of criminals. He was against their being forced on unwilling colonists, but he thought the Government ought to select new settlements where they might be sent without injury to any one.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

METROPOLITAN GRAND JURIES.

Thursday, Feb. 10.—In reply to Sir F. Thesiger, Lord Palmerston said that there was no intention at present on the part of the Government to introduce a Bill for the purpose of abolishing grand juries in the metropolitan districts.

BETTING HOUSES.

Sir J. Duke wished to know whether it was the intention of the Government to introduce any measure with a view of putting a stop to the extension of betting houses, which he could testify to be a source of serious evil.—Lord Palmerston said the subject excited great attention, and there was great foundation for the opinion that much evil was produced by these betting houses. At the same time the subject was surrounded with great difficulty, and he confessed he was not satisfied in his own mind as to any practical mode of accomplishing the object in view without going beyond the purpose proposed to be attained. At the same time the Government would consider the subject.

ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

Mr. Bright wished to know whether it was the intention of the Government to introduce any measure for reforming, or what would be better, for abolishing the Ecclesiastical Courts?—Lord J. Russell said that a commission had been appointed, which had under its consideration a considerable part of the subject relating to Ecclesiastical Courts. It would be desirable to have the report of that commission before proceeding to legislate upon the subject; but if it was likely to be too long delayed, it was the intention of the Government to submit a proposition on the subject without report.

EXAMINER OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

The Solicitor-General gave notice that on Monday he would move for leave to bring in a bill for further regulating the office of Examiner of the Court of Chancery.

THE MAGISTRATE,

AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

A case of unusual interest in this department of the law was reported last week from the Q. B. Sect. 2 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, provides that no action shall be brought against any justice of the peace for anything done under a warrant issued for disobedience of a previous summons. This was held to apply only to warrants issued previously to a conviction or order for the purpose of compelling appearance, and not to warrants issued after conviction for the purpose of enforcing penalties. In this latter case an appearance by counsel or attorney was held to be an appearance according to the exigency of the summons. We commend the careful perusal of this judgment to magistrates and their clerks: (Bessell v. Wilson, 20 L. T. Rep. 233.) In a note to this case will be found an important correction by Lord Campbell of a strange misconception that had gone abroad of some remarks he had made upon the bench as to the duty of constables in searching persons in custody. He was reported to have said that a constable had no right to search a person in any case. His Lordship now desires it to be known that such was not his meaning; that it was right to search in all cases of arrest on a criminal charge—but not in other cases which are in the nature of civil proceedings, as in the one then under consideration.

An order of sessions was made in Reg. v. Churchwardens, &c. of Heston, 20 L. T. Rep. 235, for quashing an order of removal from A. to B. on the ground of a subsequent settlement in C. A. then obtained an order of removal to C. on the ground of a settlement gained in B. by hiring and service subsequently to that in C. The removing parish A. was held to be estopped by the first order from setting up the settlement by hiring and service in B. subsequently to that in C., as the same point was in dispute between A. and B. when the first order was quashed, and such subsequent settlement might then have been set up in answer to the settlement in C., on which that order was quashed.

In Municipal Law there is a case of some interest. The Municipal Act (s. 38) gives to the town council a control over the decision of the justices as to the amount of salary to be paid to the keeper of the gaol or house of correction, the word "confirmed" in that section being held to be equivalent to the words "approved of." Where, therefore, the justices had appointed a gaoler at a salary of 120*l.* per annum, and made an order on the treasurer for payment of a year's salary, and the treasurer and town council declined to pay, the Q. B. refused a mandamus to compel them to do so.

Erle, J., in the B. C., has laid it down, that when a justice has jurisdiction to enter upon a question, he has jurisdiction to decide it, and the court will not interfere with his decision: (Ex parte Chadwick, 20 L. T. Rep. 239.) The Court has admitted to bail a prisoner charged with murder, where the coroner's jury, after a full investigation of the facts, had entirely exculpated him: (Reg. v. Blackburn, 20 L. T. Rep. 239.)

SETTLEMENT OF A BASTARD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—In Reg. v. St. Andrew in Worcester, reported in your number of the 29th Jan. (p. 221), the Court of Q. B. held that the settlement of a bastard child, after he attained the age of 16, is in the parish in which he was born. There can, I apprehend, be no doubt that the intention of the Legislature is carried out by this decision; but, with great propriety, judges have over and over again stated that they are not to decide according to what they may deem the intention of the Legislature, but are to take the language of an Act of Parliament and to give to it its close and grammatical meaning. Now with reference to the language of the 71st section of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, it does seem to me that a fair argument arises which is adverse to the decision of the court, and which does not seem to have been clearly put by the counsel engaged in the case. The section enacts that every child which shall be born a bastard after the passing of the Act "shall have and follow the settlement of the mother of such child, until such child shall attain the age of 16, or shall attain a settlement in its own right;" and there the enactment (so far as the point under argument is concerned) ceases. The section does not say, "or shall attain a settlement in its own right" previous to such child attaining the age of 16. The language is in the alternative; the "or" is disjunctive; and I apprehend that it may fairly be argued that it contains two distinct enactments of a settlement, which the language of the Act separates and disjoins the one from the other, and that, taking this construction of the clause, and omitting one of the distinct enactments, the section may well be read as enacting that "every child which shall be born a bastard shall have and follow the settlement of the mother of such child until such child shall acquire a settlement in its own right." There is no express limit as to the time during which such settlement in its own right is to be acquired; it may be before or after it attains the age of 16. But differing, as I humbly do, from Mr. Justice Crompton, it appears to me that the grammatical construction of the words gives to a bastard the settlement of its mother until such bastard acquires a settlement in its own right. Lord Campbell seems not to have entertained any doubt as to the propriety of his decision of the case; but I may observe that throughout the whole of his judgment (as reported in the Law Times) his Lordship did not once allude to the disjunctive "or," or to the words "acquire a settlement in its own right." To those words some meaning must be attached; and (as the Legislature has not limited or restricted this meaning) I submit that they should receive their full grammatical and unrestricted construction. I hope that the question will again come before the court; and I hope so the more especially because it is pretty apparent that Mr. Justice Crompton did not cordially concur in the judgment of the other judges.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Feb. 5, 1853. J. S.

Testimonial to the Earl Brownlow.—The address of the magistrates and deputy-lieutenants of the county to Earl Brownlow on his retirement from the lieutenancy was presented to his lordship on Saturday last by Sir Robert Sheffield. The address is signed by every gentleman of authority and standing in the county.—Lincoln Chronicle.

A Parliamentary paper has just been printed respecting the Tewkesbury Union. The board of guardians carried resolutions to reduce the salaries of the several officers, on account of the "cheapness of provisions." The officers appealed to the Poor Law Board, and the reasons were required from the guardians that induced them to pass the resolutions. They urged that the value of agricultural produce had been diminished at least 30 per cent., that the rates had decreased, and that food was cheap. The Poor Law Board replied, that they had "never recognised the principle that the price of the articles and of the produce referred to are to be the criterion by which the amount of salaries ought to be estimated and regulated, or that such salaries should be liable to vary as the price of food fluctuates." The Poor Law Board thought that no sufficient reason had been assigned for the reduction, declaring that the fixed salaries of the medical officers, remunerated them only for their ordinary duties; and the board did not see that sufficient grounds had been adduced for diminishing the salaries of either of the officers referred to in the resolutions of the guardians.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

It will be seen that Lord St. Leonards has decided, in Myers v. Perigal, 20 L. T. Rep. 229, that shares in a joint-stock banking company which had an interest in freehold and other real estates, are personal and not real estates, and therefore may be devised to a charity without being subject to the Mortmain Act.

Queries on Points of Practice.

COSTS.

Can any of your readers say what is the usual practice in the Profession, with regard to the following question, in conveyancing costs? 1*s.* 4*d.* a folio is allowed for drawing deeds and fair copy. Does this include the fair copy sent to the opposite solicitor for perusal? or is an extra fair copy allowable for that purpose, at the usual charge of 4*d.* a folio?

An Old Subscriber.

Answers to Queries.

COSTS.

In a subscriber who, in the 195th page of your paper of the 5th inst. asks to be referred to an authority as to the right of an intended mortgagee, in the absence of any express agreement, to recover from the intended mortgagor his costs respecting the investigation of the title, &c. where the business has been broken off, and the mortgage not completed in consequence of a defect in the title to the property, will refer to Kirby v. Williamson, 19 L. T. Rep. 303, he will find that to be the latest reported case that I know of upon the subject; and, although it does not decide the point, he will there see what was the opinion of the court, and he will find a reference to several cases, to which he will doubtless refer, and be satisfied.

A. T. Stravenson.

In answer to "A Subscriber" who wishes for an authority as to the right of an intended mortgagee to costs, from an intended mortgagor, when the business has broken down, I beg to refer him to the cases of Seede v. Whittington, 2 B. & C. 11; and Hodges v. Lord Litchfield, 9 Bing. 713, and 1 B. N. C. 492. The subject is also touched upon in Thompson v. Bond, 1 Campb. 4.

Fred. Peake.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

The question whether shares in a banking company, established under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and having an interest in freehold and other lands vested in the trustees of the bank, were real or personal estate, was decided by Lord St. Leonards in Myers v. Perigal, 20 L. T. Rep. 229. In an elaborate and conclusive argument, his Lordship held that the shareholder has not any estate in the land so held by the company of which he is a member, and therefore that a devise of them to a charity was not within the Mortmain Act.

WINDING-UP.

Official Managers do not always find their duties pleasant or profitable. It seems that they may be subjected to positive loss. They are paid by a per-centage on the assets, and in many cases there have been no assets. In Re The Direct Exeter and Plymouth Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 231, the Official Manager has been ordered to pay certain costs, although there are no assets, on the ground that he had improperly instituted proceedings in the Master's Office, although he was allowed the costs of defending the order upon appeal when made.

RAILWAY AND OTHER BILLS ON STANDING ORDERS.

The standing orders were declared complied with in the following cases:—

Monday, Feb. 7.

London and North-Western Railway.—There were four Bills connected with this company, which, after some opposition, passed the standing orders.

Shrewsbury and Chester Railway.—For adjustment of share capital, borrowing powers, and mortgage debt, conversion of share capital into stock, scale of voting, creation of new shares for payment of debt, powers to run over the Wrexham and Minschcham Junction and Chester and Holyhead Railways, and for consolidation and repeal of Acts.

Shrewsbury and Birmingham and Shrewsbury and Chester Railways.—For their amalgamation.

Cork and Bandon Railway.—For extension to Bantry and branches to Clonakilty and Skibbereen and at Albert Quay; power to raise further capital and guarantee by county of Cork and baronies. Estimated cost, 328,954*l.*

Aberdeen, Banffshire, and Peterhead Railway.—(No. 1 Bill.)

Caledonian and Greenock and Glasgow Railways.—To authorise the joint working and management of the two undertakings.

Aberdeen Railway.—For sale or lease to Glasgow and South-Western.

Hammersmith and Richmond Grand Junction Railway.—For construction at an estimated cost of 80,000*l.*

Tynemouth Docks and Morpeth and Shields Direct Railway.

The general Bills passed were:—Bangor Waterworks (cost, 6,000*l.*); Irwell Valley Waterworks; Teignmouth Harbour and River Teign Navigation; Bristol and Clifton Gas-light Amalgamation; Bristol Gas-light Company (increase of capital and extension of limits); Ropendale and Bacup Waterworks; Swaffham Drainage. The Hamilton Waterworks Bill was withdrawn.

Tuesday, Feb. 8.

Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax Junction.—For branches to town of Bradford and coal fields at Deighlington; working arrangements with Great Northern and Lancashire and Yorkshire. Estimated cost, 180,000*l.*

Leamington, Warwick, and Stratford-on-Avon Railway.—For incorporation of company, power to make railways, and enter into arrangements with London and North-Western—at an estimated cost of 148,000*l.*

London and North-Western Railway.—For branch from Northampton to Market Harborough—at an estimated cost of 250,000*l.*

Great Northern Railway.—For Bedford branch. Estimated cost, 110,000*l.*

London and Mid-Western Railway.—The standing orders were declared not complied with in the case of this line, on the ground of errors in books of reference, and on validity of subscription contract. The estimated cost of the line is 1,000,000*l.*

PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and made, during the past week.]

Punant and Crainpeen Consolidated Lead Mining Company.—Call of 1*l.* per share on all the contributories, on Feb. 16.—Tinney.

Wheal Providence Mining Company.—Call of 7*s.* per share on all the contributories, on Feb. 24.—Blunt.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

Equity Practice.—An unusual number of practice cases were decided last week. We note the most important of them here, that the busy reader's attention may be directed to them without the trouble of reading the reports.

The Attorney-General v. Wyggeston Hospital, 20 L. T. Rep. 230, was curious. The Attorney-General appeared and stated that the petition in this case had been presented in his name without his knowledge and consent, and he moved for its dismissal. The petitioner objected that consent was not necessary—that the use of his name was merely a matter of form. But the Lord Chancellor held it to be otherwise, and granted the application.

The M. R. stated, in Roby v. Scholes, 20 L. T. Rep. 231, that before a committal for contempt for not obeying an order of the Court, there must be an order nisi to do the act in the time; or, if not, then an order to commit may be moved. An endeavour must be made to serve this four-day order, and if that cannot be done, application might be made for substituted service. In Gordon v. Jesson, 20 L. T. Rep. 231, he said that an order for the substitution of a new assignee, on the death of an official assignee before answer, may be obtained as of course. In Chaffers v. Headlam, 20 L. T. Rep. 231, it was held that where a deceased debtor's estate was insufficient to pay the creditors under the deed, and no person could be found to undertake the representation of it, the suit might, under sect. 44 of cap. 86, be prosecuted without any such personal representative.

In Forbes v. Forbes, 10 L. T. Rep. 232, an order, obtained for the further examination of witnesses out of the jurisdiction, was held not to be irregular because it was restricted by the words "not before examined on the same subject-matter."

The question whether, under the new Evidence Act, a defendant can be compelled by the plaintiff to give evidence, was decided by V. C. Wood in the affirmative, although we cannot conceive what reasonable doubt could be entertained of the meaning of words so plain as those used in the second section of the Evidence Act, which enacts that all persons shall be competent and compellable to give evidence, &c. (Hayland v. Rees, 20 L. T. Rep. 232.)

Common Law.—Upon the new Procedure Act a question has arisen as to amendment of an indorsement on a pluries summons. The original writ was tested Oct. 13, 1849, and was regularly continued till May 23, 1851, when a pluries writ was issued and served. The indorsement of the date of the first writ on the pluries served was by mistake the 22nd Oct. instead of the 13th Oct. Defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations, whereupon plaintiff applied to amend the indorsement on the pluries and copy served. The Q. B. allowed the amendment of the writ, but not of the copy. Upon the effect of this Lord Campbell observed, "As at present advised, I think that the defendant will in vain at the trial attempt to show that this amendment is a forgery, or to show as a defence what has been erased by this rule from the writ; for the amendment we make will show what was the original date of the first writ:" (Cornish v. Hockings, 20 L. T. Rep. 234.) It was laid down in Crouch v. The London and North Western Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 238, to be necessary, on obtaining leave to plead several matters, that an affidavit should be made by the party or his attorney in accordance with sect. 81, to the effect that he is advised and believes that he has just grounds to traverse the several matters proposed to be traversed by him, and that the several matters sought to be pleaded by way of confession and avoidance are respectively true in substance and in fact.

To obtain an execution in less than fourteen days an application must now be made to the judge, stating special circumstances, supported by affidavit: (Sirrel v. Camper, 20 L. T. Rep. 240.)

The rule, allowing the costs of residence in this country of a seafaring man who is a material witness in a cause, is applicable to parties when necessary witnesses. Thus, where a man had engaged a berth for Australia and paid his passage-money, and through a mistake of the clerk it was not credited, and he was turned out of the ship, for which he brought an action, and was detained here till the trial, when he recovered damages, he was held to be entitled to his costs of residence: (Ansett v. Marshall, 20 L. T. Rep. 240.)

In Sheriffs' Law we have two decisions in the same case of Dalloway v. Taylor, 20 L. T. Rep. 238. A writ of distringas was received by the sheriff, who sent a warrant to his officer by post. The warrant was lost, and the plaintiff delayed. The sheriff was held to be liable for the expenses thereby occasioned.—The sheriff seized under a fi. fa. Before removal of the goods an interpleader order was obtained. In such circumstances the sheriff ought not to pay the rent due to the landlord. Jervis, C. J. observed: "This matter cannot be affected by the Interpleader Act, which does not propose to deal with the claim of the landlord under the stat. of Anne, and that stat. was only intended to apply to cases where the landlord has lost his chances of distraining on the goods by their removal."

Queries on Points of Practice.

Will any of your readers be so good as to give me some information on the following question in your next number? Is it possible, after having served under articles here, to be admitted as a solicitor in Sydney? In a book written by Mr. Justice Stephen, entitled Constitutions of the Supreme Court in Sydney, 1843-5, at page 72, you will see who are eligible for admission; and among such are mentioned those who have been articled and served the full term of five years here. The point is whether or no that has been altered since 1843-5.

Montague R. Tootal.

Can any reader refer me to any book giving directions as to the best mode of arranging and keeping attorneys' papers?

Thomas Southall.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

A plaint was tried before the judge without a jury, and judgment given for the defendant. Subsequently a new trial was granted. Has either party a right to demand a jury on the second trial, although there was not one on the first? Erle, J., in the B. C., has held that he may; that the right to have a jury is absolute. This is a very important and useful decision; for now, when dissatisfied with the judge, there will be in fact an appeal to a jury. On the other hand, there is danger of litigious suitors trying double shots; but the protection against this is in the power vested in the judge of granting or refusing new trial: (Nutting v. Nutting, 20 L. T. Rep. 239.)

There is also a case in Insolvency. An insolvent was adjudged to be entitled to the benefit of the Act, but to be detained in custody as to the debt of A. for twenty months. Whilst in custody, it was agreed between the creditor and the insolvent that he should be discharged on giving a warrant of attorney for payment of the debt by instalments; the warrant was given and the insolvent liberated. The warrant so given was held to be void, and ordered to be set aside: (Ex parte Smith, 20 L. T. Rep. 239.)

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

The liability of a surety under peculiar circumstances was decided by the Lords Justices in Jones v. Beach, 20 L. T. Rep. 230. Application was made to a surety for a joint and several note, in lieu of one then due, on which he was only jointly liable with his principal. In reply he said that he would send the amount and interest due on the joint security in a post or two. Had he thereby rendered himself severally liable? The Lords Justices invited the assistance of Maule, J. who stated his opinion to be that at law this letter did not amount to an acceptance of a new contract. The first letter contained an offer, but the second did not accept it.

How far a master is liable for the negligence of his servant has been of late a much litigated question. In Mitchell v. Crasweller, 20 L. T. Rep. 237, it was held by the C. B. that he is not liable unless the servant was at the time actually engaged in the business of the master. Therefore, where one of those pests of the London streets, the butcher's carts, ran over a woman through furious driving, and it was proved that the servant had gone out of his way, and was carrying another person home in the cart, contrary to orders, it was held that the master was not liable.

In Bankruptcy one case is to be noted. Under sect. 125, authorising the sale of goods in the possession of the bankrupt as reputed owner, with the consent of the true owner, it was held that the order of the Commissioner for this purpose must be so worded as to show what goods are to be so disposed of by the assignees. The case is valuable, as pointing out very minutely what are the duties of the Commissioner where such a question arises: (Quartermaine v. Billestone, 20 L. T. Rep. 236.)

Masters and Servants.—An action (King v. Pearce) was brought in the Sheriff's Court to recover damages for the injury occasioned by a collision between the cart of the plaintiff and the van of the defendant. The plaintiff, in stating his case, said that the accident occurred in consequence of the wilful and wanton misconduct of the servant of the defendant. His Honour.—If you prove that the accident occurred through the wilful and wanton conduct of the servant you prove too much; for a master is only liable for the negligence of his servant, not for wilful misconduct. As mere negligence was proved, the plaintiff recovered 6*l.* damages.

COURT PAPERS.

Privy Council.

Balfour and others, apps., Watt and others, resps.—Jamaica.
Pollok and others, apps., Bradbury, resp.—Canada
Murrow, app., Stuart, resp.—Hongkong
Parlar, app., Lane, resp.—Prerogative Court
Jenkins, app., Heycock, resp.—Bengal
Rainy, app., Justices of Sierra Leone, resps.—Sierra Leone
Nash's Petition for extension of patent for "Improvements in Construction of Roofs," &c.
Heath's Petition for extension of patent for "Improvements in the Manufacture of Iron and Steel."

Equity Courts.

SITTINGS AFTER HILARY TERM, 1853, AT LINCOLN'S-INN.

Lord Chancellor's Court.

(Before the Lord Chancellor and Lords Justices.)

Tuesday	Feb. 8	First Seal, Appeal Motions
Wednesday	9	Petitions in Lunacy and Appeals
Thursday	10	Appeals
Friday	11	Petns. in Bankruptcy and Appeal Petns.
Saturday	12	Appeals
Monday	14	Ditto
Tuesday	15	Ditto
Wednesday	16	Petitions in Lunacy and Appeals
Thursday	17	Appeals
Friday	18	Petns. in Bankruptcy and Appeal Petns.
Saturday	19	Appeals
Monday	21	Ditto
Tuesday	22	Second Seal, Appeal Motions
Wednesday	23	Petitions in Lunacy and Appeals
Thursday	24	Appeals
Friday	25	Petns. in Bankruptcy and Appeal Petns.
Saturday	26	Appeals
Monday	28	Ditto

Tuesday....Mar. 1 Appeals
Wednesday .... 2 Petitions in Lunacy and Appeals
Thursday ..... 3 Appeals
Friday ..... 4 Petns. in Bankruptcy and Appeal Petns.
Saturday ..... 5 Appeals
Monday ..... 7 Ditto
Tuesday ..... 8 Third Seal, Appeal Motions
Wednesday .... 9 Petitions in Lunacy and Appeals
Thursday .....10 Appeals
Friday .....11 Petns. in Bankruptcy and Appeal Petns.
Saturday .....12 Appeals
Monday .....14 Ditto
Tuesday .....15 Ditto
Wednesday .....16 Petitions in Lunacy and Appeals
Thursday .....17 Appeals
Friday .....18 Fourth Seal, Appeal Motions
Saturday .....19 Petns. in Bankruptcy and Appeal Petns.

N.B. During these sittings the Court will be formed by the Lords Justices alone upon the days on which the Lord Chancellor shall be engaged in the House of Lords.

The Lord Chancellor and the Lords Justices will also occasionally sit in distinct courts; notice will be given of the days.

Vice-Chancellor Kindersley's Court.

Tuesday ... Feb. 8 First Seal, Motions and three causes
Wednesday ..... 9 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Thursday .....10 Ditto
Friday .....11 Petitions (unopposed first)
Saturday .....12 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Monday .....14 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday .....15 Ditto
Wednesday .....16 Ditto
Thursday .....17 Ditto
Friday .....18 Petitions (unopposed first)
Saturday .....19 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Monday .....21 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday .....22 Second Seal, Motions
Wednesday ....23 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Thursday .....24 Ditto
Friday .....25 Petitions (unopposed first)
Saturday .....26 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Monday .....28 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday....Mar. 1 Ditto
Wednesday .... 2 Ditto
Thursday ..... 3 Ditto
Friday ..... 4 Petitions (unopposed first)
Saturday ..... 5 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen Paper
Monday ..... 7 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday ..... 8 Third Seal, Motions
Wednesday .... 9 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Thursday .....10 Ditto
Friday .....11 Petitions (unopposed first)
Saturday .....12 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Monday .....14 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday .....15 Ditto
Wednesday ....16 Ditto
Thursday .....17 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Friday .....18 Fourth Seal, Motions
Saturday .....19 Petitions

N.B. — Unopposed Petitions, not exceeding ten, at the sitting of the court every day (except seal-day.)

Vice-Chancellor Stuart's Court.

Tuesday....Feb. 8 First Seal, Motions
Wednesday .... 9 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Thursday .....10 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Friday .....11 Ditto
Saturday .....12 Petitions (unopposed first)
Monday .....14 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday .....15 Ditto
Wednesday ....16 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Thursday .....17 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Friday .....18 Ditto
Saturday .....19 Petitions (unopposed first)
Monday .....21 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday .....22 Second Seal, Motions
Wednesday ....23 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Thursday .....24 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Friday .....25 Ditto
Saturday .....26 Petitions (unopposed first)
Monday .....28 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday ..Mar. 1 Ditto
Wednesday .... 2 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Thursday ..... 3 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Friday ..... 4 Ditto
Saturday ..... 5 Petitions (unopposed first)
Monday ..... 7 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday ..... 8 Third Seal, Motions
Wednesday .... 9 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Thursday .....10 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Friday .....11 Ditto
Saturday .....12 Petitions (unopposed first)
Monday .....14 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Tuesday .....15 Ditto
Wednesday ....16 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Thursday .....17 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Friday .....18 Fourth Seal, Motions
Saturday .....19 Petitions.

Vice-Chancellor Wood's Court.

Tuesday ..Feb. 8 First Seal, Motions and Claims
Wednesday .... 9 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Thursday .....10 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Friday .....11 Petitions (unoppo. first) and Gen. Paper
Saturday .....12 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Monday .....14 Ditto
Tuesday .....15 Ditto
Wednesday .....16 Ditto
Thursday .....17 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Friday .....18 Petitions (unoppo. first) and Gen. Paper
Saturday .....19 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Monday .....21 Ditto
Tuesday .....22 Second Seal, Motions and Claims
Wednesday ....23 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Thursday .....24 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Friday .....25 Petitions (unoppo. first) and Gen. Paper
Saturday .....26 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Monday .....28 Ditto
Tuesday....Mar. 1 Ditto
Wednesday .... 2 Ditto
Thursday ..... 3 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Friday ..... 4 Petitions (unoppo. first) and Gen. Paper
Saturday ..... 5 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Monday ..... 7 Ditto
Tuesday ..... 8 Third Seal, Motions and Claims
Wednesday .... 9 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Directions
Thursday .....10 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Friday .....11 Petitions (unoppo. first) and Gen. Paper
Saturday .....12 Pleas, Demurrers, Exceptions, Claims, Causes, and further Exceptions
Monday .....14 Ditto
Tuesday .....15 Ditto
Wednesday ....16 Ditto
Thursday .....17 Short Causes, Short Clms. and Gen. Paper
Friday .....18 Fourth Seal, Motions and Claims
Saturday .....19 Petitions.

THE EQUITY JUDGES AT CHAMBERS.

The following applications are to be made at the Judges' Chambers.

1. As to guardianship of infants (except the appointment of guardian ad litem.)
2. As to maintenance or advancement of infants.
3. For the administration of estates under the Act of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86.
4. For time to plead answer or demur.
5. For leave to amend bills or claims.
6. For enlarging publication or the time for closing evidence.
7. For the production of documents.
8. Relating to the conduct of suits or matters.
9. As to matters connected with the management of property.
10. For payment into court of purchasers' moneys under sales by order of the court, and investing same.
11. For stop orders where the assignor and assignee concur.

Common Law Courts.

Date of Writ.—It is recommended by the judges that attorneys should in all cases insert at the commencement of the pleadings in the briefs the date of issuing the original writ of summons.

ATTORNIES ADMITTED.

Hilary Term, 1853.

Appleton, Henry—J. P. Sowerby
Aspinall, Clarke—J. Collinson; R. Radcliffe
Ayre, Charles Edward—W. Ayre, jun.; W. Sanger
Bell, John Leonard—W. D. Bell
Binson, John—G. B. Carter
Breeze, Robert—J. Newbold; E. W. Field
Broad, Joseph—W. Cooper
Bunting, John—J. B. Simpson; R. Parsons
Clark, Frederick—E. E. Clark
Durant, Benjamin Chandler, B.A.—T. Durant; B. Chandler, jun.
Edge, James Henry—J. Atkinson.
Evans, Asa Johnes—J. Smith
Freeman, Charles Edwards—H. Abbot
Girdlestone, James—J. Harward
Groves, Thomas George—J. Leman
Hampson, Francis—J. Hampson
Hannay, William—W. Enfield
Hodgson, James Leyland—T. Dodge; A. L. Hardman
Kaye, George Edward—C. Kaye
Keays, Frederick—R. Fisher
Kough, Samuel Harley—T. H. Kough
Last, Frederick—A. C. Veley; I. Last; H. Last
M'Clure, Edward Wade—E. Lewis; A. M'Clure; J. Remer
Marett, Edmund Rouse—W. Clarke
Markby, Henry—Crabtree and Cross
Matthews, John Williams—A. Booker
Naters, Henry Trewhitt—G. W. Wright; F. Turner
Neate, Albert—J. Neate
Nisbet, Henry Curtis—A. Bell
Payne, John Brown—A. Oliver
Plummer, William, jun.—S. Plummer
Pollock, Alfred Atkinson—P. R. Alderson; P. J. T. Pearse; P. J. T. Pearse, jun.
Proud, John, jun.—H. J. Marshall
Ram, Stephen Adye—J. Inglis
Rhodes, Abraham—S. W. Johnson
Roberts, Samuel, M.A.—R. Mason
Sanger, John Hill Melton—R. Wreford; J. N. Wilson
Senior, Frederick Bernard—W. Chapman
Sheppard, Augustus Frederick—W. Parsons; J. King
Smith, Job Orton—P. Richardson
Snowball, George—G. W. Wright
Stiffe, Francis William Everitt—A. Cox
Thomas, Richard Aubrey—G. Thomas, jun.
Turner, George—W. H. Turner
Walter, Charles—J. Johnston, W. Walter, sen.
Whitefield, John Charles—W. Gresham; W. B. Cooper; G. W. Whitaker; W. Bartholomew; W. Bevan
Williams, Ebenezer Robins—R. Gillam, sen.; I. O. Jones; R. Gillam, jun.
Winearls—William Good—W. Rackham
Wright, Egerton Leigh—R. Bloxam; R. Darlington; T. F. Taylor.—Legal Observer

Circuit Paper for the Spring Assises, 1853.

The following is the Circuit Paper for the Spring Assises, 1853, as finally settled by the judges:—

NORFOLK CIRCUIT.

(Before Lord Campbell and Lord Chief Baron Pollock.)

Assize Town.	Last day for full Notice of Trial.	Commission Day.
Aylesbury	Feb. 16	Feb. 28
Bedford	Feb. 21	March 3
Huntingdon	Feb. 25	March 7
Cambridge	Feb. 26	March 9
Norwich and City	March 4	March 14
Bury St. Edmonds	March 10	March 19

MIDLAND CIRCUIT.

(Before Lord Chief Justice Jervis and Mr. Baron Parke.)

Oakham	Feb. 11	Feb. 21
Northampton	Feb. 12	Feb. 22
Lincoln and City	Feb. 16	Feb. 26
Nottingham and Town	Feb. 21	March 3
Derby	Feb. 26	March 8
Leicester and Borough	March 2	March 12
Coventry	March 8	March 18
Warwick	March 10	March 19

HOME CIRCUIT.

(Before Mr. Baron Alderson and Mr. Justice Coleridge.)

Hertford	Feb. 14	Feb. 24
Chelmsford	Feb. 18	Feb. 28
Maidstone	Feb. 25	March 7
Lewes	March 4	March 14
Kingston	March 7	March 17

NORTH WALES CIRCUIT.

(Before Mr. Justice Maule.)

Welchpool	March 4	March 14
Bala	March 7	March 17
Carnarvon	March 10	March 19
Beaumaris	March 12	March 23
Ruthin	March 16	March 26
Mold	March 19	March 30
Chester	March 23	April 2

SOUTH WALES CIRCUIT.

(Before Mr. Justice Wightman.)

Swansea	Feb. 19	March 2
Haverfordwest and Town	Feb. 26	March 9
Cardigan	March 4	March 14
Carmarthen	March 8	March 18
Brecon	March 14	March 24
Presteign	March 19	March 30
Chester	March 23	April 2

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.

(Before Mr. Justice Creswell and Mr. Baron Martin.)

Lancaster	Feb. 7	Feb. 17
Appleby	Feb. 11	Feb. 21
Carlisle	Feb. 12	Feb. 23
Newcastle and Town	Feb. 16	Feb. 26
Durham	Feb. 19	March 2
York and City	Feb. 26	March 8
Liverpool	March 12	March 22

WESTERN CIRCUIT.

(Before Mr. Justice Erle and Mr. Justice Crompton.)

Winchester	Feb. 16	Feb. 26
Salisbury	Feb. 28	March 5
Dorchester	Feb. 28	March 10
Exeter and City	March 2	March 12
Bodmin	March 10	March 19
Taunton	March 16	March 26

OXFORD CIRCUIT.

(Before Mr. Justice Williams and Mr. Justice Talfourd.)

Reading	Feb. 18	Feb. 28
Oxford	Feb. 21	March 3
Worcester and City	Feb. 26	March 8
Stafford	March 2	March 12
Shrewsbury	March 11	March 21
Hereford	March 14	March 24
Monmouth	March 19	March 29
Gloucester and City	March 23	April 2

Mr. Baron Platt will remain in town for chamber business.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

RESULT OF THE HILARY TERM EXAMINATION OF ATTORNEYS.

The number of candidates entitled to be examined in the last term, was
Of these twenty-three did not perfect their testimonials of service		23
Leaving therefore to be examined only		62
One of these did not attend, and two withdrew during the examination		3
Ten were not passed		10
		13
The number entitled to be admitted on the Roll, therefore, was reduced to		49

—Legal Observer.

Lord Campbell has made the rule for a new trial, in the case of Constant Derra de Morada v. Dawson and others, absolute; so that the famous Von Beck case will again come before the public.

INDEX TO POINTS REPORTED DURING THE LAST NINE WEEKS.

(From No. 506 to 514, and p. 117 to p. 240 inclusive.)

ADMINISTRATION—relating back to death of intestate, 225

ADMINISTRATION ACTS—protection of justices under, 233

ANNUITY—distinction between bequests of perpetual and life annuities, 180; recovery of arrears of, when secured by a term of years, 171

APPOINTMENT—what is a valid, 193

ATTORNEY AND SOLICITOR—what a solicitor is a scrivener, 186; fraudulent dealings of, with client's property, 188; striking off the rolls, 190; costs ordered to be paid for neglect, 205; sufficiency of signed bill, name of court in which business done, 205; privileged communication, 206; confirmation of voidable estate bought by solicitor from his client, 213; clerk to justices conducting prosecutions as, 222; appearance by, 233

BAIL—in murder, 125, 227, 239

BANKERS—
authority of, to pay bill accepted, payable at their bank, 181

BANKING COMPANY—
See Joint-stock Company.

BANKRUPTCY—
refusal of certificate for misconduct as a trader, 121; certificate under arrangement clauses is no defence against creditors without notice, 132; proof against joint estate, 143; covenant to pay a sum, right to prove for, 149; affidavit sworn abroad, 150; whether solicitor had acted as scrivener, trading, 186; petition to disallow certificate, costs of, 187; relation from date of order to the time of act of bankruptcy, title of assignees by, 191; costs between trustee and cestui que trust, 214; goods in order and disposition of bankrupt, 236; orders of commissioner, 236

BASTARDY—
settlement of bastard after age of sixteen, 221

BILL OF EXCHANGE—acceptance otherwise than in usual style of firm, 142; authority of bankers to pay bill accepted and payable at their bank, 181

BUILDING SOCIETY—redemption of mortgage to, 158

CARRIER—liability of shipowner as, 178; contract to carry, right of owner to countermand, 225

CHARITY—appointment of new trustees, 186

CHARTER PARTY—usual and customar yterms—right to sue, 210

CHURCHWARDEN—is also overseer, 131

COMMERCIAL LAW—usage of trade, 126

COMMITMENT—for nonpayment of poor-rate, 207

CONTEMPT—
of Court of Chancery not a criminal offence, 240

CONTRACT—
not liable for injury done by sub-contractor, 208; by direction of railway company, 224

CONSOLIDATION ACTS—right of railway company to deviate, 128; investment of purchase-money, 136; taking land for extraordinary purposes by railway company, 148; liability for calls—who is a subscriber and member of a company, 210

CONVICTION, SUMMARY—jurisdiction of justices in, 239

COPYRIGHT—registration of, under Copyright Act, 198; under Designs Act the letters "Rd." to be on pattern pieces, 207

CORPORATION—courts will not recognise rights of member apart from those of corporation itself, 117

COSTS—
of foreclosure suit, 176; ordered to be paid by solicitor, 205; taxation of, on an indictment for libel, 212; in quo warranto, 235; party remaining in this country as a witness entitled to, 240

COUNSEL—
appearance by, 233

COUNTY COURTS—
usage of trade, 126; fees received by clerk of court at sessions, 140; practice in interpleader—evidence in reply, 211; discretion of judge, 211; jurisdiction over an agreement in Liverpool to deliver a cargo at Drogheda, 218; jurisdiction of, in a legacy, 233; duty of judge when he doubts jurisdiction, 233

COVENANT—
to pay sum of money—breach of contract, 149; not to sue on a composition deed, 201; covenant in lease against waste does not preclude action on the case, 223

CRIMINAL LAW—
bail in murder, 125, 227, 239; larceny of property left in a railway carriage, 182; order for delivery to prisoner of money found on his person, 182; taxation of costs on indictment for libel, 212; procuring indecent prints with intent to sell, 219; larceny of goods first taken by mistake, 228

DEBTOR AND CREDITOR—covenant in composition deed not to sue, release, 201

DEMISE—
See Lease, Landlord and Tenant.

DESIGN, COPYRIGHT OF—See Copyright.

DETINUE—
pleading payment into court, 141

DIVORCE—
international law, 146; decree a mensa et thoro in England, no bar to divorce a vinculo in Scotland, 145

DOCUMENTS, INSPECTION OF—See Inspection of Documents.

DOMICILE—
marriage by a Scotchman with a domiciled Englishwoman, 144

DUEL—bail refused, 125

EJECTMENT—
evidence in, 181

ELECTION LAW—sufficiency of notice of objection, 127; form of recognisance on petition, alteration in, 156, 157

EVIDENCE—
examination of defendant viva voce, 136; discrediting witness, 150; examination of witnesses de bene esse, 152, 156; husband and wife, 152; pedigree, prima facie title ex parte materna, 181; deposition of witness in one action used in another, 181; secondary evidence of contents of deed, 181; extracts from parish register, incumbent's signature, 187; mortgagee not obliged to produce title-deeds, 197; the fact of tenancy may be proved by parol, 208; where title-deed withheld, duty of judge, 208; plaintiff may compel defendant in equity to be examined, 232

EXECUTION—
priority of writs of, 212; speedy, when and how granted, 240

EXECUTOR—
grant of probate to substituted executor, 142; is entitled to a release under seal, 178

FORECLOSURE—
See Mortgage.

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF—no objection to specific performance of a contract, 135

GUARDIAN—undue influence over ward, 203

HABEAS CORPUS—illegal restraint of deaf and dumb boy, 183; right of father to custody of infant, 212; contempt of Court of Chancery not a criminal offence, 240

HEALTH OF TOWNS ACT—
clerk to board, appointment of—appropriation of funds, 151.

HUSBAND AND WIFE—
deed of separation, 118; separate use, 136; bequest to a third person, 162; how far wife may exert her authority over testamentary disposition of her husband, 183

INDECENCY—procuring indecent prints with intent to sell, 219

INDIA—decree in suit in, 204

INJUNCTION—to restrain covenant in deed of separation, 122; substituted service of bill, 123; dismissal of bill for want of prosecution, 176; against infringement of copyright, 198

INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS—right of tenant in possession to inspect lease, 126; a co-defendant cannot attend, 140; mortgagee not obliged to produce title-deeds, 197; where not in absolute possession of defendants, refused, 200; order for, not rescinded, 207

INSOLVENCY—plea of, and that debt had accrued after order and before discharge, 129; statement of residence in petition, 143; attestation of petition, 143; naval and military pay, 144; allocation of pension from the Crown, 144; rejected ownership, distress by landlord, 144; discharge from custody before hearing, 144; costs of ad interim assignee, 144; completing jurisdiction, double proceedings, 156; nonpayment of instalments after discharge, 156; allowance for support of insolvent in prison, 179; description in petition, 179; protecting order and discharge by mistake, 179; debts in schedule contracted in trade, 180, 199; parting with property within three months, 180; fraud, breach of trust, condonation, 198; new security for old debt, 239

JOINT STOCK COMPANY—fraudulent abstracts of directors not binding, 157; what are losses, 157; who is a member of the company and liable for calls under Company's Clauses Act, 210; contract by director of, 234; shares in banking company not real estate, 229

JURISDICTION—
Scotch courts, 150; of Vice-Chancellor to appoint new trustees of corporation charities, 166; of judge in taxation of costs on an indictment for libel, 212; of justices and town council as to appointment and salary of keeper of borough gaol, 234; of justices to hear and decide, 239

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE—clerk to, conducting prosecutions as an attorney, 222; protection of, 233; jurisdiction of, 239

LANDLORD AND TENANT—right of tenant in possession to inspect lease, 126; fact of tenancy may be proved by parol, 208; waiver of notice to quit by demand of rent, 209; action for waste will be by lessee, 223; ejectment by landlord for non-payment of rent, 226

LIEN—discharge of vendor's, 197

LARCENY—of goods left in a railway carriage, 182; of goods first taken by mistake, 228

LEASE—
right of cestui que trust in, 171; what passes by demise of all in occupation under a lease, 175; compulsory purchase, 176

LEGACY DUTY—
when payable upon annuity, 130

LIBEL—
taxation of costs of indictment, jurisdiction of judge, 212

LIMITATIONS (STATUTE OF)— claim under a will, 123

LOCAL ACTS—construction of, 124

LUNATIC PAUPER—order of removal to asylum by officiating clergyman and relieving officer, costs of, 219; estoppel on second order of maintenance, 236

MANDAMUS—service of writ by copy of original, 190

MARITIME LAW—
liability of shipowner as carrier, 178; usual customary terms of charter party, 210; stranding, what is, 221. See Ship.

MARRIAGE—
of Scotchman with a domiciled Englishwoman, 141; divorce, international law, domicile, 145; notice of objection to burgess list, 234

MASTER AND SERVANT—liability of master for negligence of servant, 237

MISDEMEANOUR
procuring indecent prints with intent to sell, 219

MORTGAGE—
not a disposition of estate beyond the charge, 118; effect of judgment on, 153; laws of Demerara as to, 165; sale under new Chancery Act, 176, 188; disclaimer and costs in foreclosure suit, 176; mortgagee not obliged to produce title-deeds, 197; in foreclosure, representation of infant cestui que trust, 202, 203; vesting of mortgaged estates, 203; mortgagee of turnpike tolls, ejectment by, 206; rights of cestui que trust of mortgage debt against a purchaser, 216; stamp on mortgage deed, 218

MORTMAIN ACT—
shares in banking company not within, 229

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—signing burgess list by churchwarden as overseer, 131; clerk to justices conducting prosecutions as an attorney, 222; regulation of gaols, jurisdiction as to salary of keeper, 234

NONSUIT—
effect of, 180

NEGLIGENCE—damages for injury done by negligently leaving open a hole, 212; liability of boarding-house keeper for loss of lodger's goods, 213; liability of master for negligence of servant, 237

PARENT AND CHILD—illegal restraint of a deaf and dumb boy, when court will deliver to father, 183; right of father to custody of infant, 212

PARTNERSHIP—
nonliability of assets upon acceptance for private debt of partner, 142

PATENT—
plea in an action for infringement of, 226; inspection in a second action refused, 227

PLEADING—in detinue, 141; defendant may plead and demur together, 191; infringement of patent, 226; replication to plea of statute—amendment, 226; order to amend on payment of costs, 227; several matters under Procedure Act, 238

POOR LAW—
settlement of bastard after age of sixteen, 221

POOR RATE—commitment for non-payment of, 207; market tolls not rateable, 219; stallage is rateable, 219

POWER—defective execution of, 136

PRACTICE—
Equity. Improvement Act.—Assignment of guardian without commission, 122; stamping written copy, 122; substituted service of bill, 123; proceedings by claim, 124; examination of defendant, 136; certificate of conveyancing counsel, 136; examination before Master, 136; affidavits on showing cause against dissolving injunction, 140; administration suits, 140; inspection of documents, 140; inquiries at chambers, 151; alteration of order, 152; examination of witnesses de bene esse, 152; service copy bill, 154; appointment of examiner, 154; printed indorsement may be altered, 154; a petition is within 53rd sect. 154; delivery of interrogatories, 174; examiner abroad, appointment of, 189; service of decree or order, 189; order to examine witnesses, 189; service of defendant with subpœna to give evidence, 189; filing copy petition, 190; order to effect of usual supplemental decree, 190; Act not retrospective, 200; examination of witnesses de bene esse, 202; foreclosure—representative trustee, 202, 203; indorsement on bill or claim, 204; sale of mortgaged property, 205; filing replication, 205; service notice of replication, 214; stop orders, 216; personal representative, 216; reference to accountants or persons of science, 217; trustees of a settlement parties, 217; binding declaration, 218; hearing of appeal, 230; old and new rules to orders nisi, substituted service, 231; substitution of new assignee, 231; personal representative, 231; further examination of witnesses, 232; cost of reference of title, 123; appointment of receiver, 124, 136; change of name of attorney, 136; exceptions for insufficiency, 151; lost document, 154; claim for specific performance, 194; answer by imbecile party, 197; production of documents by mortgagee, 197; dismissal of bill where trustees are parties, 204; decree in suit in India, 204; costs ordered to be paid by solicitor, 205; depositions received without examing signature, 205; payment out of court to attorney, 210; injunction on bill of discovery for want of answer, 231

Common Law.—New rules, remarks on, 190; service of writ of mandamus by copy of original, 190; defendant may plead and demur together, 191; new trial on ground of surprise, 208; issuing speedy execution, 212; sect. 128 applies to judgments more than a year and day old, 225; form of affidavit on judgment by default in ejectment, 226; setting down case for argument, 226; replication to plea of Statute of Limitations, amendment, 226; order to amend on payment of costs, 227; notice to proceed to trial, 228; amending indorsement on pluries summons, 234; practice and costs in quo warranto, 235; distringas how sent, 238; duty of sheriff in interpleader, 238; pleading several matters, 238; motion to set aside rule to proceed, 239

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY—undue influence over surety, 203

QUARTER SESSIONS—duties of clerk of peace in second court as to receipt of fines, 140

QUO WARRANTO—practice and costs in, 235

RAILWAY—contract for purchase of land during pendency of a bill, abandonment of scheme, 117; right of, to deviate from line, 128; purchase of land from tenant for life, 148; obligation to complete line, 166, 169; dividends of money paid into court by, 176

RATING—liability to paying rate, 124; market tolls, 219; stallage, 219

RECEIVER—occupation rent, 136

RECOVERY—
effect of, 118

REVERSION—inadequacy of value given for purchase of, 172

SETTLEMENT, MARRIAGE—construction of, 118, 164; binding effect of a voluntary declaration of trust by a feme sole, 164

SETTLEMENT, POOR—See Poor Law.

SHERIFF—
priority of writs of execution, 212; when warrant of distringas lost, 238; in interpleader not to pay rent to landlord, 238

SHIPS—
stranding, what is, 221. See Maritime Law.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE—case of, 130; statute of frauds, 138; lease for term, time the essence of contract, 174; claim properly filed for, 194; time the essence of the contract, 214

STAMPS—
on partition deed, 125; on mortgage deed, 218

TITHES—merger of, apportionment, 130

TROVER—evidence of conversion, 178

TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES—construction of power to appoint, breach of trust, 123; vesting order under Trustee Act, 153; service of petition on, 154; appointment of new, 178; not entitled to a release under seal, 178; rights of cestui que trust of mortgage-debt against a purchaser, 216

TURNPIKE—
ejectment by mortgagee of tolls, 206

VENDOR AND PURCHASER—costs of reference of title, 123; apportionment of purchase-money by purchaser, 164; inadequacy of value of reversionary interest, 172; time the essence of contract, 174, 215; abandonment of contract, 174; compulsory purchase of leaseholds, 176; devisable interest under contract for sale, 177; decree to carry into effect specific performance, 194; right to abstract of title, 194; fraud, lien, notice, 197; duty of purchaser as to purchase-money, 216; notice of lis pendens, 216

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES—contract not within the Act, 211

WILL—
construction of, 133, 138, 139, 152, 162, 165, 170, 173, 192, 213, 217; claim under, not barred by Statute of Limitations, 123; Thellusson Act, portions, 133, 138; tenancy in tail, 139; contribution for payment of debts, 152; issue, 153; "effects real or personal," 153; legacy, 153; perpetual and life annuities, 160; tenancy by entireties, devise to husband and wife and third person, 162; gift of dividends of stock, life interest, enjoyment in specie, 162; reputed wife not entitled to legacy, 165; conversion of real and personal estate, 170; annuities secured by a term of years, 171; what constitutes gift to children by implication 173; devisable interest under a contract for sale, 177; influence of wife over husband's will, 183; appointment, 193; voidable estate, confirmation of, by devise, 213; admission of parol evidence to explain misnomer and misdescription, 217

WINDING UP—
Contributory—provisional committeeman, 123; conditional deposit on shares, 140; legatee of shares, 196; executors, 196; where a change had been made in the scheme, 197

Practice—Appeals from the Master's decisions, 217.

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

THE LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY. As a means of legal education, debating societies, if strictly limited to subjects either directly or collaterally legal, are of the highest possible value. The importance of fluent, yet accurate, speech, conciseness of logic, and that self-possession which enables a man to address large bodies calmly and collectedly, is daily increasing to the lower branch of the profession; and we receive with great pleasure the most promising accounts of many legal debating societies both in the metropolis and the provinces.

The Law Students' Debating Society, which holds its meetings weekly in one of the rooms at the Law Institution, may be regarded as the central point towards which all the provincial societies tend. Students who have practised themselves in some one or other of the country societies will almost invariably join this when they come up to town for the purpose of completing their articles; and the last quarterly report furnished by the secretary shows that no pains have been spared to bring the society to its present high state of efficiency.

It appears that the number of members at the commencement of the present year was seventy-two, out of which an average of thirty attend each debate. The questions are debated upon in the proportion of two legal, to one jurisprudential question, and many of the questions proposed have been of the most recondite and interesting nature. These facts, we think, fully justify the pardonable boast of the secretary: "That so large a body of the younger members of our profession can be brought together, for no more attractive pursuit than self-improvement and friendly intercourse, is, at once, highly creditable to the profession and to the society." We have made these observations upon the progress of this society more especially for the advantage of our younger country readers, who, when they come to the metropolis, should not fail to make themselves acquainted with, and avail themselves of, the advantages thereby afforded.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Feb. 8.

Bendon, George, glass dealer, Bristol, Feb. 21, and March 21, at eleven, Bristol. Off. as. Hutton. Sols. James James, Birmingham, and Brittan, Bristol. Petition, Feb. 4.

Bernon, Numa, tailor, Prince-street, Hanover-square, Feb. 17, at eleven, and March 17, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Johnson. Sols. Lawrence and Co., Old Jewry Chambers. Petition, Feb. 5.

Edwards, Samuel, linendraper, Deptford, Feb. 22, at two, and March 15, at eleven, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Edwards. Sols. Depree and Austen, Lawrence-lane. Petition, Feb. 4.

Fraser, Andrew, corn merchant, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Feb. 18, at eleven, and March 16, at twelve, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. as. Wakley. Sols. Pringle and Co. King's-road, Bedford-row, London; and Philipson, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Petition, Feb. 3.

Miller, Thomas Butler and William, builders, Headstridgevillas, St. John's-wood, Feb. 18, at half-past one, and April 1, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Whitmore. Sol. Atkinson, Quality-court, Chancery-lane. Petition, Feb. 5.

Ruddock, Edward Harris, and Ellison, Henry, marble masons, Bradford, Yorkshire, Feb. 25 and March 18, at eleven, Leeds. Off. as. Freeman. Sols. Terry and Watson, Bradford; and Carlss and Cudworth, Leeds. Petition, Feb. 5.

Ruddock, Edward Harris, marble mason, Bradford, Feb. 29 and March 19, at twelve, Leeds. Off as. Freeman. Sol. Badger, Rotherham. Petition, Jan 29.

Gazette, Feb. 11.

Bulkin, John, coach builder, Beaumont-street, Marylebone, Feb. 18, at half-past one, and March 22, at one, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Stansfeld. Sols. George and Smith, 5, Southampton-buildings, Holborn. Petition, Jan. 28.

Gunn, John, meat salesman, High-street, Chatham, Feb. 22, at one, and March 24, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Evans. Off. as. Bell. Sol. Scarman, 20, Coleman-street. Petition. Feb. 8.

Hart, Charles, manufacturing chemist, Huddersfield, Yorkshire, Feb. 28 and April 4, at eleven, Leeds. Com. Ayrton. Off. as. Hope. Sols. Upton and Yewdall, Leeds. Petition, Feb. 2.

Jones, Hugh, linen draper, Liverpool, Feb. 25 and March 24, at eleven. Com. Stevenson. Off. as. Bird. Sol. Dodge, Union-court, Castle-street, Liverpool. Petition, Feb. 9.

Kemble, George, farmer, grazier, cattle dealer, and commission agent, Hurst, Berks., Feb. 23, at twelve, and March 23, at one, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Stansfeld. Sol. Soames, 55, Old Broad-street. Petition, Feb. 10.

Minchener, William, warehouseman, factor, Cheapside, Feb. 25, at one, and March 21, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Holroyd, Off. as. Edwards. Sol. Thompson, 18, Size-lane, Bucklersbury. Petition, Feb. 8.

Munch, William John, salesman, and general merchant, Beal's-wharf, Tooley-street, Surrey, Feb. 22, at half-past two, and March 21, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Holroyd. Off. as. Groom. Sol. Brewer, 3, Philpot-lane, Fenchurch-street. Petition, Feb. 8.

Unwin, John, licensed victualler and brewer and publican, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Feb. 18 and March 11, at twelve, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Com. Ellison. Off. as. Wakley. Sols. Hoyle, 72, Grey-street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; and Crosby and Compton, Church-court, Old Jewry. Petition, Feb. 7.

Witt, Benjamin, brewer, and wine and spirit merchant, Wimborne, Dorset, Feb. 18, at one, and March 22, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Graham. Sol. Baskett, 18, King's-road, Bedford-row. Petition, Feb. 8.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

Gazette, Feb 11.

Cole, Thomas, cabinet maker, Newport, Isle of Wight.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Ball, G. wine merchant, first, 5s. Whitmore, London. —Bell and Bell, paper manufacturers, first, 1s. 9d.; first sep. of E. Bell on new proofs, 9d.; second sep. of ditto, 2s. 4d. Wakley, Newcastle.—Burnley, J. cloth manufacturer, first, 1s. 6¾d. Freeman, Leeds.—Clayton, Clayton, and Wilson, bankers, &c. fifth, 10½d. Lee, Manchester.—Cogar, W. A. boot and shoe dealer, second, 1s. 8d. Whitmore, London.—Gibson, D. grocer, first, 1s. Baker, Newcastle.—Gundry and Gundry, bankers, third, 1s. Hernaman, Exeter.—Lake, T. grocer, &c. first, 2s. Lee, Manchester.—Marsden and Clayton, cotton manufacturers, first, 5s. 6d. Lee, Manchester.—Moone, A. stone merchant, second, 2½d. Stansfeld, London. Peel, R. ironmonger, first, 8¾d. Fraser, Manchester.—Philip, Clayton, Wynne, and Lancaster, builders, first sep. of Philip, 8s. 8d. Stansfeld, London.—Price and Lavender, paper dealers, first, 6s. Christie, Birmingham.—Roberts, J. innkeeper, first, 2s. Bird, Liverpool.—Rowell, G. jun. painter, &c. first, 5s. 10d. Wakley, Newcastle.—Tennant, W. draper, second, 9½d. Stansfeld, London.—Wilks, S. clock dial maker and factor, first, 1s. 3d. Christie, Birmingham.—Williams, W. J. hosier, &c. first, 1s. 4d. Christie, Birmingham.—Wynne and Lumsden, builders, first, 9s. 1d. Stansfeld, London.—Young, T. grocer, first, 3s. 4d. Baker, Newcastle.

INSOLVENT ESTATES.

Kingsnorth, D. farmer and wheelwright, 11s 1d. Apply to Mr. W. Robinson, wholesale ironmonger, Maiden-lane, College-hill.—Smith, A. boot and shoemaker, 1s. 9½d. Apply at the County Court, Gravesend.

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Feb. 1.

Brown, R. grocer, draper, and general shopkeeper, Bere Regis, Dorsetshire, Jan. 20. Trusts. J. Hayne, merchant, Fordington, and J. Fraud, chemist and druggist, Dorchester. Sols. Garland and Fear, Dorchester.—Elmer, J. N. innkeeper, New Malton, Yorkshire, Jan. 24. Trusts. W. Taylor, draper, and B. Bind, bank agent, both of New Malton. Sols. A. and W. Simpson, New Malton.—Harbour, W. yeoman, Diss, Norfolk, Jan. 29. Trusts. J. Kent, gentleman, and R. Aldrich, grocer, both of Diss. Sol. A. F. Barnard, Diss.—Shotton, G. S. draper, South Shields, Jan. 26. Trust. S. Sutherland, ironmonger, South Shields. Sol. R. Bowlby, South Shields. —Terrell, T. farmer, Whitchurch, Herefordshire, Jan. 19. Trusts. J. H. Ambrey, farmer, St. Briavels, and J. Morgan, auctioneer, Ross. Sols. Messrs. J. and J. E. Powles, Monmouth.—Westmacott, W. farmer, Batsford, Gloucestershire, Jan. 19 and 26. Trusts. R. Marshall, Aston Magna, and G. Penson, Draycott, farmers. Sols. Sewell and Newmarch, Stow-on-the-Wold.

Gazette, Feb. 4.

Burns, D. draper and tea dealer, St. Austell, Cornwall, Jan. 18. Trusts. W. Browne, mine agent, St. Austell, and R. Dunn, draper, Redruth. Sols. T. Coode and W. Shilson, both of St. Austell.—Fenner, G. builder, Birmingham, Jan. 24. Trusts. R. B. Fuller, plumber, and T. Lloyd, timber merchant, both of Birmingham. Sol. A. Harrison, Birmingham.—Green, T. and R. grocers and cheesemongers, Tonbridge Wells, Jan. 8. Trusts. T. Wright, wholesale cheesemonger, Giltspur-street, and H. Gold, jun. wholesale grocer, Hibernia Wharf, London-bridge. Sols. Dobson and Spickett, Clifford's-inn, Fleet-street. Hawkins, E. gentleman, Chorlton-upon-Medlock, Lancashire, Jan. 20. Trust. S. Smith, draper, Manchester. Sol. R. Gartside, Manchester.—Knight, S. maltster, Billingshurst, Sussex, Jan. 28. Trusts. Rev. H. Heath, clerk, Billingshurst, and A. Allen, maltster, Horsham. Sol. H. Padwick, Horsham.—Osborne, G. B. land surveyor, and brick, tile, and draining pipe manufacturer, Oldbury-upon-Severn, Thornbury, &c. Gloucestershire, Jan. 8. Trusts. R. S. Pope, architect, F. Adams, merchant, and A. W. P. Bush, lead shot manufacturer, all of Bristol. Sols. T. S. Pursell and H. W. King, both of Bristol.—Ridout, H. builder, Princess-terrace, Haverstock-hill, Jan. 26. Trusts. R. Wiltshire, oil and colourman, Bingfield-street, Caledonian-road, and G. Ridout, gentleman, Mitchell Vernon, Middlewitch. Sol. J. M. Dale, Warnford-court, Throgmorton-street.—Savage, T. cabinet maker, Greasley Common, Church Greasley, Derbyshire, Jan. 31. Trusts. Luke Severn, auctioneer and appraiser, and W. Risdon, corkcutter, both of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Sol. G. F. Brown, Ashby-de-la-Zouch.—Wesling, G. C. surgeon dentist, Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, Jan. 17. Trusts. R. Roby, ironmonger, and S. Sale, upholsterer, both of Bury St. Edmunds. Sol. W. Salmon, Bury St. Edmunds.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Feb. 1.

Barnham, W. J. Sams, W. H. and Barnham, A. G. patent emery and glass cloth manufacturers, Stratford, Jan. 28. Debts paid by W. J. Barnham.—Bates, W. and Gould, C. fullers and dressers, Leicester, Jan. 29. Debts paid by Bates. Bickham, S. H., Pownall, J., Howarth, A. and Lancashire, J. silk and cotton manufacturers, Manchester, Nov. 1. Debts paid by Howarth and Lancashire.—Bonner, G. F. and Bennett, J. designers, lithographers, and wood engravers, Bride-court, Jan. 29. Debts paid by Bonner.—Cockin, J. and J. carpet dealers, Manchester and Bradford, Jan. 17. —Farthing, E. and Reed, D. tailors and drapers, Cheapside, Jan. 29.—Frost, R. sen. R., jun. and J. painters, paper hangers, and decorators, Mansfield, Jan. 27.—Goodwin, T., Lomax, R. and Banks, W. silk manufacturers, Steward-street, Bishopsgate, Jan. 27.—Holloway, F. C. and Carruthers, W. linen drapers and hosiers, Grosvenor-place, Commercial-road, East, Feb. 1.—Holton, J. S. Almond, A. and Slater, J. bleachers, Manchester and Little Bolton, as regards Almond, Jan. 24.—Kirk, P., H. and T. iron manufacturers and brass and iron founders, Chapel-en-le-frith, as regards B. Kirk, Jan. 24. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Lane, H. and J. E. nurserymen and seedsmen, Great Berkhampstead, Jan. 31. Debts paid by J. E. Lane. —Lace, J. J. and Izod, F. surgeons, apothecaries, and accoucheurs, Mortimer and Swallowfield, Nov. 30.—Maxsted, J. and W. hat and cap makers, Carlton-street, Jan. 1.—Medd, R. and Capes, C. tailors and drapers, Kingston-upon-Hull, Jan. 29.—Miller, A. and Chapman, H. common brewers, and wine and spirit merchants, Bootle, near Liverpool, Jan. 29. Debts paid by Chapman.—Millner, A. and Beech, I. linen drapers and mercers, Gainsborough, Jan. 27 Debts paid by Millner.—Milton, W. and Kilhck, J. E. millers, Tonbridge, Sept. 29.—Richardson, J. and Straker, S. chemists and druggists, Bishopsgate-street Without, Jan. 29. Debts paid by Richardson.—Royse, F. and Stuce, J. hat manufacturers, Manchester and Macclesfield, Jan. 26. Debts paid by Royse.—Rurk, J. jun., Turner, W. A. and Wansbrough, J. patent cloth manufacturers and waterproofers, The Grove, Southwark, Jan. 10.—Ruck, J. jun., Turner, W. A. and Poole, W. emery and black lead manufacturers, Kent-street, Southwark, Jan. 29.—Schroder, A. and Wirth, J. G. merchants and commission agents, Gresham-street, Jan. 31. Debts paid by Schroder.—Wensley, C. and White, J. C. licensed victualler, Newgate-market, Jan. 27.—Whittell, S., J. and J. and Langford, F. woollen manufacturers, Stainland, Halifax, as regards Lawford, Jan. 4. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Worswick, W. Kendall, E. C. and Davies, W. boot and shoe manufacturers, Leicester, Jan. 29.

Gazette, Feb. 4.

Barry, J. and Hemsley, J., mast and block makers; Sunderland, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Barry.—Bond, J., R., and M., patent temple makers, Burnley, Jan. 29. Debts paid by R. and M. Bond.—Carne, C. F. and W. P., insurance and general agents, and wharehouse keepers, Liverpool, Dec. 31.—Cheetham, G. T. and Dudgeon, W., Bradford, Jan. 29. Debts paid by Cheetham.—Coleman, W., A. W., and Martin, H., manufacturers and importers of musical instruments, &c., Eyke's-terrace, Mile-end-road, Jan. 21.—Cotton, W. and Davies, E., millstone manufacturers, Liverpool, Feb. 1. Debts paid by Davies.—Day, J. B., and J., farmers and trainers of race horses, Danebury, Dec. 31.—Farrow, W. T., Bannister, T., and G. cotton manufacturers, Green Grove Mill, near Rochdale, Jan. 28.—Plenie, J. and Kemp, J., merchants, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and Manchester, Dec. 31, 1849.—Gorse, H. and Wall, H. F., oilmen and drysalters, Aldersgate-street, Jan. 30.—Gray, J. and Edwards, S., surgeons and accoucheurs, Upper George-street, Bryanstone-square, Jan. 31. Debts paid by Edwards.—Halstead, J., R. jun., and H., brass founders, &c. Hebden-bridge, Halifax, as regards H. Halstead, Jan. 31. Debts paid by H. Halstead, jun.—Harrison, J. and Littlewood, I., drapers, Great Yarmouth, Feb. 2.—Hatfield, T. and Rippon, W., farmers and graziers, Blacmorethick-lodge, Oundle, Oct. 11.—Hodges, J. F. and Scott, W., hosiers and glovers, New Bond-street, Feb. 1. Debts paid by Hodges.—Kilvington, R., and Wakerman, J., woollen cloth finishers, Leeds, Feb. 1.—Lyne, R. Gulliver, G. and Goldthorpe, J. ironmongers, Barnsley, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Gulliver and Goldthorpe.—Johnson, J. T. and W. G. linendrapers and silk mercers, Bishops Stortford, Jan. 31. Keddell, J. S. and Cullen, W. P. surgeons, apothecaries, &c. Sheerness, Dec. 31. Debts paid by R. Brightman, general agent, Sheerness.—Maybury, J. and Williams, R. forge iron manufacturers, Wednesbury, Feb. 24. Debts paid by O. Johnson, agent, Bilston, and J. Williams, forgeman, Wednesbury.—Melrose, J. and Cowley, T. boiler makers and smiths, Bradley Works, near Bilston, Dec. 31.—Miller, C., Wilkinson, T., Soper, R., Hall, G. and G. hat manufacturers, Grantham, Nov. 26.—Munton, R. N. and F. corn and flour factors, Manchester, Feb. 2.—Parsons, E. and W. linendrapers, Gloucester, Jan. 28.—Thornton, J., A., W., T., and J. machine makers and iron founders, March Mills, near Cleaketon, as regards A. Thornton, Feb. 2. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Watson, T. E. and Archer, J. grocers and Italian warehousemen, Liverpool, Jan. 31.—Whitley, J. and Briggs, W. stuff manufacturers, Botany, Jan. 29.—Wood, B. sen. and B. jun. pen and pocket-knife manufacturers, Sheffield, Feb. 1.

THE FOLLOWING NEW PRACTICAL WORKS FOR THE SESSION ARE JUST ISSUED AT THE Law Common Warehouse.

On Wednesday next,

PART VIII. of COX, MACRAE, and BERTHELET'S COUNTY COURT CASES AND APPEALS, together with INSOLVENCY PRACTICE, &c. &c.

This is the authorized and only complete collection of Reports of Cases relating to the County Courts, and is forming every case from the establishment of the Courts. To be continued regularly. Parts I. to VII. may still be had, price 5s. 6d. each. Part IX. is in the press, and will complete the cases to the beginning of 1853.

On Friday next,

PART II. of Vol. VII. of COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, containing all the Cases to this time (for the Circuits) in the Appeal Courts of England and Ireland, in the Central Criminal Court, on the Circuits, and in the Superior Courts; with an Appendix, containing a large collection of Precedents of Indictments under the new Statute, and other Precedents from the Central Criminal Court. Price 5s. 6d.

N.B.—A few copies of the four volumes and parts can still be had to complete sets.

THE NEW RULES and ORDERS, the NEW TABLE of FEES, and the NEW RULES relating to the ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS and the EXAMINATION of ARTICLED CLERKS, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, by E. MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 5s. (This may be had also as a Supplement to Archbold's Common Law Procedure Act, having marginal references to the pages of that work.)

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, with all the Rules, Orders, Cases, Decisions, &c., to this time, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, the Orders being placed with the Sections of the Statute to which they relate. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 6s. bds.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS, with the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, and Notes of all the Cases decided on its construction. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 6s. 6d. cloth.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of 1849, containing all those each minded in Practice, omitting the Repealed and the Scotch, Irish, Colonial, and Sessional Statutes, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction; thus presenting the whole Law as it is, in a compact form for ready use, and with a copious Index. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. (This is in continuation of the Practical Statutes of 1850, 1851, and 1852, which may still be had.)

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI. with a copious collection of Precedents of Indictments. This part contains Forms of Indictments at Quarter Sessions under the New Law. By J. E. DAVIES, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 5s. 6d.

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanac, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax, and the other Information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 1s.; or stamped for post, 1s. 2d. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanacs and Time of the Moon's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 3s.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, containing all the New Rules and Orders, the New Table of Fees, and Cases decided to the end of Michaelmas Term. Price 15s. cloth.

THE LAW DIGEST for the Half-Year ending December 1, By E. WISE and D. T. EVANS, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. Price 5s 6d. bds.; 6s. cloth.

This work gives every case, wherever reported, during the half-year, arranged so that the practitioner may find in a moment what is the latest law on any subject on which he may be engaged.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"AN ARTICLED CLERK."—Such an arrangement is impracticable without a fresh service and a fresh stamp. Why not recruit health and then be assigned, and serve again the time that has thus been abstracted?

"J. S." (Cowbridge.)—The letter has been sent to the reporter of the court, and we have received no reply to it.

"H. G. S." ((Hibro')—Was it not in the Statute for Abbreviating Statutes, passed two years ago?

"A SUBSCRIBER'S" suggestion with respect to the Examination Question is under consideration. The difficulty lies in obtaining persons who will do it well; and it would be worse than worthless unless very well done.

"H. T." (Whitechapel) is under consideration. Some care is necessary to avoid discussions on judicial decisions.

"STUDENS" (Liverpool.)—Don't read any old law book or report on Common Law or Chancery; it will be impossible for you to distinguish between the old law and the new. Better at once sell all your library (except such as relates to real property law, which has not changed) to the butterman.

"READER FROM THE FIRST" (Hull).—Mr. Kerr is preparing a little volume, containing a complete sketch of an action-at-law as it now is, similar in design to Smith's, which, of course, is now utterly obsolete. It will be published shortly.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1853.

THE MINISTERIAL SCHEME OF LAW IMPROVEMENT.

WE are sure that we express the universal sense of disappointment felt by the Profession at the short-comings of the ministerial budget of law improvement.

The LORD CHANCELLOR made a speech of nearly six columns, chiefly to tell us what the Government will not do.

It will not meddle further with the Common Law Courts; it will not further improve the Equity Courts; it will not abolish the Ecclesiastical Courts; it will not abbreviate conveyances.

The reasons assigned for this standing-still are as unsatisfactory as the halt itself. Ministers will not touch the Procedure Act, and the Equity Reform Acts, because they have worked well, so far as they go. They confess the Ecclesiastical Courts to be a disgrace to the country, but they will not grapple with them, because, to use Lord CRANWORTH'S own words, "there is a risk of shocking a great many interested persons."

Of the little which the Government avows an intention to undertake, the first and most important measure is already condemned by the Profession, and repudiated by the country. The Registration of Deeds is to be again proposed, and to be again rejected.

This scheme for increasing the cost of conveyancing is all that the Government of "all the talents" proffers to the country. We beg pardon; there is another shadow looming in the far—the very far—distance,—a Codification of the Statute Law. But that is a work of years. Our grandchildren may see it; our generation will not.

Not a syllable about the Criminal Code, about Lord BROUGHAM'S admirable Evidence Bill, or Lord ST. LEONARDS' prompt and useful measures lying on the table of the House!

What can be the meaning of it?

THE ATTORNEY'S TAX.

LORD ROBERT GROSVENOR will proceed with his motion before the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER introduces his budget, so that, if the new Parliament should confirm the decision of the old one, the finance minister may have no excuse for not including its repeal in his scheme.

Therefore, not a moment is to be lost in backing the appeal of the noble Lord to the House of Commons, both by petitions, and by individual applications from the Attornies throughout the country to the representatives of their various localities. We know that Hon. Members promised largely during the election: let them now be held to their promises.

A useful short form of petition was suggested here a few weeks ago. Let it be extensively signed.

THE LAW REFORMS OF LORD CRANWORTH.

ON Monday the LORD CHANCELLOR stated to the House of Lords the measures of Law Reform which the new Government will propose during the present session. His elaborate speech is much more than we could possibly reprint, and therefore we present a summary merely of the contents, with extracts from the more salient points in it.

THE COMMON LAW COURTS.

Lord CRANWORTH eulogised the Procedure Act, and declared that in both branches of the Profession "he had found one universal expression of satisfaction at the change which has taken place." In illustration of its practical results, he stated that the rules, which in 1851 amounted to no less than 34,000, had been abolished. The Court fees on them were between 3000*l.* and 4000*l.* But what did the fees of Counsel and Attorney amount to? In further proof of the benefits conferred upon suitors by these improvements, Lord CRANWORTH said:—

I obtained from Mr. Walton, who has done himself infinite credit in the course of the inquiry of the commissioners, another return, to which I will call your lordships' attention. I said to that gentleman, "Do not merely confine yourself to the fees abolished. Show me upon some one proceeding what is the cost of the whole proceedings under the old system, and what is the cost now." Mr. Walton instanced the case of a party proceeding to recover a debt where the person proceeded against does not mean to offer any defence, but says, in vulgar language, "Do your best and your worst," and leaves his creditor to obtain judgment and get his money as he can. In 1851 there were 1998 of such proceedings, and I got Mr. Walton to ascertain what was the cost of the proceedings in each case under the present and under the old system. He tells me that under the present system it is impossible to state the costs quite accurately, because they vary to some extent, according to the amount sued for, but that upon the highest average it would be 4*l.* I then asked Mr. Walton to take at hazard ten bills of costs for similar proceedings under the old system, and the costs upon those ten cases were 154*l.*, being an average of 15*l.* in each case. It appears, therefore, that the new system effects a saving of 11*l.* out of 15*l.* in proceedings of this nature, and I cannot conceive anything more satisfactory as indicating the great advantages gained by bringing the Act into operation. Mr. Walton, however, made further inquiries as to another ordinary proceeding—a distringas, a most cumbrous and clumsy means of forcing into court a party who will not attend to notices served upon him; and it appears that in this instance also the advantages of the new system are most apparent. This, however, is not all. Under the old law, if a debtor was abroad, there were very great difficulties in proceeding against him, which could only be done by the process called outlawry. The new Act, however, remedied the defects of the old law, and that it has worked beneficially is shown, I think, by the fact, that since the measure has been in operation—from the commencement of November last to within a fortnight—116 writs have been issued against parties abroad, whose creditors may be enabled to recover what is their due. There is, however, another mode, in which we may see that the new system works very satisfactorily. The number of suits, litigated and not litigated, is between 80,000 and 90,000 in the course of a year, and, therefore, questions must arise from time to time as to the working of any code of practice, however well matured; but it is a matter of astonishment to me to hear that there have been only twelve motions in all the three courts with reference to proceedings under the recent Act, and, out of those twelve, I believe that ten were not upon proceedings that have originated under the Act, but upon the dovetailing of the new proceedings upon those that had taken place before.

The effect of this sharpening and facilitating of process was seen in the number of writs issued, which, from Oct. 25, 1851, to Jan. 25, 1852, was 19,000; while during the same period in the last and present year the number exceeded 23,000. It was not, therefore, the intention of the Government to propose any alteration in the Procedure Act. But the Common Law Commissioners would soon present their report, proposing reforms in other particulars to which the Procedure Act had not extended.

FUSION OF EQUITY AND LAW.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said that upon this proposition he would not now express an opinion; but he quite agreed with its advocates so far as this—that every court should have jurisdiction to deal with the entire of any cause submitted to it, and that suitors should not be driven for justice from court to court; and the Commissioners would propose that "in cases relating to the specific performance of contracts, a concurrent jurisdiction shall be given to the Courts of Common Law with the Courts of Equity."

TRIAL BY JURY.

His Lordship expressed great doubt whether it would be desirable to permit a jury to be dispensed with, as in the County Courts; but he had not made up his mind.

CHANCERY REFORM.

The changes that have been made in procedure in the Equity Courts were stated to be entirely successful. "So far as I can speak from my own observation," said his Lordship, "and so far as I can collect from the opinions of others, the changes are working admirably well." He illustrated the diminished costs under the new procedure by these facts:—

I shall take intentionally an uncontested case. It is a case where, a person having died, the legatee wants payment of the legacy. The executors say—"We are quite ready to do so, provided we can do so without injury to the creditors." In this case all that has to be done is this:—An application is made for an order to have the property distributed. All the parties are then required to attend before the Master of the Rolls to show cause, if any, why an order should not be made. No objection being offered, an order is accordingly made, almost in as many words as I have used in stating the case. An account is ordered to be taken of the amount of property left; an advertisement is ordered to be inserted in the newspapers; and then, after payment of the creditors, the remainder of the property is handed over to the legatee. Under the old system by bill and answer this proceeding would have cost 58*l.* The expense was materially reduced by an alteration in practice which was introduced by Lord Cottenham, by substituting a claim for a bill. Under that system the expense would have been 22*l.*; it is now reduced to 13*l.* This is, however, by no means a favourable specimen of the reduction of expense effected by the new system, because this is a proceeding which originates in chambers, before a Master; whereas, under the new practice, the bulk of the orders are orders which originated in the progress of cases depending before the court.

As the present measures work so well, no further alteration will be proposed.

ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

His Lordship considers the "testamentary jurisdiction" "discreditable to the country." But he is not prepared to introduce any measure for its reform. First, because "there is a risk of shocking a great many interested persons;" secondly, of "imposing hardships upon many innocent and meritorious persons;" thirdly, because there are commissioners sitting on the subject, and he would wait their report.

TRANSFER OF REAL PROPERTY.

The Lord Chancellor recognises the true causes of the cost of conveyancing:—

But the real difficulty in what is called the transfer of land does not arise from the state of the law relative to the transfer of land, but from the law as it exists for the purpose of the social and political institutions of the country. I find that what many persons mean by facility of transfer of land, when pressed to it, is that there should be no ownership except that of ownership in fee simple, as it exists in the state of New York at this moment. If there were no ownership but that of fee simple, there would be very little difficulty indeed in the transfer of it; but once admit the complication of interests arising from mortgages, settlements, jointures, entails, and what are called shifting estates, the difficulties are very considerable; because, when a party sells he must prove that none of these circumstances affect his title. I believe that this is at the root of the difficulty and expense in the transfer of land in this country, and not in the system of conveyance; and as I do not think it my duty, even if I thought it beneficial, to propose any alteration of the existing system of entail, settlements, &c. in this country, I must deal with the question as I find it, and proceed upon the assumption that such is still to be the state of the law, and that parties are to continue in the possession of the rights they now enjoy with regard to the settlement and disposition of their property.

There are two causes of cost in conveyancing—first, the length and complication of conveyances; second, the investigation of titles. For the first his Lordship proposes no remedy, inasmuch, he says, as it does not arise from the state of the law, but "from the desire of the person purchasing to have the fullest details on the subject entered in the conveyance." But he proposes to remedy the cost of investigating titles by "a registration of deeds."

My proposition, then—I call it mine in now submitting it to your lordships—is similar to that which was embodied in the bill of my noble and learned friend of 1851. I propose, when anybody purchases an estate, that he is to go to the registrar and put it upon the register. When time passes, and I want to sell, it will be seen that I have that register, and my deeds will show what my title "was," because I do not propose to affect bygone titles; and then I propose that nothing shall affect the title to that land beyond what is seen upon the register in conjunction with my own original deeds. I can have no interference with the registry. It is possible, indeed, that there might be cases of gross fraud, but they can be dealt with as they arise. We are not to pause in a great good because there are difficulties in the way, and I think that very considerable good is to be effected in this direction. It will make the mode of transferring land safe, simple and cheap. I do not propose, in moving the introduction of this measure, to enter into any discussion upon the details of this subject, except with a view to the suggestions which have been made to me as to the working of the bill, that it will not effect a great many objects which I, in truth, am persuaded it will effect. It is said that there are difficulties in the way of settlements. The way in which I propose to deal with that question is this:—A party registers his title. If he wishes to make a settlement he may make it, and put it upon the register; then anybody who purchases the land may see what that settlement is. But if he wants to retain the power of selling the land, notwithstanding the settlement, I propose that he shall have the power, if he desire it, of stipulating that the settlement shall not appear upon the register. It is argued that that affords an opportunity of defeating the settlement. Undoubtedly, I admit that it does; but if you wish to make the settlement binding you must put it on the register, and then it cannot be defeated. At the same time, provisions are made that any persons entitled under a settlement which is not on the register may obtain an inhibition upon the land being sold, and may prevent injustice being done.

CHARITIES.

The bill of 1851 is to be reintroduced, with some amendments, rendered necessary by the abolition of the Masters' offices.

CODIFICATION.

The Lord Chancellor is very desirous to codify the statute law. He stated some interesting facts. He told you that from the first of Edward III. to the end of Queen Anne there were 3256 statutes passed. That fact I obtained from the appendix to the report made in 1835 upon the subject of a consolidation of the statute law. Well, but how many of those statutes now remain, because those only are the statutes with which we have practically to deal in consolidating the law? Upon this subject the report is also very explicit. Of these 1814 had expired, and 524 were local, personal, and private bills; only 918 then were left, of which 260 were partially repealed. If we take these 260 partially repealed as representing 180 complete bills, we shall then have to deal with only 800 statutes up to that period, or not quite so many. Were we to assume that all the remaining statutes stood upon the same footing that I have first described with regard to those up to Queen Anne, this assumption would reduce the number of statutes at once from 20,000 to 5000.

And the manner in which this great work of codification is proposed to be accomplished was thus stated:

What I propose is to take a very simple course, and it is this:—I think I may be able to secure the services of Mr. Bellenden Kerr, one of the former commissioners, to act under my own immediate superintendence, having, further, the co-operation of two or three gentlemen well skilled in the subject, and whom I shall, as it were, retain in the case, to give their whole time to it. I do not propose for them to inquire how the thing is best to be done; but the course I contemplate is to say to them,—"Gentlemen, first of all complete that which has been already done up to the reign of Queen Anne, and mark every statute that is now in force, so that we may know precisely of what the statute law at this moment consists; and then distinguish what of these statutes is of a local or temporary character." I next propose to direct them to reduce the statutes upon a particular subject into one statute, and, in so doing, not necessarily to adopt the order which they may find in the statute-book, or the language of the statute-book; only, where any particularity of language has led to particularity of construction, I shall instruct them to report the special case to me, and I will endeavour to have the language to be adopted, upon mature consideration of such construction, rendered clear and intelligible for future reference. As I watch the progress of the work itself, ideas will doubtless develope themselves from the work itself, which will enable me to carry the undertaking to a successful and satisfactory issue much more effectually than any abstract references or inquiries addressed to commissions or to learned individuals. That which I desire has been done in the State of New York, where all the statutes of the Legislature are placed before the community in a compact and practicable form, and in language perfectly intelligible to the whole community. The consolidation of past statutes is not the only benefit we shall derive from the proposed principle; it will be a result of incalculable advantage if we are enabled to classify future statutes, so that when an Act is passed it shall not be huddled and hidden among the mass of legislation of a particular session, as merely chapter so and so of session so and so; but shall be at once classed under its particular head,—an Act on the subject of marine insurance, for example, being classed under the category to which it naturally belongs, and in which it would be naturally sought.

Such is the Government programme of what it will not do, and what it will propose to do. We need not say that it will be utterly unsatisfactory to the Profession, and still more so to the public. But we reserve commentary for another article.

AN ACTION AT LAW UNDER THE NEW PRACTICE. (a)

Article IX.

[It will perhaps be a satisfaction to some readers to be informed that none of the preceding articles have been made in any way incorrect by the new rules of practice. The recent rules have re-established old rules, which have been referred to, and they have supplied some detail of practice applicable to subjects which have been considered, but they contain nothing inconsistent with the previous articles. To any who may think it worth while to note up on the preceding articles the new rules applicable to them, and probably to other readers also, it will be convenient to have mentioned here the new rules which bear on the subjects referred to in the preceding articles:—

Rule 1. Indorsing costs on writ specially indorsed—applies at p. 132, and p. 148, note (b).

2. Appearance by several defendants—applies to p. 148.

6. Nonjoinder of plaintiffs—applies to p. 149.

20. Particulars of plaintiff's demand—may be added to heading "Proceedings after service." p. 124.

55. Signing judgment after writ of inquiry—applies to p. 133.

56. Entering judgment—applies to p. 132.

135—137. Amending irregularities in writ, &c.—apply to pp. 107 and 124.

138—147. Affidavits—apply to pp. 114, 115, 132, and generally where affidavits mentioned.

149—160. Rules, summonses, and orders—apply generally.

161—167. Service of notices, rules, pleading, &c.—ditto.

171—173. Reference to Master to compute, &c.—apply to p. 133.

174 and 176. Calculation of time—apply generally.]

THE DECLARATION—STATEMENT OF CAUSE OF ACTION.

Even previous to the Common Law Procedure Act it was not necessary that the declaration should state the form of action; all that was necessary was, that the cause of action disclosed by the declaration should agree with the form of action mentioned in the writ. Now, however, no form of action is mentioned in the writ (sect. 3); and therefore this ground of objection no longer exists. It has been mentioned that causes of action, provided they be by and against the same parties and in the same rights, may be joined in an action (ante, p. 173); and the objection that two forms of action have been misjoined can therefore no longer be made unless replevin or ejectment be one of them.

The statement of the cause of action is especially that part of the declaration which, like the body of the plea and of the subsequent pleadings, is understood by what is technically called "pleading," and is within the province of the "special pleader." These articles are not intended as a treatise on special pleading, but as showing the practice in an action. A few general remarks will therefore suffice on this subject, in addition to the forms of declarations in simple cases (given ante, p. 194) and the reference to the forms in Schedule B. of the Common Law Procedure Act. In special cases, where these forms are not easily applicable, the main principle to be observed is, that the declaration must state all such facts as are necessary to sustain the claim of the plaintiff with such distinctness and particularity that any of them can be traversed, i. e. denied, by the defendant. The primary object of pleading is, that the parties may be brought to the statement of some matter in dispute (an issue, as it is called), on the decision of which they are willing respectively to rest their cases. An issue on fact may be in some cases wide and in some narrow,—that is, it may include several facts, all of which it is necessary for one party to prove in order to sustain his case, or it may depend on the determination of a single fact. The various rules of detail established to effect the object of pleading (well stated and illustrated in "Stephen on Pleading") will still apply, except so far as they are modified by the provisions of the recent Act. Such of these provisions as affect the declaration have been mentioned (pp. 173 and 174, ante); but there is a provision in sect. 50 that "either party may object by demurrer to the pleading of the opposite party on the ground that such pleading does not set forth sufficient ground of action, defence, or reply, as the case may be;" the general terms of which will probably have some influence in the construction to be put on pleadings.

The learned editors (a) of one edition of the recent Act prove, in an elaborate and learned introduction, that the ancient system of pleading was much more simple, and probably truthful, than the present, and that it was then enough for the plaintiff in the first place to "show some certain matter as to which the cause related, and only adding some statement showing, in the most general way, that a right of action had arisen (as by stating that the defendant had 'not kept' his covenant);" so as to ground or lay a foundation for an action. To this the defendant either pleaded in an equally general form that which he considered his justification as to the whole or a part of the plaintiff's claim, or denied generally the plaintiff's statement. In the latter case, it became the plaintiff's duty, in his replication, to state with particularity the injury, breach, or default of which he complained. The effect of allowing these general statements in the first place, appears to have been that the now frequent miscarriage of justice, from the actual proof differing in some way from the precise allegations made, was rare and almost unknown, and that usually nothing more came in issue than was actually in dispute between the parties; whereas now there is almost always much more in issue than is really disputed by the parties. The learned editors argue from several of the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act, and especially the words in the 50th section—"sufficient ground of action"—that it is intended, instead of requiring the plaintiff as now to state all the facts necessary to sustain his claim, that the ancient system should be restored, and he should only be required to ground his action by a general statement. This is, perhaps, too sanguine a view of the matter; it is, of course, impossible to say precisely what greater generality of statement will now be allowed than was formerly; but probably the new provisions will receive a liberal construction, and, to some extent, it will be allowed.

The parliamentary rule, H. T. 4 Will. 4, r. 5, that "several counts shall not be allowed unless a distinct subject-matter of complaint is intended to be established in respect of each," is perhaps still in force, or will be restored by the new rules on the subject of pleading now in contemplation of Parliament. A distinct subject-matter of complaint does not always mean a distinct transaction between the parties, but a distinct legal cause of action; for there may be two distinct contracts, one express and one implied by law, arising from the same transaction. Thus a count upon a bill of exchange, and one for the consideration of the bill in goods, money, or otherwise, are allowed; for the security and the debt itself are different contracts. So also a count upon a policy of assurance, and a count for money had and received to recover back the premium upon a contract implied by law, are allowed. And it was provided "that a count for money due on an account stated may be joined with any other count for a money demand, though it may not be intended to establish a distinct subject-matter of complaint in respect of each of such counts."

(a) By Charles Tarlee, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

(a) R. Morris and W. F. Finlason, Esqrs.

Besides the formal mention of a county as the venue in the action (ante, p. 194), it is necessary sometimes to mention place in the body of the declaration or other pleading as a matter of local description. Where this is the case, it is necessary to allege the place truly according to the fact, and to prove it as laid. Thus, where the plaintiff complains of a trespass to his close, and the defendant claims a right of way over it from one terminus to another, the declaration for greater certainty states the name of the close and of the parish and county where it is situate, and the plea sets forth the termini of the way. (Step. Plead. p. 326.) So also time, quality, quantity, and value are in some few cases a material part of the issue, and in these cases must still be alleged and proved as laid. When not material they may now be omitted: (ante, p. 174.)

There is a special enactment as to the statement of the cause of action in actions of libel and slander. It is intended to prevent the great prolixity frequently shown in declarations in these actions, where the expressions used are only actionable in connexion with certain other facts. Thus, if the defendant said of the plaintiff "he was concerned in the late affair at B.'s house," the words unexplained are not actionable; but if it was intended to impute to the plaintiff a participation in a burglary lately committed, they are actionable. So the charging a plaintiff with having "forsworn himself" is not actionable, unless it be shown that a particular occasion of forswearing in some judicial matter was alluded to, so that it was meant to charge him with perjury: (Starkie on Slander, pp. 391, 397.) Where the words used stated expressly that which was by law a cause of action, there was no need for other statements; but where the words were only actionable in connexion with and in consequence of other facts, it was necessary to state such facts in the declaration, and to aver that the words were used in reference to such facts, and with what slanderous meaning they were used. This averment of meaning is called an innuendo, and very much difficulty and technical argument has arisen in reference to it, especially as to its being sufficiently explained and warranted by the facts previously stated, in other words as to the connexion between these facts and the innuendo being sufficiently shown.

To avoid this serious cause of prolixity and difficulty in actions of libel and slander, the plaintiff will now be at liberty to aver that the words or matter complained of were used in a defamatory sense, specifying such defamatory sense without any prefatory averment to show how such words or matter were used in that sense, and such averment will be put in issue by the denial of the alleged libel or slander; and where the words or matter set forth, with or without the alleged meaning, show a cause of action, the declaration will be sufficient: (sect. 61.)

STATEMENT OF DAMAGES.

It was necessary until the recent Act that the declaration should allege in conclusion that the injury was to the damage of the plaintiff of a certain sum, and thereupon he brought suit (formerly sects, a number of persons prepared to confirm his allegations). This mere form is now abolished; the present conclusion being that given ante, p. 194. There appears to be nothing to alter the rule that the plaintiff cannot recover a greater amount of damages than claimed at the conclusion of his declaration (Watkins v. Morgan, 6 C. & P. 661); but there is no doubt an amendment in this respect will now be allowed, either previous to or at the trial.

PARTICULARS OF DEMAND.

The declaration must, in a large proportion of cases, be accompanied by a statement of the particulars of the plaintiff's demand; for with every declaration (unless the writ has been specially indorsed under sect. 25 of the Common Law Procedure Act) delivered or filed, containing causes of action, such as those set forth in schedule B. of that Act, and numbered 1 to 14 inclusive, or of a like nature, the plaintiff must deliver or file full particulars of his demand under such claim, where such particulars can be comprised within three folios; and where the same cannot be comprised within three folios, he must deliver or file such a statement of the nature of his claim and the amount of the sum or balance which he claims to be due, as may be comprised within that number of folios: (R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 19.) The only penalty on the plaintiff for not furnishing the particulars, however, is that if a judge shall afterwards order a delivery of particulars, the plaintiff will not be allowed any costs in respect of any summons for the purpose of obtaining such order, or of the particulars he may afterwards deliver. The causes of action referred to (numbered 1 to 14) are—goods sold; work and materials; money lent; money paid; money received; account stated; an estate sold; goodwill of a business; use of a house and land; use of a fishery; copyhold fines; hire of goods, &c.; freight; demurrage.

Where the special indorsement has been made on the writ, that indorsement will be considered as particulars of demand, and no further or other particulars of demand need be delivered unless ordered by the Court or a judge: (sect. 25.)

It is usual and proper that the particulars should be entitled in the court and cause, and signed by the plaintiff's attorney. They are entirely the result of an equitable jurisdiction of the courts, and do not form part of the declaration, nor are subject to the technicalities which belong to pleadings. They should in general specify items, dates, and amounts, as the plaintiff may otherwise be ordered to give further and better particulars. By means of them the defendant gains more specific information than can be derived from the declaration, while they serve to define the plaintiff's cause of action; but the plaintiff is not concluded by them except so far as he may thereby have misled the defendant. Thus, where the particulars claimed damages for the non-return of certain goods, the plaintiff was not allowed to go into evidence of damage done to the goods: (Moss v. Smith, 1 M. & G. 228.) So where the particulars in an action of covenant charged non-cultivation of land, the plaintiff was not allowed to give evidence of miscultivation: (Doe dem. Winnall v. Broad, 2 Scott, N.R. 685.) It seems quite settled that the plaintiff need not give any items which he admits as reducing his demand, but that he should state the items of his own demand, the amount by which he admits it to be reduced, and the balance for which he really proceeds: (Smith v. Eldridge, 4 A. & E. 64.)

THE LEGISLATOR.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

LAW REFORM.

MONDAY, Feb. 14.—The LORD CHANCELLOR introduced a measure for facilitating the transfer of land. His lordship, having traced the progress of law reform from the days when Jeremy Bentham first essayed to rouse public attention to the question down to the present time, and stated that it was his intention to endeavour to classify and reduce the past legislation of the House, from the time of Queen Anne, into one complete code—Lord ST. LEONARDS expressed some doubts of the practicability of the scheme as a whole. There were some parts of it which met his cordial approbation, and it was his anxious desire to see some facilities given for the transfer of landed property. Lord CAMPBELL complimented the Lord Chancellor upon the lucid statement he had submitted to the House, and having referred to some details of the Bill, reminded their lordships that the select committee appointed to inquire into the burdens upon land, reported they found the most intolerable burden to be the expense of the transfer of real property; and they suggested that one mode of removing that burden would be by the introduction of a system of registration.—Leave was then given to bring in the bill.

LAW REFORM.

THURSDAY, Feb. 17.—Lord BROUGHAM moved for leave to bring in a Bill to extend to Scotland the provisions of Lord Denman's Act for the Amendment of the Law of Evidence, which enabled the parties to a suit to be examined in their own cause. He took that opportunity of expressing a hope that his noble friend who now occupies the woolsack would give his best aid in the great question of the amendment of the law. He could only say of the two measures which his noble and learned friend had already introduced,—that of the registry, and the other of the digestion of the statute law,—that none which could be achieved could possibly be of more importance. He gave his entire and cordial approbation to the measure taken by the late Lord Chancellor with regard to the digestion of the law; and he strongly recommended that the course suggested by the commissioners, of first digesting chapter by chapter, and then, when that was completed, reducing the whole into one, should be followed. He was glad to perceive that his noble friend (Lord St. Leonards) had already introduced the first chapter with respect to offences against the person in a digested form. It was not desired to take away the right of the subject to have his case tried by a jury, but simply to give him the option. Certainly the experience of all the County Courts showed that where the option was given, 97 persons out of 100 elected to be tried by the judge alone.—The LORD CHANCELLOR said, he could not conceive himself open to the imputation of a desire merely to "keep time" instead of advancing, when the measures he had announced were measures of such great importance and interest as those of registration, of the amendment of the system of charitable trusts, and the consolidation of the statute law. He could assure his noble and learned friend that he had pronounced no opinion against the option to the litigant subject between trial by a jury and trial by a judge. All he had said was, that the question was one of grave weight. He had not at all contended that there were not cases in which the trial by a judge might not be the most effective, as well as the cheapest.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

EXAMINER OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

MONDAY, Jan. 14. — The SOLICITOR-GENERAL moved for leave to bring in a Bill to make better provision for the execution of the office of Examiner in the High Court of Chancery. On this subject a measure had been passed in the preceding session, the framers of which inadvertently omitted to provide for two points. One was the inapplicability of the oath of office prescribed by the stat. 50 Geo. 3, to the new functions devolving upon the Examiner. The second was, that no qualifications were specified as requisite in candidates for the situation, as length of service and standing, or the like. These omissions it was the object of the present bill to remedy, by provisions directed to that purpose. Leave was then given.

CONVEYANCING.

TUESDAY, Feb. 15.—Mr. HENRY DRUMMOND moved for leave to bring in a bill to facilitate the sale and purchase of land. After tracing the history of our conveyancing system, and dwelling upon its utter inapplicability to modern requirements, he remarked that no lawyer was ever satisfied that any man was the owner of the land he possessed, but that every transaction necessitated a fresh examination of title. He contended that, after one inquiry into title by a proper tribunal, its certificate ought to be good for ever. The real property commission had recommended a registry, and his bill was designed to carry out that recommendation, and to register titles to real property. He sketched the history of legislation on the subject, urged the unfitness of lawyers to deal with it, and explained that his bill provided that, when once a registration had been effected, nothing but a statement of the new transaction should be requisite.—Mr. HEADLAM seconded the motion, and warmly defended a system of registration.—Mr. HUME was of opinion that a merely permissive bill would not be useful.—Leave was given to bring in the bill.

PARISH CONSTABLES BILL.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 16.—Mr. DEEDES moved the second reading of this bill, and stated the object to be to amend certain acts on the subject. In 1839 a permanent Act was passed, called the Rural Police Act; and it appeared that only a portion of the counties had adopted it. In fact, only twenty-three counties had availed themselves of it; twenty-three also had not adopted it; and in six, namely, Cumberland, Dorset, Northampton, Westmoreland, Warwickshire, and Yorkshire, it had been only partially adopted. There being twenty-three counties still under the Parish Constables' Act, it was to them his bill was to apply; and if at any time any of those counties adopted the Rural Police Act, they would be exempted from the provisions of this bill. The county of Chester being under a local Act, and Middlesex being under the Metropolitan Police Act, they would be exempted from its provisions. In 1842 a bill was brought in by the right hon. baronet, the member for Carlisle, on the subject of parish constables. The existing Acts were therefore three in number, and it was desirable that they should be consolidated; and to that portion of his bill he thought there would be no objection. The amendments he proposed were that the appointment of a superintendent of a petty sessional division, who should have the control of the petty constable, should be made imperative. He also proposed that there should be a chief superintending constable, but it would be optional in the justices to make such an appointment or not. He proposed to extend the powers under which lock-up houses were built, and also to charge the supply of handcuffs on the county rates. There would be a clause allowing superannuation allowances to retired superintending constables. After stating some other formal provisions of the bill, the hon. member concluded by moving the second reading, and proposed that it should be referred to a select committee.

The bill was read a second time.

FEES IN COUNTY COURTS.

THURSDAY, Feb. 17.—Viscount PALMERSTON stated that a scale of fees to be taken in County Courts had been prepared and submitted to the Lord Chancellor in December last; it had since been referred to the judges at Westminster Hall, who still had it under consideration. After they had determined upon it, it would be published, and would take effect on a day fixed by them for that purpose.

LORD ST. LEONARDS'S NEW LAW OF BANKRUPTCY.—Lord St. Leonards' Bill on the law of bankruptcy has just been printed by order of the House of Lords. There are forty-one clauses in the Bill. A bankrupt is to have allowed him 20*l.* of excepted articles, as now allowed by the Insolvent Debtors' Court. Certificates are not to be classified; but a commissioner may express his approbation on the certificate of the bankrupt's conduct.

BAIL IN ERROR FOR MISDEMEANOR.—Lord Campbell's Bill to amend the law on bail in error for misdemeanors has just been printed. Among the improvements to be made, a judge may issue a warrant to take a defendant in execution where the recognisance of bail had been estreated.

LOCAL BOARDS OF HEALTH.—A Bill has been printed to establish Local Boards of Health at the following places:—Wakefield, Elland, Wallasey, Dudley, Barnsley, Dorchester, Brighton, and Welshpool. The elections at those places are to take place on the 26th of April next.

THE MAGISTRATE,

AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

Two cases relating to highways were reported last week. The first turns on the construction of a local statute, and therefore is of no general interest. The other is of considerable importance, for it decided that on an indictment for nonrepair and plea of "Not guilty," a former judgment on a presentment against the inhabitants of the same parish for nonrepair of the same road is conclusive evidence of defendant's liability; and even evidence to show that the road in question is in another parish is inadmissible, although it was recited in a local Act as a fact that the road was in another parish, and although the presentment on the face of it showed a defect which would have been fatal on demurrer or in arrest of judgment, and the fine was not proved to have been paid: (Reg. v. Inhabitants of Houghton, 20 L. T. Rep. 247.)

A question as to a sewers-rate is scarcely capable of being described in a summary like this, which is designed merely briefly to inform those, who have not time to read all the reports, what are the points of law that have been recently decided.

The trustees of a turnpike in the province of York mortgaged the tolls; the mortgage-deed contained no covenant for repayment. The mortgagee died within the province of Canterbury, the deed being in his house at the time, and administration was taken out in Canterbury. The administrators applied for a mandamus to the trustees of the turnpike to pay twelve months' interest that was in arrear. It was held that administration should have been taken out in the province of York, where the road was situate. It was held, also, to be an equitable and not a legal right of the mortgagee, and therefore that a mandamus would not lie to enforce it: (Re The Trustees of the Bawtry, &c. Roads, 20 L. T. Rep. 252.)

BASTARDY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The grammatical (?) argument of I. S. in your last is not a little surprising to me.

The statute declares that "the child shall have and follow its mother's settlement until it attains the age of sixteen, or acquires a settlement in its own right;" that is to say, as plainly as any words can say, until one or the other of those events shall occur.

Whenever, therefore, either of them occurs, the settlement conferred is determined.

If I. S. were the trustee of an estate "until his daughter Jane shall attain the age of twenty-one or be married," I suspect he would not doubt that the occurrence of either of those events determined his trust. Should he construe the trust deed as he construed the statute, he would be saddled with the trust so long as his daughter should live unmarried, although she should be sixty years old instead of twenty-one.

The Justice of the Peace lately gave vent to another notable grammatical argument on this subject, namely, that the Court of Q. B. ought to have coupled the word "until" with the word "settlement," instead of coupling it with the words "have and follow!" Now, I always supposed "until" to be an adverb, that is, a word added or annexed to a verb for the purpose of qualifying its meaning. But "J. P." seems to have invented a new part of speech, and to consider "until" as an acknown, instead of an adverb. It is obvious to any grammarian that the court could not adopt any other view than that which it has taken. I do not see how any of the alleged severity and cruelty to pregnant single women can arise, as they are no longer deemed chargeable, and therefore removable, as formerly; neither can I see any reason for the panic which has arisen as to settlement by birth in workhouses, which seems effectually met by the words of 54 Geo. 3, c. 170, s. 3, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 56.

17th Feb. 1858. I am, Sir, yours, &c.
W. P. P.

Queries on Points of Practice.

VESTRIES.

I SHALL feel obliged by some legal brother giving me, through your valuable paper, an answer to the following question:—

Can the Act of Parliament 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60 (Hobhouse's Act) be adopted in a parish having an open vestry (each ratepayer being a vestryman, if rated at not less than 20*l.*)? The difficulty arises in consequence of the Act requiring that the number of vestrymen to be lotted out at the first election shall be one-third of the vestrymen in actual existence: (See Rex v. St. Pancras, 3 Nov. & M. 425.)

If the Act can be adopted, how should the one-third be selected? And who should they be, out of 9000 ratepayers who may attend a parish meeting and thus become vestrymen?

J. L.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

AGAIN it has been decided that a voluntary conveyance is void against a purchaser for value. A married woman, entitled in fee to certain property with her husband, conveyed it to trustees in trust for herself for life, then for her husband, then for the children, as they should jointly appoint; in default of appointment, for all the children; and if no children, to the husband in fee. Afterwards she and her husband mortgaged the same property, with power of sale. All the deeds were duly acknowledged. The purchaser from the mortgagee was held to have a good title, the first deed being voluntary, and therefore void as against a subsequent purchaser for value: (Butterfield v. Heath, 20 L. T. Rep. 242.)

V. C. KINDERSLEY has supported the opinion of the M. R., and held that the impression which had generally prevailed in the Profession, that where the wife's property was under 200*l.* the Court would not recognise her equity to a settlement, was an erroneous one, and that she was entitled whatever its amount. He said: "The rule which entitles the wife to a settlement is one independent of the question of amount. I do not see why a wife is not entitled as much to a portion out of a small amount as out of a larger:" (Re Kincaid's Trustees, 20 L. T. Rep. 243.)

In Barnes v. Forsyth, 20 L. T. Rep. 244, a bequest to a married woman for her sole use and benefit was held to be a bequest to her separate use.

In the law of Vendor and Purchaser, we have a satisfactory case, which we hope will do something to check the growing practice of vendors making unjust conditions of sale, and thus entrapping unwary purchasers. In Keyse v. Hayden, 20 L. T. Rep. 244, one of the conditions of sale was that the purchaser should take such title as the vendor had. V. C. WOOD has held that this does not relieve the vendor from the duty of showing a bonâ fide title, and the best title he can produce from the materials within his power.

PUBLIC CHARITIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I have been consulted on two or three important matters, and am at a loss to know how to advise. One is, where the trustees and feoffees are actually receiving the whole amount, about 100*l.* per annum, and dividing it amongst themselves. The other amounts to 150*l.* a year, and divides it amongst the relatives of the three (surviving) trustees. If the extraordinary doctrine in Wyppeston Hospital, noticed by you last week, is to hold water, adieu to all relator's suits; and, however gross may be the breaches of trust, yet no ordinary solicitor can be otherwise than a jackal for the Attorney-general's solicitor, or the abuses continue as in the case stated. I do not know what the last sentence are for; yet I think the solicitors should look out for themselves. What steps can I advise my clients to take to remedy the abuses mentioned, and keep my clients in my own hands?

LEX.

Queries on Points of Practice.

PRACTICE.—ASSIGNMENTS.

A. obtains a lease of certain planed land to B. who assigns the lease to C. C. agrees to grant a lease of one of the said pieces of land for the remainder of his term to D. at a greater rental than is reserved for that piece in the original lease. Whose attorney is entitled to prepare the lease, the attorney of C. or D.?

Q.

Answers to Queries.

MORTGAGES.

In reference to the query of "A Subscriber" in your journal of the 6th inst., if the question has not been already answered, I beg to say that I remember a case reported in the LAW TIMES at the end of 1856 or beginning of 1849 exactly bearing upon it; but for want of an index at that date I cannot refer to it.

Having my attention called to the particular point at that time, I distinctly remember that the result of the case was that an intended mortgagee had no right to recover from an intended mortgagor his costs in a case similar to the one proposed.

H.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

Mandamus had gone commanding a company to complete a portion of a railway. The defendants returned that the whole capital required by the company's Act had not been subscribed, and that the company were unable to procure the subscription. To this it was pleaded that the company were estopped from this answer because, on another portion of the line, they had exercised their compulsory powers. On demurrer to this plea it was held, first, that the return was a good answer, because the Lands Clauses Act prohibited the company from exercising the compulsory powers until the capital had been subscribed; and, secondly, that the exercise of those powers on another part of the line was res inter alios acta, and therefore no estoppel: (Reg. v. The Ambergate, &c. Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 246.)

WINDING-UP.
PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and made, during the past week.]

Gloucester, Aberystwith, and Central Wales Railway Company.—Call for 4*s.* per share on Feb. 28.—Tinney.

Newcastle, Shields, and Sunderland Union Joint-Stock Banking Company.—To appoint an official manager, at the Master of the Rolls' chambers, on Feb. 21.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

EQUITY PRACTICE.—The M. R. stated last week (Anon. 20 L. T. 243) that applications to vary minutes should be made in chambers, where such variations are merely formal, or not opposed; if opposed, however, the motion should still be made in court. He has also held, in Senior v. Prichard, 20 L. T. Rep. 243, that the 58th sect. of c. 86, which enacts that the practice in injunctions to restrain proceedings at law shall be assimilated to that in cases of special injunction, as far as the nature of the case will admit, does not discharge defendant from the obligation to make a full discovery in aid of plaintiff's defence in the action at law, and therefore that plaintiff still enjoyed his old right to an injunction in default of answer. In Re Page, 20 L. T. Rep. 248, a married woman was allowed to sue in respect of her separate estate, without the intervention of a next friend. In Eaton v. Lewis, 20 L. T. Rep. 243, a defendant had admitted possession of certain documents set forth in schedules to his answer. Two letters in this schedule had passages sealed up, which defendant in an affidavit stated to be irrelevant, and to relate to family affairs only. A motion was made to commit for contempt. The Court inspected the concealed passages, and handed them to defendant's counsel, who admitted that he could not resist their production. The Court refused to commit, but ordered the production, and that defendant should pay the costs of the motion.

Some points of much interest as to Taxation of Attorney's Bills were decided by the Lords Justices in Re Barnard, 20 L. T. Rep. 241. First, whether the jurisdiction to tax being equally in a Court of Equity and a Court of Law, and the latter being first applied to, the former can still deal with the taxation. It was held in the affirmative. It was next held that such an application could not be supported without special circumstances. Lord CRANWORTH doubted whether the statute meant to give jurisdiction at all after judgment. The Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE assented to this view of the statute, but added: "I reserve to myself the faculty of deciding, when it shall be necessary to decide, that where judgment has been obtained on a question of taxation of bills of costs, then the right to have them taxed under the statute is gone." It appeared also that a solicitor may make several charges for different attendances on the same day, and that a mere overcharge, made without any appearance of fraud, does not amount to a special circumstance calling for taxation of the bill.

Where a suit is pending in respect of a matter in which an Equity Court has concurrent jurisdiction with a Court of Law, which cannot give relief for a long time in a subject which requires a speedy remedy, it will not in general allow the defendant in equity to proceed at law in respect of the same subject-matter: (Brenan v. Preston, 20 L. T. Rep. 241.)

Notice of motion to dismiss bill was given by defendant on 24th April, 1851. On 27th May, 1852, the bill was ordered to be dismissed with costs. In the meanwhile another motion of plaintiff was pending, and negotiations for settlement were proceeding. The Taxing Master was held to have rightly allowed defendant's solicitor for attendances in court, upon motion to dismiss, only upon such days as he could swear that he attended bonâ fide in expectation that the motion would come on: (Hollocombe v. Hollocombe, 20 L. T. Rep. 244.)

SHAM LAWYERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I beg to inclose you for publication another specimen of a "lawyer's letter," from the unprivileged class who are now encroaching to so large an extent upon the province of the attorneys. The delinquent appears to be an auctioneer and accountant; and, from the number appearing at the conclusion of his letter, it is very apparent it cannot be the first application of the kind that has emanated from the same quarter. Surely there is, or ought to be, some remedy to crush an evil so rapidly increasing.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
F. HAWLEY.

102, Chancery-lane, 14th Feb. 1853.

62 (late 35), Great College-street,
Camden-town, 12th Feb. 1853.

Gentlemen,—I am desired by Mr. ——— to apply to you for the payment of £—, due from you to him. This claim is for 3 doz. bottles of champagne; and I beg to inform you that unless the amount be paid by Monday, the 14th inst., that legal proceedings will be taken against you for the recovery thereof without further notice.

As this application is made to prevent you the expense and inconvenience attendant on recourse being had to coercive measures, I trust the opportunity this affords will not be lost.

I am, gentlemen, yours obediently,
Messrs. ———, THOS. JOSH. WADE.

N.B.—If you call to make any arrangement, bring this (No. 2068) with you.

Office hours from nine to seven.

SUMMONS FOR ORDERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I perceive that Mr. Kerr, in his annotations upon the New Rules, expresses his approbation of the alteration respecting the number of judges summonses prior to an order. I believe his opinion is not seconded by any attorney, and that no alteration could have been made more fraught with annoyance to the Profession, and less beneficial to suitors.

As the motive of the change was economy, allow me to suggest that there be still but one summons, but that it shall be returnable in the alternative, either on the following or the second day after its service.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.
15th Feb. 1853. M.

BUSINESS OF THE PEERS.—At the sittings after Term in London the C. P. list contained 54 causes, 22 of which were for special juries. In the Q. B. the list contained 74 causes, of which 13 were remanets, and 15 were marked for trial by special jurie. The Chief Justice said the list was unusually heavy; he believed heavier than had been known for years before, and he understood that, after eliminating undefended causes and those that had been withdrawn and stayed, there were still 51 bonâ fide cases, which must be tried.

Queries and Points of Practice.

Can any of your legal readers inform the writer if an affair can be introduced into a "writ dum?"—"John Barry, alias Barry." R.

Answers to Queries.

ATTORNEYS IN AUSTRALIA.

I am to inform you, in answer to Mr. Tootal's inquiry, that by the last rules of the Supreme Court in Sydney, gentlemen who have duly served under articles in England are still eligible for admission there, on giving the usual notice—I believe, a month's. F. H.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

AN interesting point of practice was decided in an appeal to the Ex. A plaintiff claimed a sum exceeding 50*l.*, but reduced it below that sum by giving defendant credit for a set-off, and sued for the balance. Defendant had never agreed to the set-off, nor allowed it in any balance of account. The County Court Judge was of opinion that he had not jurisdiction, whereupon the plaintiff agreed to abandon the excess above 50*l.* in order to give jurisdiction. The Judge was of opinion that it was not competent to the plaintiff to do this; and that was the question raised on the appeal. The Ex. held that the Judge had rightly decided. "We think," said Pollock, C.B., "that the demand, originally exceeding 50*l.*, being only reduced below it by offering to allow a set-off never agreed to as a part payment, was one over which the Court had no jurisdiction. The offer to abandon the excess at the trial appears to us to make no difference, as the claim from the first was one over which the County Court had no jurisdiction:" (Anard v. Rhodes, 20 L. T. Rep. 252.)

There is also an interesting Insolvency case. An insolvent was remanded for two years by the County Court, and while in prison had a detainer lodged against him by a creditor whom he had omitted from the schedule. His wife also contracted fresh debts. When the period arrived for his discharge, he procured his removal to the Queen's Prison. He was now desirous of releasing himself from that creditor's debt, and those incurred by his wife, and it was held that he might do so by filing a petition in the Insolvent Debtors' Court, and include those debts in his schedule. In the course of the case Mr. Commissioner Law stated his opinion to be that the County Courts have power to direct a rehearing: (Re Fardell, 20 L. T. Rep. 252.)

We have received from Manchester a complaint that, if well founded in fact, deserves the serious attention of the Profession in that town. We are assured that some of the Attorneys who practise in the County Court there as advocates frequently take briefs from "the agents" who infest those Courts, and even have the name of such agent indorsed, precisely as an Attorney would indorse a brief for Counsel. If this be true, and our correspondent says it is "openly and flagrantly adopted" in the Court, and "excites the astonishment of every respectable member of the Profession who enters it," something should be done to put a stop to so bad a practice—for not only is it in direct violation of the law, but it is fostering, by encouragement, that band of harpies who prey upon the Profession under the title of "agents" and "accountants." Let the Manchester Law Society look to it. Surely some means could be devised by which the fact may be detected and brought under the notice of the Judge, who would exercise his authority by refusing to hear any Attorney so instructed, or by requiring the production of a written retainer from the client before he will permit an Attorney, once found guilty of such a practice, to appear again.

A PRACTITIONER'S EXPERIENCES OF THE COUNTY COURTS.

[We have received from a Practitioner of very extensive experience in the Profession, and who has a large practice in the County Courts, an elaborate statement of the results of the knowledge thus acquired of the advantages and defects of the new tribunals. Were we permitted to mention his name, it would of itself command a respectful attention for any communication from him on any subject of practical law. We give it a place, without subscribing to all his views; indeed, we differ entirely from some of them; but on a question which is yet in debate, and which can be determined only by the evidence of positive experience, it is right that all should be heard who can speak with the authority of experience. For the same reason we make no apology for the length of this article, which will be continued for two or three weeks. Its interest and importance will excuse the space it occupies.]

As much that I have to say is in the way of complaint, I ought also to premise that I am no grumbler against law reform, though, like many others, a great sufferer by it. Indeed, I may boast that the very first great practical step in the way of reform was suggested by myself in a pamphlet published in 1828, for the improvement of the police; and Sir Robert Peel adopted my suggestions and proposed amendments to the letter, though only a few of the daily papers gave me the credit of the new system. I am, in short, no anti-reformer; but I complain, in the hope of amendment.

That the extension of the County Court jurisdiction has done much good is unquestionable. It has facilitated litigation of the most legitimate kind, and by making petty debts easily recoverable, has improved the trade of small shopkeepers, and placed credit on a more substantial footing. Nor can it be denied that it has provided redress in many cases of serious injury where compensation was previously unattainable because the remedy was too costly. I may add too, that, in cutting away all defences merely technical it has in great measure defeated what may be termed the chicanery of practice, and superseded the necessity of legal aid in the conduct of a cause. These are great benefits certainly; but here they stop. I can carry my eulogy no further; I am even compelled to say that these benefits, great as they are, have been dearly purchased; and if the evils with which they have been attended cannot be checked, it will in a few years become a question whether they were worth the purchase.

The first of these evils is only partially attributable to the system; it has its source in the new law of evidence, but it is the system that developes the mischief, and gives opportunity.

I have never yet attended a single court where the most frightful perjury was not committed on the one side or the other, and often on both; perjury, not as to distant dates and facts that might be forgotten, but on the occurrences of yesterday; perjury, not as to equivocal circumstances, admitting of mistake, but on plain yes or no occurrences. A man's receipt is shown to him, and he swears that he never wrote it. He is asked whether he did not meet B. at a gin-shop a week ago, and he swears he never saw him in his life; B. is called, and contradicts every word; C. corroborates B. and proves that on the very day he and the first witness were buying cattle at a market fifty miles off; tenders of payment are averred and denied on oath; agreements for labour are produced and proved, and then sworn to be forged; a servant sues for wages, and a mistress swears she has been overpaid; trade books are called for, and entries interlined in different ink are sworn to have been made at the apparent date; shop boys make oath to the delivery of goods, and servants swear that they were never ordered nor received. To such an extent is this carried that, only three weeks ago, one of our judges publicly declared from the bench that he should exclude all witnesses from court while he heard a cause, whether counsel requested it or not.

It may be said why are not the offenders to be prosecuted and punished? But who is to determine which is the offender? and even if that difficulty did not present itself in limine, all the gaols in the county would not hold a tenth part of the prisoners.

The share which the County Court system has in this demoralising work is this: it has brought into the field of litigation a class of parties and witnesses of the most ignorant description; people quite uneducated even in the elements of religious knowledge, or any knowledge whatever; but naturally indulging in all the partisanship of contention, whether legal or personal; they enter the court in the same spirit that a second enters the prize ring with his principal—determined at all hazards to "carry their man through," and then celebrate their triumph at the gin palace. They conceive that this is to be done by hard swearing, and they have sense enough to know that to deny in terms the plaintiff's or defendant's statement is the point.

Then, in the majority of plaints, usually about nine in ten or more, neither counsel nor attorney is employed, so that there is no previous sifting or collation of evidence; no implied pledge of professional character that the case or the defence is presumptively honest; no scrutiny of any kind into the proofs, or the consistency or character of the witnesses by whom it is to be sustained; but the witnesses and the parties have met together and compared notes over a pot of beer, and are thus tutored into their statements to be made next day on oath. In the absence of counsel they know that they are safe from cross-examination, and therefore from palpable detection. "Oath against oath" is their maxim, and the Judge has often no other guide to the truth than the number of witnesses for or against any given fact, though his decision must turn upon it.

(To be continued.)

TO "THE CLERK OF A SINGLE COURT."

If the gentleman whose letter with this signature appeared in the LAW TIMES of the 13th Nov. last, will send his address to the Editor, giving his name and residence, the writer of this letter will at once enter into a correspondence with him on the subject, and will pledge the co-operation of several gentlemen similarly situated, in obtaining the redress alluded to in his letter of the 13th Nov. last.

A CLERK OF A SINGLE COURT IN YORKSHIRE.

MANCHESTER COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Feb. 11.

(Before R. BRANDT, Esq. the Judge.)

BALL v. CUTTLER.

Costs to County Court agents.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff, who is one of the class called County Court agents, who have before figured in these columns, to recover 2*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*

Myers, of the firm of Myers and Birkbeck, represented the plaintiff.

Owens, barrister, instructed by Mr. S. Simpson, solicitor, appeared for the defendant.

It appeared that, in the evening of the 21st July last Mr. Cuttler was driving in a gig through Ardwick, in company with a horse dealer called Thompson; they came to a place where the street was being repaired by a contractor on behalf of the corporation, and there being large heaps of earth thrown up, and no light or protector, the gig was nearly overthrown, and Mr. Cuttler thrown out and seriously injured. The next morning Thompson brought the plaintiff to Mr. Cuttler's residence "as a person who would do business cheaper than a regular lawyer," and they were shown by his daughter into his bedroom.

The plaintiff swore that upon this occasion he took instructions from the defendant to commence an action against the corporation of Manchester, to recover damages for the injuries sustained, the terms being "5 per cent. on the amount recovered and costs out of pocket;" and that he issued a summons accordingly, laying the damages at 50*l.*, for which he paid 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; the remaining 2*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* was for his commission on the amount claimed, and for cab hire. Plaintiff stated that he had issued some hundred plaints out of this court.

Mr. Cuttler deposed that when Thompson and plaintiff called upon him in his bedroom, he was too ill to talk about the matter, and positively denied that any such instructions were ever given, and that he was not aware an action had been commenced until Mr. Taylor, the deputy-registrar of the Court of Record, at the request of the town clerk, called upon him; that as soon as he was able to leave his room he went to his solicitor, who at once took steps to discontinue the action, the corporation not being liable for the negligence of their contractor. The defendant's statement was confirmed by the evidence of his daughter.

Owens, after contending that the plaintiff had never been instructed to commence the action against the corporation, said, that he felt it to be his duty to take higher ground; that he considered the present a case of importance, particularly to the legal profession. Here was a person acting as an attorney in the strictest sense of the word,—taking instructions for an action, commencing and carrying on proceedings, and charging a commission on the amount to be recovered. The learned counsel contended that the contract upon which the plaintiff sued (if any) was void on grounds of public policy; that it had always been a part of the policy of this country that the profession of the law should be exercised by a body of gentlemen, bound by certain rules, and subject to certain responsibilities; that this was clearly shown by the vast number of statutes that had been passed for their government, and by the many rules that had from time to time been laid down by our courts of justice for their guidance, and securing as far as possible their fitness for their duties and their general good conduct. The present case was an instance of the wisdom of that policy, for the action brought against the corporation was against the wrong party, their contractor only being liable, a point of law known by every solicitor, and which was at once apparent to Mr. Simpson, the solicitor interested for the defendant.

His Honour, in delivering judgment said, that, upon the facts, he felt inclined to be with the defendant; but even if there had been clear proof of a contract, he considered he would not be doing his duty, filling the place he did, were he to decide the case merely upon that ground. He agreed with the observations of the learned counsel, except that this was important only to the legal profession,—it was much more so to the public at large; that these courts were intended for the poor as well as the rich; and where the amounts were small and the cases simple, as ordinary debts, it might be desirable that these people should employ an agent to sue out the plaint, but in such cases the agent had no right to express as much as an opinion upon the merits, much less to give advice, as in this case, and usurp the functions of an attorney. In doing so agents were going beyond their depth, and abusing the indulgence of the court, and he for the future would keep a watchful eye over their proceedings. The want of a legal education in conducting cases involving often nice points of law, must necessarily result in leading parties astray, and entailing upon them fruitless expense. The plaintiff in what he had done had gone quite out of his province; he had far exceeded the utmost limits that could be permitted to persons of his description. It was contrary to public policy, and injurious to the public interest, that he should be permitted to do so, and that he could not recover either the commission he charged or the money he had paid in professing to act on behalf of the defendant. A nonsuit was entered accordingly.

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

A., PRESSED by a creditor, borrowed 200*l.* of B. on an agreement that the money should be paid to the creditor, A. executing to B. an assignment of all her estate and effects by way of security for the loan, with power to B. in default of payment to enter and take all the effects upon the premises at the time of entry. A. sold the goods, and out of the proceeds paid B. the 200*l.* Was this an act of bankruptcy? It was held by the Q. B. not to be so, it not appearing that the assignment was made to defeat or delay creditors, or in contemplation of bankruptcy: (Hutton v. Cruttwell, 20 L. T. Rep. 245.)

The Truck Act has been the subject of judicial interpretation. In Sharman v. Sanders, 20 L. T. Rep. 247, an "artificer" within the meaning of that Act was held to be "a person hired to labour with his hands; and that a person who merely contracts to procure labour to be done, either by himself or others, is not within the intention of the statute. A person entering into such a contract is a speculator, who necessarily calculates the price of labour at the time, and is very different from the mere workman who is paid for his own labour:" (per MAULE, J.) Where, therefore, a man was employed in unloading and bringing ironstone at so much per ton, to be paid monthly, and he hired men to work under him at weekly wages, he not being bound by his contract to give personal services, it was held that, though in fact he did part of the work himself, he was not an artificer within the meaning of the Truck Act, and consequently could not recover from his employer the wages paid in goods to him or his men.

A. signed a blank note stamp in July 1846: in May 1851 he obtained his certificate in the Court of Bank.; in Oct. 1852 the blank stamp was filled up and indorsed to a third person, bonâ fide, for a good consideration. It was held to be a valid note: (Temple v. Pullen, 20 L. T. Rep. 252.)

CONSOLIDATION AND AMENDMENT OF COMMERCIAL LAW.—The annual report of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce contains the following observations:—"Few ameliorations are more needed than the reduction, in a country like ours, of the law which should govern commercial transactions to simple and just principles; there is none which your board would more gladly see begun. The board has a proper sense of the largeness of the question and of the difficulties which surround the execution of so important a codification. It cannot but be sensible of the length of time which will be required to perfect it, and, therefore, would be unwilling that the many incongruities which now exist should be continued until a perfect code should be prepared; but it would have every future amendment of isolated portions to be so constructed that it might enter at the proper time into its place on the general code. It was under this conviction that, in accepting an invitation from the Earl of Harrowby, as President of the Law Amendment Society in London, to send a deputation to a meeting of delegates from chambers of commerce, town councils, and other bodies, to be held at the rooms of that society for the consideration of this subject, your board framed a resolution to indicate the course by which the vice-president, who kindly undertook the deputation, should be guided, and which he might show to the committee which was to direct the proceedings. The board took this step because it knew that a committee of merchants and legal gentlemen had long studied the grievous evils which arise daily from the dissimilarity of commercial laws in different portions of this kingdom, and had prepared a bill for the amendment and assimilation of the laws of bankruptcy; and it feared that, without some manifestation, the valuable labours of the committee might be lost, or an amendment which presses for immediate adoption might be postponed to an indefinite period. This was fortunately remedied by a resolution adopted by the meeting which was held on the 16th November; and it is hoped that the bill prepared under the auspices of the committee of London merchants will be forthwith brought into Parliament, when every assistance ought to be given towards procuring a perfect measure."

COURT PAPERS.

Equity Courts.

NEW ORDER IN CHANCERY.

PAYMENT OF LEGACY DUTY ON FUNDS IN COURT.

Monday, 31st January, 1853.

I, the Right Honourable Robert Mounsey Lord Cranworth, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, do hereby order and direct in manner following, that is to say:—That the Registrar, in drawing up any decree or order whereby the Accountant-General shall be directed to pay or transfer any fund, or part of any fund, in respect of which any duty shall be payable to the revenue under the Acts relating to legacy duty, shall, unless such decree or order expressly provide for the payment of the duty, direct the Accountant-General to have regard to the circumstance that such duty is payable; and where, by any decree or order, any carrying over to a separate account of any fund in respect of which any such duty may be chargeable shall be directed, the Registrar shall add the words "subject to legacy duty," to the title of the account. And, in order the better to provide security against the payment or transfer by the Accountant-General of any fund chargeable with any such duty without the duty being first paid, the Accountant-General is, on receiving notice from the proper officer that the duty is payable, to cause a memorandum to be made in his books in conformity with such notice. And the Accountant-General, before executing any decree or order directing the payment or transfer of any fund or part of any fund in respect of which any such duty shall be payable, shall require the production of the official receipt for the duty, or a certificate from the proper officer of the payment of the duty chargeable in respect of any such fund, or any portion thereof respectively, by any such decree or order directed to be paid or transferred. And I do further order and direct that where, in making any decree or order express provision for the payment of any such duty shall be intended to be made, such duty shall by such decree or order, be directed to be paid to the Receiver-General of Inland Revenue for the time being, or his official assistant duly constituted, to be named in the order.

(Signed) CRANWORTH, C.

Common Law Courts.

EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR THE ROLL OF ATTORNEYS.

NEW REGULATION AS TO THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

THE mode of conducting the examination, hitherto adopted by the examiners, has been to propose fifteen questions on the principles and practice of each of the following branches of the law, viz.—1st. Common law; 2nd, Conveyancing; 3rd, Equity; 4th, Bankruptcy; and 5th, Criminal law and proceedings before magistrates.

The examiners have hitherto required that the candidate for admission should satisfactorily answer a majority of the fifteen questions in the branches of common law and equity; and also in one of the three other branches; thus making a satisfactory examination in law and equity indispensable, and leaving it optional with the candidates to answer in any one of the three other branches.

But looking to the great importance to the community that attorneys and solicitors should be well acquainted with the laws of real property, and qualified to prepare and superintend the due execution of wills, deeds, and other instruments, it is understood that the examiners, with the sanction of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Q. B., the Master of the Rolls, the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of C. P. and the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Ex. (to whom the regulation of the examination is confided by the statute), have determined in future to require the candidates to pass a satisfactory examination in the department of conveyancing.

We believe that the examiners will continue the practice of proposing questions in bankruptcy and in criminal law and proceedings before the magistrates, in order that candidates may have given their attention to these subjects may have the advantage of answering such questions, and having the correctness of their answers in this department taken into consideration in estimating the merit of their general examination.

It is expected that the new regulation will be carried into effect in and after next Michaelmas Term.—Legal Observer.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORD LIEUTENANTS.

ROSS-SHIRE.—William Hugh Murray, to be deputy-lieutenant.

YORKSHIRE.—The Right Hon. Lord Hawke; Viscount Milton; the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bart.; Sir William Foster Charles Cooke, Bart.; Sir Charles Slingsby, Bart.; Sir George Goodman, Knt.; Edward Akroyd, Esq.; William Aldam, jun. Esq.; Joseph Beaumont, Esq.; Thomas Davison Bland, Esq.; James Brown, Esq.; Samuel James Brown, Esq.; Edmund Calverley, Esq.; Thomas Clapham, Esq.; John Cooper, Esq.; Ralph Creyke, Esq.; John Crossley, Esq.; Francis Darwin, Esq.; Joseph Dent, Esq.; John Dent Dent, Esq.; Joseph Eastwood, Esq.; Francis Hawkesworth Fawkes, Esq.; John Foster, Esq.; John Fullerton, Esq.; James Milnes Gaskell, Esq.; John Gott, Esq.; John Berwicke Greenwood, Esq.; John Hague, Esq.; Alfred Harris, Esq.; Joseph Holdsworth, Esq.; Ralph Markland, Esq.; Joseph Marshall, Esq.; William Stithorp Maude, Esq.; William Mordaunt Edward Milner, Esq.; Richard Monckton Milnes, Esq.; William Nicholson Nicholson, Esq.; Wilson Overend, Esq.; John Rand, Esq.; George John Serjeantson, Esq.; John George Smyth, Esq.; Walter Thomas William Spencer Stanhope, Esq.; Joseph Mason Tennant, Esq.; William Bradley Wainman, Esq.; Edmund Waterton, Esq.; John Thomas Wharton, Esq.; Lamplugh Wickham Wickham, Esq.; John Wilson, Esq.; Basil Thomas Woodd, Esq.; John Yorke, Esq.; Hugh Charles Meynell Ingram, Esq.; James Garth Marshall, Esq.; Henry Cowper Marshall, Esq.; and John Gylby Uppleby, Esq., to be deputy-lieutenants.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.—William Armstrong, Esq.; Sir John Fife, Knight; George Fenwick, Esq.; Thomas Emerson Headlam, Esq.; James Hodgson, Esq.; Joseph Hawks, Esq.; Joseph Lamb, Esq.; Robert Plummer, Esq.; and Henry West, Esq., to be deputy-lieutenants.

NEW MAGISTRATES.—Anthony Sproule and Frederick James Prior, Esquires, have been sworn into the commission of the peace for the borough of Tewkesbury.

The Attorney-General has nominated Mr. John Wickens and Mr. T. H. Terrell to represent him in Equity, in the matters relating to public charities. The right hon. gentleman has also selected Mr. Alfred Harrison to be Counsel in Equity to the Board of Works and to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes. The above offices are vacant by the appointment of Mr. W. Milbourne James to the office of Vice-Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, in the room of Mr. Bethel, Her Majesty's Solicitor-General. —Observer.

The Queen has been pleased to make the following appointments for the Colony of Victoria, viz. Edward Eyre Williams, Esq. to be Second Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court; William Foster Stawell, Esq. to be Her Majesty Attorney-General; James Croke, Esq. to be Her Majesty's Solicitor-General; Henry Field Gurner, Esq. to be Crown Solicitor; Robert Williams Pohlman, Esq. to be Commissioner of the Court of Requests and Chairman of General and Quarter Sessions; Frederick Wilkinson, Esq. to be Master in Equity of the Supreme Court, and Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

The New Practice of the Court of Chancery. By C. C. WEIGALL, Solicitor. London: Sweet.

THIS is a Digest of the New Statutes, Rules, and Orders, arranged alphabetically for convenience of reference. Mr. Weigall, being a solicitor, is of course a practical man, and knows what practical men require, and he has constructed his work accordingly. He does not, however, attempt anything in the shape of treatise; it is little more than a rearrangement of the statutes and orders, with some of the decisions: he adds to these a bill of costs and the usual collection of forms.

A Treatise on the Proceedings of Election Committees, with an Abstract of the Costs, and an Appendix. By CHARLES FRERE, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Westminster: Bigg and Sons.

THE Election Committees commenced their arduous labours on Tuesday, and, therefore, Mr. Frere's little volume is as timely as it is useful to those who may be engaged professionally in the task of contesting the 100 seats said to be in dispute. Mr. Frere has arranged his work very conveniently. He commences with an abstract of the Acts regulating committees; he then proceeds to describe minutely the proceedings of the committee, its meeting, power of adjournment, the parties before it, the rights and duties of counsel, the documents before the committee, the issue, the forms of procedure, and the division of the case. He next treats of witnesses, the summoning of them, their duties and punishment, and then of the poll-books, &c. He then considers the various kinds of petitions, as for want of qualification, for bribery and treating, and for disqualification, with the proceedings and evidence in each. A scrutiny is next described, from the production of the register, the inquiry into the votes, and the course of proceeding on each vote. This is followed by the resolution of the committee, and their report to the House, regulated accordingly as the petition is against the return only or for the seating of the petitioner; the report on votes struck off or added, and the consequent correction of the register; and the report in case of bribery. Then he considers the course in case of withdrawal or abandonment of charges of bribery, the important subject of costs, and reports with a view to ulterior proceedings, or on the prevalence of corrupt practices. Finally the author treats of the issue of commissions in Irish cases, and of the consequences of the committee being reduced in number. An appendix of statutes and a copious index complete the volume.

LAW PAMPHLETS.

SIR GEORGE STEPHEN has republished, in the form of a pamphlet, a series of letters which originally appeared in the Liverpool Mail about two years since, on Bankruptcy and Credit Trade. It is an emphatic protest against the present system of trade and the law of bankruptcy, by which that system is rather encouraged than otherwise. He would limit credit by law; or rather refuse the powers of the law for the enforcement of the debt after a certain interval. Coming from one of so large an experience, these letters cannot fail to interest.——Mr. STEWART has published a second edition of his little book entitled How to Enfranchise your Copyholds? a proof that it has been found useful; but some months must yet elapse before the Act comes into operation.——We have received from GEORGE PATERSON, Esq. Advocate, an Historical Account of the Fiars in Scotland; the Fiars Courts being those at which the corn averages are struck, by which the stipends of the clergy, of the schoolmasters, and a vast amount of rents are regulated. He contends that they are extremely faulty, and recommends some improvements in the system.——CHARLES PURTON COOPER, Esq., Q.C. has added to his many useful little treatises a Manual of Chancery Chamber Practice, describing the business to be done there under the new procedure, and the manner of doing it.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

PROPOSED LAW REFORMS.—Though the session only commenced on Thursday last, Parliament was "seised," before the end of the week, of at least twenty bills on different branches of legal amendment. In the Commons, Mr. Henry Drummond, Mr. Isaac Butt, the Lord Advocate, the Solicitor-General, Mr. Whiteside, Mr. Collier, and Lord Hotham, are each and all ready and willing to apply a specific remedy to some well-recognised defect in our jurisprudence. In the upper House, the aspect of affairs is equally promising. Lord St. Leonards has no fewer than six separate measures under his charge—Lord Brougham has four—and the Lord Chief Justice has a little one. The subjects proposed to be dealt with are of infinite variety. Three Bills relate to the management of lunatics; a like number have reference to the enlargement of the jurisdiction of the County Courts; a seventh seeks to amend several material particulars in the law of bankruptcy; an eighth introduces some very valuable changes in the law of evidence and in procedure; a ninth remodels the practice of the Common Law Courts in Ireland; a tenth proposes to facilitate the transfer of land; an eleventh strikes a death-blow at the Ecclesiastical Courts—so far, at least, as relates to their testamentary jurisdiction; a twelfth regulates the office of Examiner of the Court of Chancery; a thirteenth aims at disqualifying certain judicial officers from sitting in the House of Commons; a fourteenth confers on the Sheriff's Courts in Scotland many of the powers now exercised by the English County Courts; a fifteenth introduces a new system of management in the Accountant-General's Office, which will probably save the suitors many thousands a year; a sixteenth makes provision for the granting of new trials in criminal cases; and the last which we shall here notice forms the commencement of a digest of the criminal law. It will thus be seen that, even apart from the plans of legal reform which are to be promoted under the immediate auspices of the Ministry, the Legislature has no small amount of work cut out for it.—Morning Chronicle.

FRAUD BY AN ATTORNEY AND HIS CLERK.—Court of Q. B., Feb. 8 (before Lord Campbell, C. J. and a special jury)—Orchard v. Cox.—This was an indictment removed from the Central Criminal Court by certiorari, which charged the defendant, William Henry Orchard, an attorney in Staple-inn, and George Cox, his clerk, with conspiring to deceive and defraud the Court of Common Pleas, and the Master of the said Court. The indictment also charged the defendants with conspiring to defraud a person named Rackstraw. The defendants pleaded that they were "not guilty." It appeared that an action had been brought in the C. P. in the year 1850, in which Frederick George Orchard and Augustus Orchard were the plaintiffs, and a person named Rackstraw was the defendant. The action was in trover for a horse, which the defendant claimed to retain in satisfaction of a lien which he set up for the keep of the horse. The plaintiffs recovered a verdict with 31*l.* 10*s.* damages; and the present defendant, who acted as attorney for the plaintiffs, his clerk Cox went before the Master to have the costs of the action taxed. He there produced an affidavit which had been sworn by his clerk, the other defendant Cox, in which the deponent stated that he had paid, or caused to be paid, certain expenses to the witnesses who had attended at the trial. The Master refused to allow the amounts, upon the ground that the affidavit contained no positive averment that the money had been paid. Mr. Wilkin, an attorney, who appeared for the defendant in the action at the taxation, then stated that, if Orchard would give his word of honour that the money had been paid, he would make no further difficulty. That assurance was given by both defendants, and the expenses were allowed. It was afterwards discovered that large sums of money charged for witnesses' expenses had not been paid, though the defendant Cox had obtained receipts from the witnesses on the statement that the money could not be paid without their signature, and, when before the Master, had produced the receipts in proof that the money had been paid. The witnesses were at first told that no expenses were allowed, but this was afterwards discovered to be false. The defendant Orchard, on being taxed with the fraud, said that two of the witnesses owed him a bill of costs, and he wished to set off the sums allowed for their expenses against his own claim. An order was then obtained from a judge to disallow the taxation of the costs, which was done accordingly; and it was agreed that the horse should be given up, and that the damages and costs obtained from the defendant Rackstraw should be returned. This was done, and the matter dropped till the present indictment was preferred by Frederick George Orchard, the defendant's brother, who was stated to have been actuated by some private motive in wishing to have his brother struck off the rolls. Wilkins, Serjt. and James severally addressed the jury for the two defendants, and then called a large number of witnesses, who gave them both good characters for integrity.—Lord CAMPBELL, in summing up the case to the jury, said the question for their consideration was, whether the defendants, when they made the untrue statement before the Master, did so with the intent to defraud Rackstraw or the court. The question was one which intimately concerned not only the defendants, but the pure administration of criminal justice in this country. His Lordship then carefully read over the evidence, and observed that the good character which had been given to the defendants would be very valuable in case there should be any reasonable doubts upon the minds of the jury as to their guilt; but if they should be of opinion that they entered into the scheme with the intention to defraud the Master or the defendant Rackstraw, it would be their duty to say that they were guilty of the conspiracy charged against them.—The jury retired to consider their verdict, and upon their return into court found both the defendants guilty.—Chambers thereupon prayed the judgment of the court.—James applied to have judgment postponed, and stated that he wished to read affidavits in mitigation of punishment.—Lord CAMPBELL: I am quite ready to hear any affidavit now.—James said he was not at present defendants must then appear on Thursday at the prepared with affidavits.—On Thursday Lord CAMPBELL sentenced the defendants to six months' imprisonment; but they did not appear; and it is said that they have sailed for Australia.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

BRACE.—On the 16th inst. at 9, Chandos-street, Cavendish-square, the wife of Thomas Brace, Esq. of a daughter.

HILLIER.—On the 29th ult. at Bury St. Edmunds, the wife of Charles B. Hillier, Esq. Chief Magistrate of Hong-Kong, of a daughter.

BROADMEAD.—On the 13th inst. at 16, Gloucester-gardens, Hyde-park, the lady of Thomas P. Broadmead, Esq. Barrister-at-law, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

STRONG—WELLS.—On the 12th inst. at St. Dunstan's, Stepney, Richard Isaac, fourth son of Samuel Strong, Esq. of Woking, Surrey, to Elizabeth Jane, eldest daughter of Mr. George Wells, solicitor, of No. 1, Brunswick-terrace, Commercial-road, East.

DEATHS.

EVANS.—On the 6th inst. at his chambers, Lincoln's-inn-fields, John Holman Evans, Esq., solicitor, formerly of Wells, Somersetshire.

WATTS.—On the 27th ult. at Epping, aged 61, Mr. Anthony A. Watts, late of Cornhill and Woodford, solicitor.

ROSE.—On the 12th inst. aged 16, Henry, the second son of Mr. William Rose, solicitor, of South Hackney and Great Prescot-street.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Feb. 15.

Graves, Humphrey, oil and colour man, Ealing, Feb. 23, at half-past eleven, and April 1, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Cannan. Sol. Johnson, Gray's-inn-square. Petition, Jan. 31.

Hanson, Richard Stock, John, and Edward, coal merchants, Stratford, Essex, Feb. 25, at one, and April 1, at half-past one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Cannan. Sols. Messrs. Hillearys, Fenchurch-street. Petition, Feb. 14.

Spence, Jane Emma, boarding-house keeper, Ladbroke-square, Notting-hill, Feb. 23, and April 1, at half-past twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Whitmore. Sol. Vaughan, Porteous-road, Paddington. Petition, Feb. 16.

Sperry, George, draper, Whittlesea, Cambridgeshire, Feb. 24, at half-past twelve, and March 24, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Johnson. Sol. Jones, Size-lane. Petition, Jan. 26.

Gazette, Feb. 18.

Appleyard, George, tavern-keeper and builder, South Shields, March 12, at twelve, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Com. Ritson. Off. as. Baker. Sols. Philipi, Gray's-inn-square; and Bagnal, Durham. Petition, Feb. 4.

Bogen, William, merchant and commission agent, Morpeth-terrace, Hackney-road, March 2, at half-past one, April 6, at one, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Graham. Sols. S. and H. Linklater, 17, Size-lane, City. Petition, Feb. 15.

Bonnard, Bonnet, warehouseman, Addle-street, Wood-street, March 4, and April 12, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Holroyd. Off. as. Groom. Sols. Messrs. Linklater, 17, Size-lane, Bucklersbury. Petition, Feb. 10.

Cornelius, Mikey, plumber, glazier, and painter, Market Lavington, Wilts, March 1 and 31, at eleven, Bristol, Com. Hill. Off. as. Hutton. Sol. Neate, Devizes. Petition, Feb. 8.

Daly, Daniel, builder, Kidsgrove, near Tunstall, Staffordshire, March 9 and 30, at twelve, Birmingham. Com. Daniell. Off. as. Christie. Sols. Llewellyn, Tunstall; and Hodgson, Cherry-street, Birmingham. Petition, Feb. 1.

Davis, John, licensed victualler, Colney Hatch, Middlesex Feb. 26, at one, April 9, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Goulburn. Off. as. Pennel. Sols. Ashurst and Son, 6, Old Jewry, London. Petition, Feb. 12.

Hunt, Richard Parkes, hosier, Kidderminster, March 2 and April 15, at twelve, Birmingham. Com. Daniell. Off. as. Christie. Sols. Saunders and Son, Kidderminster; and Motteram, Knight, and Emmet, Bennett's-hill, Birmingham. Petition, Feb. 14.

Jagger, Luke, woollen cloth manufacturer and merchant, Huddersfield, March 7 and April 4, at twelve, Leeds. Com. Ayrton. Off. as. Hope. Sols. Messrs. Sykes, Huddersfield; and Bond and Barwick, Leeds. Petition, Feb. 14.

Lemon, John, shopkeeper, Newton Moor, Chester, March 1, and 22, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Fraser. Sol. Buckley, Ashton-under-Lyne. Petition, Feb. 14.

Morgan, Henry Mawnington, ship owner, Victoria-square, Reading, March 7, at twelve, April 6, at half-past one, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Stansfield. Sol. Freeman and Bothamley, 23, Coleman-street, City. Petition, Feb. 17.

Shaw, William, bookseller, stationer, toyman, and dealer in musical instruments, music, and fancy articles, Lincoln, March 2, at twelve, Kingston-upon-Hull. Com. Ayrton. Off. as. Carrick. Sol. Tweed, Lincoln. Petition, Jan. 3.

Tuerman, George Henry, hosier and outfitter, Plymouth, Feb. 26, at half-past one, March 24, at half-past ten, Plymouth. Com. Bere. Off. as. Hernaman. Sols. Sole, Turner and Turner, 68, Aldermanbury; Overbury, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry; and Little and Billing, Devonport. Petition, Feb. 15.

Unwin Isaac, builder, 30 and 65, Poland-street, Oxford-street, March 1, at eleven, April 7, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Evans. Off. as. Johnson. Sol. Rivolta, 10, Hart-street, Bloomsbury. Petition, Feb. 14.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Adams, W. B. and Ralston, G. engineers, second joint, 1*s.* 6*d.* Cannan, London.—Armitage and Sons, woollen cloth manufacturers, first sep. of J. Armitage, 11*d.* Hope, Leeds.—Baston, B. J. corn and coal merchant, first, 1*s.* 8*d.* Edwards, London.—Boyle, S. manufacturer of china and earthenware, first, 5*s.* Whitmore, Birmingham.—Crocker, T. sail maker, first, 2*s.* Groom, London.—Dalby, E. H. butcher, first, 10½*d.* Whitmore, London.—Dickens, G. clerk, third, 4*d.* Stansfeld, London.—Emmison, R. scrivener, second, 11½*d.* Bittleston, Nottingham.—Gladwin, H. draper, first, 2*s.* 1*d.* Bittleston, Nottingham.—Groocock, S. hosier, &c. first, 1*s.* 10*d.* Bittleston, Nottingham.—Harris and Burle, brewers, first sep. of Harris, 6*s.* 3*d.* Cannan, London.—Hartley, M. and H. stationers, first, 2*s.* 9*d.* Hope, Leeds.—Holroyd, F. twine spinner, first, 1*s.* 6*d.* Hope, Leeds.—Lawson, J. cloth merchant, first, 2*s.* Young, Leeds.—M'Cree, T. and A. grocers, first, on new proofs, 8*s.* 3*d.* Second on total proofs, 4*d.* Second and final sep. of A. McCree, 7*s.* 9*d.* Walley, Newcastle,—Metcalfe, J. corn and coal merchant, second and final, 1*s.* 7½*d.* Hope, Leeds.—Middlewood and Foster, linen drapers, first on new proofs (on account of 6*s.*). 2*s.* 6*d.* Cannan, London.—Millard, J. coppersmith, second, 9*d.* Groom, London.—Moody, S. B. civil and colonial engineer, first, 1*s.* 2*d.* Stansfeld, London.—Oldroyd, W. clerk, second, 1*s.* Stansfeld, London.—Roe, T. upholsterer, first, 2*s.* 6*d.* Pennell, London.—Smallwood, E. brick maker, second, 1*s.* 6½*d.* Stansfeld, London.—Spender, J. builder, first, 2*s.* 6*d.* Edwards, London.—Stevens, J. sail maker, first, 1*s.* 3½*d.* Whitmore, London.—Tunnett, R. builder, first, 1*s.* 6*d.* Pennell, London.—Taylor, S. C. wine merchant, first, 3*s.* 6*d.* Pennell, London.—Wilson, R. grocer, first, 1*s.* 9*d.* Groom, London.—Winterbottom, J. spinner and doubler, first, 8*s.* 4*d.* Hope, Leeds.

CERTIFICATE ESTATES.

Crosthwaite, H. lodging-house keeper, 9½*d.* Apply at the County Court, Brighton.

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Feb. 8.

Bowen, W. ironmonger, Bridgend, Glamorganshire, Jan 31. Trust. J. King, gentleman, Cowbridge. Sol. G. H. Nerity, Bridgend. Gould, G. confectioner, Huddersfield, Feb. 1. Trusts. J. Blackett, commercial traveller, Gecle, and T. Dickinson, grocer, Huddersfield. Sols. Clough and Bantoft, Huddersfield.—Gothard, J. dry salter, Huddersfield, Jan 17. Trust. F. Turner, accountant, Huddersfield. Sols. Clough and Bantoft, Huddersfield.—Thompson, T. and Hollinworth, L. Hyde Cheapers, Great Yarmouth, Jan. 31. Trusts. W. Hitchcock, Wood-street, and W. White, Cheapside, warehousemen. Sols. Sole, Turner, and Turner, Aldermanbury.—Poole, W. emery cloth manufacturer, under the firm of Poole and Company, Kent-street, Southwark, Feb. 4. Trusts. B. Stephenson and G. Muger, blue manufacturers, Maiden-lane, King's-cross. Sol. H. Hamond, Furnival's-inn.—Pullen, H. house agent and dealer in berlin wool, Ryde, Isle of Wight, Feb. 5. Trusts. S. W. Block, warehousekeeper, Paternoster-row; and J. Hatch, commercial traveller, Stanwell. Sols. Read, Langford, and Marsden, Friday-street, Cheapside.

Gazette, Feb. 11.

Bowley, B. general smith, Smethwick, Staffordshire, Feb. 4. Trusts. H. Banks, iron merchant, J. Maybury, iron manufacturer, both of Wednesbury, and S. Thompson, maltster, Smethwick. Sol. H. Holland, Westbromwich.—Brewster, W. M. stationer, bookbinder, and factor, Swansea, Glamorganshire, Jan. 10. Trusts. J. Cock, grocer, and T. Glover, auctioneer, both of Swansea. Sol. J. Howard, Swansea.—Dale, T. J. draper, Sunderland, Dec. 17. Account. T. Lorimer, York-street, Manchester.—Dekamey, L. B. and M. turkey red dyers, Blackley, Lancashire, Jan. 14. Trusts. R. Lodge, drysalter, Manchester, J. Calrow, manufacturer, Bury, and E. Atkin, drysalter, Manchester. Sol. J. Barlow, Manchester.—Driver, P. auctioneer, Yorkshire, Jan. 22. Trusts. T. M. Carter, brewer, Wakefield, and W. Mason, maltster, Apperley-bridge. Sol. W. R. Bakewell, Wakefield.—Frackelton, W. and Edmonds, W. passenger brokers and provision merchants, Liverpool, Jan. 22. Trusts. R. M'Elroy and J. Lythgoe, coopers, both of Liverpool. Sol. M. J. Hore, Liverpool.—Green, H. H. ship builder and inn keeper, Kingston-upon-Hull, Jan. 24. Trusts. R. W. Gleadow and W. T. Dibb, brewers, both of Hull. Sols. Galloway and Son, Hull.—Neal, W. grocer, Farrock-street, Milton next Gravesend, Kent, Jan. 20. Trusts. F. T. Clarke and R. Rowe, wholesale tea dealers, Arthur-street West, London-bridge. Sols. Messrs. Linklater, Size-lane.—Pratt, C. carpenter and wheelwright, Horsham, Surrey, Feb. 3. Trusts. J. Montgomrey, Brentford, and T. Andrews, Mousley, timber merchants. Sol. F. Hewson, Lincoln's inn-fields.—Scricener, C. A. wholesale milliner, Old Change, Jan. 31. Trusts. J. Howell, St. Paul's-churchyard, and C. Candy, Watling-street, warehousemen. Sol. T. Parker, St. Paul's-churchyard.—Sheppard, E. tobacconist, Broad-street, Bristol, Jan. 24. Trusts. E. Jonas, J. Jonas, N. Jonas, and D. Jonas, cigar manufacturers, High Holborn. Sol. M. Abrahams, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.—Wormington, J. innkeeper, Broadwas, Worcestershire, Jan. 20. Trust. E. B. Guest, gentleman, Broadwas. Sol. E. Corles, Worcester.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Feb. 8.

Allen, W. and Webb, G. hook and eye manufacturers, Orset-street, Vauxhall, Jan. 31.—Ashworth, R. and Whitehead, P. engineers and millwrights, Rochdale, Feb. 2. Debts paid by Ashworth.—Bramden, J. and Melbuish, S. coal and firewood merchants, Twig Folly-wharf, Bethnal-green, Feb. 5.—Clark, S., E. S., and T. perfumers, perruke makers, and court hair dressers, Vigo-street, Regent-street, as regards T. Clark, Feb. 5.—Clubb, H. S. and Croft, J. J. carded wool and mill puff manufacturers, Pendleton, near Manchester, Feb. 4.—Cohen, H. and G. tailors and outfitters, Old Hall-street Liverpool, Dec. 11.—Collins, M. and Waters, J. P. linen drapers, Lowndes-terrace, Knightsbridge, Feb. 3.—Collins, S. and Chesters, T. common brewers, Manchester, Jan. 1.—Cory, W. sen., W. jun., and R. coal merchants and coke burners and merchants, Now Barge House Wharf, Commercial-road, Lambeth, as regards W. Cory, sen. June 30. Debts paid by remaining partners. Dawson, H. and W. cotton spinners and manufacturers, Preston, June 30.—Duncan, G. Hutton, A. and Thomas, C. coopers, Chelsea-wharf, Chelsea, Feb. 4. Debts paid by Hutton.—Evans, T. and Clint, W. ship bread bakers, Liverpool, Feb. 3. Debts paid by Evans.—Fowler, J. and Walton, S. silk manufacturers, Macclesfield, Feb. 5.—Gorne, H. and Underwood, W. drysalters, Aldersgate-street, Feb. 4. Debts paid by Garne.—Harris, W. and Brewster, J. tailors, drapers, and juvenile dress makers, Barnsbury-place, Islington, Dec. 25.—Helliwell, W. and Nuttall, J. cotton spinners and manufacturers, Kitson Wood or Higher Lydgate Mill, near Todmorden, Dec. 29. Debts paid by Halliwell.—Jacobs, C. and Elmer, H. drapers, haberdashers, and milliners, Cambridge, Feb. 5. Debts paid by Jacobs.—Johnson, J. T. and W. G. linen drapers and silk mercers, Bishops Stortford, Jan. 31.—Morgan, H. and Bird, S. J. common brewers, Weston, near Bath, Dec. 25. Debts paid by Bird.—Morton, J. and Butler, W. contractors and builders, Doncaster, Feb. 3. Debts paid by Morton.—Pearson, J. sen. J. jun. and Grayson, J. woollen manufacturers, Leeds, Jan. 8.—Phenix, C., Parr, M. and Edwards, J. common brewers, Ruabon, Feb. 5 Debts paid by Phenix.—Richardson, H. M. and Markland, G. attorneys, solicitors, and conveyancers, Bolton-le-Moors, Jan. 28.—Rosenberg, C. T. and Pusey, J. W. engravers and printers, Strand, Feb. 5. Debts paid by Pusey.—Salmon, T. and Dibley, G. iron and brass bedstead and bedding manufacturers, High-row, Knightsbridge, Feb. 1. Debts paid by Salmon.—Saunders, W. and R. blacksmiths and makers of ploughs and other agricultural implements, North Cave, Yorkshire, July 1. Debts paid by R. Saunders.—Stancliffe, J. and J. common brewers and maltsters, Mirfield, Yorkshire, and Sutton, near Macclesfield, Cheshire, Jan. 26. Debts paid by John Stancliffe.—Stubbs, W. and Bird, J. figure manufacturers, Stoke-upon-Trent, Feb. 2. Debts paid by Stubbs.—Thompson, T., R. J., and J. merchants and commission agents, Kingston-upon-Hull, as regards T. Thompson, Dec. 31.—Tunstall, J. and Hudson, J. manufacturing chemists, Bottle Village, near Liverpool, June 30. Debts paid by Hudson.

Gazette, Feb. 15.

Burrill, T. and Grierson, J. tallow and drapers, Manchester, Feb. 9.—Bocock, R., Tunnett, T., Pickup, R. and Sheldon, T. Victoria Foundry, Leeds, as regards Pickup and Sheldon, Feb. 7. Debts paid by Bocock and Tunnett.—Burden, E. and Low, J. tailors and drapers, Liverpool, Feb. 6.—Coppard, T. and Hamilton, J. T. attorneys and solicitors, Horsham, Jan. 29.—Cranenagh, G., Pyatt, E. sen. Hunt, T., Piper, J., Bissell, T., Edwards, T., Young, J. and Austin, W. wood screw manufacturers, under the firm of the Cookley Wood Screw Company, Cookley, as regards Austin, Jan. 24.—Dawson, T., Marthinsen, W. and Critchlow, C. King's Arms-yard, Nov. 30.—Farmer, W. and Hall, C. chemists and druggists, Worcester, Dec. 31. Debts paid by either.—Gaine, J., Bush, F. C., Doling, E. and Bush, J. B. omnibus proprietors, Liverpool, Feb. 2. Debts paid by Evans and Son, solicitors, Liverpool.—Glover, P. Thornford, T. furniture and general dealers, Stratford, Feb. 8. Debts paid by Thornford.—Hayes, J. H. and Pickering, J. timber, slate, coal, and lime merchants and tile manufacturers, Frodsham, Jan. 1.—Holmes, E. and Holt, W. hat-pressers, finishers, makers up, and packers, Manchester, Jan. 25. Debts paid by Holmes.—Humphrys, W. and Robinson, J. solicitors, Hereford, Feb. 7. Debts paid by Humphrys.—Hutchinson, J. and W. card makers, Halifax, Dec. 31.—Joy, T. and A. tailors and robe makers, Oxford, Dec. 31.—King, T. D. and Cooma, H. P. opticians, Bristol, Feb. 8.—Knapman, W. and Smith, C. C. drapers, &c. Okehampton, Feb. 1.—Rock, J. jun. and Watts, W. merchants, factors, and wholesale ironmongers, Birmingham, Feb. 9. Debts paid by Rock.—Sharpe, G. South Retford, and Sharpe, J. East Retford, stone masons, Feb. 8. Debts paid by G. Sharpe.—Skelton, R. and Smith, G. C. engravers and printers, Strand, Feb. 8.—Spooner, J. and D. and Fearnley, J., Malcombe Regis, as regards D. Spooner, Sept. 16.—Sutcliffe, J., Butterworth, J., Lord, J., Petrie, W., and Wood, T. B. cotton spinners, Rochdale, as regards Lord, Feb. 9. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Wallwork, R. and B., Kenyon, J., Coop, R., J. and J., Greenwood, S., Clough, R., and Grundy, B. corn dealers and grocers, Higher Hurst, Ashton-under-Lyne, under the firm of Robert Wallwork and Company, and Benjamin Wallwork and Company; and at Hurst Nook, under the firm of James Kenyon and Company, Feb. 5. Debts by R. Wallwork and J. Kenyon.—Ward, W. and Mudd, J. smiths and ironmongers, Union-place, Kennington-road, Lambeth, Feb. 10.—Whiting, J. and J. fellmongers and tawers, Hitchin, Feb. 8. Debts paid by Joseph Whiting.

JOURNAL OF PROPERTY.

Public Sales.

On Thursday, February 17, 1853.

By Mr. Moore, at the Mart.

A freehold semi-detached eight-roomed residence, with front and back gardens, &c. and a frontage of 87 feet to Ford-road, Old Ford, Bow, of the annual value of 40*l.*, tenant paying taxes—610*l.*

3 dwelling-houses (one a corner shop), Nos. 1, 2, and 3, Sun-street, East-lane, Walworth; let at 30*l.*, tenant paying taxes; term 18 years unexpired; ground rent 12*l.* per annum—95*l.*

6 houses, Nos. 13 to 18, Upper Mary-street, Bromley, Middlesex, let at 85*l.* 16*s.* per annum, vendor paying rates; term 39 years unexpired; ground-rent 35*l.*—120*l.*

The lease with possession of a corner house with shop and extensive premises, suitable for any business, and situate at No. 5, Back-road, St. George's, East, of the annual value of 42*l.*, tenant paying rates; term 38 years unexpired; ground-rent 6*l.* per annum; the fixtures to be taken at a valuation—275*l.*

In 5 lots, 3 houses in Exmouth-place, Commercial-road, East; let at 30*l.* per annum; term 41 years; ground-rent 6*l.* 15*s.* 3 dwelling-houses in the York-road, Commercial-road; let at 36*l.* 10*s.* per annum; term 97 years; ground-rent 10*l.* 10*s.* 4 houses in John-street, Cambridge-road, Mile-end; let at 40*l.* 6*s.* per annum; term 17 years; ground-rent 10*l.* per annum, vendor paying rates on the whole. And 2 plots of freehold building ground near the terminus of the North Woolwich Railway—the whole produced 36*5l.*

In 2 lots, 5 dwelling-houses in Henry-street, Back Church-lane, St. George's; let at 38*l.* 6*s.* per annum—landlord paying rates; term 43 years; ground-rent, 10*l.* 18*s.*—195*l.*

3 five-roomed houses, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, Richard-street, St. Leonard's-road, Poplar; let at 37*l.* per annum, vendor paying rates; term 17 years; ground-rent 7*l.* 10*s.* per annum—420*l.*

MONEY MARKET.

English Funds.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Frid.
Bank Stock	227½	228	228	227	228	228
3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities	100⅝	100⅝	100⅝	100⅝	100⅝	100⅝
3 per Cent Consols Annuities	99¼	99⅜	99⅜	99⅜	99⅝	99⅝
Consols for Account	99¼	99⅜	99⅜	99⅜	99⅝	99⅝
New 3 per Cent. Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	..
New 3½ per Cent. Annuities	103⅛	103⅜	103⅛	103⅛	103⅜	103⅜
Long Annu. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	..	6⅜	..	..	..	6⅜
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Oct. 10, 1859)	..	..	..	..	..	..
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	..	..	..	..	..	..
India Stock	..	..	266	266	..	269
India Bonds (1,000*l.*)	..	..	..	..	60	..
Do. do. (under 1,000*l.*)	70	60	..	..	50	45
South Sea Stock	..	..	..	..	..	..
Do. do. Old Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	..
Exchequer Bills, 1000*l.*	45*	42*	..	45*	35*	25
Do. do. 500*l.*	..	42*	..	45*	45*	35
Do. do. Small	..	42*	..	45*	30*	..

* Premium.

DIARY OF SALES BY AUCTION, DURING THE NEXT WEEK,

ADVERTISED IN THE "LAW TIMES."

DATE.	PLACE.	AUCTIONEER.	WHEN ADVERTISED.	PROPERTY.
Tuesday, Feb. 22.	Mart.	Ellis and Son.	February 5	Freehold Property in Cheshill.
Thursday, Feb. 24.	Ibid.	Young.	February 19	Property at De Beauvoir-terrace, Kingsland-road.
Ibid.	Ibid.	Ibid.	Ditto	Residence, Forest-hill, Surrey.
Tuesday, March 1.	Ibid.	Chinnock and Galsworthy.	February 12	Freehold Ground-rents.
Wednesday, March 2	Garraway's.	Boyes.	February 19	Copyhold and Leasehold Estates.
Ibid.	Ibid.	Ibid.	Ditto	Two capital modern Residences, Chapel-street, Grosvenor-square.

THE FOLLOWING NEW PRACTICAL WORKS FOR THE OFFICE ARE JUST ISSUED AT THE LAW TIMES OFFICE.

On Tuesday next,

PART IX. of COX, MACRAE, and HERRTSLET'S COUNTY COURT CASES AND APPEALS, together with INSOLVENCY PRACTICE. 2s. 6d.

This is the authorized and only complete collection of Reports of Cases relating to the County Courts, and it contains every case from the establishment of the Courts. To be completed quarterly. Parts I. to VIII. may still be had, price 2s. 6d. each. Part X. is in the press, and will complete the cases to the beginning of 1853.

On Friday next,

PART II. of Vol. VII. of COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, containing all the Cases to this time (for the Circuits) in the Appeal Courts of England and Ireland, in the Central Criminal Court, on the Circuits, and in the Superior Courts; with an Appendix, containing a large collection of Precedents of Indictments under the new Statute, and other Precedents from the Central Criminal Court. Price 5s. 6d.

N.B.—A few copies of the back volumes and parts can still be had to complete sets.

Now ready,

THE LAW DIGEST for the Half-Year ending December 1, 1852. By E. WISE and D. T. EVANS, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. Price 6s. 6d. bds.; 9s. cloth.

This work gives every case, wheresoever reported, during the half-year, arranged so that the practitioner may find in a moment what is the latest law on any subject on which he may be engaged.

THE NEW RULES and ORDERS, the NEW TABLE of FEES, and the NEW RULES relating to the ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS and the EXAMINATION of ARTICLED CLERKS, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, by R. MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 4s. (This may be had also as a Supplement to "Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act," having marginal references to the pages of that work.)

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, with all the Rules, Orders, Costs, Decisions, &c. to this time, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, the Orders being placed with the Sections of the Statute to which they relate. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. bds.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS, with the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, and Notes of all the Cases decided on its construction. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of 1849, containing all those ever required in Practice, omitting the Repealed and the Scotch, Irish, Colonial, and Seasonal Statutes, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction; thus presenting the whole Law as it is, in a compact form for ready use, and with a copious Index. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. (This is in continuation of the Practical Statutes of 1850, 1851, and 1852, which may still be had.)

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI. with a copious collection of Precedents of Indictments. This part contains Forms of Indictments at Quarter Sessions under the New Law. By J. E. DAVIES, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 5s. 6d.

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanac, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax and the other Information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 1s.; or stamped for post, 1s. 1d. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanacs and Time of the Moon's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 6d.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, containing all the New Rules and Orders, the New Table of Fees, and Cases decided to the end of Michaelmas Term. Price 14s. 6d. cloth.

To Readers and Correspondents.

L. W.—Law reform is just in that state when enough has been done to damage the Profession by lessened profits, and not enough to increase the amount of business by way of compensation. Thus the transfer of wills, &c. to the civil courts would immensely increase the business of the Profession; so would giving a small equity jurisdiction to the County Courts; so would facilitating briefs, by more frequent sittings and assizes.

SUB.—It would leave them still burdened.

PRETA'S sketch of an Act of Parliament is good.

PATER FAMILIAS is probably not aware that advertisements do not come under the inspection of the Editor of a journal; and he has nothing to do with their reception or localities. The one alluded to was placed there without his knowledge.

T. S.—Not for a long time to come.

STUDENS.—The second edition of "Kerr's Procedure," and "Tudor's New Chancery Practice."

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1853.

TO READERS.

ILLNESS has prevented our contributor from commencing his "Practical Notes on the New Rules;" but he promises them next week.

In our next we shall be enabled to give some reports of the most interesting points in election law, decided by the Election Committees. We have made arrangements for giving the whole of them in the LAW TIMES Reports.

Notwithstanding a double number to-day, we have a large arrear of reports, especially from the Equity Courts, the increased number and increased business of which have lately claimed a much larger space than formerly; and there is this difficulty with these, that they cannot be much abbreviated—they are unintelligible, and therefore useless, without a tolerably full statement of the facts.

LAW OF EVIDENCE.

IT is gratifying to be able to report Lord CAMPBELL'S emphatic testimony to the successful working of the new Law of Evidence. The LAW TIMES was the first to propose the change that has been made, and was alone in advocacy of it for many years, when almost every judicial authority in the country, with the exception, we believe, of Lords DENMAN and BROUGHAM, was not merely doubtful of its propriety, but avowedly hostile to it. On the occasion of the second reading of the Bill for amending the Law of Evidence in Scotland, the Lord Chief Justice, in giving his assent to it, stated to the House that the admission of parties as witnesses had proved so conducive in practice to the ends of justice, that all the Judges, even those who were most opposed to it at first, were now convinced of its advantages; and he specially named Baron Parke, who, he said, had been one of the most hostile to the proposition, but who now frankly avowed himself its warmest approver.

To make the Law of Evidence perfect, it will be necessary to remove two obstacles to the discovery of the very truth—and two only—which yet linger. These are, the inadmissibility of a wife, and the noxious privilege permitted to a witness to refuse to tell the truth, because doing so might criminate him.

In Lord BROUGHAM'S admirable Evidence and Procedure Bill now before the Lords, provision is made for the removal of these obstacles to justice in the manner which we had suggested here; namely,—

The wife is to be a good witness, but privileged not to reveal confidential communications made to her by her husband: putting that relationship on the same footing in this respect as that of attorney and client.

No witness is to be privileged to refuse to answer a question because it might criminate him; but his answers are to be protected, so that they may not be in any way used against him, except on a charge of perjury made upon them. A precedent for this, and in which it has proved to be completely successful, was afforded by the St. Alban's Commission, who were empowered to give protection to witnesses answering truly criminatory questions, and who thus obtained the truths which could not have been procured but for this provision.

We observe with pleasure that the Lord Chancellor has expressed his approbation of this bill. Lord CAMPBELL has already given his sanction to the admission of the wife, and we hope he will not refuse it to the still more important and beneficial provision for extracting the truth against that much-abused privilege of protection. Lord LYNDHURST, we believe, cordially supports both, and Lord St. LEONARDS has shown himself too zealous and enlightened a law-reformer not to throw the weight of his intelligence and great legal authority into the same scale.

REGISTRATION OF DEEDS.

IT is with extreme regret we record the revival of this measure. We believe it to be a mistake altogether; that its promoters look at the question partially, with reference to its operation in large conveyances,—forgetting the effect of it upon the vastly greater number of small ones.

No scheme of registration has been yet devised which would not add to the cost of small conveyances and mortgages. Let the memorial be as brief as it may, there must be a solicitor's labour in the preparing and registering it, besides the registration fees. There will be a serious addition to the cost of all transactions in which the expenses do not exceed 20*l.*; to the multitude of small transfers, where the costs do not exceed 5*l.*, the costs of registration would be an intolerable additional burden. But the conveyances in which the costs are less than 20*l.* are probably fifty times more than those in which the costs exceed that sum. Is it, then, either just or wise to establish a large machinery, and impose a heavy tax upon all conveyances, for the benefit (if, indeed, a benefit it be) to one in fifty of the whole?

We give this proportion at a guess. But it would be an important fact to ascertain for the purpose of the discussion on this question; and therefore we would suggest to some one of our readers in either House of Parliament to procure a return of the number of conveyance and mortgage stamps issued during twelve months, of each of the sums in each denomination,—that is to say, how many at 5*s.*, how many at 10*s.*, and so forth. This would serve to show in what proportions registration would be likely to increase or diminish the expenses of the transfer of land.

TO READERS.

To our much amazement we learn, from divers communications condemnatory of the scheme, that an advertisement in our last relating to the reports, was taken by many of our readers to be an announcement of the LAW TIMES.

It is, therefore, necessary to state that it proceeded entirely from the four law booksellers whose names were appended to it, and that this office had no connexion with it whatever.

Under any circumstances we should have looked upon a project for a new series of reports as a wild speculation. In the present state of the Profession and of the Law, it would be pure insanity.

They would be worthless. They could not supersede the regular reports as authorities. The Courts would not throw aside their old standard reporters for any new ones. Why should they? The new could not be better than the old.

They are not wanted. It is alleged by the advertisers that the old reports are expensive. So they are, but they could not be otherwise. They are the established authorities of the Courts, because they are done by the ablest men, who prepare them with the utmost care, having access to all the papers, referring to all the authorities, and supplied by the judges with their judgments, and with all the documents necessary to make a perfect report. This it is that gives their value to what are called the regular reports; and these could not be materially cheapened, nor could any other reports supersede them.

But if a new series of reports could not possibly take the place of the existing series of the regular reports, against which the project is directed, still less is there any want of such as reports of the second class,—commonly called the omnibus reports, because they supply in a collected form, and speedily and cheaply, reports not so elaborately and carefully prepared, but which serve well enough for ordinary purposes, and which are admissible as authorities until the case appears in the regular report. Of these there already exist three series, amply supplying the wants of the Profession, and all received by the Courts; viz., the Law Journal, The Jurist, and the Law Times reports. No reports that could be projected could be cheaper or better than either of these. The Law Journal, for instance, reports all the Courts, at an annual cost to the subscriber so small, that no other could do it more cheaply; and all will acknowledge that it could not be better done.

Therefore it is not true that there is any desire or demand in the Profession for a new series of reports. Why should there be? In every particular of accuracy, abundance, and cheapness, the existing reports cannot be surpassed; and to suppose that any single member of the Profession would give up his present reports for a new one that could be neither better nor cheaper, and certainly would not have the weight either of age, experience, or authority, appears to us to be a project emanating, not from the sober judgments, but from the angry feelings, of the second-hand booksellers, desirous of punishing the publishers of the established reports, by whom they suppose themselves to have been unjustly treated by the recent lowering of prices of their old stock.

At all events, we trust it will be understood that the advertisement in question was in no way connected with the LAW TIMES, nor has it our approval, but the contrary.

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY. (a)

OF PROCESS IN DEFAULT OF ANSWER.

HITHERTO we have assumed that the defendant has appeared and put in an answer, plea, or demurrer, which, not demurring alone, he must do within six weeks after appearance thereto has been entered by or for him: (Ord. XVI. May 1845. art. 13.). If he does not do so, and if he procures no enlargement of the time allowed, he is subject to the following liabilities:

1. An attachment may be issued against him.

2. He may be committed to prison, and brought to the bar of the Court.

3. The plaintiff may file a traversing note, or proceed to have the bill taken pro confesso against him.

1. As to an attachment, if there is just reason to believe that any defendant means to abscond

(a) Continued from page 201.

before answering the bill, the Court may, on the ex parte application of the plaintiff, at any time after appearance has been entered for such defendant by the plaintiff, order an attachment for want of answer to issue against him; and such attachment is to be made returnable at such time as the Court directs: (Order LXXII. May 1845.)

2. A defendant in custody of the Serjeant-at-arms or Messenger for want of answer, is to be discharged unless brought to the bar of the court within ten days; but eight days afterwards, unless he put in an answer, a new attachment may issue: (Ib. LXXIII.)

If a defendant be in prison for not answering, he is to be discharged within thirty days if not brought to the bar of the court; but eight days afterwards a new attachment may issue against him for want of his answer: (Ib. LXXIV.)

If a person, brought up in custody, be unable through poverty to put in an answer, a solicitor and counsel will be assigned to him: (Ib. LXXV.)

3. Upon execution of an attachment for want of answer, the bill may be taken pro confesso, that is to say, as though all the statements contained in it were true or admitted by the defendant to be so (Ib. LXXVI.); and where writ of attachment cannot be executed, the defendant is to be deemed to have absconded (Ib. LXXVII.); and in such case, where he has appeared in person or by his own solicitor, the plaintiff may serve upon such defendant or his solicitor a notice, that on a day in such notice named (being not less than fourteen days after the service of such notice) the Court will be moved that the bill may be taken pro confesso against such defendant; and the plaintiff is, upon the hearing of such motion, to satisfy the Court that such defendant ought, under the provisions of Order LXXVII., to be deemed to have absconded to avoid or to have refused to obey the process of the Court; and the Court being so satisfied may, if it thinks so fit, order the bill to be taken pro confesso against such defendant, either immediately, or at such time, or upon such further notice as, under the circumstances of the case, the Court may think proper: (Ib. LXXVIII.) If the absconding defendant has not afterwards appeared, upon such notice in the London Gazette once in each of four weeks, or on such further notice as the Court may think proper, the bill may be taken pro confesso: (Ib. LXXX.)

PROCESS AGAINST PARTICULAR DEFENDANTS.

Against peers and members of Parliament, the plaintiff proceeds to compel an answer by a sequestration nisi in the first instance, instead of attachment, which the Court will make absolute within eight days after service thereof, unless cause be shown to the contrary (Thomas v. Lord Jersey, 2 Myl. & K. 398); and after obtaining the order absolute for the sequestration, the plaintiff moves, as of course, that the clerk of records and writs may attend at the hearing of the cause with the record of the plaintiff's bill, in order that the same may be taken pro confesso against the defendant. The cause is then set down for hearing, and the cause taken pro confesso against him: (Smith's Hand-book, 165.)

A bill of discovery taken pro confesso against defendants having privilege of Parliament, or an examined copy thereof, is to be received in a court of law or equity, as evidence of the facts, matters and things therein contained, in the same manner and as fully as if the same were admitted by the answer of the defendant (11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 18); so a bill may be taken pro confesso against the attorney-general: (Groom v. The Attorney-General, 9 Sim. 325.)

The mode of proceeding against a corporation is by distringas, alias distringas, pluries distringas, sequestration, and then the plaintiff applies to take the bill pro confesso.

With regard to persons under disabilities, as an infant, a guardian will be assigned to him to put in his answer (32nd Order, May 1845); if the infant be a married woman, a guardian will still be necessary for that purpose: (Colman v. Northcote, 2 Hare, 147.)

With regard to a married woman made defendant with her husband, process issues against him alone: Cox v. Cottle, 3 Myl. & Cr. 180); but if he resides out of, and the wife within, the jurisdiction, after service upon her, and on special application, upon notice, an attachment may be issued against her: (Bushell v. Bushell, 1 S. & S. 164.)

The leave of the Court must be obtained in order that a married woman may put in a separate answer: (Garey v. Whittingham, 1 S. & S. 163.) Where such order has been obtained, she may be proceeded against by attachment: (Travers v. Buckly, 1 Ves. 386; Ottway v. Wing, 12 Sim. 90.)

AS TO CONTEMPTS.

A defendant in contempt cannot make any application to the Court (Voules v. Young, 9 Ves. 173) in the same cause (Clark v. Dow, 1 Russ. & Myl. 103; Turner v. Dorgan, 12 Sim. 504), unless to apply to discharge the order upon which he is in contempt for not obeying (Dan. Ch. Pr. 461); or appear to be heard in opposition to special application made against him: (Parker v. Dawson, Dan. Ch. Pro. 462.)

Contempts may in general be cleared by performing the act required and payment of costs (Dan. Ch. Pr. 464); and they may be waived either by the plaintiff, after the answer being put in, accepting it, or taking a step in the cause; and he cannot renew the process or take any other advantage of it: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 465.)

Process of contempt may also be discharged for irregularity: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 467.)

PROCESS BY SERVING TRAVERSING NOTE.

In default of answer the plaintiff may file a traversing note (Orders May 8, 1845, LII., LIII.); or after insufficient answer (Ib. LIV.); or upon the overruling of a plea or demurrer to the whole bill, unless the Court gives time to plead answer or demur, and the defendant does so within the time allowed: (Ib. LV.) The copy of the traversing note must be served on the defendant (Ib. LVI.); and the effect is the same as if a defendant had filed a full answer, or further answer traversing the whole bill as the note relates to, on the day on which the note was filed (Ib. LVII.); after service of the traversing note the defendant cannot plead answer or demur without special leave: (Ib. LVIII.)

HEARING AND DECREE, &C. AFTER PRELIMINARY ORDER, BY TAKING A BILL PRO CONFESSO.

The decree is not to be taken on the same day as the order to take the bill pro confesso is made (Orders LXXXI. May 8, 1845); and the defendant is entitled to be heard on taking the bill pro confesso (Ib. LXXXII.) and in case any defendant who has appeared at the hearing, and waived all objections to such order, to take the bill pro confesso, or against whom the order has been made after appearance by himself or his own solicitor, or upon notice served on or after the execution of a writ of attachment against him, the decree is absolute (Ib. LXXXIII.); and the Court may order a receiver or sequestrator, and payment to the plaintiff of sums he is entitled to: (Ib. LXXXIV.) The decree must be passed and entered as other decrees (Ib. LXXXV.); and served on defendant or his solicitor; and also, if decree be not absolute, to be accompanied with a notice of time for opening decree: (Ib. LXXXVI.) The cause may be reheard before inrolment (Ib. LXXXIX.); but the decree nisi may be made absolute.

1. After the expiration of three weeks from the service of the copy of the decree on the defendant, when the decree has been served within the jurisdiction.

2. After the expiration of the time limited by the notice provided by Order LXXXVI when the decree has been served out of the jurisdiction.

3. After the expiration of three years from the date of the decree, when a defendant has not been served with a copy thereof; and such order may be either immediate or deferred: (Ib. XC.)

The decree not being absolute, the Court may, on terms, open the inrolment, and permit the defendant to answer and rehear: (Ib. XCI.)

The rights and liabilities under decrees pro confesso extend to representatives, but the Court may permit ulterior proceedings: (Ib. XCII.)

OF REPLICATION.

When the defendant has put in his answer to the bill, the plaintiff must then take into his consideration whether the defendant has made sufficient admissions to enable him to put down the cause upon bill and answer without his going into evidence.

When the cause is put down to be heard upon bill and answer, it must be borne in mind that the answer will be taken to be true in every point; it will be necessary, therefore, whenever the plaintiff's case is not sufficiently admitted in the answer, or if the admissions are avoided by new matter there introduced, to put in a replication, and the plaintiff must go into evidence to prove his case if not admitted, and the defendant will be compelled to prove his case as set forth in the allegations in his answer: (Coop. Eq. Pl. 329; Dan. Ch. Pr. 796.)

A replication may also be put in to a plea, whether accompanied by an answer or not (but, as before observed, the validity of the plea, if true, is thereby admitted: Harris v. Ingledew, 3 P. Wms. 94); but not to a general disclaimer: (Williams v. Longfellow, 3 Atk. 582.)

By the 33rd Order of May 1845 it is directed that no subpœna to rejoin is hereafter to be issued, and only one replication is to be filed in each cause, unless the Court otherwise orders; and then replication is to be in the form set forth at the foot of this order, or as near thereto as circumstances admit and require; and upon the filing of such replication the cause is to be deemed to be completely at issue, and each defendant may, without any rule or order, proceed to examine his witnesses, and the plaintiff may, in like manner, proceed to examine his witnesses, so soon as notice of the replication being filed has been duly served on all the defendants who have filed an answer or plea, or against whom a traversing note has been filed.

The replication is in the following form:—

Between A. B., plaintiff, and
C. D., E. F. and G. H., &c. defendants.

The plaintiff in this cause hereby joins issue with the defendant C. D. [all the defendants who have answered or pleaded, against whom a traversing note has been filed], and will hear the cause on bill and answer against the defendant E. F. [all the defendants against whom the cause is to be heard on bill and answer], and on the order to take the bill as confessed against the defendant G. H. [as the case may be].

The signature of counsel is not required to a replication. It is prepared by the solicitor of the plaintiff, written upon parchment, and filed with the clerk of records and writs; and the solicitor must, on the same day, give notice thereof to the solicitors of all the defendants to whose answer the replication applies: (Order XXIII. Oct. 1842; Dan. Ch. Pr. 797, 798.)

A replication may, on special application, be withdrawn, either for the temporary purpose of amending the bill (58th Order, May 1845; and see 4 Myl. & Cr. 8), or altogether for the purpose of setting down the cause for hearing on bill and answer: (Rogers v. Goore, 17 Ves. 130.)

By the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 26, it is enacted, that in suits commenced by bill, when notice of motion for a decree or decretal order shall not have been given, or having been given, where a decree or decretal order shall not have been made thereon, issue shall be joined by filing a replication in the form or to the effect of the replication now in use in the court; and where a defendant shall not have answered the plaintiff's bill, he shall be considered to have traversed the case made by the bill.

By the 28th Order of 7th August, 1852, where a defendant shall not have been required to answer, and shall not have answered the plaintiff's bill, so that under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 26, he is to be considered as having traversed the case made by the bill, issue is nevertheless to be joined by filing a replication in the form or to the effect now in use.

THE LEGISLATOR.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

LAW OF EVIDENCE.

TUESDAY, Feb. 22.—Lord BROUGHAM moved the second reading of the Law of Evidence (Scotland) Bill.—The Lord CHANCELLOR said, his noble and learned friend had introduced this Bill to assimilate the law of the two countries. He had, however, gone beyond the actual existing law of England, because he had introduced into this Bill, as he naturally would, a clause with reference to which a bill had already been read a first time in their lordships' House, and he hoped it would soon become the law of the land. It had reference to the evidence of husbands and wives; and it was but due to his noble and learned friend to say that it was introduced into his Bill of 1851. He had in that Bill a clause extending the law of evidence to husband and wife, and he (the Lord Chancellor) was then opposed to it; but he must confess that he had many and reason to change his opinion, and he now approved of such a clause, but the husband and wife would not be compelled to disclose that which passed in confidence between themselves.

LAW OF DIVORCE.

After a few words had been addressed on the subject of the law of divorce, which were not distinctly heard in the gallery, Lord CAMPBELL said that he had the pleasure of informing their lordships that the commissioners appointed to inquire into the law of divorce had signed a report, which would no doubt in a few days be presented to the House by the order of her Majesty. They recommend that their lordships should not confine to past Acts of Parliament in each individual case, but that a regular tribunal should be established, consisting of a vice-chancellor, an ecclesiastical judge, and a common law judge, and that the proceedings should take place judicially when it came from the husband for adultery. But, in the extraordinary case where a wife sought for a dissolution of the marriage contract, on the ground of the husband's immorality or other misconduct, it must still be a matter of legislation, because it would be impossible that any code could be framed by which any court of justice could be regulated in deciding such matters.

CHANCERY SUITORS' FURTHER RELIEF BILL.

THURSDAY, Feb. 24.—Lord ST. LEONARDS moved the second reading of this bill, observing that he thought the better course of proceeding would be to refer it and the several other measures of legal reform now standing for a second reading to a select committee.—The LORD CHANCELLOR expressed his concurrence in the course suggested by the noble and learned lord, which he thought the most expedient and convenient that could be adopted. In assenting to the second reading of the bill, he hoped he should not be understood as assenting to the assertion that it would effect a saving of expense in the Accountant-General's office, because he thought the contrary would be the fact.—After a few remarks from Lord Lyndhurst, Lord Brougham, and Lord Truro, the bill was read a second time.—The following bills were also read a second time:—Lunacy Regulation Bill, Lunatic Asylums Bill, Lunatics' Care and Treatment Bill, and Bankruptcy Bill.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

Lord ST. LEONARDS moved the second reading of this bill.—Lord CAMPBELL did not object to the second reading, but said, as he should be absent for some weeks in the discharge of his public duty, he wished to take this opportunity of protesting against the bill coming into operation until the criminal code should be completed. Lord ST. LEONARDS said it was not indispensable that the whole code should be completed before any change took place, for many offences, such for instance as offences against the person, were quite distinct from other offences. Any alteration in the law respecting offences against the person, would not be affected by alterations with regard to a different class of offences.—The LORD CHANCELLOR said the commissioners appointed to inquire into the subject of the statute law had made many valuable reports, and the result had been the framing of a bill including the whole digest. It had been thought desirable to split the bill into different portions, in order to make it more manageable, and that portion of it now in charge of the noble and learned lord could not be in better hands.—Lord BROUGHAM observed, that the Criminal Law Commissioners had approved of a digest of the whole criminal law with reference to crimes and punishments, reserving for a future report the digest relative to criminal proceedings. The report respecting crimes and punishments was referred back to the commissioners, in order that some alterations might be made, and one or two gentlemen were then added to the commission. The commissioners made a second report, and a bill founded on such report was brought in, and was referred to a select committee. That bill had, however, been delayed until the commissioners had agreed upon a digest as to the mode of criminal procedure. In 1850 he had done all he could to induce the then Government (as we understood) to provide for the continuance of the commission for another year, when they might have completed the whole digest of criminal procedure; but the Government declined to accede to his suggestion, stating that enough had been done to enable them to proceed themselves in the matter. He had been hopeless of seeing the digest completed at all, when the late Government promised to give immediate attention to the subject. Then came the question how they were to proceed, and it was suggested that instead of proceeding with the whole digest in one bill it might be considered and adopted piecemeal,—that first one chapter should be taken, and then another, until the whole digest should be passed into law. The noble and learned lord opposite (Lord St. Leonards) then took up that chapter which he (Lord Brougham) thought was the most important—namely, that relating to offences against the person. He did not understand that the noble and learned lord (St. Leonards) abandoned the other bills, but that, beginning with the measure, he intended to introduce others afterwards. He would fain hope, therefore, that there would be no difficulty in following up the enactment of the first chapter by the enactment of others, and that the result would be that before the end of the session such a clearly digested view of the criminal laws of this country would be provided as would suffice to inform, authoritatively and distinctly, the subjects of the crown what these laws were to which their obedience was exacted under such high punishments. He did not think that it would, upon these grounds, be necessary to postpone the operation of any part of the digest until the whole was completed.—The bill was then read a second time, and, upon the motion of Lord St. Leonards, all the six bills were referred to a select committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

COUNTY BOARDS BILL.

WEDNESDAY, February 25.—Mr. M. GIBSON observed that the subject had been before Parliament for the last twenty years; that the title of the ratepayers to a voice in the control of county expenditure, in conjunction with the magistracy, had been admitted; and that, this bill, while it adopted the representative principle, reserved considerable power to the magistrates, and did not trench upon their judicial authority. He justified the departure from the bill of 1851, as respected the constitution, powers, and functions of the financial boards; but merely asked the House now to sanction the principle of the measure.—Lord PALMERSTON, on the part of the government, acknowledged the importance of the subject, which involved matters of national consideration—police, treatment of prisoners, and care of lunatic asylums—and was, moreover, connected with the personal feelings of the unpaid magistracy. The expediency of introducing the representative principle into the control of county expenditure, he considered, had been conceded, and acquiescing in the bill so far as that principle was concerned he should offer no opposition to the second reading; but in his opinion the measure should, with the exception of the mode in which the financial boards were to be elected, be brought back in the committee to the bill of 1851. It must not be supposed, he added, that the acquiescence of the Government in the principle of the bill arose from any distrust in the unpaid magistracy.—Mr. FRESHFIELD spoke in opposition to the bill. He thought it unfortunate that the Government had acquiesced in the establishment of county boards, and wished that they had undertaken the responsibility of introducing a measure upon this subject.—Sir H. HALL supported the bill.—Sir J. PAKINGTON, agreeing in much of what had fallen from Lord Palmerston, drew attention to what he deemed the animus of the Bill, namely, to strike a blow at the magistracy. He noticed what he regarded as fallacies in the views of Mr. Gibson, in respect to the financial powers of the magistrates, and the invidious distinction drawn between them and the ratepayers. He did not oppose the second reading of the bill, reserving to himself, however, the power of objecting to all its most material provisions. Sir G. GREY concurred entirely in the course taken by Lord Palmerston. He thought it desirable that the representative principle should be applied to the constitution of bodies charged with the administration of county financial affairs; but that the amendments made by the select committee in the bill of 1851, which reserved to the magistrates not only their judicial but their executive functions with reference to the constabulary, gaols, and lunatic asylums, should be reintroduced into this bill.—After some further discussion, in which Mr. Henley, Mr. Baines, Mr. Barrow, Mr. J. B. Smith, Mr. Packe, Mr. Whalley, Mr. Hume, and Mr. Buck participated, the bill was read a second time, and was ordered to be committed pro formâ, on Friday, in order that it might be adapted to the views of the Government.

The Courts of Common Law (Ireland) Bill was committed pro formâ.

COURTS OF LAW.

THURSDAY, Feb. 24.—Lord R. GROSVENOR wished to ask a question of the noble lord (Lord J. Russell.) A few days ago he presented a petition from the legal profession, complaining of the inconvenience under which they laboured from the present defective accommodation in the courts of law in Westminster-hall, and also of the site where the courts were held. The petitioners suggested the propriety of removing the present law courts from Westminster-hall to a part of the town more contiguous to the residences of the members of the profession. They considered that the subject was one that deserved the attention of the Government, not only on account of the state of the present buildings, but for want of convenient internal arrangements. He wished, therefore, to ask the noble lord whether the subject of the improvement or the removal of the law courts at Westminster was engaging the attention of the government? Lord J. RUSSELL said, he would give an answer to the question of his noble friend to-morrow.

NEW TRIALS IN CRIMINAL CASES.

Mr. T. BUTT obtained leave to bring in a bill to make provision for the granting of new trials in criminal cases.

THE MAGISTRATE,
AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

A POINT in that now rarely disputed law—of Removal—was decided last term in Reg. v. Inhabitants of Stowmarket, 20 L. T. Rep. 258. Pauper had resided in a parish for more than five years. Then she married and continued to live with her husband in the same parish. The husband died, having resided only three and a half years in the parish, and having a settlement in another parish. Was the widow removable? Could she unite her residence as single woman with her residence as a wife, so as to make up a complete five years' residence? The Q. B. held her to be irremovable. "Settlement," said the Court, "is one thing, and residence is another. The marriage altered the settlement, but left the residence untouched." In the form of a case upon an appeal a point was raised, which is in fact one of Evidence rather than of Magistrates Law. The attesting witness to an instrument that had been destroyed was dead. Was it necessary to prove his handwriting in order to let in secondary evidence of the contents? It was held not to be so; EARLE, J. observing: "Our decision, in my opinion, goes the full length of deciding that in no case where an instrument is lost, and the subscribing witness is dead, is it necessary to give evidence of the handwriting of the party attesting it; and that where it is proved that the witness is dead, nothing further is necessary:" (Reg. v. Camberwell, 20 L. T. Rep. 259.)

In Criminal Law there is a decision of the Q. B. of some importance. It was held in Sill v. The Queen, 20 L. T. Rep. 258, that notwithstanding Lord CAMPBELL'S Act, it is still necessary to state in an indictment for obtaining goods under false pretences to whom the goods belong. It seems, however, to be a defect which the judge might amend under the powers given by sect. 1.

TRANSPORTATION OF CONVICTS.—The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have just chartered a vessel for the conveyance of 300 male convicts to Freemantle, Western Australia. All the transports to be conveyed by this ship have undergone a probationary imprisonment in this country, and received instruction in trades and pursuits required in the colony. There are also a number of the class termed Pentonville exiles, whose position in society previous to conviction, and conduct since condemnation have warranted the authorities in extending to them a free pardon on reaching Freemantle, Western Australia, on the condition that they do not quit the colony. The convict guard is to consist of seventy-five of the enrolled out pensioners of Chelsea Hospital. They will be accompanied by their wives and children, and will remain in Western Australia as military colonists, receiving from Government, in addition to their pension, a grant of land, and a further sum of 2*s.* per diem when called on to perform military duty.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

A., PREVIOUSLY to the marriage of his daughter with B., agreed verbally to give certain leasehold premises to the young couple. After the marriage A. gave the deeds and possession of the premises to B., who laid out money upon them. Was this void under the Statute of Frauds, the agreement being only parol? The Lord Justices held it to be a valid contract, there having been a part performance of it: (Surcome v. Pianiger, 20 L. T. Rep. 255.)

Kelson v. Kelson, 20 L. T. Rep. 257, was a question as to whether a settlement was voluntary. A. conveyed property, "in consideration of natural love and affection, and other good and valuable considerations," to trustees in trust for his wife and children. He afterwards mortgaged the same property. It was held to have been prima facie a voluntary settlement.

What are fixtures? is a question of frequent recurrence in practice. An interesting decision on this subject is reported from the Q. B. In Wiltshire v. Cotterel, 20 L. T. Rep. 259, under a conveyance of land, a farm-house and fixtures, the following were held to be fixtures:—1. Rick-straddles, mortared to a brick foundation let into the earth. 2. A threshing-machine, fixed by bolts and screws to posts let into the ground, so that the machine could not be got out without disturbing some of the soil. But a granary which rested on a wooden foundation, supported by straddles, and capable of being lifted by sufficient power from the straddles without disturbing them, was held not to be a fixture, but a mere chattel.

In the form of a Co. C. Appeal, there has been a decision on an important point of real property law. A. bequeathed as follows:—"To my son William I give all my interest and claim in household property in Percy-street, &c. belonging to the successors of the late J. H. on which I have a mortgage of 1500*l.*; also all my claims to the shops and houses situate, &c. occupied by &c.; likewise all moneys that I may have advanced for him at any time, to him, his heirs and assigns for ever." Arrears of interest were, at the time of the testator's death, outstanding on the mortgage of 1500*l*. Was William or the executrix entitled to them? It was held that they passed with the principal to William. The executrix also claimed a sum for repairs of the mortgaged property done in the father's lifetime. It was held that she, and not the devisee, was liable for such repairs: (Gibbon v. Gibbon, 20 L. T. Rep. 260.)

Watson v. Ward, 20 L. T. Rep. 261, was a question on the Law of Landlord and Tenant. A. agreed to let to B. certain tenements from a time stated, at a specified rent. Afterwards it was found that possession of one of the tenements could not be obtained by A. Before the first half-year's rent became due, A. and B. met, and agreed that B., having had possession of all the rest, should pay the rent of the whole, less the rent of that tenement. On a question of the right of A. to distrain, it was held that the new agreement amounted to a new demise, and a release of the original bargain.

Queries on Points of Practice.

POWER OF ATTORNEY.

In the case of Holland v. Harper, 20 L. T. Rep. 216, the M. R. is reported to have granted an application that the solicitor in the cause should be allowed to receive a fund in court on behalf of a lady who had been appointed attorney for the cestuis que trust of the fund, residing in America; the lady so appointed attorney being too ill to attend personally to receive the money, and she signing a receipt for it, and her signature being verified by affidavit. I believe the law to be, that in the case of a power of attorney, so soon as the grantor of the power dies, the power ceases. In the above case, under ordinary circumstances, I should have supposed that if the cestuis que trust resident abroad had died before the money was paid to their attorney, and before she had given her receipt for it, such payment and receipt would, as to the deceased grantors of the power, be of no effect. As the cestuis que trust appear to have all resided in America, it was impossible at the time to ascertain whether they were living or dead.

Can any of your experienced readers inform me whether the circumstance of the payment in the above cause being made under an order of court would give effect to the payment, supposing the cestuis que trust who gave the power were all or any of them dead at the time?

I consider, for the reason above stated, that payment under powers of attorney are unsafe, and that the only secure course is to have, in addition to an authority for payment of the money, a release under seal from the party entitled, that he and his representatives may be barred by estoppel in the event of his death before payment to the party authorised. If I am wrong in opinion I shall be glad to be set right, because the amounts paid under powers of attorney, with receipts simply from the person authorised, must be very considerable. J. C. D.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

The registered officer of a joint-stock banking company applied to prove against the estate of a deceased shareholder for calls due. By the deed of settlement an option was given to the representatives of deceased shareholders either to sell the shares or to become members of the company on certain conditions. Prior to the exercise of this option the directors were empowered to retain the dividends, and, after notice, to declare the shares forfeited. No option had been exercised by the executors in this case, and the directors had retained the dividends, but had taken no steps to declare the shares forfeited. They were held not to be entitled to prove for the calls due: (Howard v. Wheatley, 20 L. T. Rep. 256.)

WINDING-UP.

The settlement deed of a Joint-Stock Banking Company provided that every purchaser of shares and every executor or administrator of a deceased proprietor was, as to all obligations, &c. in respect of the shares so purchased by or vested in him, to be considered a proprietor from the time of such purchase or vesting, and that the responsibilities of the old proprietor should cease when any shares were properly transferred to a new proprietor, and not before. A reserved surplus fund was created to meet extraordinary losses or demands, and it was provided that every transfer was to carry with it the profits and share of capital and reserved surplus fund. It was held that under these provisions, a transferree of shares was subject to all the liabilities of the company, as well those incurred before as after the transfer: (Ex parte Capel Executors, 20 L. T. Rep. 253.) A member of the managing committee, who was also one of the provisional committee, had concurred in contracting certain debts, and had paid 160*l*. as his share in respect of those liabilities. After his death other claims were made on the company for debts contracted by his orders. His executors were held to be contributories: (Ex parte Pearson's Executors, 20 L. T. Rep. 254.)

PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and made, during the past week.]

Metropolitan Carriage Company.—Petition to wind-up presented on Feb. 19; expected to be heard on March 14.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

Equity Practice.—The M. R. has allowed the depositions taken on a commission issued before the new stat. to examine witnesses abroad to be received under sect. 25 of c. 86, upon the affidavit of the solicitor: (Hind v. Selby, 20 L. T. Rep. 256.) It was held in Re Colquhoun, 20 L. T. Rep. 256, that where a solicitor is engaged for more than one defendant in a suit, he is entitled, as against each, to a proportion only of the ordinary costs of suit which are common to all the defendants, according to the number of defendants for whom he is engaged.

Common Law.—A commission of rebellion for contempt of the Court of Chan. is not a criminal matter within the Habeas Corpus Act, and the Lord Chan. is not liable to the penalty imposed by sect. 10 for refusing a habeas corpus to a person detained under such writ: (Cobbett v. Lord Truro, 20 L. T. Rep. 258.) Mr. Cobbett seems determined to exhaust every undecided point of law in the form of actions against the Judges, and the unhappy gaolers who have the misfortune to hold him in custody. This very point was decided in the Court of Ex. in an action by him against another functionary. Probably he will next try it in the Pleas.

In the Law of Attorneys it has been determined in Ex parte Hawley, 20 L. T. Rep. 258, that an attorney is not privileged from disclosing matters communicated to him by a client which do not relate to business which he is conducting for such client as his attorney, even though made under promise of secrecy, as where a bankrupt had told his attorney that he was going to leave the country, and the vessel in which he should sail: (Ex parte Hawley, 20 L. T. Rep. 258.)

DEFECT IN THE COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—Although the 18th section of this Act extends the jurisdiction of the Superior Courts to all British subjects residing abroad, yet in my opinion a great defect exists with regard to those resident in the colonies. A person may now emigrate from this country to any of our foreign settlements, and yet be liable to be sued for any debt contracted by him while in this country; and if he has any available property in this country that can be taken in execution; but should such not be the case, the plaintiff must remain satisfied with having obtained judgment, but nothing more. The defect which I should wish to see remedied is this: that the property of the defendant against whom any judgment in the Superior Courts of this country may be obtained shall be liable to execution in the colony where he may be resident, upon a certificate of the amount and nulla bona in this country, under the seal of such Superior Court, being forwarded to the proper officer of the supreme court in such colony. I hope that this point may attract the attention of some of our Legislators.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Windermere. G.

PROCTORS' CHARGES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—I should be glad if you or any of your readers could inform me by what authority proctors charge an ad valorem fee for "probate under seal;" so that where the personalty is sworn under say 10,000*l*., they claim on this item alone 13*l*. 18*s*. 2*d*., though the will consist but of two lines. The scale is given in the last edition of Burn's Ecclesiastical Law, but nothing is there said as to the authority by which it is established; and yet it must be of modern date, since in old times no affidavit of the value of the personalty was required, there being no probate duty. And I apprehend it to be quite clear that the charge could only be established under an Act of Parliament, for the Ecclesiastical Courts clearly have no inherent authority so to tax the public in favour of their own officers. The scale given in Burn is that in use in the Prerogative Court, but I believe a similar one is adopted in the Diocesan and other probate courts. I would also ask, what is the proper charge per folio for "registering, engrossing, and collating the will," which item is given, in the table referred to, as 11*s*. 10*d*., but stated to vary according to the length of the will. I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Feb. 28, 1858. Zeta.

SOLICITORS AND PUBLIC SALES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—I venture to suggest (through your columns) to my brother solicitors and attorneys, whether, instead of endeavouring to obtain a removal of the certificate duty, it might not be advisable to seek to pass a law providing that such charge should confer on every attorney and solicitor, a licence to dispose of his client's estates by auction, without being compelled to resort to the expensive and unnecessary medium of an auctioneer.

The expense of the present arrangement prevents a more frequent attempt to sell by auction. This would be one means of lessening the expenses of conveyancing, and would also be a matter of great convenience both to the solicitor and his client.

Sales under a decree of the Court of Chancery are effected without the aid of an auctioneer. Is there any good reason why other sales should not be made by the attorney or solicitor?

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

X.

[The suggestion is an excellent one.—Ed. L. T.]

Answers to Queries.

WRIT OF SUMMONS.

I beg to direct your correspondent "R." to the following extracts from the plainly written work on the new Procedure Act by R. M. Kerr, Esq., and the cases there quoted:—2nd edit. p. 3: Defendant may be sued by name he bears by reputation;" p. 41: "If defendant sued in a wrong name, appearance should be entered in his true name;" p. 75: "If defendant appears by the name in which he is sued, plaintiff may declare against him in that name; if he appears by another name, plaintiff ought to declare against him in that name, stating also the name by which he was sued in the writ. If defendant misnamed, his remedy is under the 11th sect. of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 14." B. G.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

It is not necessary to repeat here the point decided in Gibbon v. Gibbon, 20 L. T. Rep. 260; for although in form of an appeal from the County Court it was in fact upon a question of general law; and, therefore, it will be found noticed in the summary of that branch of the law to which it properly belongs.

In Insolvency there is an elaborate and able judgment of Mr. Commissioner Law on a question of no small importance in practice. He holds, for good reasons there assigned, that the Insolvent Debtors' Act allows interest on debts only under special circumstances and at the discretion of the Court; but the judgment entered up after adjudication carries interest, like any other judgment, from the time of its being entered up: (Re Joy, 20 L. T. Rep. 263.)

A PRACTITIONER'S EXPERIENCES OF THE COUNTY COURTS.

(Continued from page 212.)

Again, except in the case of set-off or tender, or infancy, or coverture, or the statute of limitations, there is no plea recorded by which the issue can be known previous to the hearing. The defendant knows the plaintiff's case of course, and can prepare accordingly; but the plaintiff rarely knows the intended answer, and is therefore taken by surprise. When he hears it, he entreats to be heard in reply, and to have his witnesses recalled; he is entitled to be heard in contradiction to new facts, and a perjurous contradiction is at once extemporised, if the aid of perjury is required, or more frequently, on the plea of surprise, the Judge will adjourn the case, and time is thus obtained to get up the replication.

Once more—wives are often, perhaps generally, sent to the Court to perform the double duty of counsel and witness, and the chances are, in the lowest classes, that if the wife returns home unsuccessful, the husband gives her a thrashing for her failure.

I am sorry to say, however, that this crime of perjury is by no means confined to the class of illiterate labourers and servants. I have repeatedly witnessed it in shopkeepers and tradesmen of apparent respectability. Often have I been present when the evidence of a shopkeeper has been confuted by his own books, when the Court has compelled their production; still more frequently have I seen it contradicted by the production of his own bills or letters, and then he has accumulated perjury on perjury in futile attempts to explain them away.

And this leads me to another evil, which is, I fear, of very extensive character; it has been that has twice been successfully practised on myself, and attempted at least a dozen times: a shopkeeper writes for payment of some two or three pounds, inclosing a bill "to account delivered" some three or four years back. The alleged debtor, knowing nothing of the matter, nor even the name of the party, concludes that it is a mistake, and pays no attention to it; in a week or ten days, he receives a second letter, threatening County Court process at some place a hundred miles off, unless a post office order is sent in course of post; he then inquires of his family, and they know nothing about it. Before he has found time to hunt up his papers, and search through a score of receipt files, he is served with a copy of a plaint; the prudential question then arises, whether it is not better to pay the demand, than to incur an expense in travelling, of double the amount, not to mention leaving his business, and meeting in open court an unscrupulous rascal, who will swear to anything, and to whom he can only reply that he knows nothing of the matter.

I have reason to believe that this is a fraud almost daily practised: I have heard repeated complaints of it by my friends. I have been professionally consulted on several demands of a similar description, and I have found that, in order to guard against it, it is now customary in many houses to take written receipts for every tradesman's bill above five shillings. Yet this is a fraud involving perjury; for the Judges will not allow a party to be summoned out of their district till the debt has been sworn to.

A third evil arising from the system is of a somewhat similar character, but not involving either crime or fraud. It gives undue advantage to the inferior class of tradesmen in places like Liverpool, Manchester, or other large towns. The business of County Courts in such places is so enormous that a cause is often in the paper for several days together, and then adjourned to another day: it may be a defended cause, and involve a fair question of liability; the defendant's evidence is essential, and he is obliged to attend from day to day, and all day, for it is the nature of this litigation that fifty cases may be despatched in an hour, or even one may last ten hours. The last in which I happened to be engaged occupied the Court from ten o'clock till seven. If the defendant is a trader or merchant in extensive business this detention is ruinous; he is losing hundreds in defending himself against an unjust demand of five or six pounds: as the shortest mode of getting out of the difficulty, he pays it, after a day's detention; and the plaintiff, who has perhaps speculated on this inconvenience, exults in a success, not obtained by the justice of his claim, but by the injustice of a system which enables a man earning a guinea per diem to make a quasi prisoner of another who earns ten or twenty in the same time. I was counsel for a defendant in this very predicament a few weeks ago; and after three days' attendance he paid debt and costs without a hearing, to get rid of the annoyance, though there was no doubt that the defence was good and sustainable.

There is yet a fourth evil of a demoralising character, which to me appears important, though probably some of our ultra-liberal law reformers would not attach much weight to it. Our County Courts unavoidably tend to bring the administration of justice into contempt.

I honestly believe, though I know nothing of him personally, that there is not to be found in the country a more acute, practical, and good-tempered judge than our own; and if there is no great dignity of appearance, yet he is certainly calm, firm, and decided; he keeps his Court in as much order as such a Court will allow; he takes no liberties, and he permits none. Yet the Court is necessarily filled with a class which no judicial dignity or firmness can keep within the bounds of decency: bystanders can be compelled to be silent and are compelled; but how is it possible to restrain within proper limits the tempers and the legal hostility of marine-storekeepers, Jew-brokers, horse-dealers, cab-drivers, tinkers, cobblers, journeyman-tailors, scavengers, publicans, and sinners of every kind, and worst than all, their wives and daughters, when they are called upon to perform their several parts in their new capacity of counsel and witnesses? Those who have not witnessed the scene habitually can form little conception of it. Sometimes they roar at each other like bull-calves, while the Judge in vain commands silence: at other times they will shake their fists in a way that threatens pugnacity even across the Court: abusive names and personal threats are often handed between them, careless of the judicial censure; and witnesses are nudged and prompted, evidence the clearest refuted, and menaces from the bench that would be most formidable to anybody that understood them.

In all cases in which the parties have dispensed with professional assistance, and these, as I have said, form the large majority, the Judge is obliged to act at once as the counsel, the attorney, and the moderator for both parties—as the jury to decide on the facts, and finally, in his own proper capacity, to pronounce judgment. Can it be possible even for the ablest and coolest head to avoid error, or at least seeming error, in the discharge of these multiplied functions? and if he does err, can it be possible to avoid the inference by many, that he is either partial, or hasty, or incompetent? How much must all this tend to lower, and even degrade our legal administration in public esteem! and it has had that effect already: not only among the ignorant and uninformed, but in the higher classes of society. It is true that they see but little of such scenes; but they hear of them from those who are not likely to let them lose by description; and they hear of them so often that they, not altogether unjustly, term the County Courts Her Majesty's licensed bear-gardens! I think it not impossible that the prevalence of perjury and fraud may be in some measure ascribed to this lowering of the dignity of our tribunals. Few men enter our Superior Courts to give evidence in the witness-box, without feeling subdued into reverential respect by the serious and almost solemn decorum of the Bench: a decorum which even the hardiest or the most distinguished counsel dare not violate, unless by some witty sally to provoke a smile.

(To be continued.)

PROFESSIONAL FEES IN THE COUNTY COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—It is to be hoped that the judges in settling the scale of costs for the County Courts will (if not beyond their powers) direct that the plaintiff shall in all cases (where more than forty shillings are recovered) be allowed the costs of employing an attorney. I had to conduct a cause at the Whitechapel County Court on Tuesday last, on behalf of a plaintiff, when the defendant appeared but did not dispute the debt, and accordingly judgment was given by Mr. Serjt. Manning for 9*l.* 13*s.* 3*d.* the full amount. But the defendant having alleged that he had written a letter to the plaintiff after my application to him for payment of the debt and before proceedings were commenced, expressive of his intention not to dispute it but requiring time for payment, the judge disallowed my fee; and this, notwithstanding the oath of the plaintiff that he had never received such a letter, or indeed any letter at all, after the matter had been placed in my hands. I stated that the defendant had written a letter to me, but so far from confessing the claim, he intimated that he should pay only on having the value of the work which formed the subject of the action; and that a few days before the hearing he called upon me and said he had a defence to part of the demand, but would pay the whole if the plaintiff would give him the time he required. I also mentioned that the plaintiff had acceded to this, but the defendant had failed on the previous day to pay 5*l.* on account as he proposed. Unfortunately I had not the letter in court, and therefore cannot much complain that the judge took little notice of it, although, by-the-bye, the defendant did not deny my statement as to what took place when he called upon me. But, Sir, I contend that, even if the plaintiff had received such a letter as the defendant alleged, the fee should have been allowed, for how could he know that the defendant on the trial would not defend the action? Would the judge look upon such a letter (if written) as an absolute bar to any defence he might set up? I think not. Besides, the 8th section of the County Courts Extension Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 61) enables a defendant to confess the action and thereby save the trouble and expense of proving the debt, and gives the judge authority to make the same order at the next sitting of the court as if he had tried the cause and given judgment thereon. The summons served upon the defendant in this case contained a printed indorsement of that fact. If a defendant does not choose to avail himself of the provision, surely he has no cause to complain of being required to pay the fee of the plaintiff's attorney. Indeed, if he does avail himself of it, he ought to be obliged to pay the costs under the new scale up to that time.

Not having much practice in the County Courts, I do not know whether the course taken in this case is generally adopted by the judges; but, if so, it is not too soon to alter it.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

H. TAYLER.

15, Church-street, Spitalfields, 17th Feb. 1853.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The extension of the County Court jurisdiction, as published in 1851 by Messrs. Cox and Lloyd, Barristers-at-Law, sets forth a number of plaints, for instance, trespass to land, trespass to property, tort, trover, &c., having been thus set forth under and by virtue of the 59th section of the statute, I believe. If such be the case the non-attendance to such rules should be fatal if the law means anything whatever.

Now in the country it is a practice at some courts for the judge to amend these pleas at the trial, whereas if they mean anything a nonsuit ought to be entered. Can any of your readers inform the profession how to act in such cases, with the County Courts law, as written, in your favour, and the judge at variance? I am, Sir, yours, &c.

A PERPLEXED PRACTITIONER.

Leeds, 22nd Feb. 1853.

[A judge has large powers of amendment; but these should not be exercised where the consequence would be to inconvenience the party misled by the plea.]

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

A PETITIONING creditor's debt must be of a specific or liquidated sum, and a mere claim for damages will not suffice. In Re Broadhurst, 20 L. T. Rep. 254, the following facts were held to be the latter and not the former, and therefore not to sustain the petition. A. intending a partnership with B. and C., stipulated that D. should enter into a covenant (which he did) with A. that the debts due to the partnership would realize a certain sum, and if they did not he would, on demand of A., pay the deficiency to B., C. and A.; he also covenanted that the debts owing by B. and C. did not exceed a certain sum, and if they should, he would, on demand of A., pay the former or persons to whom the debts were due, the amount of such debts. A. demanded a sum under both branches of the covenant, and made that demand the basis of proceedings in bankruptcy against D. The Lords Justices, however, held that it was insufficient; it was only a claim for damages.

The Q. B. has held in Ex parte Hawley, 20 L. T. Rep. 258, that the Court of Bankruptcy may commit an attorney for contempt for refusing to disclose matters communicated to him by a client, not relating to a suit or business which he is conducting for the client as attorney, even although he has promised secrecy. Such a non-privileged question was, whether the bankrupt had told him the name of the port from, or the vessel in which, he intended to sail from this country, and whether he intended to leave the country. In the same branch of the law it has been decided by the Ex. that sect. 224 of the Bankruptcy Act, which came into operation on the 11th Oct. and provided that every deed or memorandum of arrangement now or hereafter entered into between any debtor and his creditors, and executed by six-sevenths of his creditors, &c. shall be binding on the rest, is not retrospective. It affects only subsequent deeds of arrangement, and not such as were made at the time the Act came into operation. (Waugh v. Middleton, 20 L. T. Rep. 262.)

COURT PAPERS.

Equity Courts.

Court of Appeal in Chancery.

THE Lords Justices do hereby order that the several causes and special cases set forth in the schedule hereunto subjoined, and now standing in the book of causes of the V. C. Kindersley, be heard before their lordships, and for that purpose be transferred to their lordships' book of causes.

Such causes and special cases will be heard on and after Tuesday, the 1st day of March next.

SCHEDULE.

Williams v. Williams, further directions and costs
Baldwyn v. Rogers, ditto
Rochester v. Taylor, ditto
Mackinnon v. Stewart, ditto
Moore v. Ditto, ditto
Burt v. Jones, ditto
Church Building Society v. Barlow, ditto
Maclean v. Babington, ditto
Haynes v. Haynes, special case
Squire v. Wray, further directions and costs
St. Aubyn v. St. Aubyn, ditto
Roberts v. Roberts, ditto
Same v. Radcliffe, ditto
Horner v. Horner, ditto
Dickenson v. Wolfenden, ditto
Vigurs v. Vigurs, ditto
Miller v. Huddlestone, further directions and costs
Barlow v. Barlow, ditto
Gray v. Gray (6), ditto
Pickering v. Harley, ditto
Wellesley v. Wellesley, ditto
Leonard v. Ord, ditto
Beale v. Symonds, ditto
Solomon v. Solomon, ditto
Eckford v. Boome, ditto
Lord v. Wighwick, ditto
King v. Heenan, special case
Richmond v. Jeffries, further directions and costs
Hodges v. Hodges, ditto
Clark v. Pedder, ditto
Kidd v. Forth (6), ditto
Terrott v. Bonner, ditto
Ellison v. Clark, ditto

CECIL MONRO, Registrar.

Registrar's Office, Court of Chancery, Feb. 24.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

HEREFORDSHIRE.—John Murray Aynsley, Esq.; Thomas William Booker, Esq.; William Bridgman, Esq.; Bonham Caldwall, Esq.; Elias Chadwick, Esq.; James Cheese, Esq.; William Trevelyan Kevill Davies, Esq.; Thomas Dunne, junior, Esq.; Edward Griffiths, Esq.; Captain Thomas Heywood, Esq.; Edmund Higginson, Esq.; James King-King, Esq.; William Money Kyrle, Esq.; Captain Augustus William Henry Meyrick, Esq.; Robert Barkerville Richards Mynors, Esq.; Reynolds Peyton, Esq.; Captain Kingsmill Manley Power; and Henry Lee Warner, junior, Esq. to be deputy-lieutenants.

(Substituted for the Gazette of Tuesday, Feb. 15.)

YORKSHIRE.—John Eastwood, Esq.; Edmund Waterton, Esq.; to be deputy-lieutenants.

LANCASHIRE.—Thomas Edwards Moss, Esq., to be deputy-lieutenant.

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

UNITED LAW CLERKS' SOCIETY.

The following letter has been addressed to the secretary:—

6, Raymond's-buildings, Gray's-inn,
8th Dec. 1852.

Dear Sir,—Observing your name as one of the trustees of the United Law Clerks' Society, I take the liberty of forwarding to you my cheque for 60*l.* as a donation to that institution.

It is proper to add that this is part of a sum received as compensation for serious injuries sustained by Mrs. Lewis and myself by the collision on the Brighton Railway on the 1st ult. which we are desirous of appropriating to charitable purposes, and I know no charity more deserving of support from the profession of which I am a member than the United Law Clerks' Society, which I trust will long continue to prosper.

Believe me to be, dear Sir,
Yours faithfully and very obediently,
(Signed) WM. LEWIS.

John Wm. Willcock, Esq. Q. C.

MANCHESTER LAW ASSOCIATION.

THE annual general meeting of the members of the association was held on Wednesday, the 12th day of January ult., at their rooms, No. 4, Norfolk-street, when an account of the receipts and disbursements (previously audited by two of the members) was submitted and passed.

The proceedings of the society, for the last year, were stated in the following report, which was read by the Honorary Secretary, and unanimously adopted:—

The Fourteenth Annual Report of the Committee of the Manchester Law Association.

"The Committee of the Manchester Law Association, in presenting the following report of their proceedings during the past year, have to call the attention of the members of the association to the very important changes in the law which have taken place.

"Early in the late session of Parliament your committee received copies of various Bills, including particularly the Common Law Procedure Amendment Bill, the Suitors in Chancery Relief Bill, the Law of Wills Amendment Bill, the County Courts Further Extension Bill, and the Law of Patents Amendment Bill, all of which have since become law, and occasioned alterations in the practice and procedure of the several courts of law and equity, greater than any which have taken place in modern times.

"Your committee suggested various amendments to render the working of the bills, when carried into law, practically more efficient.

"The law of Wills Amendment Act will, it is believed, give great security to persons deriving benefits from testamentary dispositions of property, and guard against the mischievous consequences of certain decisions by the Ecclesiastical Courts, the effect of which has been to deprive many persons of their rights.

"The law of Patents Amendment Bill will, it is believed, be found entitled to the general approbation of the Profession.

"Your committee again supported the attempt made to obtain a repeal of the Certificate Duty, which they at one time hoped would have taken place during the last session, but the determination of her Majesty's ministers, as subsequently expressed, not to propose any alteration in the fiscal system of the country, prevented the accomplishment of that object.

"Your committee have to thank Lord Robert Grosvenor for the interest he has taken in the subject, and to notice the great efforts constantly made by the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, and by the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, but are sorry that they have not received that support from some of the members of Parliament for this locality which the justice of the case demands.

"Your committee have further to report that having heard that an uncertificated attorney in Manchester had given notice of his intention to apply for a renewal of his certificate, they felt it their duty to send to the secretary of the Incorporated Law Society affidavits which had the effect of preventing the intended application being made.

"Your committee have also had charges against persons under the name of agents, practising as attorneys and conveyancers; some of which charges have been under the consideration of your committee, and will form a subject of consideration for their successors in office.

"Your committee were, in August last, invited by the secretary to the five County Court judges, appointed to frame a scale of costs, to be received by attorneys, under the powers of the Act passed during the last session of Parliament, to offer suggestions on that subject: they took the same into consideration, and communicated with law societies in other towns; and one of your committee subsequently attended in London as a deputation, and met deputations from various other law societies, when a scale of costs was unanimously agreed upon; and at an interview which, on that occasion, took place with the judges, this scale was submitted, and, as your committee believes, met with their general approbation.

"The attention of your committee has been directed to the various and conflicting constructions which have been recently put upon the last Stamp Act by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue and their solicitor, in cases of conveyance on the sale of hereditaments for a pecuniary consideration and a perpetual rent reserved or limited to the vendor; several members of the Association have felt much inconvenience in consequence of the very novel and opposite decisions recently adopted at the Stamp Office; and inasmuch as the gentlemen at the head of that department of the Revenue state that they keep no record of their decisions, and as no certainty therefore exists, that their decision in one case will operate as a rule in another in which the facts may be precisely analogous, your committee undertook to pay the expenses, out of pocket, of an appeal to the Court of Exchequer in a case recently brought before them, considering that it is a question of great practical importance in Manchester and the neighbourhood, and that a decision upon it ought at once to be obtained. In the case referred to the conveyance was in consideration of a gross sum of 100*l.* paid, and of a rent of 80*l.* per annum, limited to the vendor in fee: it was stamped with a 10*s.* stamp, being the ad valorem duty on the gross sum paid, and with the proper progressive duty stamps. On its being presented at the Stamp Office, along with a duplicate to have the usual denoting stamp affixed to the latter, the solicitor of the commissioners objected that the original required a 1*l.* 15*s.* stamp in addition to the ad valorem stamp. The deed was then submitted to the commissioners for their opinion as to the proper stamp duty under the 14th section of the Act 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97. The commissioners took a new view of the question, stating that, as the deed contained a covenant for the payment of the 80*l.* rent, it was liable to a 2*l.* stamp, under the head of 'Covenant' in the above Act, being the same duty as on a bond for the payment of any annuity or money at stated periods (not being interest nor rent on a lease) for the term of life or other indefinite period. Against this opinion it was determined to appeal; and the commissioners were therefore applied to, to state a case for the opinion of the Court of Exchequer, under the 15th section of the Act; such application was accordingly made in the middle of September last, and, after pressing repeatedly for the case, the applicants on the 5th Nov. received a communication from the Solicitor of Inland Revenue, that the amount of duty involved being so very trifling, and the point one of not much importance and by no means clear, he should recommend to the Board that the duty in dispute, with the costs deposited, should be returned, without putting the applicants to the expense of going to the court. On this being communicated to the committee, they passed a resolution requesting the applicants to urge upon the Solicitor of Inland Revenue the great importance in this district of the question involved, and the desirableness of having it determined by a positive decision. On again applying to the office accordingly it was stated that the commissioners decided that the deed was rightly stamped; and any litigation on the subject was therefore out of the question; and the deed was subsequently returned (stamped as when sent up) with the adjudication stamp of the commissioners affixed, declaring it to be rightly stamped.

"Your committee have to report that they received a circular signed by Lord Harrowby, as chairman of the committee of the Society for Promoting the Amendment of the Law, inviting the attendance of a deputation from this association at a conference proposed to be held in London on the 15th, 16th, and 17th Nov. last, to consider the amendment and consolidation of commercial law, and its assimilation in England, Scotland, and Ireland; and your committee appointed the president of the association, who accordingly attended as a deputation at that conference, which was also attended by several gentlemen representing legal and commercial associations of most of the commercial towns in Great Britain and Ireland, and by several members of both Houses of Parliament.

"The understanding of all parties taking any active interest in the measure appeared to be, that a full inquiry should be instituted into the commercial laws of each country, and an impartial selection taken from those which should be considered the best to be generally adopted; and that when such selection should be made, the sanction of the Legislature should be obtained, so that a uniform law should govern all the commercial affairs of the United Kingdom. A deputation from the conference had a long and satisfactory interview with the Earl of Derby (then the First Minister of the Crown), and your committee believe that the objects of the society will in the result be carried out.

"Your committee cannot, without entering much into detail, give a report of all matters which have engaged their attention during the year in which the affairs of the Association have been confided to their care, but the members will be able to form an opinion of the labours of the committee, from the great and important changes in the law which have been effected during their year of office. It has been the anxious desire of your committee, by a careful perusal of the various Bills submitted to Parliament affecting the law, to render them of advantage to the public. Great as have been the changes during the last few years, it is clear that greater alterations are contemplated; and your committee rely with confidence on their successors to suggest improvements, and by an earnest endeavour to promote practical usefulness in the administration of justice, render the Association an important auxiliary in effecting wise and comprehensive measures of legal reform.

"Since the foregoing part of this report was prepared, the resignation of two of the chief officers of the Association has been received, namely, that of Mr. Whitlow, who has acted as treasurer since the formation of the Association; and that of Mr. Street, who has acted as honorary secretary for the last four years.

"Your committee deeply regret that Mr. Whitlow has been compelled, from indisposition, to retire from the office of treasurer; and that the Association will be deprived of the valuable services of Mr. Street, as honorary secretary, who has resigned in consequence of other engagements which have devolved upon him, and which in his opinion, are not compatible with an efficient discharge of the duties incident to the office.

"Your committee are happy to announce that they have prevailed upon Mr. Street to accept the office of treasurer; and that Mr. Charles Gibson has very kindly consented to accept the important office of honorary secretary for the ensuing year."

The following gentlemen were elected officers and committee of the society for the ensuing year:—President: Mr. John Harlow.—Vice-Presidents: Messrs. G. B. Withington, Manchester; W. D. Nicholls, Altrincham.—Treasurer: Mr. James Street.—Honorary Secretary: Mr. Charles Gibson.—Committee: Messrs. J. P. Aston, T. Baker, James Barratt, J. F. Beever, T. P. Bunting, William Burdett, H. Charlewood, R. D. B. Cobbett, F. C. Faulkner, Samuel Fletcher, Walley Foster, Wm. Foyster, James Gill, George Hadfield, jun. Isaac Hall, Stephen Heelis, Wm. Heron, Jos. Janion, Thomas Neild, William Norris, W. H. Partington, Francis Robinson, John Speakman, John Sudlow, Thomas Taylor, Norfolk-street, Frederick Thomas, J. B. Vickers, W. L. Welsh, R. M. Whitlow, John Wilson.—Chairman of the Committee: Mr. W. L. Welsh.—Vice-Chairman, Mr. Francis Robinson.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

New Commentaries on the Laws of England (partly founded on Blackstone.) By HENRY JOHN STEPHEN, Serjeant-at-Law. Third Edition. Prepared for the press by JAMES STEPHEN, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and Professor of English Law at King's College. In 4 vols. London: Butterworths.

THE many changes lately made in the practice of the law have reduced all existing law libraries to waste paper. The best thing the lawyer can do now is to burn his books and reports, or consign them to the butterman at a penny per pound. They are worse than worthless, more troublesome than lumber; for not merely do they not supply the information required—they positively mislead. Only an idiot would now buy past reports, or a law book three years old, however cheaply offered, they are just so much money thrown away; like the bargains at an auction—dear at any price. Time was when lawyers were as proud of their libraries as a farmer of his beeves; they were their legal stock-in-trade, and the measure of their wealth—with many, perhaps, the measure also of their pedantics. Things have changed now: he is the richest and happiest lawyer who has no library, but is beginning to form one, starting from the present position of the law, and emancipating himself altogether from the ponderous lumber that imbedded his ancestors. Some wealthy in a distant settlement of the United States, which had been proclaimed an Arcadia by the landowners, tells a good story of his passing over one of these be-pulled estates with a friend, to whom he remarked that "the owner of such miserable land as that must be plaguy poor." Upon which he was greeted by an angry voice from behind a clump of starved thorns, "Not so poor as you think for, master. I've a given Ben Thompson one half of the estate to take clothes back." So might a lawyer rejoice now that he had got rid of his old library, even though he had given somebody one half of it to relieve him of the other. At least his shelves are empty; he has not to fear being misinstructed by his obsolete advisers.

If any of our readers should feel inclined to make a bonfire of their books, we recommend them to throw into it without mercy several hundred volumes of the Reports—all that relate to the practice of the Common Law and of Equity; all of older date than 1847, relating to Magistrates' Law, Poor Law, Evidence, and Nisi Prius—and to preserve only such as treat of Real Property Law and Criminal Law, the only branches of the law that have not been subjected to material changes. The former, indeed, has hitherto strangely escaped the general massacre, and it is likely to preserve itself intact for some time to come; there being, in truth, great practical difficulties in the way of any changes of importance. The Criminal Law has been much amended in its practice, but its principles have been unchanged, and for a time it may be exempted from the flames. But even that is doomed to codification; and then another holocaust!

Assuming, then, that all prudent practitioners and students will wash their hands of the past, and begin to form small practical libraries entirely of the recent law, they could not find a better foundation than this third and new edition of Serjeant Stephen's Commentaries, which has been moulded throughout to the present state of the law, and comprises all the recent alterations. Every lawyer knows the worth of this famous work as it came from the hands of its author; we can assure them that it has lost none of its value in the hands of his son, who has performed his laborious task of editing all, and rewriting much, with the same care, the same industry, the same mastery of the principles of our law, and in the same clear and graceful style, that recommended the compositions of his father to popularity even more than the fullness of learning, without its parade, that distinguished these Commentaries. The yet unsurpassed treatise of Blackstone was made the basis of the work; but instead of giving the text, with notes, Mr. Serjeant Stephen preferred the more difficult but more effective plan of rewriting the whole, preserving the words of the original whenever they were applicable still, but omitting what was obsolete, adding what had since accumulated, and thus making a complete treatise, in the same shape and with much of the same language, only giving it, as Blackstone might be supposed to have done, had he lived and lectured now instead of then: that, to prevent any mistake as to authorship and authority, the utmost care was observed to indicate by brackets the passages, and even the words, interpolated by the second author.

In this manner Mr. James Stephen has yet further improved upon the work of his father. He has presented the law as it is now, with all its many changes, so that the student may read it with confidence that he is not mistaking the old law for the new; and the practitioner will find the double duty of unlearning as well as learning, which is now imposed upon him, much facilitated by the comprehensive view which such a work as this will give him of the entire domain of the law of England, changed, modified, reformed, deformed, improved, botched and tinkered as it has been, by skilful and unskilful hands, by practical and by unpractical men, by those who would improve it as well as by those who would destroy the goodly fabric. We heartily recommend these Commentaries as beyond all measure the best book that has ever appeared to form a foundation for the study of the law of England.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

ADDRESS TO MASTER FARRER,

On his retirement as Senior Master of the Court of Chancery.

On the 7th instant, a deputation of solicitors waited upon J. W. Farrer, the Senior Master of the Court of Chancery, to present him with an address upon his retirement from office.

Mr. Sudlow, of the firm of Sudlows, Torr, and Janeway, presented the address accompanied by Mr. W. H. Palmer, Mr. E. W. Field, Mr. C. N. Wilde, Mr. Bridges, Mr. Tilson, Mr. W. H. Woodhouse, Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Goodford, Mr. Trinder, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. J. H. Turner, Mr. Devey, Mr. Fox, and a numerous body of other solicitors, with Mr. Maugham, the Secretary of the Incorporated Law Society.

Mr. Sudlow, in presenting the address, said, "That on this occasion he felt himself honoured in being deputed to express, however imperfectly, the feelings of respect and gratitude entertained for the Master, not only by himself and the other solicitors who had concurred in the address, but, he might add, by the profession at large. The gentleman (Master Farrer) whom he had the honour of addressing, had received his appointment from Lord Chancellor Eldon so long ago as the year 1824, and had risen to be the Senior Master; that during the long interval from that period to the present time, he had invariably discharged the functions of his important office with unblemished integrity, the clearest intelligence, and the most exact punctuality; that his earnest desire to administer justice was exhibited in the pains taken to investigate every case brought before him in all its details,—by unwearied patience in listening to the statements and arguments which were adduced on all sides, and the caution with which his judgments were formed and delivered. He need not enlarge on the labours encountered by the Master in the transaction of the vast amount of business which had fallen to his share, especially in the hearing of the numerous solicitors present, who had themselves witnessed those exertions; but he could not help referring to the printed returns of the Suitor's Fee Fund for several years (one sure test of the business transacted), which stated the various amounts paid by the different Masters into that fund; and it would be found that the Senior Master was at the head of the list, his payments having far surpassed in amount those of any one of his colleagues,—thus showing that the energies and abilities which had been so ably displayed for nearly thirty years, were still vigorous and unimpaired. Mr. Sudlow said he should not do justice to his own feelings, which he was sure concurred with the sentiments entertained by the profession, if he did not express the grateful sense with which the urbanity and kindness that marked the Master's conduct were remembered;—so that amidst the difficulties that surrounded and occasionally embarrassed the solicitor in dealing with important cases, his anxiety was essentially relieved by the courtesy and patience of the Master, and his readiness, so far as his advice and assistance could avail, to meet and remove whatever obstacle impeded the proceeding before him. The legal profession, and the public also, owed a deep debt of gratitude to the Master for the judicious and temperate course taken by him on the subject of law reform. By his writings and by the evidence given under commissions, and especially before the Lords' Committee, in 1851, his vast experience and sound judgment had enabled him to point out to Parliament and to Government such measures as were safe and salutary, and to check those hurried and impetuous alterations which in the eagerness for change were not weighed as they deserved, and were, therefore, instead of introducing an improved system, calculated to lead to serious mischief and expense. In conclusion, he begged, in the name of himself and of the gentlemen then present, to assure the Master that, in quitting his office, he would be followed by their sincere respect (perhaps he might be permitted to say, their affectionate respect), and their best wishes that his retirement might, among other consolations, be solaced by the pleasing recollections of a life honourably and usefully spent, and the hope that he and his family might enjoy for many years the blessing of health and continued prosperity. He (Mr. Sudlow) could not let the occasion pass without adding, also, his testimony to the ability, zeal, and urbanity which had always been displayed by Mr. Whiting, the chief clerk, in the management of the important business committed to his care, from which both the solicitor and suitor had derived the most essential advantages."

The address was as follows:—

"The undersigned solicitors desire, upon your retirement from office under the Master's Abolition Act, to express the deep feeling of respect and gratitude which their experience of your services to the suitor, and your uniform kindness and attention to the practitioners have led them to entertain."

Master Farrer, in answer to the address, said—

"If he consulted his own inclination, he should sink down into his chair and indulge in silence in the enjoyment of the very pleasing and grateful feelings, which the address he then held in his hand, and the kind observations with which it had been presented, had awakened in him. Another reason for wishing to indulge himself in silence was, the consciousness that he could not find words fit to express the intensity and sincerity of those feelings. This expression of favourable opinion and approbation of his conduct as a Master, signed by so large a number of most highly respected and learned gentlemen who were experienced in the Masters' offices, would, under the ordinary circumstances of resignation of office, have been very gratifying, but under the circumstances which had led to the abolition of the office of Master in Chancery, it was peculiarly acceptable and consolatory. When in March, 1824, Lord Chancellor Eldon conferred upon him the office of Master, he formed the determination that he would use his best exertions so to discharge its duties as to gain the approbation and confidence of the Profession, especially of that branch of it to which the deputation belonged. The proceedings of this day justified him in entertaining the conviction, that he retired from office having succeeded in carrying that determination into effect. The Master requested to be allowed to take that opportunity of acknowledging the sense of the efficient services of the two officers who had assisted him in carrying on the work of this office. He alluded to Mr. Whiting and Mr. Slade. To his friend, Mr. Whiting, he made his cordial acknowledgment of the valuable assistance he had for many years rendered him. He had ever found in him a zealous, laborious, and able coadjutor. He had found united in him the useful qualities of one well practised in business with the pleasing manners of a gentleman. Although at his time of life, and in his state of health, after nearly twenty-nine years' service, retirement from public life was acceptable, although he could not describe himself as yet he could say, that he quitted office with as fresh and lively a feeling about business (he might confess fondness for business), as he experienced when a young man at the bar. He was then about, for the probably short time that his life might be prolonged, to enter, he trusted, upon a state of comparative rest and quiet. Amongst the happy reflections of peaceful, musing old age, the kindness of the solicitors, through a long course of years, and especially their kindness that day, would form a prominent and never wearying subject. He would no longer detain them, but must entreat all those who had signed the address, to accept all that he could offer in return,—"The tribute of a thankful heart." To his friends, present and absent, he then said "farewell," not in the thoughtless, heartless manner in which that word was too commonly used; but in the fullest, deepest, and richest meaning of the word, comprehending his earnest wish and prayer for their happiness in time present, and in futurity, he said "Farewell."—Mr. Whiting begged to express his deep sense of gratitude for the flattering manner in which his name had been mentioned, as well by the deputation as by the Master, and stated, that had it not been for the confidence reposed in him by the Master, and his uniform kindness, he (Mr. Whiting) could not have transacted the business of the office; and he trusted that in the office he now held he should be equally successful in his exertions for the benefit of the suitors and the Profession. The deputation then withdrew.

Statis prime sub luce cadentem;

Lord Mayor's Court.—Privileges of the City Pleaders.—When the first case was called on, Mr. Randall said he would ask his lordship's indulgence for a moment while he, as one of the officers of the court, called his attention to a matter of a little importance to himself and his friends who filled the same capacity in the court as he did. It was one of their privileges, which had for a long time existed, that they should be instructed before other counsel were brought in in any case; but in the case called on he was not instructed for any of the parties concerned; his friend Mr. Locke was engaged, with several other learned gentlemen, for the plaintiff, and his friend Mr. Ryland had been instructed, with two other gentlemen, for the garnishee. How this would be regarded under the new practice of the court (which is now an open court for attorneys), he could not be aware; but as this was the first time the question had arisen, he would call his lordship's attention to it, and should be glad to hear what his views upon the matter were.—Ryland said it would, if carried out, annul their privileges altogether.—The Recorder said the matter certainly was one of very great importance, and he would take time to consider, and communicate with parties upon it.—Ryland said he was in this position—he had had a brief delivered to him for the garnishee; but as a gentleman had been brought into lead who was, as he should have thought every one would have known, his junior, he had declined to appear in the case. They simply protested, and had not the least desire to impede the trial of the case.—The Recorder said that would be quite sufficient. He should consider the subject.

Removal of the Courts from Westminster to the vicinity of the Inns of Court.—A petition has been prepared and signed under the seal of the Incorporated Law Society, on the part of the attorneys and solicitors, for the purpose of being presented to the House of Commons as early as possible, praying the House to take the very important subject of the removal of the courts into its consideration, with a view to the erection of new buildings for the accommodation of the judges, the bar, the solicitors, and suitors, and generally for the more convenient administration of justice. The petition sets forth the inconvenience of the present site at Westminster, away from the centre of the metropolis and the district where both branches of the Profession and all the offices of the court are located. It also describes the defective construction of the existing courts, their insufficient number, and lamentable want of accommodation, as well for the public as the Profession, especially since the large addition made to the Equity Courts. It is suggested that the new building should be in the neighbourhood of the Inns of Court, and combine under the same roof accommodation, not only for all the courts, both of law and equity, but of the various Masters, Record Clerks, and other officers, and particularly the chambers of the Equity judges, their chief clerks, &c. The site suggested lies between the Temple and Lincoln's-inn, having the Strand on the south, Carey-street on the north, Chancery-lane on the east, and Clement's-inn and New-inn on the west, being on the borders of the cities of London and Westminster, and forming, on the south side of the new street intended to connect the city to the West-[illegible] State Record [illegible] ways and means [illegible] professional im-[illegible]—1st. The sur-[illegible] the Court of Chancery, [illegible] 2nd. The ac-[illegible] 3rd. The surplus fees of the Common Law Courts paid into the Treasury since 1833. 4th. The amount to be derived from the sale or letting of the numerous chambers, now occupied by the officers of the several courts. 5th. The value of the site of the present courts at Westminster. 6th. The ground-rents which may be obtained for such part of the site as will not be required for the courts and offices, and which may be let or disposed of for professional chambers.—Legal Observer.

THE SPRING CIRCUITS.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.—Appleby, Feb. 22.—This morning, Mr. Baron Martin (who arrived here alone last night, and opened the commission), after attending divine service, proceeded at eleven o'clock to the court-house. There were no civil causes to try, and the criminal calendar contained only six cases—three of them petty larcenies, one case of assault, one of burglary, and one a charge of placing an obstruction on the railway of the Lancaster and Carlisle Company, with intent to upset the carriages.

JOURNAL OF PROPERTY.

MONEY MARKET.

ENGLISH FUNDS.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Frid.
Bank Stock	227½	228	227	227½	226½	227½
3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities	100¼	100⅜	100¼	100⅛	100⅛	100⅛
3 per Cent. Consols Annuities	99½	99½	99⅜	99⅝	99⅜	99⅜
Consols for Account	99⅝	99⅝	99⅜	99⅝	99⅜	99⅜
New 3 per Cent. Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	..
New 3½ per Cent. Annuities	103½	103½	103½	103⅜	103⅜	103⅜
Long Annu. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	6⅝	6⅝	6⅝	6⅝	6⅝	..
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Oct. 10, 1859)	..	..	..	..	..	..
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	..	6¼	6¼	..	..	..
India Stock	..	266	269	..	266	266
India Bonds (1,000*l.*)	..	50	50	45	..	..
Do. do. (under 1,000*l.*)	..	..	..	..	..	40
South Sea Stock	..	..	..	..	..	..
Do. do. Old Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	..
Exchequer Bills, 1000*l.*	15	18	..	18	17	12
Do. do. 500*l.*	12	18	20	15	17	12
Do. do. Small	10	10	..	10	20	12

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

ADDISON.—On the 20th inst. the wife of Thomas Henry Addison, Esq. of Gloucester, solicitor, of a daughter.

MARTELLI.—On the 22nd inst. at 35, Eastbourne-terrace, Hyde-park, the wife of Chas. H. A. Martelli, Esq barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGE.

DAY—MADOX.—On the 21st inst. at Lee Church, Kent, James Frederick Day, Esq. of Park-road, Stockwell, to Anna, third daughter of the late Erasmus Madox, Esq. barrister-at-law, of Camberwell.

DEATHS.

CURTIS.—On the 21st inst. Jane Juliet, wife of J. E. B. Curtis, of Lincoln's-inn, barrister-at-law, and the eldest daughter of the late Dr. John Major Wilson, H.E.I.C.S.

FLOOD.—On the 18th inst. at Islington, Mr. James Flood, o. the Queen's Bench-office, aged 65, of bronchitis.

GREVILLE.—On the 20th inst. of rapid consumption, in her 22nd year, Louisa, the beloved wife of F. G. Greville, Esq. of Park-villas, Holloway, and Lombard-street, solicitor.

LISTER.—On the 18th inst. at an advanced age, Margaret Lister, of No. 37, Claremont-square, Pentonville, relict of the late Samuel Lister, Esq. solicitor.

PULLEN.—On the 13th inst. at Peckham, suddenly, James Thomas Pullen, of Ashley-lodge and Union-court Broad-street, solicitor, aged 45.

NECROLOGY

OF LEGISLATORS, MAGISTRATES, AND LAWYERS.

THE RIGHT HON. DAVID BOYLE.

This estimable gentleman, who so long filled the most prominent legal position in Scotland, died on Friday last, at his seat at Shewalton, in Ayrshire, in his 81st year. His illness was of brief duration. The deceased judge was born at Irvine, in July, 1772, and was the son of the Hon. Patrick Boyle, of Shewalton, and the grandson of the second Earl of Glasgow. He was called to the Bar in 1793, and was appointed Solicitor-General for Scotland in 1807. Subsequently he represented his native county of Ayr in Parliament, and in 1811 he was elevated to the bench as a Lord of Session and Justiciary. In the same year he was promoted to the office of Lord Justice Clerk; and in 1841 he was appointed to the highest judicial office in the kingdom—viz., that of Lord Justice-General of Scotland, and Lord President of the Court of Session. He resigned in May, 1852, after having been a judge for the long period of forty-one years, and was succeeded by Lord Colonsay (Mr. Duncan M'Neile.) He was appointed a Privy Councillor in 1821. He was offered a baronetcy by the Derby administration, at the same time when the honour was conferred on Sheriff Alison, the historian of Europe, but he saw cause to decline the honour.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

BEVAN, WILLIAM, baker, Gilbert-street, Oxford-street, March 1, at half-past eleven, and April 7, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Johnson. Sols. Messrs. Hilbery, Fenchurch-street. Petition, Feb. 12.

DAVIES, CHARLES, innkeeper, Worcester, March 6 and April 19, at twelve, Birmingham. Off. as. Whitmore. Sols. W. Cories, Worcester; and E. and H. Wright, Birmingham. Petition, Feb. 21.

JONES, ENOCH, ironfounder, Elton, Lancashire, March 4 and April 8, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Lee. Sol Grundy, Bury, Lancashire. Petition, Feb. 17.

LOVE, ANDREW, and KEYS, CHARLES, looking-glass manufacturers, Liverpool, March 3 and April 7, Liverpool. Off. as. Bird. Sols. Taylor, St. Helen's; and Bannor, Liverpool. Petition, Feb. 18.

MORATT, WILLIAM, coach proprietor, Leeds, March 11 and April 15, at eleven, Leeds. Off. as. Young. Sol. Middleton, Leeds. Petition, Feb. 17.

PRICE, EDWARD, livery-stable keeper, Birmingham, March 8 and April 6, at twelve, Birmingham. Off. as. Bittlestone. Sol. J. Smith, Birmingham. Petition, Feb. 19.

Gazette, Feb. 25.

BROWN, GEORGE TAYLOR, draper, 6, Gloucester-terrace, Newroad, Whitechapel-road, March 7, at one, April 6, at two, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Stansfeld, Sols. Lawrence, Plews, and Boyer, 14, Old Jewry Chambers. Petition, Feb. 8.

CHIDWICK, WILLIAM HENRY, tobacconist, Dover, Kent, March 8, at twelve, April 5, at half-past twelve, Basinghall-st. Com Evans. Off. ass. Bell. Sols. Messrs. Linklater, 17, Sise-lane. Petition, Feb. 21.

COLLIER, LOUISA and MATILDA, bookbinders and pocket-book makers, 72, Hatton-garden, March 8, at half-past eleven, April 5, at twelve, Basinghall-st. Com. Evans. Off. as. Bell. Sol. Chippendale, Nicholas-lane. Petition, Feb 19

DANDY, GEORGE, jeweller and watchmaker, 2a, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square, March 11, at two, April 12, at twelve, Basinghall st. Com. Holroyd. Off. as. Edwards. Sols. Jay and Pilgrim, 14, Bucklersbury, Cheapside. Petition. Feb. 19.

HODGSON, THOMAS, ship owner, Kingston-upon-Hull, March 23 and April 13, at twelve, Hull. Com. Ayrton. Off. as Carrick. Sol Ayre, jun. Hull. Petition, Feb. 2

HOLLAND, THOMAS, manufacturer, Langhaw, near Godalming, March 8 and April 5, at eleven, Basinghall-st. Com. Evans. Off. as. Bell. Sols. Lawrance, Plews, and Boyer, Old Jewry Chambers. Petition, Feb. 21.

JAMES, WILLIAM, chemist and druggist, oil and colourman, Waterside North, Lincoln, March 23 and April 13, at twelve, Hull. Com. Ayrton. Off. as. Carrick. Sol. Tweed, Lincoln. Petition, Feb. 16

JONES, SAMUEL, joiner and builder, Kidsgrove, Wolstanton, Staffordshire, March 12 and April 2, at ten, Birmingham. Com. Balguy. Off as. Christie. Sols Cooper, Tunstall; and Hodgson, Cherry-street, Birmingham. Petition, Feb. 21.

MAY, BENJAMIN EDWARD, linen draper, No. 7, Leicester-square, and 6, Albion-place, East, King's-cross, March 4, at twelve, April 5, at one, Basinghall-street. Com. Fane. Off. as. Whitmore. Sol Overbury, 4, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry. Petition, Feb. 22.

MAY, WILLIAM, linen draper, Exeter, March 4. at one, and March 30, at eleven, Exeter. Com. Bere. Off. as. Hirtzel. Sols. Brutton, Exeter; and Holmes and Impey, Bedford-row. Petition, Feb. 22.

WELLER, WILLIAM, maltster, seedsman, baker, farmer, fruiterer, and market-gardener, Chatham, March 7, at two, April 6, at half-past two, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Graham. Sols. Nichols and Clark, 9, Cook's court, Carey-street. Petition Feb. 24.

WHEELER, JAMES, wine and spirit merchant, Scarborough, Yorkshire, March 11 and April 15, at eleven, Leeds. Com. West. Off. as. Young. Sols. Donner and Wondall, Scarborough; and Bond and Barwick, Leeds. Petition, Feb. 11.

YOUNG, THOMAS, ship-owner and sail-maker, Gray's-terrace, Sunderland, March 9 at eleven, April 7, at one, Newcastle-upon Tyne. Com. Ellison. Off as. Baker. Sols. Hartley, 6, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury; and Bignal, Durham. Petition, Feb. 21.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Atwood, G. W. merchant, first, 10½*d* Pennell, London.—Brown, C. Flax-spinner, first, 1*s.* 9*d.* Carrick, Hull.—Cooper, J. W clerk, fourth, 2*s.* Stansfeld, London.—Everett, J. I hydraulic engineer, second, 1*s.* 4*d.* Pennell, London.—Hollingworth, J. shipowner, first, 6*d.* Carrick, Hull.—Knowles, F. C. banker, first, 1½*d.* Pennell, London.—Lake, W. printer, third, 10½*d.* Pennell, London.—Monkman, J. cotton spinner, further, 2½*d.* Lee, Manchester.—Warren, M. silk dyer, further, 1*s.* 3*d.* Lee, Manchester.—Witty, W. draper, first, 3*s.* 4*d.* Carrick, Hull.

INSOLVENT ESTATES.

Badham, R attorney-at-law, 8*d.* Apply at the County Court, Bromyard.—Chadwick, C. F. widow, second, 2*s.* Apply to F. Paynter, official assignee, Redruth.—Moore, M. general dealer in small wares, 5*s.* 1*d.* Apply at the County Court, Durham.—Sturmer, F. clerk, second, 2*s.* 1*d.* Apply at the County Court, Galusboro'

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Feb. 15.

BEAN, S. timber merchant, Friar's-mount, Bethnal Green, Jan. 29. Trusts. W. Andrew, West India Docks; and H. L. Winter, North-green. Saw-mills, Finsbury, timber merchants. Sol. J. H. Taylor, South-street, Finsbury-square.—Doubleday, W. grocer, Brill-row, Somer's-town, Jan. 21. Trusts. J. Warren, wholesale grocer, Rounde itch: and R. Woollatt, wholesale tea dealer, Crown-court, Philpot-lane. Sol. E. R Clarke, Bishopsgate-churchyard.—Cooper, G. veterinary surgeon, Melbourne, Derbyshire (dec.). April 6. Trusts. J. Wyley, chemist, Coventry; and T. C. Sowter, liquor merchant, Castle Donington. Sol. C. C. R. Dewe, Derby.—Jones, C. shopkeeper and coppice dealer, Hawley Heath, hamlet of Mattingley, Southampton, Jan. 24. Trusts. E. Hailis, Odiham; and G. Pyke, Basingstoke, auctioneers. Sol. C. Easton, Reading.—Lockett, J. grocer, Leominster, Herefordshire, Feb. 1. Trusts. R. West, grocer, Worcester; and J. Mabley, Leominster, auctioneer. Sol. H. James, Leominster.—Morris, J. Rosliar, Spondon, Derbyshire, Jan. 16. Trust. J. Clowes, farmer, Spondon. Sol. J. Briggs, Derby.—Pratt, C. carpenter and wheelwright, Horsham (and not Hoesham, as advertised in last week's Gazette), Surrey, Feb. 3. Trusts. J. [illegible], and T. Ashcroft, Mosley, timber merchants. Sol. F. Simpson, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

Gazette, Feb. 18.

Ashton, S. wine and spirit merchant, and general agent, John-street, Crutched-friars, [illegible] Trusts. J. [illegible] some wine merchant, Fenchurch-street, and E. Hale, needle manufacturer, Cannon-street, [illegible] Sol. Edmund and Alexander, London-street, Fenchurch-street.—Bellamy, R. ironmonger and salesman, Barbican, Jan. 24. Trusts. G. Attenborough, silversmith, Regent-street, Oxford-street; and J. M. Sevestre, watch manufacturer, Great-Saint Sol. [illegible] Chancery-lane.—Chignell, W. publican, Colchester, Feb. 9. Trusts. T. Daniel and E. Bradbrook, farmers, West Bergholt. Sol. J. S. Barnes, Colchester.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Feb. 18.

Asquith, J., Ford, E., Blackmore, A., Gill, R. and Dibb, G. earthenware manufacturers, Castleford and Allerton Bywater, Feb. 10.—Balmforth, W. and T., Brook, J., Smithson, T. and Allott, W. iron manufacturers, Kingston-upon-Hull, Dec. 31.—Bishop, E., Pengelly, J. and Wills, E. G. limestone merchants, Feb. 24. Debts paid by Bishop.—Boyes, G. M. and Saffell, H. W. accountants, auctioneers, appraisers, and estate and house agents, Abchurch-lane, Feb. 1. Debts paid by Boyes.—Brayshaw, W., C. and F. dyers and ware grinders, Leeds, as regards F. Brayshaw, Dec. 31. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Bullivant, G. B. and Wilders, J. W attorneys and solicitors, Old Bailey, and Whittlesey, Isle of Ely, Dec. 31.—Capner, H. and Warren, F. die sinkers and enamellers, Birmingham, Jan. 15.—Cunningham, W. and Way, E. commission merchants, Liverpool, and Montreal, Canada, Feb. 10. Debts paid by Way.—Duckworth, P. and Heap, T. cotton spinners and power-loom weavers, Cooker Lumb Mill, within Oswaldswistle, Feb. 5.—Edwards, W. and T. cigar manufacturers and tobacco dealers, Liverpool, Feb. 1. Debts paid by T. Edwards.—Finch, J. sen., J. jun. and E. iron-merchants, Liverpool, Feb. 2.—Gater, T. and Wreyford, J. glass and china dealers, Torquay, Dec. 25. Debts paid by Wreyford.—Hawkins, J. V. and Randall, J. surgeons and medical practitioners, George-street and Portman-street Portman-square, June 1. Debts paid by Randall.—Hodge, C. and Ward, W. wine, spirit, and beer merchants, Halkin-wharf, Pimlico, and Duke-street, Grosvenor-square Feb. 2. Debts paid by Ward.—Hutton, T. and C. W. C., Sice, C. W. and Hutton, T. O. fringe manufacturers, Newgate-street, as regards T. O. Hutton, Dec. 31.—Jackson, J. and Strymaker, E. boot and shoemakers, Southampton-street, Strand. Jan. 23.—Keates, W. and E. Ironmongers, grocers, tea dealers, and tallow chandlers, Uttoxeter, Feb. 12.—Kitchiny, J. and Aboil, R. goldsmiths and jewellers, Conduit-street, Bond-street, Jan. 31. Debts paid by Abud.—Logan, E. F. and Parker, T. hair dressers, Birkenhead.—Lomax, E. and Gungon, T. civil engineers, Water Works Chambers, Saint Martin's-le-Fields, Jan. 31. Debts paid by Lomax.—Marsh, W. and Simpson, A. W. shipping and general commission agents, Leadenhall-street, Feb 14.—Marshall R Lockwood, M., Miles, J. and J. jun. booksellers, stationers' Hall-court, Lndgate-hill, as regards Marshall, Dec. 31.—McCutcheon, J. and W. commission agents and brokers, Wellington-street, London-bridge, Feb. 11.—Phillips, S. M. and Gething, G. B. iron, oil, and guano merchants, Newport, Feb. 8.—Rhodes, G. and Stacey, T. brewers, Worksop, Feb. 9.—Stokes, J. and Dowes, R. coach builders, Penny-bryn, Wrexham, Feb. 8. Debts paid by H. Lewison.—Stringer, E., Chambers, G., Aylard, J., Mathews, J., Aylard, C., and Curtis, J. type founders, East Harding-street, as regards C. Aylard and J. Curtis, Feb. 10.—Thomas, H. and C. general ironmongers, cutlers, and manufacturers of edged tools, Birmingham, June 12.—Tinsley, T. and Danks, T. nail and chain manufacturers, Tividale, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Danks.—Townsend, T. and Ballsdon, G. florist, nursery and seedsmen, Canonbury and Manchester-terrace, Islington, Feb. 9.—Vivian, J. and J. L. iron founders and general merchants, Rowehill, Cramborne, Aug. 31.—Weston, J. and J., E. wholesale shirt-makers, Silver-street, City, May 19.—Whitsell, H. and Cookson, J. colliers and coal dealers, Bradley, Huddersfield, Feb. 9. Debts paid by Cookson.—Windeyer, G. R. and Cackett, W. H. booksellers, printers, and stationers, Chatham, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Windeyer.—Worsnip, W. and Nutt, J. coal and lime merchants, Leicester, Feb. 11. Debts paid by Worswick.

Gazette, Feb. 18.

Barclay, R. G. Ward, E. and Broadwood, T C. merchants, Liverpool, Dec. 31.—Birch, E. and Pollard, J. booksellers, printers, and stationers, Wigan, Feb. 10.—Clark, F. and Morris, G. Liverpool, Feb. 16.—Bridgeman, J. K. and Stahlschmidt, F.L.C. ship and custom-house agents, Mark-lane, Jan 1. Debts paid by Drolenvaux.—Dunn, W. and Smith, H. L. auctioneers, valuers, &c. Manchester, Jan. 24 Debts paid by Dunn.—Gater, T. and Wreyford, J. glass and china dealers, Torquay, Dec. 25. Debts paid by Wreyford.—Green, J. and W. house and land agents, Chelsea, Feb. 2.—Jeffrey, W., Hills, G. and Jeffrey, C. wire workers, Allen's-court, Oxford-street, as regards Hills, Feb. 17. Debts paid by Jeffrey and Jaffray.—Redmond, J. and Richardson, S. coach and harness makers, Whitby, Feb. 13.—Rennie, W. Johnson, J. M'Donell, J. M'Leod, R. (since deceased) M'Lachlan, D. (since deceased) and Wilson, J. shipbuilders, Liverpool, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Rennie.—Shaw, F. and Howe, J. hat manufacturers, Manchester, Jan. 31. Debts paid by Royce.—Smart, R. Gilmore, J. Campbell, T. Walker, C. J. and Marshall, W. H. Bristol, Nov. 21.—Smith, R. and Body, G. J. surgeons, Chertsey, Dec. 26.—Webb, H. and J. merchants and carriers, Worcester, Feb. 14.

THE FOLLOWING NEW PRACTICAL WORKS FOR THE OFFICE ARE JUST ISSUED AT THE LAW TIMES OFFICE.

Now ready.

PART IX. of COX & MACRAE, and BERTHELET'S COUNTY COURT CASES AND APPEALS, together with INSOLVENCY PRACTICE. 5s. 6d.

This is the authorised and only complete collection of Reports of Cases relating to the County Courts, and it contains every case from the establishment of the Courts. To be continued regularly. Parts I. to VIII may still be had, price 5s. 6d. each. Part X. is in the press, and will complete the cases to the beginning of 1853.

PART II. of Vol. VII. of COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, containing all the Cases in this state for the Circuits) in the Appeal Courts of England and Ireland, in the Central Criminal Court, on the Circuits, and in the Superior Courts; with an Appendix, containing a large collection of Precedents of Indictments under the new Statutes, and other Precedents from the Central Criminal Court. Price 5s. 6d.

N.B.—A few copies of the back volumes and parts are still to be had to complete sets.

THE LAW DIGEST for the Half-Year ending December 1. By A. WOOD and C. C. SPENCE, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. Price 5s. 6d. cloth.

This work gives every case, wherever reported, during the half-year, arranged so that the practitioner may find the statement of the latest law on any subject on which he may be engaged.

THE NEW REPORTS and CRIMES, the ADMIRALTY and ECCLESIASTICAL REPORTS of 7 Jurt, CLERGY, Wills, Divorce, Crimes, and Costs; by H. MALDON KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 3s. (This may be had also as a Supplement to "Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act," having marginal references to the pages of that work.)

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, with all the Notes, Cases, Costs Decisions, &c. to this time, with Practical Rules, Forms, and Tables, the Orders being placed with the Sections of the Statute to which they relate. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 8s. bds.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS, with the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, and Notes of all the Cases decided on its construction. By C. J. B. BERTHELET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of 1849, containing all those ever required in Practice, omitting the Repealed and the Scotch, Irish, Colonial, and Sessional Statutes, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction; thus presenting the whole Law as it is, in a compact form for ready use, and with a copious Index. By C. J. B. BERTHELET, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. (This is in continuation of the Practical Statutes of 1850, 1851, and 1852, which may still be had.)

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part I. of Vol. VI. with a copious collection of Precedents of Indictments. This part contains Forms of Indictments at Quarter Sessions under the New Law. By J. E. DAVIES, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 5s. 6d.

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanac, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax, and the other Information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 1s.; or stamped for post, 1s2. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanacs and Time of the Moon's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 6d.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, containing all the New Rules and Orders, the New Table of Fees, and Cases decided to the end of Michaelmas Term. Price 14s. 6d. cloth.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"R. H. D." (Plymouth.)—The suggestion is being considered.

"W. S." (Bromyard.)—Certainly not.

"A SUBSCRIBER."—Thanks for the hints; but the Reports could be bound separately if desired.

"LEX."—No fear from being an injustice, we think that "consequences" such are neither barristers nor attorneys should not be permitted [illegible].

"A YOUNG PRACTITIONER."—Addison certainly.

"H. M."—Probably in our next.

ERRATUM.—In the report of Fuller v. Cheveley, 20 L. T. Rep. 278, in the head-note as to nonsuit, "plaintiff" has been inadvertently substituted for "defendant." The error is obvious.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, MARCH 5, 1853.

EXAMINERS IN CHANCERY.

A BILL is passing through Parliament, under the auspices of the Solicitor-General, designed to make better provision for this office; but it contains a clause limiting the appointment to Barristers of seven years standing.

This, be it observed, is an innovation. It was not so before. At present Attorneys are eligible to that office. There is no reason why they should be excluded now. They are quite as competent to fill it. There is nothing in the training of a Barrister to make him more fit. It is impolitic and unjust to limit the honours and rewards attainable by the Attorneys, who are advancing day by day in intelligence, social position, and influence. Instead of restricting the offices of honour and emolument to which the Attorney may look forward as the reward of an honourable career, the wiser course would be to increase them, and thus to encourage high character and cultivated intelligence among those in whose characters the public have a particular interest; for, as we have often urged, the client retains the honour and honesty of his Attorney, while he employs only the ability of his Counsel.

Mr. MULLINGS spoke energetically on behalf of his brethren, and moved the omission of the clause, but was beaten on a division by a large majority.

However, the Bill must go through the Lords; and our readers may depend upon an effort being made there, with better chances of success, to expunge so unjust, uncalled-for, and injurious a provision. Practically, it will in itself affect but few of our readers; but it would be the affirmation of a bad principle, and the recognition of an unwise policy, and therefore it ought to be steadfastly resisted.

THE ATTORNEY'S TAX.

Are our readers yet stirring in this? If not, it is time they should be up and doing. Lord R. GROSVENOR'S motion for leave to bring in his bill for the repeal is appointed for Thursday next. There is not a moment to be lost, or petitions will come too late. If not well backed both by petitions and by the still more effectual pressure from without, which the Profession are peculiarly capable of bringing to bear upon members of Parliament, he will be beaten, and then the redress of our greatest grievance will be indefinitely deferred.

We entreat every reader not to let Monday night's post go without a letter addressed by himself personally to each of the representatives of his borough or county, or both, urging attendance on Thursday to vote for the redress of this great wrong, with such persuasions as are likely to be most effectual with M.P.s desirous of preserving their seats by conciliating those who have the greatest influence in placing and keeping them there.

SALES BY SOLICITORS.

A CORRESPONDENT, who is among the most respectable of that great, intelligent, and influential body, the Provincial Attorneys, and whose long experience as well as high standing in the Profession entitles any suggestion of his to respectful attention from his brethren, suggested in our last that Solicitors should be allowed to act as auctioneers, without licence, and sell the estates of their own clients.

The suggestion appears to us to be an admirable one. At the first glance it will perhaps appear to some to be a lowering of the Profession for Attorneys to become auctioneers. And so it would; and to that we should be as hostile as they. But such is not the meaning of our correspondent. It is not proposed that Attorneys shall become auctioneers, and sell property of all kinds for any person who may choose to employ them for the purpose; it is suggested only that Attorneys should be allowed to sell the property of their clients, as Solicitors for the vendors, by way of bidding,—that is to say, to take biddings, and declare the highest bidder and purchaser.

And, after all, what is it more than they now do? The Solicitor at present attends the sale, and takes a note of the biddings, and draws and attests execution of the contract. Surely he might also read the advertisement and conditions of sale, and announce that he was ready to receive biddings, and then take the biddings on paper as they are given, and declare the purchaser; for which purpose he would not need to mount a pulpit, nor to speak a puff, nor to say "going, going, gone."

Such a permission would be a great boon to the Solicitors: it would increase the respectability of land sales; it would much diminish the expenses of sales, and it would be equally satisfactory to clients. Really some earnest effort should be made by the Profession to secure this advantage.

THE PROFESSION AND LAW REFORM.

THE abbreviated report of the proceedings at the annual dinner of the great and influential Law Society of Manchester, which appears among the legal intelligence in another page, expresses precisely the views which we have endeavoured to promote with respect to Law Reform in its relationship to that which is properly here made our foremost object, the interests of the Profession,—those of the public having protectors and promoters in journals whose business it is not, as it is that of the LAW TIMES, to watch over and advance the welfare of a class.

Such being our mission, some readers have expressed a doubt whether we ought to say anything about Law Reform, or give it any help, either by suggestion or support. Our readers for doing so are admirably stated by the various speakers at the Manchester meeting; and we ask those who question the prudence or propriety of the course we have taken to read the speeches there made, in which they will find a complete justification of the policy we have here adopted.

Let us briefly set it forth.

We assume that it had become impossible to prevent Law Reform. No opposition, even if all of the Lawyers would have wasted their time, would have been accomplished without them, if they had refused their help. [illegible] only have produced more [illegible] alliance more destructive changes.

If, then, it would have been [illegible] sist, and neutrality would not have stayed the progress of reform, obviously the prudent course for the Lawyers was to submit with a good grace to changes they could not help, and, by giving their assistance to the work, so to direct, mould, and modify it that it should be made most effective for its purposes and least injurious to themselves. Doubtless it would have been better for the Profession if things could have been kept as they were; but as that was an admitted impossibility, the duty of their advisers was to consider, how the least mischief could be done and the utmost advantages secured.

It was in this spirit that we proceeded. Every proposition for Law Reform was examined with an eye to its practical effect upon the interests of the Profession, and improvements were suggested in such parts as appeared likely to be particularly injurious. We were not content with doing the critic's simple duty of fault-finding and objecting; but it was a rule with us always to accompany an objection with a suggestion of some other plan in lieu of it. Thus, when the County Courts were first proposed, perceiving their dangerous consequences if carried, and conscious that the public mind was bent upon possessing cheaper and speedier local tribunals, we took some pains to digest a scheme for converting the Quarter Sessions into local Courts for the cheap and speedy administration of justice in civil and criminal cases. The Profession approved the plan; but they made no exertion to procure it to be substituted for the County Courts scheme, which thus was imposed on them, and will never now be removed.

In the same spirit we have sought earnestly to procure improvements to be introduced into measures of law reform. Thus, in the County Courts, we were enabled to procure the introduction of a provision for giving to the Profession a more liberal remuneration, by means of a scale of costs, instead of a fixed fee, and which, we trust, will soon be in practical operation, to the incalculable benefit of the Profession, and extension of their profits. If we had taken part against all law reform, while we should have been unable to arrest its progress for an hour, we should have been deprived of the ability to do this good service, as well as many others, which we have been enabled quietly to effect by means of the help we have given to measures in their conception and progress.

Our readers may be assured that we have never framed a clause, or suggested an alteration, without having first carefully weighed its probable effects upon the well-being of the Profession; and it will be some satisfaction to them to know that almost all the propositions we have promoted with this view have received the sanction of the Legislature, and have become law.

We are acting on the same principle still; we are keeping a steady eye upon the welfare of the Profession in all that we suggest or support in the way of law reform. We are profoundly convinced that safety lies in going on; that change has proceeded so far as to diminish profits without having proceeded far enough to compensate for that loss in an increased amount of business. Therefore it is that we desire further improvements in procedure and in evidence. Whatever increases the number of trials will increase the emoluments of the Profession. The obstacles to trials of disputed demands are the difficulties, doubts, and delays, which induce suitors to settle or lay down their arms rather than fight. The welfare of the Profession will be promoted by simplifying procedure, speeding trial, and facilitating the discovery of the truth. Hence it is that we were the first to propose and strenuously to advocate the admission of parties as witnesses, and that we are now seeking to sweep away all the remaining obstacles to truth at a trial, by removing the disability of a wife and destroying the privilege of refusing to answer criminatory questions. We believe that the adoption of these measures will be a great boon to the Profession, or we should not have suggested them, and helped them into existence.

For the same reason, and with the same regard to the circumstances, we desire and promote improvements in Conveyancing and the Law of Real Property. We know that the public mind is made up to have some reforms in this. We remember the history of the County Courts, carried adversely to the lawyers. We desire that they should not commit the same suicide now; but that they should avoid noxious innovations, which will be thrust upon them by their foes,—by wisely anticipating popular clamour, taking the matter into their own hands, and introducing safe improvements, by which they will disarm their enemies, conciliate rational reformers, and ward off those destructive measures which are sure to find favour if moderate progress of improvement be not visible. It is with this conviction that we recommend a voluntary change in the form of conveyancing charges, an abbreviation of conveyancing language, and certain improvements in the law of real property which would make its transfer less costly.

Of this we are profoundly convinced,—that safety lies now only in carrying improvements in the law and its practice to such a point that increased quantity, so produced, may compensate for diminished profits on each particular business. If, for instance, cheaper and speedier trial should lead to twice as many trials as there were before, the Profession will find its compensation for the loss of half the profits formerly produced by a single trial. We believe that, after a while, when the public begin to understand how easily, safely, and cheaply they can try their disputes, they will be less inclined to submit to wrongs, and there will be an immense increase of trials; in proof of which we adduce the County Courts, which dispose of some hundreds of thousands of matters before unknown to the tribunals, because without a remedy. So it will be with the Superior Courts. But even if in this anticipation we should be disappointed, still the fact remains that changes were inevitable; that the Profession could not successfully have resisted them; that it is wise to yield to the force of circumstances, and strive to turn them to the best advantage, than obstinately to offer a fruitless opposition, only to be swept away by the tide. This is the view which the able and intelligent speakers at Manchester took of the duties and interests of the Profession at this juncture, and that is precisely the course which we, consulting as our single object the general welfare of the Profession, have endeavoured to pursue. We believe that, in the long run, whatever improvement in the law is for the real benefit of the public will prove to be for the substantial advantage of the profession also. But if any question arises between them, on which their interests are opposed, we shall not hesitate to "stand by our order;" we shall side with the lawyers, as our duty is, fight their battle, promote their well-being to the best of our ability, and leave the public to be taken care of by their own champions.

Does this meet the approval of the reader? Does it not recommend itself to his judgment as the common-sense view of the question?

NOTES ON THE NEW RULES OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS.

The object which the author has in view in furnishing these notes is to elucidate the New Rules by reference to decisions on analogous rules annulled, revived, or obsolete—to point out the various alterations which have been in consequence effected in the proceedings of actions, and to embody, in the course of the commentary, such observations and directions as may be of service to the practitioner in the conduct of business in the Superior Courts. These rules, then, were framed by the Judges in pursuance of the authority conferred upon them by the Legislature under the 113rd section of the Common Law Procedure Act, and came into immediate operation, by virtue, it would seem, of the first and last clauses contained in that section, on their promulgation on the first day of Hilary Term, 1853. But the Rules of Pleading, which, it is understood, the Judges have recently framed for simplifying the pleadings in actions, require the previous sanction of Parliament under the 18 & 14 Vict. c. 16 before they can take effect. The extensive alterations which the Common Law Procedure Act introduced in the proceedings of the Superior Courts rendered it desirable, if not absolutely necessary, that rules should be framed by authority, as well to adapt the provisions of that statute to the new state of things as to ensure uniformity and simplicity of practice in the administration of justice in these Courts.

Uniformity of procedure was generally established in the Courts by the Rules of Practice of Hilary Term, 2 Will. 4. The Judges, too, announce in the preamble to the present rules that uniformity of practice is one of the objects contemplated in issuing them. That object, it will be seen, has been to a very considerable extent accomplished, as well as a consolidation of all the written rules of practice in force in the Courts.

Before we proceed to the consideration of the rules, it will be necessary to give the preamble in extenso, in order to render the illustration more convenient. It runs as follows:—

Whereas the practice of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, in civil actions, in respect of which the said Courts possess a common jurisdiction, has been to a great extent superseded or altered by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, and it is expedient that the written rules of practice of the said Courts should be consolidated and rendered uniform: it is ordered, that all existing written rules of practice in any of the said Courts in regard to such civil actions, save and except as regards any step or proceeding heretofore taken, shall be and the same are hereby annulled, and that the practice to be observed in the said courts with respect to the matters hereafter mentioned shall be as follows; that is to say.

In the first place, then, it will be observed, that the rules are expressly limited in their operation to civil actions in respect of which the Superior Courts possess a common or concurrent jurisdiction. They will not, therefore, apply to informations filed by the Attorney-General in the Court of Ex. relative to revenue matters, or for the violation of the revenue laws (Attorney-General v. Halling, 15 M. & W. 687, 16 L. J. 303, Ex.; Attorney-General v. Donaldson, 7 M. & W. 422); that Court possessing a Common Law jurisdiction in addition to its original jurisdiction as a Court of Revenue. But where an action is brought by a private individual against a revenue officer for misconduct or excess of authority in the discharge of his duties, in any other court than the Ex., and the Attorney-General removes the action into that Court (which he may do at any stage of the proceedings,—see Attorney-General v. Kingston, 8 M. & W. 168; Adams v. Freemantle, 6 D. & L. 10; 3 Exch. 453), the action when so removed will nevertheless be proceeded with according to the ordinary rules of practice, as being a civil action. Nor will the rules apply to prohibition in all the branches of that proceeding, although each of the Superior Courts possesses the power of issuing writs of prohibition. The recent case of the Bishop of Exeter, who applied to the Courts in succession for the writ against Mr. Gorham, is an instance. The proceedings in prohibition, however, are not, of course, in the nature of a civil action, and so not within the immediate scope of the rules. But when the parties have been directed to declare in prohibition, the subsequent steps in the proceeding as regards the time for pleading, demurring, joinder in demurrer, setting the same down for argument and other similar incidents common to an action, will it seems, be regulated by the new practice: for the Act of 1 Will. 4, c. 21, which amended the proceedings in prohibition, has not prescribed the practice on these points. So the time and mode of pleading and demurring to returns to writs of mandamus will be according to the rules, although the Q. B. exercises an exclusive jurisdiction, with the exception of the Courts of the Counties Palatine, in issuing such writs. The 9 Ann. c. 20, 1 Will. 4, c. 21, and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 67, in substance provide that the practice in such matters which prevails in personal actions should be followed. The term "civil actions" has been adopted by the judges in preference to the term "personal actions," no doubt with a view of avoiding as much as possible limitation in the application of the rules. An ejectment will therefore be within the operation of the rules, except where the specific provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act otherwise apply to that action. So they will apply to replevin on removal of the proceedings in the plaint to the Superior Court, as a civil action in respect of which the Courts possess a common jurisdiction. But these and similar points of difference, which are found daily to occur to the practitioner, will be pointed out as we proceed, in their appropriate places.

In the second place it should be particularly noticed that the rules which are annulled are only the written rules of practice previously existing in the Courts in regard to civil actions. Although the abrogation of these rules is thus comprehensively and unconditionally effected, yet the substitution of other rules, and the practice consequent thereupon, is plainly limited to the particular matters mentioned. The words—"It is ordered that the practice to be observed in the Courts with respect to the matters hereafter mentioned shall be as follows:"—shows, on the part of the framers, either that the whole civil procedure of the Courts is not yet settled, or that further rules may be necessary, as circumstances may arise to require them. But all unwritten rules, such as the rule of ordering witnesses out of Court during the trial of a cause; of the right to begin on the argument of demurrers or special cases, or at the trial; the rule which regulates the audience of counsel, in point of seniority and number; the rule against hearing counsel at chambers during term (Doe d. Roberts v. Roe, 13 M. & W. 691); and many others which might be enumerated, remain unrescinded.

We proceed now to the consideration of the rules themselves. We reserve for a distinct commentary the forms which accompany the rules. We propose to treat of the rules separately, in the consecutive order, and according to the arrangement which the Judges have adopted, adding to each rule a short heading explanatory of its contents. Thus—

Writ of Summons, indorsed in Special Form, with Costs of Judgment.

R. 1. When a writ of summons is indorsed in the special form mentioned in sect. 27 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, the following are the amounts which may be indorsed by the plaintiff's attorney or agent upon the writ for costs; and to include mileage:—

	£	s.	d.
In actions above 20*l.*:
In town causes	3	3	0
In country or agency causes (including mileage)	4	0	0
In actions under 20*l.*:
In town causes	2	14	0
In country or agency cases (including mileage)	3	2	0

Where the plaintiff's attorney, at the time of issuing the writ, claims more than the sums fixed as above, the indorsement on the writ of summons in respect of costs shall be as follows:—"Such sum as shall be allowed on taxation for costs." And in case the plaintiff shall be found not entitled to more costs than such fixed sums, or if more than one-sixth shall be disallowed, the plaintiff's attorney shall pay the costs of taxation. So if the attorney has indorsed on the writ one of the fixed sums for the costs of judgment, and claims more costs on signing judgment, and on taxation shall be found not entitled to more than such sum, or if more than one-sixth be taken off on taxation, the plaintiff's attorney shall in like manner pay the costs of taxation.

The immediate object of this rule was fixing the amount of costs to be indorsed when the writ is in the special form, under the 25th section of the Common Law Procedure Act, which the Legislature had confided to the Masters to fix, subject to the approval of the judges. These costs were fixed shortly after the Act came into operation. It may be well to notice that the costs thus respectively fixed include all costs to the time of signing final judgment in the action. It will seldom happen in practice that more than the fixed amount will be claimed at the time of issuing the writ, so as to necessitate the making of the blank indorsement, "such sum as shall be allowed on taxation for costs." For it is difficult to conceive how the costs in the ordinary class of actions to which the section applies can be made to exceed the fixed amount, to justify such an indorsement. When the object of issuing the writ with a special indorsement is speedy judgment and execution, it is not at all probable that this part of the rule will be brought into frequent or general requisition. The claim for excess is attended with the penalty of depriving the attorney of the costs of taxation. The application to tax the costs will be made generally by the defendant, after judgment against him upon a settlement, or on payment of the debt under a writ of execution. The latter branch of the rule is calculated, however, to be of much more practical effect in litigation where less than the fixed amount for costs has been indorsed on the writ; and more are claimed on signing judgment, it will frequently happen that by reason of difficulties in effecting the service of the writ, extra costs may have been necessarily or reasonably incurred. These expenses the Masters will, in the majority of cases, undoubtedly allow. It is now usual for the Masters, on being satisfied of the justice of the additional claim, to allow the costs to the attorney ex parte on signing judgment. Notice of taxation of these costs is clearly not necessary to be given to the defendant within r. 61 of the New Rules, as no appearance has been entered by or for the defendant. The practice in this respect is similar to signing judgment on a cognovit, where a fixed sum for costs of judgment is always marked by the Master without taxation: (Griffiths v. Lipscombe, 2 Dowl. P. C. 143; Clarke v. Jones, 3 Dowl. P. C. 277.)

It will rarely happen that a defendant will apply to the Court or a Judge for a taxation of these costs. This could only be successfully done in clear cases, as where the Master has been grossly imposed upon, or the circumstances under which the costs were alleged to be incurred have been exaggerated. This portion of the rule would also seem to apply where the writ has been indorsed by mistake or inadvertence with a minimum sum for costs, as in a town cause, instead of the maximum sum, as in a country cause, or with a minimum sum, as in an action under 20*l.*, instead of the maximum sum, as in an action above 20*l.* There would apparently seem to be no reason against this allowance; but the point, it is believed, has not been raised.

This will be a favourable opportunity to mention an important point that should be observed in indorsing the writ, under the 25th section of the Common Law Procedure Act, where the debt is for the amount of a bill of exchange, promissory note, or cheque. The particulars in each of these cases should be so framed as to include a claim for the original consideration when the action is between the immediate parties, and for the amount as money due on an account stated when there has been an admission of liability to pay. For if the action is defended, and the particulars should not be amended, the plaintiff will be precluded from giving evidence at the trial under the count upon the consideration (Wade v. Beasley, 4 Esp. 7; Ryder v. Ellis, 8 Car. & P. 357); or from relying upon an admission under the count upon an account stated: (Roberts v. Elsworth, 2 D. N. S. 456; 10 M. & W. 153; 12 L. J. 15, Ex.; Hedley v. Bambridge, 2 G. & D. 483; 3 Q. B. 316.) Such is the practice in regard to the particulars when they are delivered in an action where the writ is not specially indorsed, and there does not seem to be any valid reason why a different rule should prevail when the writ has been specially indorsed. The 25th section enacts that the indorsement on the writ of the claim in such case should be "considered as particulars of demand," which would rather seem to indicate that these particulars should be subject to the same rule of practice. It is understood that the under-sheriff of Middlesex has recently ruled, in a case before him under the Writ of Trial Act, in accordance with the view here taken.

THE NEW COMMON LAW PRACTICE.

SERVICE OF DECLARATION WHERE DEFENDANT APPEARS IN PERSON.(a)

WHERE a defendant has appeared to the writ by an attorney having an address within three miles of the General Post-office, there is no doubt the declaration should be delivered at such address. The present rule of Court (R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 165) is quite clear on that point, and it would seem from the rule that, supposing the attorney has neglected to enter such an address in the book in the Master's office, the declaration may be fixed up without any previous application to or order of the Court or Judge.

But there is much more difficulty in determining the procedure after an appearance by the defendant in person. The defendant in such case is required to give an address in the appearance, and by sect. 36 of the Common Law Procedure Act, "if an address so given shall be illusory or fictitious, the appearance shall be irregular, and may be set aside by the Court or a Judge, and the plaintiff may be permitted to proceed by sticking up the proceedings in the Master's office without further service." By R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 166, however, the defendant is required upon entering an appearance to "enter in a book, to be kept for that purpose at the Master's office, an address within three miles from the General Post-office, at which all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, or other proceedings not requiring personal service, shall be left; and if such address shall not be entered in the said book, or if such address shall be more than three miles from the General Post-office, then the opposite party shall be at liberty to proceed by sticking up all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, or other proceedings, in the Master's office, without the necessity of any further service."

From inquiry at the Appearance Office in the Queen's Bench, it appears that the practice in this matter is to refuse appearances by defendants in person which do not contain an address; and whenever such appearances give an address, they are received and the defendant's attention is called to the requirement of the 166th rule, a notice of which is posted up in the office. It appears, too, as might have been supposed, that the officers receiving the appearance do not themselves cause an entry of the address in the appearance to be made in the address book, but simply inform the defendant that it is necessary he should enter an address which is within three miles of the General Post-office. No doubt the practice is similar in the other Courts.

It is not easy to see the solution of all the questions that arise from the different states of facts which these circumstances afford.

First, suppose the address on the appearance and that in the book are the same, that it is within three miles from the General Post-office, and that it is a true address. It is clear the declaration, should be left there. But suppose this address is fictitious; in this case the appearance might, under the 30th section, be set aside on an application made to the Court or a Judge; but then this question arises, is it afterwards necessary to stick up the declaration? The 30th section evidently contemplates this being done; but after an order setting aside the appearance, it would seem that there must be a nonappearance of the defendant, and that therefore the plaintiff would be at liberty, if the writ were specially indorsed, to file an affidavit of personal service of the writ of summons, or a Judge's order for leave to proceed, and a copy of the writ, and sign final judgment under sect. 27. If, on the other hand, the writ were not specially indorsed, it seems that the plaintiff would be at liberty, on filing an affidavit of personal service of the writ, or a Judge's order for leave to proceed, and a copy of the writ, to file the declaration, and sign judgment by default in eight days, under sect. 28. Of course, if an application is made, the order setting aside the appearance may, perhaps, impose terms as to the mode of proceeding.

Secondly, supposing the address in the appearance and that in the book are the same, but that it is more than three miles from the General Post-office, or that there is none in the book, then, whether the address given be true or fictitious, may the plaintiff disregard it, and stick up the declaration in the office under the 166th rule? Probably it is so. If so, is any previous application to the Court or a Judge necessary? The language of the 166th rule leads one to answer in the negative, especially when that of the 162nd is looked at, in which pleadings are not mentioned, and which probably applies to cases where a change of residence has taken place after appearance. "When the residence of a defendant is unknown, rules, notices, and other proceedings may be stuck up in the office, but not without previous leave of the Court or a Judge." The 30th section is not imperative, and therefore there is little doubt that service might, in the cases now supposed, be made at the address given. But if the address so given be fictitious, then the appearance may be set aside, "and the plaintiff may be permitted to proceed by sticking up the proceedings," under the 30th section, or under the 166th rule he is "at liberty to proceed by sticking up all pleadings," &c. It would seem, therefore, that in these cases the plaintiff must consider whether he had better stick up the declaration under the rule of Court, and not apply for an order, or whether he will apply for an order, and adopt any conditions that may be imposed by it; and if it be unconditional, then, whether he will stick up the declaration, or treat it as a nonappearance as mentioned above.

Thirdly, then suppose the address on the appearance is more than, and that in the book within, three miles from the General Post-office, and that they are both true, where should service be made? There is little doubt that at either address it would be sufficient, though the language of the 166th rule is more like the imperative than that of the 30th section. Practically, no doubt it will usually in this case be served at the address entered in the book under the rule. But suppose the address in the book be fictitious, then, if the 166th rule had been the only provision in the matter, it would probably have been necessary to make a special application to the Court; but it is hardly likely that the Court or a Judge would be satisfied in this case (assuming there is a power to dispense with service), unless some inquiry had been made at the address given in the appearance; and, if this were a true one, they would doubtless require it to be served there. If, on the other hand, the address entered in the book be a true one, service should certainly be made there, whether that in the appearance be true or false.

Fourthly, suppose the address in the appearance be a true one, and within three miles from the General Post-office, but no address entered in the book, the plaintiff seems then to be "at liberty to proceed by sticking up all pleadings," &c. under the 166th rule, or he might certainly serve the declaration at the address given in the appearance.

The 162nd rule above quoted may be supposed to have some influence on these questions, but probably it will be found not to have any effect. Although pleadings were held to be within rather less general words in the old rules as to the attorney's address (Blackburn v. Peate, 2 C. & M. 244), they can hardly have been meant to be included in this rule, as they are expressly mentioned in rules 164–167. This rule is evidently copied from the former rule as to sticking up the notice of the declaration (R. G. H. T. 2 Will 4, r. 49); indeed, it is a verbatim copy of the old one, substituting "rules, notices, and other proceedings" for "notice of declaration." Under the former rule it was held, that a separate application and order was necessary for sticking up each proceeding.

The general practical advice to the plaintiff as to these difficulties seems to be briefly this:—First apply to the address in the book, if there is one, and it is within three miles of the General Post-office; if one is not entered, or it is more than three miles, or it is unsatisfactory, apply to the address in the appearance; if that is fictitious, it will depend somewhat on the circumstances of each case whether it will be wiser to proceed under the 30th section, or under the 166th rule.

(a) By GEORGE TAYLOR, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

THE MAGISTRATE,

AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

WHERE a workhouse had been erected and maintained under local Acts, which exempted it from poor-rates, and afterwards purchased by the guardians of the union of which the parish in question was a part, and used by them as the union workhouse, it was held that the premises, being no longer used under the local Act, were liable to be rated at their improved rateable value, and that the exemption in the local Act ceased: (Reg. v. Guardians of the Worcester Union, 20 L. T. Rep. 275.)

A curious and interesting point on the jurisdiction of magistrates in cases of libel, and involving some other important questions, was decided by the Q. B. in Haylock v. Sparke, 20 L. T. Rep. 276. It was held, that in some cases of libel against a private person, a magistrate may require sureties for good behaviour. The cases and data are collected in Lord Campbell's very learned judgment, which we recommend the reader to peruse. The warrant of commitment for not finding sureties was quashed by the Q. B.; but defendant had given notice of action against the committing magistrate before the quashing of the warrant. This was held to be sufficient notice. The warrant recited the information, and this was held to be evidence that the magistrate in granting the warrant had jurisdiction, if, by law, such jurisdiction existed; and, lastly, it was held, that evidence was not admissible at Nisi Prius to show that plaintiff had actually written the libel.

Section 26 of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, provides that so much of any penalty imposed by that Act as is not awarded to the prosecutor shall be paid to the treasurer of "the county or place" for which the justice was acting when the penalty was imposed. The word "place" was held to be a place for which a court of quarter sessions is held. Where, therefore, a penalty was imposed by two justices of a borough which had a commission of the peace, but no court of quarter sessions, and a moiety only was awarded to the prosecutor, the informer of the county was held to be entitled to the remaining moiety: (Reg. v. Dale, 20 L. T. Rep. 284.) Strange to say, this point was raised in this form of a case for the Court of Criminal Appeal! How, let the reader learn by reference thus.

As it was impossible, within the limits of a journal that is designed to keep the Profession informed of the progress of all departments of the law, to give more than a summary of so extensive a branch of it as that which is administered by magistrates, it was deemed desirable to issue a monthly sheet devoted entirely to this subject, giving in full the information which here could only be given briefly. In this manner The Magistrate has been published for several years. But the recent changes in the law, especially of Removal, have so diminished the quantity to be reported, that we find even a monthly sheet to be more than is necessary to convey the information required by magistrates and their clerks. In consequence with the suggestions of many of the subscribers, it has been determined accordingly to make an important alteration, and instead of a monthly sheet, in the form of a journal, to issue, at the same annual cost, a quarterly part, in the form of a book, to appear immediately before each Quarter Sessions, containing all the law of the preceding quarter, forming, in fact, a constant supplement to Burns or Archbold, and at a very trifling cost; and thus it will have all the value and authority of a book, and be a permanent addition to the library.

To this end its contents will be arranged. It will comprise, 1st. Reports of all the Magistrates' and Sessions Cases decided during the quarter, paged separately, so as to bind into volumes as a complete series of reports. 2nd. The new Magistrates' Statutes, with notes and index, &c. separately paged in like manner, so as to bind in distinct volumes. 3rd. A digest of the new Magistrates Law, similar to Burn and Archbold, to which it will be a supplement; and, 4th. Short practical Treatises on important branches of magistrates' law, not large enough to justify the cost of separate publications, but nevertheless of great utility and value to all engaged in the administration or practice of magistrates' and parish law.

All this practically useful information will be supplied in quarterly parts, at a less annual cost than was that of the reports of the Sessions Cases alone, namely, 5*s.* 6*d* per part. Its size will be octavo, and it will be a BOOK, and not a journal, containing all the law decided by the courts or enacted by the Legislature upon the subjects to which it relates, arranged and indexed for practical use. It will be sent to subscribers by post on the day of publication, previously to each Quarter Sessions (paid). The first part will appear on June 30th, and it will be called "The Magistrates Courts and Quarter Sessions Hand-Book."

SETTLEMENT OF BASTARD CHILDREN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Your correspondent W. P. P., at page 210 of your impression of the 19th Feb., referring to the recent judgment of the Court of Q. B. as to the settlement of illegitimate children when they have attained the age of sixteen years, states as follows:—

"I do not see how any of the alleged severity and cruelty to pregnant single women can arise, as they are no longer deemed chargeable, and therefore removable, as formerly."

I should feel obliged if your correspondent would refer me to the authority under which he propounds this proposition. Probably, when your correspondent asserted this to be the law, he had in his mind the provisions of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 66, sect. 4. But, if this be so, it will be found, on a careful perusal of the clause, that it applies only to cases of "sickness."

To support W. P. P.'s proposition that a pregnant single woman is not removable, it must therefore (unless indeed there be other authority for it, of which I am ignorant) first make out that pregnancy is a sickness within the meaning of the clause; secondly, that under any circumstances in which relief is given to a pregnant single woman it is "made necessary by such sickness" (see the express wording of the clause); and thirdly, that such sickness "will not produce permanent disability." If all these conditions be fulfilled in every possible case, then, of course the proposition laid down by W. P. P., that pregnant single women are not removable (I don't say not chargeable), is correct.

W. P. P.'s doctrine appears to me so very unsound that I can afford to admit, for the sake of argument (and for that only), that pregnancy is a sickness within the meaning of clause 4 of the statute referred to. But W. P. P. will then be reduced to the necessity of showing that where a pregnant single woman has confined to her, without increase or diminution, the relief which was originally granted to her under circumstances of ordinary destitution, such relief is, in the words of the clause, "made necessary" by such sickness. May I beg W. P. P. to attempt the solution of this difficulty?

As to pregnant single women who are in the actual receipt of relief, not being chargeable, I am equally at a loss for the authority under which W. P. P. expresses such an opinion.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

H. CLEMENTS LLOYD.

ABSCONDING OF THE GOVERNOR OF CHESTER GAOL.—Information was received on Thursday last at the various Metropolitan and City Police stations from the magistrates acting for the city of Chester, offering a reward for the apprehension of Mr. Horatio Nelson Tivy, late governor of Chester city gaol, who had absconded in the course of last week with several sums of money he had embezzled, the property of the town council. He is described as forty-eight years of age, rather slender in person, and of dark complexion. He is supposed to be a native of Cork, having formerly been an officer at Tranmere. He is also accused of having purloined a quantity of property belonging to the prisoners in the gaol, which had been deposited in his hands for security. He is suspected to be concealed in the metropolis, preparing for a trip to Australia. It is stated that an examination of his accounts disclosed serious frauds. What renders his case more painful is, that he has left his children at Chester unprovided for.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

AMONG the mass of reports in our last, two only related to this branch of the law, usually so fertile, especially in the Equity Courts. One of them was on the construction of a will, and not capable of being usefully analysed here. The other was on the Law of Landlord and Tenant, and was raised in the form of a County Court appeal. It was held in Mountney v. Collier, 20 L. T. Rep. 277, that in an action for rent, the tenant, although still in possession, may show that his landlord's title has expired by notice to quit given by the rightful claimant to the landlord, and notice to the tenant not to pay any further rent; and that he may also show the right of the party claiming, by declarations of a deceased person through whom the landlord came into possession as personal representative. At the first blush this appears to be in fact a question of title, and, therefore, out of the jurisdiction of the Co. C.; but Coleridge, J. laid down the law thus: "As a general rule, we think that a tenant may show that his landlord's title has expired, and that, if the case then resolves itself into a question of title, the Judge of the Co. C. has no further jurisdiction.

COSTS OF CONVEYANCING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—A good deal has been said respecting the costs of conveyancing. We have been preparing conveyances and mortgages of a land society here at 10*s.* each; and we are preparing mortgages of 50*l.* at from 2*l.* 2*s.* to 2*l.* 10*s.* as we can get it. The London lawyers will not do this, nor should they; but we must, as, if one will not do it another will, such is the system of "cadging" in the country. LEX.

Queries on Points of Practice.

STAMP.

By indenture A. conveys certain freeholds absolutely to B. in consideration of a yearly fee-farm rent of 30*l.* There is a power of distress and a proviso for redemption of the rent on payment of 800*l.* and arrears. What stamp or stamps should be placed on the deed? L.

REGISTRATION OF DEEDS.

THE following is from an article in The Times proving that public opinion, as well as the judgment of the profession, is opposed to this scheme.

Probably, of all subjects connected with law reform, there is none so important in itself, and so eagerly desired by the nation, as the simplification of the titles and facilitation of the transfer of land. It is felt that by such a measure the value of real property would be raised, and that not merely litigant parties, but every one possessed of an interest in the soil, would profit largely by the change. It is, therefore, with much regret that we hear it reported that it is the intention of Government to introduce a measure for the registration of deeds and assurances, instead of directing their attention to the means of effecting more readily a transfer of the ownership in land.

There was, indeed, a time when the registration of deeds would have been considered a great advance towards a reform of the Law of Real Property. The assumption on which that idea rested was, that our landed and immovable system of titles was in itself good and wise, and only required greater notoriety and publicity. An exaggerated idea was entertained of the evil of secret conveyances, and a fear of the effects of constructive notice. It was also felt, very truly, that under the present system no lawyer has the full evidence of title before him when he declines, and can only give his opinion, subject to the production of deeds not disclosed on the abstract. We may readily concede, that had the Law of Real Property been in itself really sound and rational, a registration of deeds, fixing every purchaser with actual notice of their contents, would have brought it some steps nearer to perfection.

But of late years mankind have left off considering the law of England as the perfection of reason, and have begun to doubt whether, by more completely carrying out its principles and tendencies, they are not aggravating a great evil, instead of promoting a great good. The registration of deeds has been ably combated by Lord St. Leonards with reasons of great weight and force; and it has come to be admitted by most men that cheapness is not among the advantages to be expected from the introduction of this elaborate and costly expedient. The belief is more and more gaining ground that the principle of our Law of Real Property is radically and essentially faulty. That principle, has been to fetter the land by saddling its title with every contract relating to its possession. If a man conveyed land to another in trust for a third party, the reasonable construction of the contract would seem to be, that the trustee should be the owner of the land, and that the right of the person for whose benefit it was conveyed should be a mere personal confidence, not binding on the land at all. The law of England, however, determined otherwise. It held that by this transaction two estates in the land were created, and that no title would be good which did not thoroughly trace out and unite them both. The object of this doctrine was the praiseworthy wish to carry out the original intention of the parties. Its unforeseen effect was to render the titles to land a mass of complexities and absurdities. The land became, so to speak, the tablet on which any owner could write whatever he pleased, and the caprice, the vanity, or the prodigality of one person is thus perpetuated in baneful inheritance to future generations. People have begun to feel that, had these same principles been applied to stock, had every person in whose name a hundred pounds of the public debt stood in the books of the Bank of England been compelled to show, not merely his ownership, but all the interests, several and successive, of the persons for whom he is trustee, the title to stock would be at this moment as intricate as the title to land, and the conveyance as expensive. If we are to have cheap conveyances and simple titles, this can only be done in one of two ways,—either by reducing the different forms of ownership to a fee simple, and thus curtailing the dominion which Englishmen have been for ages in the habit of exercising over their property, or, if we are not prepared for such a sacrifice, by disconnecting these lesser interests from the land, and recognising, for the purpose of conveyance, nothing short of the most complete ownership. Complicated titles cannot co-exist with short and cheap conveyances, and it was mainly because it tends to perpetuate and stereotype these complexities that public opinion runs so strongly counter to a registration of deeds. We do not want to know the history of our neighbour's land for the last 100 years, not to be fixed with notice of every transaction affecting it. What we want is to be dispensed from the necessity of such knowledge, and to be referred by the law to persons with whom we may safely deal without entering into any such perilous investigation. This desideratum has been effected in stock and in manors where the rolls have been carefully kept, and there is no reason in the nature of things why the same facility of transfer and dispensation from the investigation of title should not be extended to freehold land.

THE TITHE COMMISSION.—The Tithe Commissioners' Report is printed. To the close of last year the commissioners had confirmed 13,711 distinct mergers of tithes or rent charges. Additional powers are required before tithe commutation can be completed.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

WHERE two railway companies had agreed to use a line jointly upon certain terms, and afterwards one of those companies leased their line to a third company for a long term, it was held that, upon the construction of their Act of Parliament, such third company was entitled to the benefits of the agreement made by the lessors: (London and South-Western Railway Company v. The South-Eastern Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 281.)

WINDING-UP PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and meeting during the week.]

Oxford and Worcester Extension and Oxford Junction Railway, with branches to Wolverton and Northern, Confirmed.—Call for 1*l.* 15*s.* [illegible] transferees included in the first class list who have not paid the deposit of two guineas per share. 1st July, 1853.—Rose.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

EQUITY PRACTICE.—The M. R. stated, in Brown v. Oakshot, 20 L. T. Rep. 268, that he should dispose of applications for appointment of a receiver, either at chambers, or, if the parties disputed it, in court; but should not order a reference to the Master; and in Prince v. Cooper, 20 L. T. Rep. 269, his Honour observed that "the 55th section (of cap. 86) was intended to apply to cases where, for the protection of the property or any other cause, it was necessary to come to the Court for an order for sale; but not to enable any party in a contested suit, upon such an application, to obtain a decision of the questions in the cause before the hearing, and he should discourage any such attempt." STUART, V. C. has permitted the answers of defendants in a suit to be read as affidavits, the plaintiff to be at liberty to cross-examine them in the same manner as if they had made affidavits: (Howell v. Williams, 20 L. T. Rep. 274.) And WOOD, V.C. has held it to be necessary to ask leave of the Court to set down a special case, under sect. 13 of Sir G. Turner's Act, where the defendant is a feme covert: (Anon. 20 L. T. Rep. 275.) Where a plaintiff desired the production of documents which his solicitor in an affidavit stated that he believed were in defendants' possession, and upon this affidavit alone applied for a summons, it was held by STUART, V.C. to be insufficient. "The plaintiff," he said, "should have filed an affidavit with interrogatories, which was a practice now sanctioned; or should have proceeded by bill and obtained an answer, making a case for production, and ought not to rely on his own affidavits and letters from the defendants on the subject of the documents:". (Wing v. Harvey, 20 L. T. Rep. 274.) In Chadwick v. Chadwick, 20 L. T. Rep. 272, TURNER, V.C. refused to protect a defendant from the production of documents which would expose him to a prosecution for perjury. Where a claim for specific performance alleged a joint contract, WOOD V.C. held, that it must be proved, or the claim dismissed: (Wollaston v. Osborn, 20 L. T. Rep. 274.)

SALES BY SOLICITORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The suggestion of X. in your last is a good one. As all classes are trying to oust the respectable part of the Profession by curtailing the cost of conveying, &c. and by employing auctioneers and accountants to do what they can, and which the solicitor ought to do, I do not see why solicitors should not have the power to dispose of their clients' real property by auction. Unless it is done, some plan will be devised by disposing of it by ticket, the candle, or some other means, as the auctioneer's charges form a large item in the solicitor's charges. I trust some influential member will take it up. Why should not Lord Robert Grosvenor agitate the question on his proposed motion respecting the certificate duty, or the Law Institution? I am, Sir, yours, &c.

LEX.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I fully agree with your correspondent X. as to the propriety of attorneys and solicitors being allowed to dispose of estates by auction, provided the certificate duty should not be taken off. I for one intend, when the proper time arrives, to take out an auctioneer's licence.

The auctioneers and accountants are continually making inroads upon the regular business of the attorney. A short time since a client of mine happened to purchase a small property by auction, and an abstract of title, of considerable length, was left at his house, but the sales was not indorsed with the name of any one. Upon inquiry it turned out that the auctioneer, who had been an attorney's clerk, furnished the abstract; and it was understood that this personage continues still occasionally to carry on the same trade in the [illegible] in which he resided. I am, Sir, yours, &c.

AN ATTORNEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—We see with much pleasure that you approve the suggestion of your correspondent X. that attorneys be taxed, by payment of the present certificate duty, to support the Law Institution.

Now that law reform and extinction in law charges have become almost fashionable topics," we think that the hunting-up of abuses might profitably turn his attention to reform in auctioneers' bills, which it has hitherto been the practice of the public to pass and allow without demur, and almost without looking to more than the totals, though on investigation they present charges most incomprehensible. And why is this? First, because when the auctioneer's services are required there is in most cases a considerable sum of money to receive, of which he takes advantage; and secondly, because the auctioneer pays himself out of the deposit which it is the practice for him to hold, and merely hands over the balance and his receipted bill. And what a bill! We have several now before us; we also turn to our own bills in the same transactions; we compare them; mark the result. In the three transactions to which these accounts relate we find that the solicitor—the professional man, who has contributed 120*l.* to the revenue for leave to be articled; who has paid nearly 50*l.* more in the shape of stamp and fees for permission to commence practice; who still pays a considerable yearly sum to continue to practise; who has, moreover, had a long, expensive, and unpaid noviciate to pass through—receives in two of them nearly half, and in the other less than a third, of the hard-earned amount paid to himself by the auctioneer, the non-professional man, who, without any special education, may yesterday have been but a man and to-day is "an auctioneer," and therefore qualified to remunerate himself at a rate, considering the amount of work done, the skill required, and last, though not least, the responsibility incurred, of ten times the exorbitant charges of the solicitor. And, not satisfied with these great privileges conferred upon him by his licence, he (I speak of him as of a genus) is ever encroaching upon the province of the solicitor. He prepares agreements; he draws wills; he adjusts complicated accounts; and, to crown all, he styles his employers his clients.

We say, then, let the solicitors, now that every man's hand is against them, make common cause, and serve at once their clients' interests and their own by demanding of the Legislature, as a matter of justice, that the suggestion above alluded to be carried out.

Liverpool. We are, Sir, yours, &c.

A COUNTRY FIRM.

Queries on Points of Practice.

ABSCONDING DEBTORS' ARREST ACT, 1851.

SECT. 1 of this Act empowers "the judge of any district County Court (except the County Court judges acting in the counties of Middlesex and Surrey), on application, &c. and proof of debt and intention to abscond, to grant a warrant for the debtor's apprehension."

On applying to the judge of one of our Yorkshire Courts, a few days ago, his Honour declined granting a warrant, on the ground that he was not then sitting in the particular district in which the debtor resided. It was urged, on behalf of the creditors, that if this were the requirement or meaning of the Act, it would have been so expressed in the enactment, and that this would render the Act, except in very rare instances, perfectly nugatory; but his Honour adhered to his own construction of the enactment, observing that he believed there was as yet no authority to the contrary.

Perhaps some of your readers can refer me to a case on the subject, or will kindly state what is the usual practice?

ALPHA.

Answers to Queries.

THE NEW PROCESS.

IF the question of A. B. in LAW TIMES of the 15th ult. has not already been answered, he will find the information he wants on referring to Parson v. Lloyd, 2 Wils. 309; Jarman v. Hooper, 7 Scott, N. R. 663; Green v. Elgie, 5 Q. B. 99; and Macnamara on "Nullities and Irregularities," pp. 6, 25.

C. N.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

Two Co. C. appeals were reported last week. In Mountney v. Collier, 20 L. T. Rep. 277, besides a question of general law noted elsewhere in its proper place, the Court laid down this rule for the guidance of the Judge, and which should be carefully noted: "As a general rule, we think that a tenant may show that his landlord's title has expired, and that if the case then resolves itself into a question of title, the Judge of the Co. C. has no further jurisdiction."

In Fuller v. Cheveley, 20 L. T. Rep. 278, it was held by the C. B., that where letters unstamped were tendered in evidence to prove a contract, it was a question of law for the Judge, and not of facts for the jury, whether they were admissible. In the same case it was determined also, that the Court of Appeal has power to order a nonsuit to be entered, because in effect a nonsuit is a judgment for the defendant.

Several cases in Insolvency are to be noted by the practitioner. In reckoning the amount of a trader debtor's liabilities, debts barred by the statute are to be included, and if these, added to the debts not yet barred, exceed 300*l.* there is no jurisdiction: (Re Lockwood, 20 L. T. Rep. 283.) Where a petition had been filed in the London Court by mistake for the adjoining County Court, the Court dismissed the petition, directed the books to be given up, and restrained the assignee from selling: (Re Stephens, 20 L. T. Rep. 283.) In the same case it was held that, although the residence of an insolvent be within twenty miles of the General Post Office, yet, if the parish church of the parish be beyond that distance, an insolvent must petition in the Co. C. In Re Trotter, 20 L. T. Rep. 284, a vesting order on a creditor's petition obtained against a prisoner who is only in custody on mesne process on a capias was held to be void ab initio. In Re Atkins, 20 L. T. Rep. 284, debts secured by mortgage were required to be reckoned in the amount of a trader debtor's liabilities; and in Re Meacock, 20 L. T. Rep. 284, it was held that a petitioner, who has assigned all his property to a trustee for his creditors generally, within three months of the date of the petition, has no locus standi under the Protection Acts.

A point in this branch of the law is reported from Nisi Prius. In Levy v. Hook, 20 L. T. Rep. 284, it appeared that A. had in his schedule described a bill as drawn by B. and accepted by himself. It was held that if he knew who was the holder, this was an insufficient description, and that he was not discharged from the claim of such holder. If he knew that it had left the hands of the drawer and was at the time of filing his schedule out in the world, he is bound to show some effort to ascertain the holder, or he will not be discharged. Nor would he be so if the amount was wrongly stated, should the jury be of opinion that the error arose from culpable negligence.

COUNTY COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—There is one evil attending the County Court practice which has not, I believe, been noticed either by yourself or by any of your correspondents, and that is the expense and inconvenience incurred by suitors living at a distance from the court town, in going to the court for the purpose of making an application for leave to summon a party residing out of the district. In the metropolis, where the distances are short, and the cost of conveyance is inconsiderable, it is not of much consequence; but in the country it is a real grievance, especially as there are no costs whatever allowed for it.

In the district in which I live, parties are obliged to travel as much as fifteen or sixteen miles to the court, and on roads where not even a coach passes; so that unless they have a vehicle of their own, they must either hire one or travel on foot, however inconsiderable the debt may be.

Amongst the improvements suggested, there should be a remedy for this. Surely the clerk of the court would be competent in every case to grant such an order at the time of entering the plaint.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

March 3, 1853. M. M.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The 22nd section of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, authorises the removal of judgments of inferior courts of record into the superior courts upon the application of the persons recovering them. Now is it not desirable that some enactment should be passed declaring the County Courts to be inferior courts of record within the meaning of the section referred to? or is there no room for a doubt that they are not within the section?

The County Courts, it will be recollected, have been established since the passing of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

A SUBSCRIBER.

BREACH OF CONTRACT WITH A CABIN PASSENGER.—A very important case was tried in the Sheriffs' Court before Mr. Russell Gurney. It was the case of Hill v. Roskell, and was an action to recover damages for a breach of contract in the conveyance of plaintiff, his wife, and family, from Australia to London. The damages were laid at 50*l.* From the evidence adduced it appeared that in June last the defendant, whose vessel, the Asia, was then lying at Adelaide, contracted to convey the plaintiff, his wife and family, to London as cuddy passengers, supplying them with provisions, &c. of the first quality, medical comforts, &c., in consideration of a payment of 130*l.*; he, however, failed, inasmuch as there was a deficiency of water and medical comforts, there was no milk, an insufficient supply of bread and preserved tin meats, and other comforts and luxuries to which first-class passengers were entitled, the result being that plaintiff and his family suffered severely, and one of the children, from want of medical comforts, contracted scurvy, and was not yet recovered. Captain Roskell and the cuddy servant gave testimony that the passengers were amply supplied, except when interrupted by stormy weather; the passage had been very well received, and the sheep, pigs, and other stores provided for the passengers' use, were washed overboard, and could not be replenished, until the vessel reached Bahia. His Honour considered defendant had not fulfilled his contract. Verdict for plaintiff. Damages 30*l*.

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

Several cases, in the Law of Bankruptcy were reported last week. The following were the most interesting. In Ex parte Reply, 20 L. T. Rep. 267, a landlord had distrained for rent prior to an act of bankruptcy; but before the sale the tenant was adjudicated a bankrupt. The landlord was held, upon appeal, to be entitled to retain six years' arrears of rent distrained. It was held in Ex parte Bull, 20 L. T. Rep. 267, that drawers in a mine, being employed by the colliers, and not by the occupiers, could not prove against the estate of the latter for wages due to them at the time of bankruptcy.

A case of very great importance is that of Pannell v. Ex, 20 L. T. Rep. 269. The creditor of a bankrupt in England, instead of proving his debt under the bankruptcy here, proceeded in the Court of Session in Scotland to establish his debt, and to attach property belonging to the bankrupt which was vested in the assignees in England. The Court of Chan. restrained the creditor from prosecuting such action.

Where a trader under s. 41 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96 filed a declaration of insolvency and was adjudicated a bankrupt, and on his own application, the act of bankruptcy, on which a creditor afterwards founded his petition, was held to be the declaration of insolvency, and that there could be no relation further back than to that Act. Therefore, where there had been an alleged fraudulent preference and taking in execution, the assignees could not treat either of such as the act of bankruptcy. They might treat the transaction as fraudulent; but, if it were so, it did not make it absolutely void, but only voidable, at their option. Goods, therefore, so assigned passed to the purchaser, and he was entitled to sue for all injuries done to them until the assignees interfered and claimed them; and even subsequent interference by the assignees did not take the property out of the purchaser from the time of his first possession of them. In the same case it was intimated that a fraudulent preference might be impeached by the assignees as voidable, though at the time there was no petitioning creditor's debt; and that under ss. 88 and 101 of 12 & 14 Vict. c. 96, where a trader is adjudicated a bankrupt on his own petition, there can be no relation back to any prior act of bankruptcy. (Stoveken v. Newnham, 20 L. T. Rep. 279.)

ASSURANCE CHRONICLE.

The Railway Passengers Assurance Company.—By the report read at the seventh half-yearly meeting on Wednesday, it appears that the total amount received for premiums during the half-year is 4,856l. 4s. 5d., and the entire income for the year 1852 is 9,422l. 12s. 6d. against 7,352l. 18s. for 1851. The latter sum included, however, 649l. 17s. 6d. for insurance of railway servants, which has not been renewed, and which should be deducted in order to estimate the actual increase of business from passengers during the past year.

The following table shows the number of tickets issued during the three years of the society's existence:—

	Single Journey Tickets.			Double Journey Tickets.			Periodical Tickets.
	1st Class.	2nd Class.	3rd Class.	1st Class.	2nd Class.	3rd Class.
1850	34,626	60,040	40,226	—	—	—	2,820
1851	29,390	74,616	123,468	—	273	19,471	2,227
1852	23,494	40,582	72,342	3,027	5,431	12,299	2,715

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

METROPOLITAN AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSOCIATION.

The following letter has been addressed to Lord St. Leonards by the secretary of this association:—

TO THE LORD ST. LEONARDS.

My Lord,—Your Lordship is reported in the daily papers of the 13th Nov. last, to have made the following observations in delivering judgment in the Court of Chancery:—"In compliance with orders to that effect, letters had been written to 4,480 persons who appeared as Masters Extra in Chancery, calling on them to show by what authority they exercised their office, and for the production of their certificates. Answers had been received from no more than 2,480 of the number. His Lordship now knew something more of these gentlemen, and would have them a little better under control than they had hitherto been."

From this it might be inferred that your Lordship considered that the Masters Extraordinary of the Court had been wanting in proper respect in not answering a communication of your Lordship's on the subject of their authority to exercise their office. Several of those gentlemen, therefore, who are members of this association, have requested the committee to inquire into the matter, and, if possible, to remove any erroneous impression of your Lordship's upon the subject.

These gentlemen feel that it is due both to your Lordship and to themselves that the matter should be inquired into; as, on the one hand, they would be much pained that your Lordship should think them wanting in respect towards yourself, and, on the other hand, they do not doubt that if any mistake has been made, it will be your Lordship's wish to have it set right.

The committee have accordingly put themselves into communication with the general body of their provincial members, who include several hundreds of the leading solicitors in all the principal towns of the kingdom; and the result is, that they have not been able to find one solicitor who has received or even heard of any such circular as that mentioned by your Lordship, and they have received letters to this effect from Masters Extra in upwards of forty towns in all parts of England.

They have, however, learned that in July last an order of your Lordship's was inserted in the London Gazettes, requesting "all Masters Extra to transmit to the principal secretary of the Lord Chancellor, on or before the last day of August, a statement in writing mentioning their names, their place of residence, their actual occupation, and the date of their appointment."

The London Gazette is very seldom seen, and still more seldom read, even by solicitors; and if that had been the only notice they had received, it is probable that the order would not have been seen by one in a hundred of the Masters Extra, instead of its being complied with, as it was, by considerably more than half of the entire number.

The order was copied into the three principal law papers, the Jurist, the Law Times, and the Legal Observer. The committee have also ascertained that it was in several instances mentioned to provincial solicitors by their London agents, and by these means a considerable number of Masters Extra became aware of it, and made the desired return; but many of the gentlemen with whom the committee have now been in correspondence upon the subject state that they had heard nothing whatever about it until they received the first communication from the committee.

Under these circumstances the committee have felt it their duty to put your Lordship in possession of the real state of the matter, and trust that your Lordship will feel satisfied that the imperfect return obtained to your Lordship's order did not arise from any inability on the part of those to whom it was addressed to make the return, or from any want of a proper respect to the order made by your Lordship; and they earnestly hope that when an opportunity occurs your Lordship will relieve the members of the Profession from the erroneous imputation which your Lordship's reported observations are calculated to convey.

I have the honour to be, my Lord,

Your Lordship's obedient servant,

William Shaen, Secretary.

8, Bedford-row, 16th Feb. 1853.

MANCHESTER LAW ASSOCIATION.

(Abbreviated from the Manchester Guardian.)

ANNUAL DINNER.

The annual dinner took place on Monday evening, at the Palatine Hotel, Hunt's-bank. There were between forty and fifty gentlemen present, amongst whom were Mr. John Barlow, president of the Association, who occupied the chair; the Mayors of Manchester and Salford; and Messrs. S. Heelis, G. Thorley, C. Gibson, J. Street, E. Worthington, R. B. B. Cobbett, S. Fletcher, T. T. Bellhouse, F. Robinson, N. Earle, P. Bunting, R. Radford, T. L. Rushton, of Bolton, &c.

The usual loyal toasts having been enthusiastically received,

The Chairman proposed "Prosperity to the Manchester Law Association." This Association was not founded upon any selfish views, or upon class principles, on the part of the profession, but upon the broad basis indicated by its motto, "Fiat Justitia." The unpaid services of an intelligent, painstaking body of professional men had for the last fourteen years been directed towards protecting the public of this immediate neighbourhood from the malpractices and designs of those pests to society who, under the cloak of the law, brought it into discredit, whilst they battened on the fruits of their villany at the expense of the respectable and honourable practitioner. The same body had, without ostentation and without reward, during a like period watched over the numberless bills that had passed through Parliament—bills affecting deeply the interests of the public, and their energies had been cheerfully devoted to the protection of those interests. During the past year many amendments had been suggested by this Association, in various bills—particularly the Common Law Procedure Bill—the Suitors in Chancery Bill—the Law of Wills Amendment Bill—the County Court Extension Bill, and the Law of Patents Amendment Bill, in order to render the working of the bills practically more efficient and advantageous to the public. During the past year a disputed question, arising out of the last Stamp Act, upon which this Association took a different view from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, has been practically settled by means of the efforts of this Association, and had effected a pecuniary saving to the public which in course of time would be very considerable. Whilst thus engaged, the efforts of this body had also been directed in promoting the observance among the profession of a right-minded and honourable conduct towards one another. One other topic he had to refer to, and he undertook it as a matter of duty. One of the vocations of this Association was to watch over the administration of the laws in this district—and if it should happen that through the eccentricities or other failings of a judge, or through unseemly dissensions in any court, the interests of the commercial public should suffer, it would become necessary for this Association to follow the example of Liverpool on a recent occasion. And he thought the funds of the Association and the energies of the committee could not be applied to a better object than in attempting to obtain the removal of an evil so much to be complained of.

Mr. G. Thorley said, in complying with the call made upon him by the chair, to respond to the toast of the "Manchester Law Association," he could not forbear congratulating its members on the extended influence and elevated position to which it had attained, as well in their own as in distant localities, and in the metropolis itself—a position which was accompanied by an increase in the number of its members, in its means, and in its efficiency; and if not by an increase, at least by a continuance of that public sympathy and countenance in its ends and its objects, so well exemplified by the presence of the two chief magistrates of their important boroughs, who had again honoured them by their society, and who might aptly be said to represent the sentiments, the feelings, and intelligence of the large and influential municipalities over which they presided. And if it were asked how this had been accomplished, he believed the true answer would be found to be, because the association had, in all its acts and proceedings, maintained in its integrity that fundamental axiom with which it was originated, that the interests of the public and the interests of the profession were identical and the same. That whether the exertions of their branch of the profession had been bestowed in obtaining wise and well-considered law reforms, or in opposing mischievous measures of legislation (and they had been frequent and laborious), or in obtaining the abandonment of fiscal laws, which would have the effect of imposing stamp duties exclusively upon the landowners of Manchester and its immediate neighbourhood—or in bringing courts of justice into their own county, to their own doors, or whether in opposing, and successfully opposing, the passing of a measure which would have created a monster centralisation, registration office for deeds in London, with all its attendant staff of policemen and officers, and which would have compelled every purchaser of land to be at the expense of two conveyances where one only is necessary, and each landowner's principal title deeds, however small the property, to be sent to London with all its attendant inconveniences and expense;—in all these and similar measures it had been manifest that the public interest was a main object of their exertions, and which by their success had been secured—and it was gratifying to reflect that those shafts of calumny and slander which a short time ago were so unsparingly hurled at their branch of the profession by those whose measures they had caused to be rejected, or whose attempts to mislead the legislature and the public they had succeeded in preventing, had either fallen impotent and harmless, or "returned to plague the inventors." One of those slanders, it would be remembered, was that the legal profession was really opposed to all reforms or changes in the law, and anxious only for their own interests to keep everything in its present state. But with reference to their part in these reforms, and of the Court of Chancery especially, what, in reality, were the facts? Why, that for the last five or six years their branch of the profession had been incessant in urging the adoption of the reforms of abuses, which, so long as they were suffered to exist, not only were attended with large unnecessary outlay, expense to their clients and themselves, but rendered chancery proceedings unpopular and odious to those who were unfortunate enough to be dragged into them, and directly operated injuriously to the interests of the profession, by the determination of hundreds to submit to injustice and loss rather than undergo the ordeal of applying to such a tribunal. Indeed, the course adopted by their own and all kindred associations had illustrated another of their leading principles, that none are more desirous or more really interested in promoting wise and well-considered legal reforms than the profession itself,—objects, however, which, as individuals, they were powerless to obtain, and which could only be successfully urged as they had been by the combined efforts which their association afforded. But the efficiency of the association had not only been manifested in the objects to which he had alluded—it had been shown in its exertions to correct the exertions and abuses of the lower grades as well as in maintaining its position and in protecting its just rights and privileges from encroachment by the higher branches of the profession. They would remember that on the discussion of the County Courts Bill, the Attorney-General and members of the bar in the House of Commons endeavoured to give to the bar the right of pre-audience over the attorneys, which was a direct interference with the privileges of the latter, as well as with the rights of the public. It was an innovation highly important to that portion of their branch of the profession who practise advocacy in those courts; and their own and other law associations felt bound to take the most efficient means to resist it, as well to obviate the more immediate consequences of such an infringement, as also to prevent the equally important object, that of preventing it being used as a precedent in the pending and prospective legal reforms; and although the law associations were so far successful in their objects, it would be remembered that in a recent Act a declaratory clause had been inserted with regard to a subject which had been much discussed, viz.—the right of the bar to receive instructions from litigants themselves, and without the intervention of attorneys; in effect, to break down that line of demarcation which he thought was not less useful in being maintained to preserve the real interests of the bar than their own and those of the public. He believed, however, that up to the present time the members of the bar had not availed themselves of this practice. In making those observations, he (Mr. T.) wished to guard himself from any feeling of hostility towards the Bar, for whom, as a body, he had always entertained the highest esteem and regard, both for their learning, integrity, and that fearless spirit of independence, to which we may mainly attribute, in a constitutional point of view, the protection of our rights and our liberties, and the maintenance of the pure administration of the laws, as well by their learning and research as by the salutary influence they produce, even in the highest tribunals; and he believed them to be highly useful, both to the public and their own branch of the Profession. His only hope was, that nothing should occur with regard to such a body—and least of all emanating from itself—that should injure its prestige or impair its usefulness, or which should bring the two branches of the Profession into hostility and unfriendly feeling. And although it was perhaps to be expected that in the extensive changes which had taken place in various departments of the law, and the confusion and jostling of the Profession out of their usual and accustomed positions, some encroachment might naturally be expected, yet he had great confidence that in the exercise of a sound discretion and right feeling by both branches, and, he would add, a sense of the mode in which the administration of justice and the public good would be best served, that a short time only would be required to dispel any difficulties, and that the Profession would settle down into that useful division of labour and pursuits, within the principles of their ancient and accustomed limits, which he believed would be found to be in the result most conducive to the best interests of both branches of the Profession as well as of the community. On the other hand, he by no means wished to be understood that they should relax in their exertions to connect themselves still more closely, and to render their association more powerful in organisation and efficiency, "to stand by their order, and to protect their own just rights and privileges."

The CHAIRMAN proposed the health of the Mayor of Manchester.

Mr. SERJEANT HEALIS proposed the healths of the Lord Chancellor and the Judges. Mr. Healis observed, that this toast included all the judges of the superior courts, both of law and equity in London, who, he had no hesitation in saying, were a body of men unequalled in the world. He did not mean to say (for it would be affectation if he did), that there were not to be found in other professions, and in high places in other professions, men of great ability, but, without fear of contradiction, he asserted that there was no profession which had at its head the same galaxy of talent which was displayed by the judges of the superior courts in this country.

Mr. N. EARLE proposed "The Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association," and returned his thanks to the working members of that society for the great services they had rendered to the country at large. The object of forming "The Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association" was to bring about a better understanding between the London and provincial members of the profession. When it was said to be right on the part of members of the Legislature to interfere with a rough hand in cutting down the privileges and monopolies of the law associations and the profession, he thought the difficulties which the younger members of the profession had to encounter were entirely left out of view. What was the position of a young man entering the profession? It was said that all the capital they required was as much as would obtain pens, ink, and paper. But this was not the fact. An enormous capital had to be laid out upon the education of the law student. After he had attained eighteen or twenty years of age, with a certain degree of knowledge acquired by himself, he had to give 120*l.* for stamp duty; next, his 300 guineas for a fee, and to continue five years in one common round of study. He had then to wait two years before he could enter the profession; and he ventured to say, as a general rule, that unless a man was "born with a silver spoon in his mouth," or had a profession handed down to him, it took ten years more of his life before he could get a common maintenance out of the profession. It was, therefore, the duty of the older members to endeavour to put a stop to the innovations which Parliament might introduce.

Mr. TAYLOR responded, on behalf of "The Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association." He looked upon that association as possessing a concentration of all the advantages that a law society could have, for it brought within its scope all the strength of the profession in England. By its medium the members of the legal profession could put forth their endeavours to carry into effect that which was good and proper in the way of reform, and to oppose with effect that which would be injurious and improper if carried into law.

Mr. F. ROBINSON then proposed the "Liverpool and other Provincial Law Associations," and, in doing so, suggested the propriety of forming law associations in towns, however small, which returned members to Parliament. It must be evident that wherever they had associations formed in towns which returned members to Parliament, they would have a direct means of communication, and an influence with the Members of that particular borough, and by their instrumentality would be able to operate upon the Legislature. He did not suggest this for the maintenance of anything like the privileges of the profession, if those were inconsistent with public advantage, for he held that whenever the public advantage required it (no matter what might be their privileges) those privileges must give way. He wished these associations to be formed for the purpose of bringing before Members of Parliament the views which the profession entertained on many matters, upon which, from their practical knowledge, they could give better reasons, and introduce them with more benefit to the public than could be done by those who had not had the advantage which the practice of the law generally gave. Unless they brought practical views to bear upon Members of Parliament, and so induce them to pass laws which could be practically useful—which would work in every-day life, and answer the purposes of every-day transactions, they might look in vain for that boasted effort of legislation which they had been promised by theoretical reformers and impracticable statesmen.

The CHAIRMAN next gave the health of the "President of the past year," to which Mr. THORLEY responded.

Mr. T. L. RUSHTON, of Bolton, proposed the health of "The Committee," which was acknowledged by Mr. R. B. B. Cobbett. After urging upon the members of the association to take an active part in aiding the committee to carry out the objects which they had in view, Mr. Cobbett alluded to some of the matters to which the committee for the ensuing year would have to attend. Although a good deal had been done in the shape of law reform, it was perfectly clear that much remained yet to be done, because that which the public were determined to have was the means of having their disputes in all branches of the law settled as expeditiously and cheaply as possible. He knew that it was the feeling of the committee and of the society to aid as far as they possibly could in that object, because, although none of them, he hoped, approved of any man performing labour without being paid to the full extent of that labour, yet none of them had any sympathy with those incumbrances with which all their proceedings were choked, and which caused great expense to them and unnecessary expense to the country. The subject of bankruptcy and insolvency, to which the president alluded, was one in which some change must be made. There never was anything so absurd and so contradictory as the state of the law off that subject. In common law reforms there was no doubt that the immense disproportion in the expense between trying cases at the assizes for 60*l.* and trying cases at the County Courts for 50*l.* was so anomalous that some alteration ought to be made in it. The ordinary rule undoubtedly would be that to try a case in which 50*l.* were at stake in the County Court, some 10*l.* or 15*l.* more or less would be the outside that a man would have to risk. Or 10*l.* higher—let the plaintiff determine upon having the full amount of that which he claimed—he would have to go to the assizes, thirty miles off, to get the case tried, and if they dealt fairly with the client, they must tell him he must be prepared, in the event of losing the cause, to pay 100*l.* Now there could be no reason for such a state of things as that; and it was not to be supposed that some alteration would not be made in it, and if those alterations were to be made, the labour of seeing that they did not make matters worse would devolve upon the members of the legal profession, and, in some degree, upon the committee of this society.

Mr. S. FLORENCE proposed "The Treasurer of the past year (Mr. R. M. Whitlow), and his better health," to which Mr. RADFORD responded on behalf of Mr. Whitlow.

The CHAIRMAN proposed "The Health of the Honorary Secretary for the past year, Mr. J. Street," who has also been appointed treasurer in the place of Mr. Whitlow, who has resigned from ill health.

Mr. STREET, in acknowledging the compliment, said he felt that in resigning the office of secretary he was resigning it into the hands of one who could perform its duties most efficiently.

The other toasts were "The President," proposed by the Mayor of Manchester; "The Honorary Secretary" (Mr. C. Gibson), proposed by Mr. J. B. Bunting.

Mr. C. GIBSON expressed the pleasure he had experienced in his appointment to the office of honorary secretary, and his determination to devote his best energies to its interests.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

SPRING ASSIZES.

HOME CIRCUIT.—Hertford, Feb. 25.—The business commenced on Wednesday, when the commission for Herts was opened by Mr. Justice Coleridge, and his Lordship afterwards tried two or three cases of felony. The cause list is very light, there being only seven causes entered for trial, the whole of them being common jury cases. The cases on the Crown side are of a serious character.

HOME CIRCUIT.—Chelmsford, March 1.—The commission for the county of Essex was opened on Monday, Mr. Baron Alderson presiding on the Crown side, and Mr. Justice Coleridge as Nisi Prius. The gaol calendar and cause list are unusually light for this county, there being only forty prisoners for trial, and fourteen law causes, one only being a special jury case. The magistrates held an adjourned quarter session last week, which may in some measure account for the small number of prisoners; but the calendar is still very much lighter than usual at the Spring Assizes, and there are no grave cases contained in it.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT.—Lincoln, Feb. 27.—Mr. Justice C.J. arrived here yesterday evening. The calendar for the county contains the names of thirty prisoners, and several of the charges are of a serious nature. They include two of murder, one of manslaughter, one of child-murder, two of concealing the births of children, three of stabbing, one of shooting with intent, two of rape, one of highway robbery, four of setting fire to stacks of corn, hay, &c. one of sheep-stealing, one of burglary, two of night poaching, one of perjury, and several cases of larceny. There are seven prisoners in the city charged with the offences of highway robbery, felonious wounding, uttering counterfeit coin and larceny.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT.—Nottingham, March 2.—Baron Parke arrived to-day, and proceeded to try the town prisoners, of whom there were nineteen, charged chiefly with larceny and false pretences. There were, however, three cases of burglary and one of robbery with violence.

OXFORD CIRCUIT.—Reading, March 1.—The business of this circuit commenced here to-day, with a heavy calendar and an average cause list. In the latter there were one special and six common jury cases.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.—Carlisle, Feb. 24.—The cause list contained an entry of six causes, one marked for a special jury. The calendar contains the names of twenty-seven prisoners; one charged with shooting with intent to rob, one with arson, two with stabbing, one with threatening to accuse of perjury in order to extort money, several with riot and assault, one with obtaining goods by false pretences, the rest with ordinary larcenies.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.—Newcastle-on-Tyne, Feb. 28.—Mr. Justice Cresswell and Mr. Baron Martin this morning proceeded to the courts at 10 o'clock; Mr. Justice Cresswell taking his seat at the Town-hall to try the town prisoners; Mr. Baron Martin trying the county prisoners at the Moot-hall. The cause list is very light, there being only six entries, two for this town, which are undefended, and four for the county, one of which is a special jury.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORD-LIEUTENANTS.

YORKSHIRE, WEST RIDING.—John Eastwood, Esq., and Edmund Waterton, Esq., to be deputy-lieuts.

LANCASHIRE.—Thomas Edwards Moss, Esq.; Thomas Ainsworth Crook, Esq.; Richard Ashton, Esq., and Edmund Grundy, Esq., to be deputy-lieutenants.

SOMERSETSHIRE.—John Monson Cartow, Esq., and Henry Danby Seymour, Esq., to be deputy-lieutenants.

SUFFOLK.—John Kerrich, Esq., to be deputy-lieutenant.

FLINTSHIRE.—Honoratus Leigh Thomas, Esq., to be deputy-lieutenant.

STANNARIES.—The Hon. George Matthew Fortescue; John Michael Williams, Esq.; Thomas Simon Bolitho, Esq.; and Edwin Ley, Esq. to be Special Deputy Wardens.

Mr. Pierce Mahony, who held the office of Clerk of the Crown to the Court of Queen's Bench, died on Sunday morning of paralysis of the brain. Mr. Wilson, of the Crown Office, was sworn in Clerk of the Crown ad interim. The emoluments are about 1,000*l.* a-year.

Mr. J. Blakeney, of Galway, has been appointed Crown Solicitor for that county in the room of his brother, Mr. James Blakeney, who has retired from the office.

At the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace held for the borough of Sudbury, in the counties of Suffolk and Essex, on the 18th ult., George Williams Fulcher, Arthur James Skrimshire, and Robert Alfred Allen, esquires, qualified as magistrates for the said borough.

Mr. Pickering has been appointed Recorder of Pontefract, in the room of Mr. Boothby, appointed Puisne Judge at Adelaide.—Globe.

JOURNAL OF PROPERTY.

MONEY MARKET.

English Funds.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.
Bank Stock	..	226½	227	228	228	227
3*l.* Cent. Reduced Annuities	100½	100½	100⅝	100½	100½	100⅝
3*l.* Cent. Consols Annuities	99½	99½	99⅝	99⅝	99⅝	99⅝
Consols for Account	99½	99½	99⅝	99½	99½	99⅝
New 3*l.* Cent. Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	..
New 2½ per Cent. Annuities	103½	103½	103½	103½	103½	103½
Long Annu. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	6⅛	..	..	6⅛	6⅛	6⅛
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Oct. 10, 1859)	..	..	..	6½	..	..
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	..	6½	..	..	..	..
India Stock	..	267½	..	265	266½	..
India Bonds (1,000*l.*)	..	..	..	..	45	47
Do. do. (under 1,000*l.*)	50	40	40	48	47	..
South Sea Stock	110	..	110	..	..	..
Do. do. Old Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	..
Exchequer Bills, 1000*l.*	17*	12*	14*	12*	17*	18*
Do. do. 500*l.*	19*	19*	14*	..	17*	18*
Do. do. Small	19*	11*	12*	..	12*	18*

* Premium.

Public Sales.

On Tuesday, March 1, 1853.

By Messrs. CHINNOCK and GAISWORTHY, at the Mart.

Freehold ground-rents, forming part of the Westbourne-grove estate, Hyde-park, the whole of the estimated rack annual value of 5,715*l.* land-tax redeemed, but let on leases at the ground-rents mentioned in each lot.

Lot 1. Six houses, Nos. 14 to 16, Norfolk-terrace, and a plot of ground, producing 40*l.* per annum.—1300*l.*

Lot 1 a. A plot of ground in the rear of the preceding, with two villas thereon, producing 14*l.* 12*s.* per annum.—450*l.*

Lot 2. A plot of ground, with pair of villas, known as Norfolk-villas, and an unfinished villa on the west side of Norfolk-road, producing 20*l.* per annum.—640*l.*

Lot 3. A plot of ground and pair of villas adjoining the preceding, producing 6*l.* per annum.—200*l.*

Lot 4. A pair of detached villas on the west side of the preceding, let at 38*l.* per annum.—1,230*l.*

Lot 5. A family residence, known as Norfolk House, Westbourne-grove, West, and a villa residence, also nine sets of stabling, &c. producing 25*l.* per annum.—1,010*l.*

Lot 6. Two pairs of villas adjoining the preceding lot, on the west side; ground-rent 40*l.* per annum—1200*l.*

Lot 7. A freehold plot of ground, at the corner of Westbourne-grove West and Ledbury-road, on which is erected a baptist chapel; let on lease at 40*l.*—1210*l.*

Lot 8. A large plot of ground in the Ledbury-road, on which are erected three dwelling-houses; also the whole of John's-mews, in the rear thereof; two shops, the building intended for a tavern, and called the Walmer Castle; and two houses and shops adjoining; the whole let on a ground-rent of 110*l.*—3180*l.*

Lot 9. A large plot of ground on the north side of Drayton-road, on which is erected a terrace of 13 houses, with premises and stabling in Drayton-mews; let at a ground-rent of 101*l.* 8*s.* per annum—3230*l.*

Lot 10. A plot of ground on the west side of Ledbury-road and south side of Drayton-road, containing 16 houses, with stabling in the rear, producing 71*l.* 13*s.* yearly—2120*l.*

Lot 11. Fourteen houses, Nos. 1 to 14, Westbourne-gardens, let at ground-rents amounting to 102*l.* 18*s.*—3050*l.*

Lot 12. Three houses, Nos. 10, 11, 12, Ledbury-road, ten houses, Lambton-terrace, and premises in Denbigh-mews in the rear, the whole producing in ground-rent 120*l.* per annum—3300*l.*

Lot 13. A plot of ground in the Ledbury-road, at the corner of Westbourne-grove West, on which are erected five houses with shops, let at a ground-rent of 52*l.* 10*s.*—1560*l.*

Lot. 14. A detached villa residence, known as Vernon Villa, Pembridge-villa-road, let on lease at 21*l.* 10*s.* per annum—660*l.*

Lot 15. A pair of residences, Nos. 34 and 36, Pembridge-villas, producing 26*l.* per annum—840*l.*

Lot 16. Another pair of villas, in Pembridge-villa-road, let at 17*l.*—510*l.*

Lot 17. A detached cottage and piece of ground in Pembridge-villa-road, producing a ground-rent of 7*l.* per annum.—220*l.*

The day's sale was attended by a large number of builders and speculists, and the total sum realised by the sales was 29,310*l.*

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

GROVES.—On the 15th ult., at Hemel Hempstead, Herts, the wife of Charles E. Grover, Esq. of a son.

HAIG.—On the 26th ult., at Titchfield-terrace, the wife of James Haig, Esq. Lincoln's-inn, of a son.

MANSETT.—On the 2nd inst., at No. 7, Caroline-place, the wife of Henry Mansett, Esq. barrister-at-law, of a son.

NEELD.—On the 23rd ult., at the Manor-house, Holt, Wilts, the wife of John Neeld, Esq. M.P. of a son.

MARRIAGES

KNIGHT—PEARSON.—On the 24th ult., at St. James's Church, Paddington, Captain Brook John Knight, youngest son of the late Edward Knight, Esq. of Godmersham-park, Kent, and Chawton-house, Hants, to Margaret, eldest daughter of Charles Pearson, Esq. of Gloucester-square, Hyde-park, and late of Wormleybury, Herts.

PASHLEY—LAUER-MUENCHHOFEN.—On the 25rd ult., at the British Embassy, Berlin, Robert Pashley, Esq. one of Her Majesty's counsel, to Anna Josephine Maria, only daughter of the Baron Von Lauer-Muenchhofen.

DEATHS.

BORTON.—On the 23th ult. aged 28, Elizabeth, daughter of John Henry Borton, Esq. of Bury St. Edmund's.

CARR.—On the 23rd ult at her residence, Dale-villa, Belper, Derbyshire, aged 55, Harriet, relict of the late Laurence Carr, Esq. solicitor.

GILLBANKS.—On the 8th inst. at Whitefield-house, Joseph Gillbanks, Esq. aged 73, one of Her Majesty's Deputy-Lieutenants for the county of Cumberland, and for nearly forty years an active magistrate for the same. He was formerly an eminent merchant of Kingston, Jamaica.

LAKE.—On the 24th ult at De Beauvoir-town, aged 61, John Lake, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn.

PARRATT.—On the 23rd ult. at St. Leonard's, aged 68, Edward Parratt, Esq. Clerk of the Journals of the House of Lords.

BABINGTON.—On the 27th ult. at her house in Blessington-street, Dublin, aged 75, Eliza Frances Babington, relict of the late Thomas Richard Babington, Esq. barrister-at-law, and one of the magistrates of the head police office in that city.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, March 1.

ATKINSON, THOMAS LAMB, linen warehouseman, Wood-street, City, March 11, at twelve, April 16, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Pennell. Sol. Mason, Ironmonger-lane. Petition, Feb. 24.

KERSLAKE, JAMES, sawyer, Collingwood-street, Blackfriars-road, March 10, at half-past eleven, April 12, at eleven, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Johnson. Sol. Hare, South-square, Gray's-inn. Petition, Feb 18.

MONTON, WILLIAM, bill discounter, Belgrave-place, Pimlico, March 11, at eleven, April 16, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Nicholson. Sol. Reed. Coleman-street. Petition, Feb. 8.

NEES, WILLIAM, and SNOWDON, THOMAS, tar distillers, Leeds, March 18 and April 15, at eleven, Leeds. Off. as. Young, Sol. Payne and Co. Leeds. Petition, Feb. 22.

NORTH, GEORGE, coal dealer, Chesterfield, March 12 and April 16, at twelve, Leeds. Off. as. Freeman. Sols. Messrs. Palmer, Bedford-row, and Busby, Chesterfield. Petition, Feb. 15.

PLUMMER, EDMUND, butcher, Diss, Norfolk, March 11, at half-past one, April 15, at one, Basinghall street. Off. as. Whitmore. Sols. White and Borrett, Whitehall-place; and Messrs. Hazard, Harleston, Norfolk. Petition, Feb. 19.

PRICE, WILLIAM, eating-house keeper, Bucklersbury, Cheapside, March 15, at half-past twelve, April 13, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Stansfeld. Sol. Thompson, Bucklersbury. Petition, Feb. 25.

TAYLOR, JOHN, brewer, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, March 10, at half-past twelve, April 13, at one, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. as. Wakley. Sols. Crosby and Compton, Church-court, Old Jewry; and Hoyle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Petition, Feb. 23.

Gazette, March 4.

CAVALIER, ANTHONY WILLIAM JOHN, sugar refiner, Attercliffe, near Sheffield, York, March 19 and April 30, at twelve, Sheffield. Com. West. Off. as. Freeman. Sol. Broadbent, Sheffield. Petition, Feb. 23.

DEAN, JAMES STEPHEN, Leather seller and coal shipper, Chelmsford, Essex, March 15 and April 14 at one, Basinghall-street. Com. Evans. Off. as. Johnson. Sols. Messrs. Hilleary, Fenchurch-street. Petition, March 2.

MILSTED, ALBERT, furrier and hatter, Swansea and Cardiff, Glamorgan, March 12 and April 15, at two, Basinghall-street. Com. Fane. Off. as. Whitmore. Sol. Lawrence, 12, Bread-street, Cheapside. Petition, Feb. 28.

ROEBUCK, JONATHAN and ELI, woollen cloth manufacturers, Bank End Mill, Holmfirth, Yorkshire, March 18 and April 15, at eleven, Leeds. Com. West. Off. as. Young. Sols. Jacobs and Son, Huddersfield. Petition, Feb. 23.

ROYSTON, WILLIAM, builder, Manchester, March 17 and April 7, at eleven, Manchester. Off. as. Lee. Sols. Blair and Parry, both of Manchester. Petition, March 3.

SHAW, WILLIAM, bookseller, stationer, toyman, and dealer in musical instruments, music, and fancy articles, High-street, Lincoln, March 22, at one, Basinghall-street. Com. Evans. Off. as. Bell. Sol. Goddard, King-street, Cheapside. Petition, Jan. 3.

SKIDMORE, JOHN, paste-board manufacturer, Sutton, near Macclesfield, Chester, March 14 and April 6, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Pott. Sols. Vickers and Diggles, Manchester. Petition, Feb. 22.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

Gazette, March 1.

VENNALL, HENRY, stonemason, Hastings, Sussex, Feb. 26.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Bailey, C. F. boot and shoe maker, first, 3*s.* Whitmore, Birmingham.—Clare, W. T. ironmonger, first, 2*s.* 6*d.* Freeman, Leeds.—Dawson, J. draper, third, 4*d.* (in addition to 4*s.* 4*d.* previously declared.) Baker, Newcastle.—Evans, Foster, and Langley, East India merchants, sixth, 2½*d.* Cannan, London.—Hall, J. corn factor, first, 1*s.* 6*d.* Baker, Newcastle.—Hatch, J. H. victualler, farmer, second, 2*s.* Groom, London.—Kinnell, G. and W. tailors, second and final, 4*d.* Groom, London.—Mayhew, E. wine merchant, first, 8*d.* Turner, Liverpool.—Pooley, T. pork butcher, second, 4*d.* Cannan, London.—O'Neill, C. metal dealer, first, 4*s.* 1*d.* Christie, Birmingham.—Tetlow, E. dealer in mules, first, 1*s.* 10*d.* Groom, London.

CERTIFICATES.

Apply at the Provisional Assignee's Office, Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, between the hours of eleven and three.

Briggs, Rev. W. T. clerk, 9½*d.*—Cockburn, R. gardner, 12*s.* 9*d.*—Cotter, T. P. master in Her Majesty's Navy, 1*s.* 1½*d.* (making two shillings and three pence.)—Davies, D. upholsterer, 4*s.* 10*d.*—Davies, T. E. mathematical master Royal Military Academy, &c. (making nine shillings and ninepence halfpenny.)—Emmens, P. general labourer, 11½*d.*—Law, J. pensioner and quartermaster-sergeant of the Local Department, 1*s.* 8½*d.*—Maynard, J. J. H. master in R. N. 3*s.* 6*d.* (making twenty shillings.)—Mills, E. T. carpenter and undertaker, 7*s.* 9½*d.* (making seventeen shillings.)—Seabrook, J. commission agent, 2*s.* (making three shillings and threepence.)—Von Hagen, C. baker, 1*s.* 2½*d.* (making three shillings and fourpence.)—Wade, E. T. commander, R. N. on half pay, 7*s.* 0½*d.* (making sixteen shillings and threepence three farthings.)

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, Feb. 22.

Furse, T. boot and shoe maker, Fore-street, Exeter, Feb. 10. Trusts. W. Davy and J. Rew. curriers, both of Exeter. Sol. H. W. Hooper, Exeter.—Wild, W. H. chinaman, Newington-causeway, Feb. 7. Trusts. M. Pratt, putter, Fenton; W. Fairbairns, Crosby-hall chambers, Bishopsgate-street, and P. Lock, Hatton-garden, agents to glass manufacturers. Sols. H. R. Silvester, Great Dover-street, Newington; H. Phillips, size-lane.

Gazette, Feb. 25.

Norton, C. innkeeper, Pontefract, Yorkshire, Feb. 3. Trusts. T. Hick and R. Hick, wine merchants, Leeds, Sols. Curlis and Cudworth, Leeds.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Feb. 22.

Avery, J. C. Wills, G. and Edwards, C. wine and spirit merchants, Bristol, as regards Avery, June 30.—Bowden, G., Parkes, W. H. and Wilde, W. K. linen and woollen drapers, Altrincham, Feb. 10. Debts paid by Bowden and Parkes.—Bradshaw, J. Howarth, R. and Cryer, W. machine and tool makers, Bolton, as regards Bradshaw, Feb. 18. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Burbidge, J. I. and J. T. jun. wine and spirit merchants, Grantham, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Burbidge, jun.—Clarke, J. N. and Major, S. ship stove dealers, Liverpool, Feb. 19. Debts paid by Clarke.—Coates, P. E. and W. attorneys and solicitors, Stanton-court, Dec. 29.—Copestake, W. and Tipper, M. manufacturers of china, Longton, Feb. 16. Debts paid by Tipper.—Freeman, C. Austen, B. S. ironmongers and oil and color men, Aylsham, Feb. 14.—Hallett, J. B. and J. butchers, Bridport, Jan. 22.—Helm, B. and J. stone masons, Sowerby-bridge, and Halifax, Feb. 1.—Isaacs, E. Cowen, I. and Brahant, M. manufacturers of waterproof garments, Feb. 21.—Kerr, C. D. and Burton, T. merchants, Moorgate-street, Dec. 31.—Lang, G. and Coombs. W. W. ironmongers, grocers, and tallow-chandlers, Ilminster, Feb. 17. Debts paid by Coombs.—Potts, R. U. and J. chemists, South Audley-street, Dec. 31.—Quaile, A. and E. fur skin dyers, Russell-street, Bermondsey, as regards A. Quaile, Dec. 22. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Rothwell, J. and Richardson, S. coach and harness maker, Whitby, Feb. 12.—Rowdon, H. M. and Alford, S. S. surgeons, Reyham-street, Camden-town, June 24, 1849.—Sharples, S., Hamer, H. (administrator of S. Hamer, dec.) and Horrocks, W. fine spinners, Little Bolton, as regards Hamer, Feb. 17. Debts paid by Sharples and Horrocks.—Smith, S. B. and Cox, J. electro platers and gilders, Birmingham, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Smith.—Strutt, J. and Ledger, F. conductor and proprietor of the Era newspaper, Catherine-street, Strand, Feb. 21.—Taplin, W. M. and Beck, W. warehousemen and factors, Birmingham, and Hatton-garden, Feb. 16. Debts paid by Taplin, Birmingham, and Beck, London.—Tatham, S. and Taylor, C. cotton spinners and manufacturers, Dick-bridge, near Over Darwen, May 20. Debts paid by Tatham.—Taylor, W. and Mosley, S. K. accountants and general agents, Nottingham, June 4. Debts paid by Mosley.—Thomas, J. and Smith, C. manufacturers of fancy hosiery, Leicester, Feb. 16.

Gazette, Feb. 25.

Burningham, T. and Gregory, J. stick manufacturers, Manchester, Feb. 19.—Cash, S. and J. cotton doublers, Mansfield, Feb. 23.—Chapple, C. P. and Long, T. and J. wine and spirit merchants, Ilminster, Feb. 18. Debts paid by Chapple.—Davison, J. and J. millers, West Hartlepool, Feb. 16. Debts paid by J. Davison.—Frankland, R. and W. jun. tailors and drapers, Feb. 18. Debts paid by R. Frankland.—Guest, J. and W. jewellers, Birmingham, June 30.—Harris, J. D. and R. jun. and Elwood, W. merchants, Mark-lane, Feb. 23. Debts paid by Elwood.—Hartopp, T. and Noon, C. hosiers, Leicester, Feb. 18. Debts paid by Noon.—Haycock, H. and Hamilton, R. Manchester and Bombay, Feb. 12. Debts paid by H. Haycock.—Howson, F. sen. and F. jun. cooks and confectioners, Wimpole-street, St. Mary-le-bone, Feb. 18.—Hurst, T. Stathesham, E. and Hurst, H. engineers and machinists, Quicksdale, Huddersfield, Feb. 19.—Hyam, L. and S. Oxford-street, Dec. 31. Debts paid by S. Hyam.—Matthew, J. E. De Beauvoir Town, and Chambers, J. Trafalgar-place east, Hackney-road, surgeons and apoth. Feb. 16.—Milner, E. and J. cutlery manufacturers, Sheffield, Feb. 23. Debts paid by J. Milner.—Nelson, H. and Utton, C. P. attorneys, solicitors, and commissioners, Noble-street and Gravesend, Feb. 26.—Pearson, J. Castleton, and Pearson, C. Brough, cotton spinners, Feb. 3, 1853.—Powell, T., Bridgewater, J. and Cross, F. wholesale dealers, Wood-street, city, as regards Cross, Dec. 31.—Rigby, E. and Haynes, J. Poland-street.—Rowton, T. jun. and Rowton, W. pianoforte makers, Baker-street.—Thompson, W. and Marsh, J. surgeons and apothecaries, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Aug. 17.—Toy, A. and Stroud, J. T. gas contractors and lamp manufacturers, Leicester-square, and lamp and chandelier manufacturers, Birmingham, Feb. 19. Debts paid by Stroud.—Woolley, C. and Conquest, W. S. wine and spirit merchants, Mark-lane, Feb. 23. Debts paid by Woolley.

THE FOLLOWING NEW PRACTICAL WORKS FOR THE OFFICE ARE JUST ISSUED AT THE LAW TIMES OFFICE.

Now ready,

PART IX. of COX, MACRAE, and HERTSLET'S COUNTY COURT CASES AND APPEALS, together with INSOLVENCY PRACTICE, &c. &c.

This is the authorised and only complete collection of Reports of Cases relating to the County Courts, and it contains every case from the establishment of the Courts. To be continued regularly. Parts I. to VIII. may still be had, price 5s. 6d. each. Part X. is in the press, and will complete the cases to the beginning of 1853.

THE LAW DIGEST, PART XV., for the Half-Year ending December 31. By E. WISE and D. T. EVANS, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. Price 8s. 6d. bds.; 9s. cloth.

This work gives every case wherever reported, during the half-year, arranged so that the practitioner may find in a moment what is the latest law on any subject on which he may be engaged.

THE NEW RULES and ORDERS, the NEW TABLE of FEES, and the NEW RULES relating to the ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS and the EXAMINATION of ARTICLED CLERKS, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, by R. MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 4s. (This may be had also as a Supplement to "Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act," having marginal references to the pages of that work.)

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, with all the Rules, Orders, Costs, Decisions, &c. to this time, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, the Orders being placed with the Sections of the Statute to which they relate. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 8s. 6d. cloth.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS, with the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, and Notes of all the Cases decided on its construction. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of 1849, containing all those ever required in Practice, omitting the Repealed and the Scotch, Irish, Colonial, and Sessional Statutes, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction; thus presenting the whole Law as it is, in a compact form for ready use, and with a copious Index By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. (This is in continuation of the Practical Statutes of 1850, 1851, and 1852, which may still be had.)

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part II. of Vol. VI. with a copious collection of Precedents of Indictments. This part contains Forms of Indictments at Quarter Sessions under the New Law. By J. E. DAVIES, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 5s. 6d.

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanac, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax, and the other Information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 1s.; or stamped for post, 1s. 2d. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanacs and Time of the Moon's Rising and setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 6d.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, containing all the New Rules and Orders, the New Table of Fees, and Cases decided to the end of Michaelmas Term. Price 14s. 6d. cloth.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"STUDENS" inquires if the writ of pone in the courts of Durham is abolished? We believe it is. If not, will any practitioners there so inform our correspondent.

Ignoramus" is bound by his own laches. His best remedy will be to call in his money, if the mortgagor will not supply the required information.

"ONE, &c." (Wigan).—His letter contains facts of which we shall make good use hereafter.

"R. D." questions are not of practice but of law.

"W. A."—Thanks for the hints.

"J. M." (Wimborne).—Next week.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications. Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, MARCH 12, 1853.

HURRAH!

ANOTHER victory! In an unusually full House, the representatives of the people, they whose peculiar duty it is to regulate taxation, have again, by a majority of fifty-two, declared their opinion that the Attorneys' Tax is unjust and ought to be forthwith abolished.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER opposed the motion of Lord ROBERT GROSVENOR; but all the strength of the strongest Government we have had for many years was unable to resist the claim of the Attorneys for justice.

Surely even Mr. GLADSTONE, with all his persistency of temper, will not venture longer to refuse concession to the majority which has been so often affirmed and by two Parliaments. The Times, that unrelenting foe of the Attorneys, in a mighty wrath, tries to encourage the Government to close its ears to the resolutions of the House by intimating that Honourable Members voted not freely, but from fear or favour. What a libel upon them to assert that they could be so influenced to act against their sense of public duty! What an opinion must the Times entertain of the honesty and patriotism of the House of Commons!

But we must not rely too much upon the victory we have won. It is manifest, from the tone of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER'S speech and the language of the ministerial organ, that the repeal of this tax will be resisted by the Government, in defiance of any number of hostile votes of the House of Commons. As it will not be conceded, it must be wrenched from the reluctant grasp of Mr. GLADSTONE. The bill will be opposed at every stage, and the Attorneys must be vigilant, and keep their friends on the watch, or they will be defeated by some manœuvre in Committee.

Thanks, a thousand times, to those who have so manfully voted for justice even to the abused Attorneys, many of them against the persuasions of the Government they support. Thanks to Lord ROBERT GROSVENOR for his successful exertions on behalf of the Profession. Thanks to Sir FREDERICK THESIGER for his generous and able speech on behalf of those whom he does not, like so many others, forget in the high position he has won!

Again, we say to all our readers, be wakeful, watchful, resolute; the battle is to be fought again, perhaps, many times—though the victory we have won will vastly inspirit our friends and depress our opponents.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

MR. COLLIER'S motion for a committee, prefaced by a very able speech, has produced the desired effect. The Ecclesiastical Courts, with all their abuses and absurdities, were doomed to speedy extinction amid the almost unanimous applause of the House of Commons. One voice only was raised in their defence, and that was of one whose duty it was to struggle to the last for an institution that had been so liberal a benefactor to his family. But even he was compelled to admit the manifold abuses, to promise large reforms by those who have hitherto pertinaciously resisted all reform; and he ventured only to pray that a new lease of life might be given to them on condition of amendment. The Solicitor-General was emphatic in his condemnation, and manifestly sincere in his promises that, with or without the report of the Commissioners, the Ecclesiastical Courts should be deprived of their testamentary jurisdiction. The Attorney-General appeared to be less large in his views of the extent of reform required. But Mr. COLLIER stuck to his text, and insisted upon the use of the knife, and the House manifestly echoed his demand.

Nevertheless, we shall not feel that this great reform is safe until it is positively secured by Act of Parliament. These Courts have been so long denounced—so often threatened; so many attempts have been made even by powerful Governments to reform them, and they have succeeded so many times in evading attacks upon them,—that it is impossible to try the chances of their existence by the ordinary calculations of probabilities. In almost any other case, such a scene as was presented by the House of Commons last week—a powerful Government calling them a disgrace to a civilised country, all parties uniting in condemnation, a solitary voice heard in support, but admitting so much that the help was more damaging than hostility—would have been taken as an assurance that an institution so repudiated could not survive the year. But these strange courts have outlived many assaults scarcely less formidable, and they will succeed in evading this if the utmost vigilance is not exercised by their opponents.

They will fight now with new tactics. Hitherto the game has been that of passive resistance in public, and the backstairs influence of powerful interests in private. The new strategy will be to endeavour to avoid destruction by voluntary proposals of reform. "Let us live," they will say, "and see how good we will be in future. We will give you a procedure as cheap, speedy, and efficient, as the public can desire." This will be a plausible argument, and will impose upon many; but it will not satisfy the demands of justice, of reason, and of policy. The testamentary jurisdiction is an anomaly. Spiritual Courts should have no control over anything temporal. Their business is strictly limited to the affairs of the Church: to them they should be confined: and the ordinary tribunals should have the care of wills and administrations as well as of conveyances and trusts. Even the Admiralty Court should be converted into a civil tribunal.

These are the points on which Law Improvers should insist. They must accept no conditions short of the entire transfer of the jurisdiction in wills and administration to the Civil Courts. This conceded, it will be a matter for subsequent arrangement which should have them. Mr. COLLIER proposed to make the County Courts the tribunal for proof of wills and granting of administrations, with a jurisdiction over disputed wills when the property is below a certain value. Others propose to give it to the Common Law Courts, now scarcely half employed, and others prefer the Equity Courts, which are already over-burdened. But we entreat those who hold various opinions on this point not to let their differences as to the place of transfer to give an advantage to those who are for keeping them as they are, and who will eagerly grasp at any straws of this sort that may be floating about to snatch the Courts from the destruction that menaces them.

To the Profession this is a question of incalculable importance. The throwing open to them of so vast an amount of business properly belonging to them, but from which they are now excluded by a monopoly, will be a boon for which they cannot make too strenuous an effort.

REGISTRATION OF DEEDS.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR'S Bill is before us. It does not differ substantially from that which formerly passed the House of Lords. The original, or a copy, is to be deposited. The same objections we offered to the former measure are equally applicable to this one. It will, by the admission of Lord CRANWORTH himself, increase the cost of small conveyances. It seems to be forgotten by its promoters that nine-tenths of all the conveyances are small ones, and that it is not equitable to make them more costly for the benefit of the few large transactions.

The Lawyers have been commonly accused of being hostile to Registration from a fear that it will diminish their profits. It will do no such thing. At least, for many years to come it will largely increase them, for they must continue to investigate titles for the next sixty years precisely as now they do, with the added costs of making a copy for the register and registering.

We fear, however, that objection now will be of no avail. Unfortunately the Lords are already committed to the measure, and in the Commons there is not an opposition.

Nevertheless there should be petitions against it from all quarters. At least, it should not be permitted to become law without an emphatic protest from those who are most competent to express an opinion upon its practical consequences.

A CURE FOR BRIBERY.

THE Election Committees are doing their duty, and corruption is suffering exposure and punishment.

The public has been startled by its universality and extent. Almost every petition has succeeded. It is probable that if every member in the House had been petitioned against, not a third of the whole would have preserved their seats.

The question now occupying every mind is, how it is to be prevented in future.

An inquiry by a commission into every convicted borough, with a view to its disfranchisement, is the remedy suggested; but how will it be possible to disfranchise twenty of our great towns—as Cambridge, Hull, and Chatham? Besides, it would be extremely unjust to all the honest electors in those boroughs to be deprived of their franchise because a few bad fellows have taken bribes.

There is a better remedy than this, which we submit to the consideration of Legislators desirous of applying some remedy to so frightful an evil.

We propose, then, that in all election inquiries, whether of committees or by commissioners, a witness should be deprived of the privilege he now has not to answer criminatory questions, protecting that answer against any use being made of it in any other proceeding except perjury. Then, inasmuch as the bribed men in every borough are always known, although the fact cannot always be proved, they could be called and compelled to answer questions as to moneys paid or promised.

When an Election Committee has reported that more than two cases of bribery were proved before them, let the Commission of Inquiry issue under the statute of last year, but as a matter of course. Let that commission go to the borough and sift every alleged case of bribery on both sides, examining the voters alleged to have been bribed. Let the names of all who shall have been proved to the satisfaction of the commission to have taken bribes be reported to the House of Commons; let that report operate as a disfranchisement for life of all persons so reported. To prevent any injustice being done, allow to the persons so reported an appeal against the decision to some inexpensive tribunal—say to a County Court judge, with a jury not taken from the borough, so as to secure impartiality.

This would operate more fairly than local disfranchisement. It would only punish the guilty, and thus in time it would weed the constituencies, for, be it observed, all parties have an equal desire to be rid of bribable men, so that there would be no difficulty in procuring their exposure.

Lord BROUGHAM proposes a solemn declaration by the member, on taking his seat, that he has spent nothing but the legal expenses, naming them, and does not intend to do so, and does not believe that any person has done or will do so on his behalf. But this would be evaded by clubs and other means. It would exclude the honest and admit the unscrupulous.

If you disfranchise a whole constituency, there is no shame in any single voter, for the most honest shares it with him. But a disfranchisement of individuals by name would be felt as a severe stigma, and would deter all but the most abandoned.

ASSURANCE OFFICES.

At length the Government has consented to a Select Committee to inquire into the present state of the law with respect to Assurance Offices.

The investigation will exhibit some of the most gigantic frauds of modern times. What sort of a revelation might be made will appear from a remarkable history of some of the recent projects, which we have in type, and will lay before our readers next week.

The remedies are obvious. First, it should be required, as a preliminary to commencement of business, that a certain amount of capital should be paid up, sufficient, at least, to insure the bona fides of the shareholders; secondly, there should be official auditors, appointed by the Government, but paid by the offices.

These would suffice to put an end to the fearful swindles now concocted almost every week in the form of new Assurance Offices.

HINTS TO BUSY PRACTITIONERS.

[Under this title we propose from time to time to remind the practitioner of useful facts which, amid the claims of business and the flood of changes in the law, he may possibly have overlooked. As we also may overlook many, we shall be obliged by "hints" from any of our readers.]

VENUE.

THE New Rule of Court (No. 18) provides that no venue shall be changed without a special order of the Court or a Judge. The effect of this rule is only, it would appear, to do away with the old rule, which was obtained as of course.

A defendant wishing to change the venue now does so by a summons at chambers, PLATT, B. having a few days ago made an order on the common affidavit. This should be noted in the Supplement to KERR's Common Law Procedure Act, p. 6.

HINTS TO LAW REFORMERS.

(From a Correspondent.)

ALLOW me to suggest to Law Reformers the advisability of doing away with the necessity in ejectment of the freeholder proving the surrender or satisfaction of terms of years, or, at all events, of throwing the onus of proving their existence on the defendant. Cases have come within my own experience where very considerable expense has been occasioned to a remainderman of the freehold seeking to recover property in ejectment from a mere disseisor who had disseised the tenants for life. There were three terms of years created by a will, and of course he had to prove their satisfaction (under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112). The [illegible] entailed on him a most serious expense; and as defendant was insolvent, plaintiff had to bear it himself.

Such an enactment would enable the true owner to more easily recover his property, and would injure no one. The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, which was intended (practically) to have this operation, is worse than useless.

Could not such a provision be inserted in the bill now about to be presented in Parliament?

NEW PRACTICE IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

Continued from page 216.

OF MATTERS TO BE PROVED.

THE replication having put the cause at issue, the plaintiff and defendant must then consider what is necessary to prove the case each respectively sets up, and how such proof is to be made. It will, however, be unnecessary for either party to prove what is admitted by the other.

OF ADMISSIONS.

Admissions are divided into two classes. 1. Those upon the record. 2. Those by agreement between the parties.

The first class of admissions may be subdivided into two different kinds. 1. Constructive admissions on the record, as when a plea is put in to the whole or part of a bill, the bill, or such part of it as is not controverted by the plea, is admitted to be true.

So distinct allegations in the bill, but not such as are put forward hypothetically by way of pretence, are admissions by the plaintiff in favour of the defendant which he cannot afterwards dispute.

2. Actual admissions on the record, as when a defendant admits a statement in a bill as to which he is interrogated. The admissions, however, must be explicit and unqualified. (Cox v. Allingham, Jac. 337.) Thus if a defendant admits a deed stated by the plaintiff, but refers to it for greater certainty, he may compel the plaintiff to read it: (Ib. 337.)

The plaintiff may read any part of the answer of a defendant (not being an infant) against him, although by his replication he denies the truth of it; but any passages in the answer qualifying such part must be read with it, the rule being "that when a plaintiff chooses to read a passage from a defendant's answer, he reads all the circumstances stated in the passage. If the passage so read contains a reference to any other passage, that other passage must be read also" (Bartlett v. Gillard, 3 Russ. 157; Lady Ormond v. Hutchinson, 13 Ves. 47, 53; 16 Ves. 94); but the plaintiff may read evidence against such passage: (Price v. Lytton, 3 Russ. 206.)

Although the Court does not consider the statement in an answer that a defendant has been informed of a certain fact, to be a sufficient admission, yet if he says he has been "informed and believes," that will be sufficient: (Potter v. Potter, 1 Ves. 274.) So if he says he "believes" anything to be true, he will be considered to have admitted it, except in the case of an heir-at-law stating his belief as to the execution of a will, in which case, as it appears not to be considered a direct admission, proof of its execution will be required: (Potter v. Potter.)

An infant's answer may be read against his guardian (Beasley v. Magrath, 2 S. & L. 34), although it cannot be read against himself (Wrottesley v. Bendish, 3 P. Wms. 236), except upon a rehearing after he attains his majority, and neither amends his former or puts in a new answer: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 807.)

A lunatic's answer, put in by his committee, may be read against him. (Loring v. Caverly, Prec. Ch. 229.)

In general, the answer of one defendant cannot be read by the plaintiff as evidence against another (Jones v. Turberville, 2 Ves. Jun. 11), except where the answer of the other defendant refers to it, so as, in fact, to make it his own (Anon. 1 P. Wms. 301); or in the case of the answers to an interpleader (Clarret v. Jones, 6 Mad. 268); or the answers of parties or persons jointly liable: (Crosse v. Bedingfield, 12 Sim. 35.)

After a replication the defendant cannot read his own answer as evidence for himself, except on a question of costs (Vancouver v. Bliss, 11 Ves. 458; Howell v. George, 1 Mad. 1; Dawson v. Ellis, 1 J. & W. 524); but the Court may from the answer determine whether any further investigation of any particular facts is to take place: (Miller v. Gore, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 59.)

It has long been established as a general rule that where a defendant in express terms negatives the allegations in the bill, and the evidence of one person only affirms what has been so negatived, there the Court will neither make a decree, nor send it to a trial at law: (Pember v. Mathers, 1 Bro. C. C. 52; Dan. Ch. Pr. 808.) It is probable, since the Legislature has conferred power upon the Court of orally examining the parties (which will be hereafter noticed), that in future in such cases an oral examination might lead to some result. It must, however, be remembered that there is an exception to the rule when the case of the plaintiff is fortified by circumstances corroborating the evidence of his single witness, in which case the Court would either make a decree, or direct an issue: (Pember v. Mathers, 1 Bro. C. C. 52; Hine v. Dodd, 2 Atk. 275.)

2. AS TO ADMISSIONS BETWEEN THE PARTIES.

In order to save expense the parties often agree upon admissions, which are generally but not necessarily in writing, and if so, are signed either by the parties or their solicitors: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 811.)

ON WHOM THE ONUS PROBANDI LIES.

Whatever is material to the matters in issue, and which is not admitted by either of the two modes already pointed out, must be proved by evidence. The onus probandi rests upon the person asserting the affirmative (Eyre v. Dolphin, 2 Ball & B. 303; Field v. Sowle, 4 Russ. 112); and where there is a legal presumption in favour of one party the other party must disprove it: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 813.)

EVIDENCE RESTRICTED TO MATTERS IN ISSUE.

It must however be remembered that, in order to prevent injustice which might result to either party from being taken by surprise, neither can the plaintiff adduce evidence to prove what is not alleged in his bill; nor can the defendant do so, to prove what is not put forward as his case or defence in his answer: (Dan. Ch. Pr. 814.)

Under general allegations, however, evidence of particular facts may be given (Sidney v. Sidney, 3 P. Wms. 269; Clarke v. Periam, 2 Atk. 333; and see Wheeler v. Trotter, 3 Swanst. 174 n.); and it is not requisite that the materials by which facts are to be proved should be put in issue; (Blacker v. Phepoe, 1 Moll. 355.).

VARIANCE BETWEEN STATEMENTS AND PROOFS.

It may be stated as a general rule, that the case established by the evidence must be, in effect, the same as the case stated in the record, otherwise a party might be taken by surprise, in consequence of a case being proved against him which he did not know would be set up, and therefore did not prepare to meet. "I know of no case," says Lord Redesdale, "which allows an amendment in order to enable the party to make a new case. I have known, in a case where the answer stated a qualified agreement, the plaintiff to have amended his bill, and accepted the agreement as stated by the defendant, and brought his cause to a hearing, desiring performance of it; but here the plaintiff has brought his cause to a hearing, attempting to controvert the agreement as stated in the answer, and, failing in that attempt, now desires to amend his bill and seek performance of that agreement. This, I think, would be mischievous:" (Denison v. Little, 2 S. & L. 11, n.; and see Lindsay v. Lynch, 2 S. & L. 1; Daniels v. Davison, 16 Ves. 249; London and Birmingham Railway Company v. Winter, Cr. & Ph. 62.)

MODE OF TAKING EVIDENCE.

Without considering here the nature of documentary evidence, whether it be of that kind which either does or does not prove itself, or as to the competency of witnesses (as to which the reader is referred to the fourth edition of Starkie on the Law of Evidence), it is now proposed to consider a branch of Chancery Procedure which recent legislation has greatly improved, viz., the mode of taking evidence in the Courts of Equity.

First, however, in order to show the improvement which has been effected, it will be necessary to detail the ordinary mode of taking evidence under the old system. After replication, when the cause was at issue, the papers were laid before the respective counsel of the parties to advise as to the evidence, and, if necessary, to prepare interrogatories for the examination of witnesses. The evidence was taken by written interrogatories, upon which the witnesses were examined in private, none of the parties or their agents being present. The examination was conducted in London by the Examiner, a permanent officer of the Court, and in the country by a Commissioner specially appointed for that purpose. The interrogatories being framed beforehand by counsel, without its being certain what witnesses would be forthcoming, or what answer a witness would give to any particular question, were framed to meet the contingencies which were likely to occur and were deemed necessary to be provided against. Several witnesses were frequently produced to prove the same facts, or to prove facts leading to the material conclusion, from the uncertainty whether one witness (who, if examined orally and publicly, would have been found sufficient) has in his deposition given sufficient evidence of the necessary facts. The Examiner or Commissioner took down and recorded the answers of the witnesses to the written interrogatories, and were under the obligation of an oath not to disclose the evidence taken. The theory of the Court was that the witnesses were subject to cross-examination; but the cross-examination by written interrogatories of witnesses, whose examination-in-chief was not known, was so ineffective and dangerous that it was seldom resorted to, except where the witness was known to be friendly to the cross-examining party, and had previously communicated facts to be the subject of such cross-examination. If the witnesses were examined in the country, a special commission issued for the purpose to a Commissioner, at considerable expense. A day was appointed for opening the commission, generally at an inn. Besides the Commissioner, there was a clerk, who was sworn to secrecy. The Commissioner was furnished with the interrogatories and the cross-interrogatories of the parties; and each witness was sent in with a note specifying the interrogatories which were to be administered to him. The Commissioner put the interrogatory to the witness, often, if not generally, being obliged to translate it into less technical language more intelligible to the witness, whose answers were taken down and fair-copied by the clerk. The process was very slow; the solicitors and witnesses were in attendance during the execution of the commission, which often lasted several days, and not unfrequently weeks, the Commissioner and his clerk being entitled to daily fees, and heavy expenses being incurred by the attendance of the solicitors and witnesses. The depositions, being completed, were sealed up by the Commissioner, and returned to the Office of Records, either by himself, or by some messenger on oath.

A day was fixed for what was called the publication of the evidence; the parties then, for the first time, got copies of the depositions, for which copies fees were, of course, charged. After publication no further evidence could be adduced without special leave of the Court.

The depositions were copied on brief paper, and, with the pleadings and copies of the documentary evidence, formed the brief for the hearing: for which the cause might then be considered ripe. Sometimes, however, the parties moved to suppress the depositions, by reason of the interrogatories being leading or otherwise objectionable, or by reason of some irregularity in the mode of taking or returning the depositions. Sometimes it was discovered that, through an accidental slip, either of the solicitor or counsel, or of the Commissioner, some material piece of evidence had been omitted, and it was necessary to make special application to the Court to supply the omission by a further examination, conducted in the same way: (Chan. Com. Rep. 8.) In the next number we shall give the mode of taking evidence under the new system.

THE LEGISLATOR.

THE REGISTRATION OF ASSURANCES BILL.

SECT. 1. A land register office to be established, and proper buildings to be provided therefore by Treasury.

2. The Queen may appoint registrars and assistant-registrars.

3. The Lord Chancellor to appoint clerks and subordinate officers.

4. How registrar and assistant-registrar shall be qualified, and oath to be taken by them. (a)

5. Registrar, assistant-registrar, and such other officers as Treasury think proper, to give security.

6. Registrar, with other persons appointed by her Majesty, to divide England into districts.

7. Commencement of registration.

8. Assurances of land in England executed after commencement of registration may be registered by depositing original or a copy and making the proper entries.

9. An index of titles to be kept, and assurances to be indexed therein under heads designated by numbers.

10. An index of the names of grantors to be kept.

11. Reference to entries may be made of appointments of new trustees, &c. in index to testators and intestates, instead of the index to the names of grantors.

12. Decrees in equity creating, declaring, &c. interests in land, and also decrees in equity by which any such decree is varied or reversed, to be considered assurances.

13. All private Acts of Parliament affecting lands to be assurances.

14. Where by a public Act lands are vested upon payment of money, &c. a memorandum of such payment or other act may be registered, and evidence of the payment deposited with it.

15, 16. Equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds, and liens by reason of nonpayment of purchase-money, may be registered by depositing a memorandum.

17. Assurances to be considered to have been made by the person whose right, &c. in the lands shall be bound by the decree, &c.

18. As to the registration of wills.

19. Letters of administration or affidavit of intestacy may be registered.

20. An "Index to Testators and Intestates" to be kept for all England; and where a will, &c. is registered, an entry of testator's or intestate's name to be made in such index, and also an entry of the will, &c.

21. Copies deposited for registration may be copies made or examined in the register office, or copies furnished by the parties requiring registration.

22. Provision for registration in the case of assurances lost or destroyed.

23. Any person claiming under an assurance may compel the registration thereof, by application to a judge.

24. Judge may make order as to costs, and order an office copy to be furnished at the expense of the applicant.

25. Application may be made to the court against the order of judge, or upon his refusal to make an order.

26. Where order or rule for delivery of any document to be registered is not complied with, the order or rule may be registered in lieu thereof.

27. Petitions for adjudication of bankruptcy, and for commissions of bankrupt, and appointment of assignees in bankruptcy, in England and Ireland; and acts and warrants of confirmation in Scotland, may be registered.

28. Vesting orders and appointments, &c. of assignees in insolvency may be registered by deposit of a copy or certificate, and making the proper entry.

29. An "Index to Bankrupts and Insolvents" to be kept.

30. Assurances authorised to be registered to be void as against purchasers if not registered.

31. Estate or interest arising upon Act, upon payment of money, &c., equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds, and lien for purchase money, to be void as against purchasers, unless memorandum registered.

32. Assurance merging any interest not to have such effect as against subsequent purchaser of such interest, unless entry be made to lead such purchaser to the assurance. (a)

33. If assurance duly entered as to part only of the lands, it shall be deemed duly registered as to such part only.

34. Unregistered will to be void against purchaser from persons entitled under a registered will, or to default of a will where letters of administration or affidavit of intestacy registered.

35. Court of Chancery may order registration of affidavit of a will to be cancelled.

36. Purchasers protected against bankruptcy and insolvency, unless appointment of assignees, &c., be registered.

37. Protection of purchasers against subsequent adjudication in bankruptcy where the petition is not registered.

38. The priority given by the foregoing provisions to be enforced in equity, notwithstanding notice.

39. Notice or uses or trusts not manifested by a registered assurance, and uses or trusts declared by reference to an unregistered assurance, not to affect purchaser for valuable consideration.

40. Inhibition against alienation may be entered by persons interested under uses or trusts affecting estates vested under a registered assurance.

41. Inhibition to be entered in index of titles.

42. Provision for cancelling inhibition.

43. Power to Court of Chancery to restrain registrar from cancelling inhibition.

44. Persons claiming under assurances made while inhibition is on the register, to be affected by and take subject to the uses and trusts not shown by a registered assurance.

45. Power for any person to enter a caveat.

46. How caveat shall be entered.

47. Extent of protection to be afforded by caveats.

48. Entries to be made immediately on receipt of documents, and time of receipt to be marked.

49. The protection of the Act to extend to persons who claim under purchasers.*

50. Priority or protection by legal estate and taking, not to be allowed.*

51. Certificate of registration may be delivered out, and may be deposited by way of equitable mortgage.*

52. Registration substituted for enrolment under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, as respects land in England.

53. A seal to be made and kept, and the impressions thereof to be taken judicial notice of.

54. Duplicate originals of deposited documents may be compared at the office, and certified, and every document so certified shall be received as evidence that another part of the same assurance has been deposited.

55. Copies of and extracts from deposited instruments to be provided on application, and to be certified; and the seal of the office, with a certificate, to be evidence of such copies and extracts.

56. In cases where there are duplicates of a registered assurance, one duplicate to be exempted from stamp duty, provided the other is duly stamped; but the exemption not to apply to duplicates of leases where either part is executed by lessee.

57. Memorials, office copies, extracts, and certificates, requisitions, &c. to be exempt from stamp duty.

58. No documents deposited at the register office to be removed except on legal process.

59. Any will deposited at register office may be removed for the purpose of being proved, &c., but after being proved, &c. must be returned.

60. Searches of indexes to be permitted, and inspections of deposited instruments allowed; such searches to be made on requisition, and certificates given.

61. The duty of an attorney, &c. to be deemed fulfilled if he have caused an office search to be made; attorneys, &c. indemnified in relying on the accuracy of certificates.

62. Registrar may order that documents to be deposited shall be written boustrophedon, or otherwise, &c.; additional payment on persons sending documents to be deposited which shall not be conformable with such order.

63. Registrar may require statements for regulating the entries to be sent with assurances.

64. Officers of the register office not to be held responsible for omissions or mistakes occasioned by defects in the statement.

65. Errors in entries may be corrected by registrar.

66. Registrar, with approval of Lord Chancellor, Master of the Rolls, and two common law judges, may make regulations.

67. Registrar to report to Lord Chancellor, and reports to be laid before Parliament.

68. Fees under this Act to be fixed by Treasury.

69. Salaries may be assigned to the registrar and other officers of the register office.

70. Expenses of the register office to be allowed out of the Consolidated Fund.

71. Moneys received by the office may be applied in payment of the expenses of the same.

72. Subject to the last power, all moneys received by the office to be paid by the Consolidated Fund.

73. Audit of accounts of the office.

74. Repealing local Register Acts.

75. Bargains and sales not to be enrolled in local offices after commencement of registration under this Act, and no assurance to be registered in local offices after time appointed by Lord Chancellor.

76. Lord Chancellor, &c. to appoint time for closing local register offices.

77. Vacancies in office of register for local offices in Yorkshire not to be filled up, and offices of registers for Middlesex to cease.

78. Treasury to fill up vacancies in local register offices.

79. As to the custody of documents in local register offices.

80. Copies of assurances to be made after closing of offices by persons nominated by Treasury to fill vacancies in local register offices to be good evidence.

81. Compensation to officers of local register offices.

82. Instruments required to be registered in the local register offices may be registered in the register office established under this Act.

83. Saving as to Crown lands.

84. Copyhold lands not to be affected.

85. Leases, &c. for not more than twenty-one years not to be affected where possession goes along with such leases, &c. Proviso, where actual possession does not go along with such lease, &c.

86. Inclosure awards not to be affected.

87. Shares in companies not to be affected.

88. Adventurers' lands within the Bedford Level not to be affected.

89. None of the exceptions to affect the provision to prevent protection by legal estates or tacking.

90. Before whom affidavits to be sworn.

91. False swearing to be punished as perjury.

92. Punishment for forging signatures or counterfeiting impressions of seal of register office.

93. Actions for damages to be brought against the registrar, and if final judgment recovered damages to be paid out of Consolidated Fund. Notice to be given to Attorney-General; registrar not personally liable.

94. As to costs if judgment be given for defendant, &c.

95. Provision for case of a writ of error.

96. Registrar may compromise action.

97. Limitations of actions brought against the registrar.

98. Actions not to abate by death of the registrar, &c.

99. Lord Chancellor may transfer registry of judgments, &c., to Land register office.

100. Treasury may alter fees; and fees to be accounted for and applied as other fees received by registrar.

101. Compensation to senior Master of Common Pleas.

102. Interpretation of terms.

(a) Attorneys and solicitors, who were included by Lord Truro in the qualification for office, are retained in the present bill.

(a) The clauses marked thus * are transferred from other parts of the former bill.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

COUNTY COURTS.

TUESDAY, March 8.—Lord BROUGHAM presented a petition from the merchants, tradesmen, and inhabitants of Margate, in the county of Kent, who complained of the expenses and vexatious delays occasioned to them in their trade by the present state of the administration of the bankruptcy law; and of the great distance they were obliged to come for the purpose of resorting to the bankruptcy courts. The distance they had to travel was sometimes 70, 80, or even 90 miles, and they prayed that their lordships would give their assent to a bill which was now before their lordships for vesting in the County Courts jurisdiction in bankruptcy. He had another petition, most numerously signed by the inhabitants of the great town of Brighton, to the same effect. The noble and learned lord having laid the petitions on the table, said that it was impossible for him to present these petitions for the purpose of extending the jurisdiction of the County Courts without calling the attention of their lordships, and once more entreating that of his noble friends of Her Majesty's Government, to the immense importance of the system of local judicature. He would only mention one circumstance for the purpose of illustrating that which, indeed, no argument were required to prove, but which was itself a proof of the vast importance of that jurisdiction. By the Superior Courts of Westminster-hall, in the course of one year, there were somewhat under 2000 writs issued and sent to be tried in all the circuits for London and Middlesex. More than half of those cases, all of which were tried, and on which verdicts were given and judgments entered up, were for amounts under 50*l.*, which was the extent for which local courts could issue process; consequently more than half of the cases tried by the Superior Courts in that one year in those circuits might have been tried more easily, more expeditiously and infinitely more cheaply in the County Courts. The County Courts had a concurrent jurisdiction to the extent of 50*l.*, and how many causes did those courts try, during the same period of time, where the cause of action was between 20*l.* and 50*l.*? (He would say nothing of the 100,000 cases under 20*l.*) Why, the number of cases which the County Courts tried, where the cause of action was between 20*l.* and 50*l.*, during the same period of time, was 6000. Let him repeat, that while the number of causes tried by the Superior Courts under 50*l.* in a given space of time was under 1000, the number of causes tried by the County Courts was 6000 during the same time and for the same amount. Anything more monstrous than the present state of the law upon this subject he could not conceive. The whole salaries of the judges of the Superior Courts were now most properly and most justly paid, not by the suitors, but out of the Consolidated Fund. It was the bounden duty of Government and of Parliament to provide for the people of the country the whole expense of the administration of justice; but in the County Courts, where that immense mass of business was conducted, to the infinite relief of the suitor, even saddle the law was with the expense of which he (Lord Brougham) complained—in the County Courts, instead of the county paying the expense, the poor suitor paid the expense, and because he was less rich and less capable of enduring the burden, it was therefore, as it would seem, that he was saddled with that expense! This was an anomaly which he trusted he should not long have occasion to press upon the attention of Parliament. No less than 174,000*l.* were exacted from these poor suitors in the County Courts to pay the expenses of administering the law to them; and what made the case more iniquitous was, that after all the expenses of the court had been paid, there was a surplus left, and that surplus went to the consolidated fund.

LAW OF EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE.

THURSDAY, March 10.—Lord BROUGHAM moved the second reading of the Law of Evidence and Procedure Bill. His lordship then proceeded at some length to explain the principles of the Bill; after pointing out with great minuteness the anomalies which at present existed in the law by which the rules of evidence and of procedure were governed, and the various steps taken by the Legislature to remedy them, he described the manner in which this Bill proposed to deal with them.——The LORD CHANCELLOR cordially approved of a considerable portion of the measure, but intimated that he could not give his concurrence to the whole of it.——The bill was then read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

LAW OF PROBATES.

MONDAY, March 8.—Mr. HADFIELD moved for leave to introduce a bill to prevent the necessity of obtaining several probates of the same will, and several grants of administration in respect of the estate and effects of any deceased person; and to make certain amendments in the law of evidence in respect to the proof of wills and of probates and grants of administration. He observed that the bill was exceedingly short, that it made one probate and grant of administration sufficient, and enacted that a probate should be proof of the devise of real estate in the same manner as it was of a personal estate. He could have wished that this should have been included in one general measure; still, the subject was of so pressing and important a nature, that he felt justified in introducing it per se; and he had the sanction of the Solicitor-General for saying that he had no objection to the bringing in of the bill.——Mr. W. BROWN seconded the motion.——Mr. COWAN also supported the measure, and expressed a hope that it would be extended to Scotland. Leave was then given to introduce the bill, and it was afterwards brought up and read a first time.

THE ATTORNEYS' TAX.

THURSDAY, March 10.—Lord R. GROSVENOR moved to bring in a bill to repeal the attorneys' and solicitors' annual certificate duty. He traced its origin and history, and pointed out the injustice of imposing a heavy and oppressive tax on the mental exertions of members of a particular profession. The yearly produce of the tax was 120,000*l.*, and he contended that such an amount ought not to be allowed to stand in the way of an act of national justice.——Mr. COWAN supported the motion, which was one of great importance to his constituents, the tax being paid by 445 persons in Edinburgh, who contributed one-twentieth of the whole produce.——The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER objected to all attempts at considering isolated cases of taxation. He did not regard this duty as unjust; and there were many which had stronger claims for removal. It might be a question whether there should not be an important modification of the high stamp duty on articles of admission, which had, to some extent, the effect of creating a monopoly in the profession. The entire taxation affecting it would deserve consideration when the whole state of the finances was under review; but he protested against dealing with our system of taxation in a bit-by-bit way, or at haphazard.——Sir F. THESIGER denounced the tax as utterly wanting all colour of fairness or justice. The tax on articles of admission to clerkship amounted to 120*l.*, besides 25*l.* more of other charges for the annual certificate tax every London attorney had to pay 12*l.* and every country attorney 8*l.*, a weight of taxation without parallel in any other profession.——After a few words from Mr. J. D. FITZGERALD and Mr. HUME, the House divided, and the motion was carried by a majority of 52, the numbers being 219 to 167.

BRIBERY AT ELECTIONS.

Mr. PHINN gave notice of his intention, on an early day after Easter, to move for leave to bring in a bill giving jurisdiction to County Courts for the recovery of penalties in cases of bribery at elections.

ATTORNEYS' AND SOLICITORS' CERTIFICATE DUTY.

FRIDAY, MARCH 11.—Lord R. GROSVENOR brought up this bill, and amidst considerable laughter and cheers, proposed that it be read a first time. He said it was not his intention to propose the second reading until after the Chancellor of the Exchequer had made his financial statement. After the right hon. gentleman's decided expression of opinion last night, he had no doubt he would take the question into his serious consideration, with the view of remedying the injustice complained of.——The bill was then read a first time, and ordered to be read a second time on Wednesday the 13th April.

THE MAGISTRATE,

AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

A QUESTION as to the jurisdiction of the magistrates of Hertfordshire over an offence committed within the liberty of St. Alban's, within the county, under certain local Acts, was considered and decided in the affirmative in Arnold v. Gaussen, 20 L. T. Rep. 262; but its interest is purely local, and therefore it is not necessary to notice it further here.

Many reports of interesting and important questions decided by the Election Committees were reported last week at pp. 294, 5, 6. It will suffice to direct to them the attention of the reader.

ARNOLD v. GAUSSEN AND ANOTHER.
20 L. T. REP. 292.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—We think some corrections are needful to make the report of this case clear. In the statement of the case two material facts are omitted: first, that the charter of Edw. 4 to the abbot and convent of St. Alban contained a clause prohibiting any other justices than those appointed by the abbot and convent to interfere in matters within the liberty of St. Alban; and, secondly, that the liberty (which comprises several parishes) has a rate in the nature of a county rate, out of which the expenses of the gaol or house of correction at St. Alban's (which is under the visitation and management of the liberty, and not the county, justices) are defrayed. These omissions, however, may be mainly supplied by the arguments of counsel and the judgment.

But several defects are apparent in the judgment:—

1. Instead of the first clause, read—"This case stated the *charter under which power to appoint jus-*tices in the first place was granted to the abbey of St. Alban in the reign of Edw. 4, and the commission under which justices of the peace for the county hold under the Crown, and the commission under which justices of the peace for the liberty also now hold under the Crown, and a great number of other documents," &c.

2. In the clause—"It does not prohibit justices from inquiring, as the charter of King Edw. 4 did, whether the offence was committed within the liberty"—instead of "inquiring" read "interfering," and instead of "whether" read "when."

3. In the clause—"The commission under which the justices of the liberty acted, and which was not set out in the case," &c.—dele the word "not."

4. Towards the close, the court is made to say—"The county magistrates have performed their duty by hearing and deciding; and as soon as a conviction took place they were functus officio;"—instead of "conviction" read "commitment."

We are Sir, yours, &c.

LONGMORE AND SWORDER,
Attorneys for the Defendants.

Hertford, March 9, 1853.

LAW OF BASTARDY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I am sorry my hasty form of expression has misled your correspondent, Mr. Lloyd. Before the passing of 4 & 5 Vict. c. 76, s. 69, unmarried women with child were deemed chargeable and liable to be removed, although not actually chargeable: (35 Geo. 3, c. 101, s. 6.) I referred in my former letter to the abolition of this constructive chargeability by the clause first above cited; and had no idea that my words would bear the construction put upon them by Mr. Lloyd, as referring to chargeability in fact.

I am Sir, yours, &c.

March 7, 1853. W. P. P.

RESIGNATION OF THE CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF POLICE.—For some time it has been rumoured that Sir Richard Mayne intended to resign his office of Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, and several of our police magistrates were spoke of as his successor: but now it is finally understood that Sir Richard will shortly retire on a full pension, and that Mr. Henry, the magistrate at Bow-street Police-court, will succeed him. Captain Hay will still retain his situation as second commissioner, and the only reason of his not being promoted is that a recent Act of Parliament specifies that the chief commissioner must be a barrister-at-law of no less than seven years' standing. The situation of chief commissioner is worth rather more 1500*l.* a year: and from the well-known experience of Mr. Henry as a magistrate of the metropolitan police-courts, there can be no doubt he will equal his predecessor.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER, AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

AN estate was conveyed to trustees in trust, "as and when it should seem to them meet, to sell and dispose of the said hereditaments and premises," and to apply proceeds to purposes which exhausted the entire value. This was held, in Page v. Cooper, 20 L. T. Rep. 287, to authorise a sale only, and not a mortgage. Where A. by will, after giving a life-interest to his son in real estate, enabled the son by any deed on his marriage to settle a sum not exceeding 400*l.* per annum by way of jointure on his wife, and to be in bar of dower, &c., legacy duty was held to be payable on the value of the rent-charge so created. (Sweeting v. Sweeting, 20 L. T. Rep. 288.) A. gave personal estate by will on trust for B. for life, and afterwards to C. for life, and on decease of survivor in trust for such person or persons as should at the decease of B. be entitled thereto as the testator's next of kin." C. survived B., and at B.'s death two persons were next of kin to the testator, and they were held to take as tenants in common: (Horn v. Coleman, 20 L. T. Rep. 290.) Another case, illustrative of the cruelty and injustice of our law towards illegitimate children is that of Re Overhill's Trusts, 20 L. T. Rep. 290. A. bequeathed stock to be equally divided between the children of B, and the children of C., the wife of D. At the date of the will C. was married to D., but for eighteen years previously she had cohabited with him, and had six children by him. The testator did not know that they were illegitimate, and C. had no legitimate children, and was forty-nine years old. Nevertheless, although there was not the slightest doubt as to the intention of the testator, the unfortunate children were deprived of the provision thus made for them. A more cruel and iniquitous state of the law cannot be conceived, and we think that to prevent so palpable a wrong the Courts might relax a little. But why should not the Legislature interfere?

The delicate question as to whether an interest under a will was vested or contingent was determined in King v. Isaacson, 20 L. T. Rep. 291; but it turned on the facts, and decided no principle of law: therefore we do not further notice it here. A similar question was involved in Openheim v. Henry, 20 L. T. Rep. 291. Another point in the latter case, however, deserves noting. The Court would not order the original will of personalty to be produced to contradict the probate.

ENFRANCHISEMENT OF COPYHOLDS.

The following is the eleventh report of the Copyhold Commissioners to Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department:

"Copyhold Commission, Dec. 31, 1852.

"My Lord,—We have the honour of presenting to your Lordship our eleventh report of the progress made under the Copyhold Acts, and the state of the proceedings during the present year. In submitting these results to you, we have to remark that the uncertainty in the public mind during the early part of the year as to whether any compulsory measure would be passed by the Legislature materially retarded voluntary enfranchisement until the Extension Act, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, was actually passed. We append a list of the enfranchisements effected, or which are now in an advanced state, showing a decrease in the number of the cases dealt with as contrasted with the return of the former year. Under this Extension Act, which provides (with certain exceptions) that, after the next admittance to any land which shall take place after the 1st July next, either lord or tenant may compel an enfranchisement, it may be expected that many enfranchisements will be effected. We have to request your Lordship's special attention to the fact that the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, gives to ecclesiastical corporations, sole or aggregate, with the consent of the Church Estates Commissioners, the power to enfranchise any copyhold or customary land held of any manor belonging to any such corporation. The jurisdiction, therefore, of the Church Estates Commission is concurrent with that of the Copyhold Commission in the case of ecclesiastical manors, whilst the application of the money received for enfranchisement by ecclesiastical Lords under the two Acts is different, the Church Estates Commissioners having authority to require that a certain portion of the proceeds of the enfranchisement should be paid to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, to be dealt with by them as part of their common fund, the Copyhold Commissioners possessing no such power. It seems to us desirable that by some legislative provisions these differences should be reconciled. There are other matters connected with the Copyhold Acts and proceedings under them, which, in our opinion, appear to call for the very early interference of Parliament, but which we consider it would be inexpedient prematurely to enter upon.

We have the honour to be, &c.

WM. BLAMIRE.
G. DARBY.
H. C. MILES.

ENFRANCHISEMENTS AND COMMUTATIONS.

Years.	Clerical.	Collegiate.	Lay.	Total.
1841	1	—	—	1
1842	7	2	3	12
1843	13	3	13	29
1844	13	11	15	39
1845	19	25	12	56
1846	24	25	7	56
1847	12	27	13	52
1848	10	7	8	25
1849	13	7	10	30
1850	13	15	9	37
1851	24	9	31	64
1852	17	14	13	44
Total	166	145	134	447

ENFRANCHISEMENTS AND COMMUTATIONS.

Yrs.	No.	Consideration. Payment in full. £ s. d.	Rent Charges. £ s. d.	Land. A. R. P.
1841	1	8 14 0	—	—
1842	12	534 19 0	120 0 0	—
1843	29	4,815 7 2	17 0 0	—
1844	39	9,572 0 0	138 19 5	—
1845	56	10,651 8 4	767 5 6	—
1846	56	18,162 18 6	286 0 0	97 3 6
1847	52	12,158 14 8	474 15 0	—
1848	25	8,091 17 7	56 19 1	—
1849	30	3,329 6 10	174 7 6	—
1850	37	7,580 6 3	88 0 1	798 2 2
1851	64	22,728 4 8	273 18 8	—
1852	14	16,699 17 9	116 12 0	313 1 25
Tot.	445	104,988 9 9	2,479 11 7	1,209 2 33

THE CHURCH ESTATES COMMISSION.

THE following is the second general report from the Church Estates Commissioners:—

"To the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

5, Whitehall-place, March 1, 1853.

"My Lord,—We, the Church Estates Commissioners, have the honour to make our second general report of our proceedings under the Act passed in the session of Parliament held in the fourteenth and fifteenth years of her Majesty's reign, intituled 'An Act to facilitate the Management and Improvement of Episcopal and Capitular Estates in England.'

"The facilities for enfranchisement afforded by the Act, which at the date of our last report were but imperfectly known, have since become more generally understood, and we have during the past year received numerous applications for our sanction to agreements conditionally entered into by ecclesiastical corporations with their lessees. We have already approved the terms agreed on in ninety-seven cases for the sale of reversions, and in eight cases for the purchase of leasehold interests, and in twelve instances we have refused to approve the terms: in seven of the last-mentioned cases, however, the original proposals were subsequently so modified as to meet with our sanction, and they are accordingly included in the number of those above stated to have been approved.

"The value in fee of the leasehold estates enfranchised by these sales and purchases exceeds the sum of 650,000*l.*; and many of the cases afford evidence of the advantage to the public interest, as well as to the lessees and to the resources of the church, resulting from enfranchisement.

"We have reason to expect that the enfranchisement of their estates will be shortly proceeded with by several other ecclesiastical corporations to a considerable extent, and we are confirmed in the opinion expressed in our last report, that the operation of the Act would be to promote a satisfactory settlement of the church leasehold question.

"In conformity with the requirement of the 10th section of the Act, we have annexed hereto a schedule of all applications, specifying in each case the terms proposed, the terms on which the sale or purchase has been effected, or, if refused, the grounds of such refusal.

"The schedule also specifies the like particulars in eleven cases of enfranchisement of copyholds effected under the Act.

"With regard to this latter class of cases, we have found ourselves placed in a position of some difficulty, by reason of the alleged concurrent jurisdiction therein of the Copyhold Commissioners, which, as materially affecting the interest of the church at large, we felt it to be our duty to question, and which now appears to be very doubtful.

"Under the Ecclesiastical Leases Restriction Act of 1836, and subsequent statutes, Parliament has, in cases of leaseholds for lives, restrained ecclesiastical corporations from exchanging the lives, and has also provided that any surplus arising from enfranchisement shall be appropriated to the purposes of the common fund of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. But, under the Copyhold Enfranchisement Act, the existing members of the respective corporations have, in cases of copyholds for lives, been allowed, after exchanging the lives in consideration of fines, and thereby reducing the value of the reversions, to appropriate the whole annual proceeds of the prices of such reversions.

The enfranchisement of ecclesiastical copyholds, as carried on under the authority of the Copyhold Commissioners, was therefore, assuming it to be legal, obviously inconsistent with the principles adopted by the Legislature in regulating enfranchisements by ecclesiastical corporations. Moreover, the leasehold and copyhold properties of ecclesiastical corporations are frequently much intermixed, forming together an estate held by one lessee; and the separate enfranchisement of these several portions of the same estate must necessarily be attended with inconvenience.

"Having reference to the recently-published report of the Copyhold Commissioners, in which, after noticing some of the difficulties above mentioned, an opinion is expressed that there are matters connected with the Copyhold Enfranchisement Acts which require the very early interference of Parliament, we beg leave to suggest that ecclesiastical copyholds should be subject to such restrictions, and be dealt with upon such principles, as will place Ecclesiastical Corporations in the same position with respect to all portions of their property.

"We have the honour to be, my lord, your lordship's most obedient servants,

"CHICHESTER, JOHN G. SHAW LEFEVRE, HENRY GOULBURN."

SALES BY SOLICITORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—One of your correspondents, in a recent number, suggested that solicitors should be allowed to conduct sales by auction of real property for their clients, instead of being obliged to employ auctioneers, and in lieu of taking off the certificate duty. I think this a very excellent proposition, and remember hearing it well spoken of thirty years ago, when I was a clerk. Still, however, I do not perceive that it would be any material advantage to those practitioners who are in limited practice. The boon would be to the flourishing firms who have plenty of conveyancing business, by whom the certificate duty is not felt, and to their clients. For the sake of these (the clients) I would advocate the suggestion with all my heart.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

March 4, 1853. L. E. X.

SALES BY SOLICITORS.

THE following letter, stating the reasons for this proposition, were submitted to the Members of the Kent Law Society some time since:—

"SIR,—I consider the subject contained in my notice for discussion at our next Annual Meeting so novel in its character, and so important to others, as well as to ourselves, and may so materially affect the interests of another class of professional gentlemen, that I am anxious to state the principal grounds upon which I have felt justified in submitting it to the consideration of the Profession, in order that the subject may be well digested before the time of meeting.

"1. There is a very strong feeling at the present day in favour of facilitating and cheapening the transfer of real property, and for that purpose the lawyers are to be sacrificed, if necessary, and therefore it behoves them to look to themselves.

"2. The lessening of expenses(a) at present attending a sale by auction, and thereby removing the greatest obstacle to offering property to public competition, and facilitating and cheapening the transfer of property more than can be done by any act of the Legislature.

"3. That all the work, saving the act of sending the advertisements to the printer, and asking the gentlemen assembled in the auction room for a bidding, is now, or may be better done by the lawyer—that such acts are a link in the chain of his professional business, and that there can be no reason (except a custom to the contrary, which arose under a different state of circumstances) why that mechanical part should be worked by deputy at so great a cost.

"4. I can see no sound distinction between sending an advertisement for sale by private contract, giving particulars and asking an applicant to buy (which is within our acknowledged professional duties), and doing the same thing on a sale by public auction; nor between sitting at the side of the auctioneer's chair giving directions and suggestions, and frequently correcting the reading of, and explaining the particulars and conditions of sale, and answering any important questions which arise, and sitting in that chair doing the same thing, with the addition of the word "gone," and a rap upon the table.

"5. One very great advantage would arise if the lawyer were solely acting: it would keep the price of sale within the knowledge of himself and his client, it would leave open a discretion at the last moment,—a most important one. Under the present system it is necessary positively to fix the buying-in price for the guidance of the auctioneer, who is unacquainted with circumstances and parties, and cannot exercise any discretion, or take upon himself any responsibility; but it sometimes happens, during the progress of a sale, that events arise which would operate upon the lawyer. A real bidding within a moderate sum of the price fixed, and seeing there were no other persons likely to purchase, might induce the lawyer, from his knowledge of his client's circumstances, and to avoid the expenses of a further attempt to sell, to take the responsibility of saying "gone;" or he might discover from the parties bidding, or other circumstances, that he was sure of a customer, either then or after the sale, at the same or a better price, and act accordingly; the experience of many of us will bring to our recollection cases of this description.

"6. We have high authority and good example in the practice of the Court of Chancery, where the auction sale is, or is supposed to be, conducted by the Master of the court: and I think that fact is a sufficient warranty that it would not or should not be considered unprofessional or infra dignitate for an inferior member of the same profession to perform the same duties.

"7. Most of us must have seen many instances (and I have recently had and heard of some strong cases which have forced the subject upon my attention) where the auctioneer's commission and the extra expenses incurred by an attendant upon his employment, have exceeded the profit of the lawyer's bill, when the whole work, with the exceptions before mentioned, and the whole responsibility have rested with the lawyer. These observations apply with greater force where the sale is made by the client or lawyer, as frequently happens, after the employment of the auctioneer, and where he has not been in the least degree instrumental in effecting the sale, but claims and is considered to be entitled to his commission.

"8. I consider the necessity of taking out a licence to act as an auctioneer may be placed upon the same footing as the necessity of obtaining the annual certificate to act as a lawyer.

"9. In olden times the auctioneer was the person entrusted and expected to gather all the particulars for the sale, to decide the lotting, manner, and price of sale, to prepare, insert, and print the advertisements, particulars, and conditions, to find lawyers from his commercial descriptions and persuasive eloquence, and in fact to conduct the whole business of the sale (frequently without the intervention of the lawyer), leaving the lawyer only to make out the title when the auctioneer had accomplished his task—those times are gone, and with them, I think, the necessity for the lawyer to employ an auctioneer.

(a) I propose the lawyer should charge a fee on sale, say three, five, or ten guineas, according to circumstances.

I am, Sir, yours, &c. "A. B."

Answers to Queries.

STAMP.

It seems clear, from the case briefly reported in 20 L. T. Rep. 336, under the head Re The Stamp Duty on a Conveyance from Lord Mount Edgecombe and Thomas Gill to the Plymouth Great Western Dock Company, that an ordinary deed stamp will be sufficient for the indenture mentioned by L. in your last number. C. N.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

EQUITY PRACTICE.—In Blakeney v. Dufaur, 20 L. T. Rep. 337, a plaintiff going to reside abroad for a purpose likely to keep him there, for such a length of time that he would not be likely to be forthcoming if the defendant were to come upon him for costs of suit, was required to give security for such costs.

COMMON LAW.—In Hayling v. O'Key, 20 L. T. Rep. 293, a defendant, who has remained on the land of another against his will, and therefore, primâ facie, against right, was held to be bound in his pleading to justify the trespass by showing all the circumstances that make such possession lawful.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST BRITISH SUBJECTS ABROAD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Though distant, I am a yearly subscriber to your valuable paper, through my agent in London, and have noticed a letter inserted in No. 513, whereby the writer properly suggests that, as by the 18th section of the Common Law Procedure Act 1852 any defendant, being a British subject, residing out of the jurisdiction of the Superior Courts, can be proceeded against for debts contracted in England, and in order to facilitate the service of process, a correct list of attorneys resident in the principal cities and towns of our colonies should be published. I therefore beg to inform you, for the purpose above-mentioned, that I am an English notary and solicitor established here, though but a short time still with success, and shall be happy to act in any legal matter which your subscribers may think fit to entrust me with. I may add, for their satisfaction, that I was duly admitted in the courts of law in England as solicitor in Michaelmas Term 1851, and as notary in 1852: the latter a privilege granted to English solicitors in the colonies on producing the required certificates as to character and ability. An English practitioner settling here must have a perfect knowledge of the Italian language, and Roman, civil, and local laws, &c.

I am Sir, yours, &c.,

Malta, Feb. 22, 1853. GEORGE D. PAGE.

Valletta, No. 36, Strada Zaccaria.

THE ATTORNEYS' TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—As the circuits are now on, and it is usual for the different law societies to hold a general meeting in the assize towns and in the assize week, I beg to suggest the propriety of each law society sending up petitions, signed by the president, on behalf of the Society for a Repeal of the Certificate Duty.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

March 4, 1853. ONE, &c.

Answers to Queries.

ABSCONDING DEBTORS' ARREST ACT, 1851.

Your correspondent "Alpha" informs us that, on applying to the judge of one of the Yorkshire County Courts, his Honour declined granting a warrant, on the ground that he was not then sitting in the particular district in which the debtor resided. His Honour's attention was, it seems called to the 1st section of the Act, and it was urged, on behalf of the creditors, that if this were the requirement or meaning of the Act, it would have been so expressed in the enactment, and that this would render the Act, except in very rare instances, perfectly nugatory. The judge, we are informed, declined to grant the warrant, and alleged as a reason "that he presumed there was as yet no authority to the contrary."

No doubt no judge is to grant a warrant under a statute until there be an authority for his doing so, it is just possible that no warrant will be granted under any statute whatever.

I think, for my own part, that the judge in the case above referred to was wrong; for, with all respect to that learned person, it seems to me that the views of the intention and scope of the Absconding Debtors' Arrest Act, expressed by Mr. Kerr, in his useful and practical manual on that statute (a book which ought to be in the hands of every practitioner in the country), are correct. At page 4 Mr. Kerr states: "The application need not be made by a creditor within the district of the commissioner or judge from whom a warrant is sought, nor need it be made to the commissioner or judge in whose district the debtor may happen to be at the time."

If the reading of the statute by the learned judge referred to by your correspondent "Alpha" be the correct one, then the act is little better than a dead letter, for it will be as easy to procure a capias at once as to wait till a County Court judge is sitting in the district where the debtor resides. This remark brings me to the other, and I should suggest the most important, view of the statute, viz. that the power thereby given to the judge of the County Courts and Commissioners in Bankruptcy, is not given to them when sitting as judges or commissioners, i. e. it is not given to the County or Bankruptcy Courts. It is in the nature, "rather, of a personal power in the judge than a proceeding in the court" (as is stated in an erudite article on the County Courts in the Companion to the Almanack for 1852), and hence may be exercised by the judge out of court, if necessary. And, if this view be the correct one, it justifies the opinion expressed by Mr. Kerr, which is certainly the only reasonable interpretation which can be put upon the statute. Possibly the letter of "Alpha" and this epistle may call forth communications from others of your subscribers, who will be able to inform us what has been the course pursued by the County Court Judge within their experiences. It is extremely desirable that the effect of the important statute above mentioned should be thoroughly understood. OMEGA.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

EDITORIALLY we by no means assent to the objections made to the County Courts by the practitioner who has been giving in so graphic a manner the results of his own experiences. But it is a rule with us to give a fair hearing to both sides, and, having ourselves much lauded the County Courts, we deemed it but just to afford a place to a pleading against our views, especially as the writer is not young, or unknown, or inexperienced, or incompetent to form a judgment, but a man of mature years, who has enjoyed a large practice as an attorney, whose name, if we were permitted to give it, would be instantly recognised by, and command instant respect from, every member of the Profession; and that he has the ability to form an opinion will readily be admitted by all who have read his graphic sketch.

Nevertheless, while we permit to him a hearing, as in duty bound, we are also bound to declare that his description has not changed our own opinion of the general merits and utility of the County Courts. We have witnessed the proceedings in many of them in various parts of the country; and although undoubtedly some comical scenes occur, some very bad law is often promulgated, and a good deal of "hard swearing" may be heard occasionally, still, upon the whole, substantial justice is done, and disputes and demands are determined which could not have been disposed of at all but for these tribunals. Our lively correspondent has manifestly fallen into the common error of looking only at one side of the question: he has contemplated the defects and overlooked the virtues; his picture is the sketch of a clever advocate making the most of his case, and not the summing up of a calm, impartial judge. We have always freely admitted that the County Courts have many defects in their constitution and procedure, which legislation might and probably will remedy; but they have certainly performed their purpose, which was to provide a speedy and inexpensive tribunal for the recovery of small debts and demands, which were previously without remedy. Whether they are equally adapted for larger duties is altogether another question; without considerable improvements we do not think that they are; but these improvements cannot now be long deferred. In the meanwhile, it is right that Legislators and the Profession should know what are their defects, that they may turn their minds to the consideration of the proper remedies; and the graphic description of our correspondent, although unquestionably highly wrought and over-coloured, will be serviceable, by showing that the County Courts are really not that "perfection of wisdom" which they are always represented to be when spoken of in Parliament, and that they are yet susceptible of very considerable amendment to make them that which they are supposed to be by those who are not personally acquainted with them.

A PRACTITIONER'S EXPERIENCES OF THE COUNTY COURTS.

(Continued from page 219.)

A FIFTH evil is one that, in these liberal days, would be regarded by the public with more apprehension than all that I have yet mentioned, were it clearly understood. These Courts (I am speaking of those that are provincial) are, in any sense of practical responsibility, private tribunals, excluded from the notice of the world. The Judge is almost supreme in the extent of his jurisdiction; the right of appeal from his decision is so cramped by the condition of separating law from fact, by the submission to him of every special case where the parties disagree in the statement of facts, (as in almost every case), and by the mode of appealing, when recourse is had to the Courts above in important cases, only to three, that the right is almost neutralised. I have studied these appeals: in every one my opinion of the judgment has been confirmed, by far higher authority, in two out of the three the expenses have deterred from the appeal, and in the third, the Judge refused to settle the case, on the ground that he could not disengage the law from the fact. Thus the right of appeal gives but scanty protection.

Neither can any be found from the attendance of reporters for the press. In the Courts in small towns there are no reporters. I have attended many, perhaps more than a hundred, and seen no reporter. In a large place like this there is frequently a short-hand writer present, but he attends only on speculation, to take the chance of an interesting case occurring for which he may obtain a few shillings; and when it does occur, it is inserted in the newspapers in such an abridged form, that even those who have been engaged in it can scarcely recognise their work. The law, if legal argument has arisen, is not understood, the facts are unintelligibly stated, because the evidence has been directly contradictory; and above all,—for in reference to this head of complaint it is the most important omission,—those little dramatic touches by which the bearing of the Court, the parties, the witnesses, and the characteristic traits of the tribunal, are usually conveyed to the public, are wholly dropped; probably because the reporter has not the tact to describe them. Again and again, I have seen reports in the provincial papers condensed within a dozen lines, of cases which, had they occurred in Westminster Hall, would have occupied a column of the Times or Chronicle, and have well repaid the space by their general interest.

Nor does the character of the audience afford any chance of publicity. You may scrutinise every corner of the Court, and, except in the attorneys' seats round the table, you will find nobody even in the outward garb of respectability. It is scarcely too much to say that not one in five is, to all appearance, so far educated as to be able to write his name. The greatest number are females; the others, labourers, domestic servants, and the lowest orders of mechanics; those who do not belong to one or other of these classes are generally shopkeepers in the lanes and byeways, or agents for the owners of tenements let out at ten shillings per week, who have on every court-day a regular batch of petty debts to recover, and are consequently as much satellites of the court as the usher or under-bailiff.

The professional part of the audience is, though better qualified, still less likely to give the public the advantage of their attendance. There will usually be found in every court some three or four attorneys who always are present; some of these are shrewd and able men, who, allowing for the disadvantage of a want of high education, whether academic or forensic, would fill a respectable rank at the bar. They have acquired tact and fluency; in addressing a jury they are deficient; but in making a point or in answering an objection they show that they understand their business. If these men felt sufficient confidence in themselves, and occupied their places in perfect independence of the Bench, they would, no doubt, find the means of securing a useful publicity to all cases that required publication; but they are restrained by a painful consciousness that any step that might be offensive to the Judge might subject them to censure, or, in vulgar phrase, to snubbing, that would diminish the confidence of their clients; nor are they forgetful that the doctrine of contempt has latterly been carried very far. You may imagine how strongly this feeling operates when I tell you that I have twice been specially retained at a very great distance from home, avowedly to face a Judge of whom my clients were afraid.

Other attorneys only frequent the Courts occasionally, when asked by clients whom they cannot discoblige; in fact, the first and second-class men will never willingly set foot within them, nor would they ever do so if the cases allowed them in all cases to give a brief to counsel; and, from similar reluctance, counsel rarely attend unless specially requested. During the last few months, a very small list has generally shown itself for an hour or two on the first day's sitting, that it may be understood that they are willing to accept briefs if offered; otherwise, the practice is only to attend when it suits his own convenience in chambers. It is obvious that under such circumstances there can be no systematic publicity, and thus a power which, except as to the limit of the jurisdiction, is far greater than was ever before entrusted to the judicial Bench—a power of adjudicating on facts and law, for the most part without appeal, a power of administering equity as well as law in many important points of practice—is exercised without any real responsibility over, either to the profession or the public.

And from this results a sixth evil, of scarcely inferior moment—that, whether the opportunity is abused or not, a suspicion exists that it is. From all that I have myself witnessed, I can truly say that I believe the suspicion is groundless, barring, perhaps, a few rare exhibitions of temper. That I have now and then heard some dicta from the bench of very questionable law, and some occasional excess of jurisdiction of unquestionable error, may be true; but beyond a few venial mistakes of this nature, I have marked nothing to condemn. On the other hand, in several cases of concurrent jurisdiction, where I have been called upon to advise, remarks like the following have been repeatedly made to me. "How can we expect justice where the judge meets the defendant at his own or his neighbour's table on terms of intimacy?—when they daily interchange courtesies in the news room, or the library, or the club?—when they constantly meet as magistrates on the same bench, or as shareholders in the same company?" And at other times it has been said in the same distrustful and querulous tone, "It is of no use going into the County Court; the judge does as he pleases there; no man can get a hearing unless he can soft-solder him; I never open my lips but he stops my mouth."

It matters little that these suggestions or reproaches come from angry or disappointed men: they are the more likely to be widely circulated, and unfortunately there is but too much plausibility and probability about them, arising from the moral constitution of the court itself, not to pass current with the million. And what calamity of the kind can be more serious to the public, than to have our courts of law, in which more than half of the litigation of the country is already transacted, thus tainted with suspicion and calumny, whether merited or not?

(To be continued.)

COUNTY COURTS DEFECTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I am no very great admirer of the County Courts; nevertheless I cannot help thinking the unfavourable picture which one of your correspondents presents you with is rather overcharged. I will, however, with your leave, mention a grievance which occurred in the course of my practice. A client of mine obtained a judgment in his favour in an action of trover or detinue, I forget which, but it is not material. The damages were ordered to be paid in one month. The County Court clerk's office was twenty miles from my residence, and fourteen miles from my client. When the damages and costs were paid, I wrote to the clerk requesting him to forward the amount to me by his cheque, and authorising him to sign any acquittance which might be necessary. I received no reply to this letter, although the clerk was an acquaintance. I afterwards was informed that some clerks had made a rule amongst themselves not to answer letters. But this was not all; when my client came to me for the money, and I had not got it, there was no possibility of his obtaining it, except by making a journey of fourteen miles to the office of the clerk. Being only a little country tradesman, this occasioned the loss of one day to him; when he got to the town where the clerk's office was, the clerk and his book-keepers were out for the day, and did not return until after office hours, so that the poor plaintiff not only lost two days out, but was obliged to be at the expense of lodging and boarding at an inn all day and part of the next.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

March 4, 1853. OBSERVER.

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

A speculator who had lost within a year, by the purchase of railway stock (the original contract being carried over by means of a continuation contract), a sum without broker's commission less than 200*l.* but with it more than 200*l.*, has been held upon appeal not to be entitled to a certificate of conformity under sect. 207 of the Bankruptcy Act. In that section the word used is "contract," but the Lords Justices have decided that this includes the plural word "contracts," so as to bring in a loss amounting to 200*l.* under several contracts, and that railway shares are within the meaning of the section. (Ex parte Copeland, 20 L. T. Rep. 286.)

In an action by indorsee against indorser of a bill, proof that plaintiff, on the day after the dishonour, endeavoured without success to obtain from the other parties to the bill, one of whom was defendant's brother, the address of defendant, and sent a note to him at his brother's house, where the bill was payable, and that such letter was not received, was held to be evidence for the jury that defendant had due notice: (Chatteris v Durter, 20 L. T. Rep. 296.) A., owner of a patent, gave a share to B. for advancing capital, and C., an engineer, manufactured machinery for it on the credit of B., and which A. superintended. C. made out his account to B., and a bill for part of the cost was drawn by C. on B., and indorsed by A. at C.'s request. The bill was paid. B. became insolvent, and C. sued A. for the balance, and it was held that A. and B. were liable as partners for the whole amount; and there being no plea in abatement, the action against A. alone could be sustained. (Gerish v Lockhead, 20 L. T. Rep. 296.)

COURT PAPERS.

Common Law Courts.

Court of Queen's Bench.

IN AND AFTER EASTER TERM, 1853.

MIDDLESEX.—IN TERM.

1st sitting, Monday, April 18.
Any common jury cause may be taken at this sitting.
2nd sitting, Monday, April 25.
Any common jury cause may be taken at this sitting.
3rd sitting, Monday, May 2.
For undefended causes only.

AFTER TERM.

Tuesday, May 10.

LONDON. IN TERM.

1st sitting, Friday, April 22
2nd sitting, Friday, April 29.
Any common jury cause may be taken at [illegible]

AFTER TERM.

Friday, May 13

The court will sit at 10 o'clock every day.

The causes in the list for each of the above sitting days in term, if not disposed of on those days, will be tried by adjournment on the days following each of such sitting days.

Court of Common Bench.

Sittings at Nisi Prius in Middlesex and London before the Right Hon. Sir John Jervis Knight, Lord Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, in and after Easter Term, 1853.

MIDDLESEX.—IN TERM.

Tuesday, April 19.
Tuesday, April 26.

AFTER TERM.

Tuesday, May 10.

LONDON.—IN TERM.

Friday, April 22.
Friday, April 29.

AFTER TERM.

Friday, May 13.

The court will sit during and after Term at 10 o'clock.

The causes in the list for each of the above sitting days in Term, if not disposed of on those days, will be tried by adjournment on the days following each of such sitting days.

LIST OF SHERIFFS, UNDER-SHERIFFS, DEPUTIES, AND AGENTS, FOR 1853.

Note. Warrants are not granted in town for these places (*).
The term of office of the Sheriffs, &c., for cities and towns, expires on 9th Nov.

Office hours, in Term, from 11 till 4; and in Vacation from 11 till 3.

(From Mr. LAMBERT'S List.)

ENGLAND.

Bedfordshire—Henry Littledale, Kempstone-grange, near Bedford, Sheriff; Theed William Pearse, Bedford, Under-Sheriff; Messrs. Maples, Maples, and Pearse, 6, Frederick's place, Old Jewry, Agents.

Berkshire—Head Pottinger Best, Donnington Castle, Sh.; John Jackson Blandy, Reading, U. Sh.; Messrs. Gregory, Faulkner, Gregory, and Skirrow, 1, Bedford-row, Ag.

Berwick-upon-Tweed—Robert Ramsey, Tweedmouth, Berwick-upon-Tweed, Sh.; James C. Weddell, Berwick-upon-Tweed, U. Sh.; Messrs. Pringle, Stevenson, and Shum, 3, King's-road, Bedford-row, Ag.

Bristol, City of*—Robert Bright, Bristol, Sh.; William Ody Hare, Small-street, Bristol, U. Sh.; Messrs. Budges, Mason, and Budges, 23, Red Lion-square, Ag.

Buckinghamshire—Abraham Darby, Stoke-court, Slough, Sh.; Acton Tindal, Aylesbury, (A. U. Edward Robert Baynes, Aylesbury), U. Sh.; Charles Cooke, 7, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Ag.

Cambridge and Hunts—William Whitting, Manea and Thorney Abbey, Sh.; Edward Jackson, Wisbeach, U. Sh.; Messrs. Wing and Du Cane, 1, Gray's-inn-square, Ag.

Canterbury, City of*—Thomas Thorpe De Lasaux, Canterbury, Sh.; Thomas Thorpe De Lasaux, Canterbury, U. Sh.; James Plaker, 10, Symond's-inn, Ag.

Cheshire—John Hurleston Leche, Carden-park, Sh.; Richard Barker, Chester (A. U. John Hastage, Chester), U. Sh.; Messrs. Tatham and Proctor, 10, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Ag.

Chester, City of*—Thomas Quellyn Roberts, Chester, Sh.; John Hastage, Chester, U. Sh.; Messrs. Chester, Todmin, and Chester, 11, Staple-inn, Ag.

Cinque Ports*—The Most Hon. James Andrew, Marquis of Dalhousie, Sh.; Thomas Pain, Dover, U. Sh.; Messrs. Wright and Kingsford, 24, Essex-street, Strand, Ag.

Cornwall—Richard Pearce Castle, Looe (Hall, Corsewall), Sh.; Edward Hosken Fuller Tilsland (A. U. Thomas Commins, jun., Bodmin), U. Sh.; Messrs. Coode, Browne, and Kingdons, 10, King's-arms-yard, Moorgate-st., Ag.

Coventry, City of—Abolished by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 10, s. 19; warrants are granted by the Sheriff of Warwickshire.

Cumberland—Francis Reginald Atkinson, Rampsbeck Lodge, Penrith, Sh.; Miles Sewell, Carlisle, U. Sh.; Messrs. Capes and Stuart, 1, Field-court, Gray's-inn, Ag.

Derbyshire—Sir John Harpur Crewe, Calke Abbey, Bart. Sh.; John James Simpson, Derby, U. Sh.; Messrs. Taylor and Collisson, 28, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Ag.

Devonshire*—Edmund Bastard Henn, Gennys, Whitleigh Hall, Sh.; Thomas Edward Drake, New-buildings, Exeter, U. Sh.; Messrs. Buckley and Philbrick, Girdler's Hall, 39, Basinghall-street, Ag.

Dorsetshire—William Bragge, Sadborow, U. Sh.; [illegible] Fox, Beaminster, U. Sh.; George Weller, 8, [illegible], Bedford-row, Ag.

Durham*—Frederick Aclom Milbank, Hart, Sh.; [illegible] Emerson Wooler, 3, Bailey, Durham, U. Sh.; [illegible] Pollard and Hollings, Carlton Chambers, 12, Regent-street, Ag.

Essex—John Gurden Rebow, Wivenhoe-park, Sh.; John Stuck Barnes, Colchester (A. U. Messrs. Gepp and Veley, Chelmsford), U. Sh.; Messrs. Hawkins, Bloxam, and Hawkins, 2, New Boswell-court, Carey-street, Ag.

Exeter, City of—Thomas Edward Drake, New-buildings, Exeter, Sh.; Thomas William Hartnell, Exeter, U. Sh.; Messrs. Buckley and Philbrick, Girdler's-hall, 39, Basinghall-street, Ag.

Gloucestershire—John Raymond Raymond Barker, Fairford-park, Fairford, Sh.; John Burrup (firm Messrs. Burrup and Son), Berkeley-street, Gloucester, U. Sh.; Messrs. White and Sons, 11, Bedford-row, Ag.

Gloucester, City of*—Joseph Carter, Bell-lane, Gloucester, Sh.; Frederick George Beale, Gloucester (A. U. George Peter Wilkes, Blackfriars, Gloucester), U. Sh.; Messrs. Abbott and Simpson, 7, Golden-square, Ag.

Hampshire—John Shelley, Avington-house, Winchester, Sh.; Charles Sengrim, Winchester, U. Sh.; William Braikenridge, 16, Bartlett's-buildings, Holborn, Ag.

Herefordshire—William Money Kyrle, Homme-house, Much March, Sh.; George Musgrave, Ledbury, U. Sh.; Messrs. Dobinson and Geare, 37, Lincoln's-inn-Fields, Ag.

Hertfordshire—Sir Thomas Gage Saunders Sebright, Beechwood-park, Bart. Flamstead, Sh.; Messrs. Longmore and Sworder, Hertford, U. Sh.; Messrs. Hawkins, Bloxam, and Hawkins, 2, New Boswell-court, Carey-street, Ag.

Huntingdon and Cambridge*—William Whitting, Manea and Thorney Abbey, Sh.; Edward Jackson, Wisbeach, U. Sh.; Messrs. Wing and Du Cane, 1, Gray's-inn-square, Ag.

Kent—Francis Colville Hyde, Syndale House, Osprings, Sh.; Alfred King, Earl-street, Blackfriars, London (A. U. William Henry Palmer, Bedford-row, London), U. Sh.; Messrs. Palmer, France, and Palmer, 24, Bedford-row, Ag.

Kings'-upon-Hull*—William Hunt Pearson, Kingston-upon-Hull, Sh.; Thomas Holden, jun., Parliament-street, Kingston-upon-Hull, U. Sh.; Messrs. Hicks and Son, 3, Gray's-inn-square, Ag.

Lancashire*—John Talbot Clifton, Lytham Hall, Sh.; Messrs. Wilson, Son, and Deacon, Preston, U. Sh.; Messrs. Birkbeck and Craddock, 5, Gray's-inn-square, Ag.

Leicestershire—Frederick Wollaston, Shenton Hall, Hinckley, Sh.; Stafford Stratton Baxter, Atherstone, U. Sh.; George James Robinson, 35, Lincoln's-inn-Fields, Ag.

Lichfield, City of*—Henry Hall, Lichfield, Sh.; John Philip Pyott, Lichfield, U. Sh.; Messrs. Baxter, Somerville, and Co. 48, Lincoln's-inn-Fields, Ag.

Lincolnshire—Joseph Livesey, Stourton Hall, Sh.; Henry Ward, 51, Lincoln's-inn-Fields (A. U. Henry Williams, Lincoln), U. Sh.; Messrs. Abbott, Jenkins, and Abbott, 8, New-inn, Strand, Ag.

Lincoln, City of—Benjamin Wilson, Lincoln, Sh.; Richard Mason (firm Mason and Dale), Lincoln, U. Sh.; Messrs. Taylor and Collisson, 28, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Ag.

London, City of—John Carter, 61, Cornhill, and Alexander Angus Cyrill, 28, Coleman street, London, Sh.; William James, 5, Basinghall-street, and Thomas Mortimer Cleobury, 10, Poultry, U. Sh.; Messrs. James and Potter, Secondaries' Office, Basinghall-street, City, and Messrs. Burchells and Hall, 21, Red-lion-square, Ag.

Middlesex—Ditto, ditto.

Monmouthshire*—Henry Bailey, Nant-e-Glo, Sh.; William Woodhouse Secretan Jan e Woodhouse, Aberga enny, U. Sh.; Messrs. Gregory and Sons, 12, Clement's-inn, Ag.

Newcastle-upon-Tyne*—Henry Ingledew, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Sh.; William Daggett, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, U. Sh.; Messrs. Williamson, Hill, and Williamson, 10, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Ag.

Norfolk—David Gurney, North Runcton, Lynn, Sh.; Frederick Robert Partridge, Lynn (A. U. Messrs. Adam Taylor and Sons, Norwich), U. Sh.; John Wickham Flower, 17, Gracechurch-street, Ag.

Northamptonshire—Cary Charles Elwes, Great Billing, Sh.; Henry Philip Markham, Northampton, U. Sh.; Frederick Ouvry, 13, Tokenhouse-yard, Ag.

Northumberland—Walter Selby, Biddleston, Sh.; William Forster, Alnwick, U. Sh.; George Mounsey Gray, 9, Staple-inn, Ag.

Norwich, City of*—George Womnak, jun., Norwich, Sh.; Arthur Dalrymple, Norwich, U. Sh.; Messrs. Bircham, Dalrymple, and Drake, 46, Parliament-street, Ag.

Nottinghamshire—Thomas Spragging Godfrey, Balderton, Sh.; Godfrey Tallents, Newark-upon-Trent (A. U. John Brewster, Nottingham), U. Sh.; Messrs. Taylor and Collisson, 28, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Ag.

Nottingham, Town of—William Page, Nottingham, Sh.; Christopher Swann, Nottingham, U. Sh.; Messrs. Holme, Loftus, and Young, 10, New-inn, Strand, Ag.

Oxfordshire—James Morrell, jun., Oxford, Sh.; John Marriott, Devenport, Oxford, U. Sh.; Messrs. Davies, Son, Campbell, and Rand, 17, Warwick-street, Regent-st, Ag.

Poole, Town of—William Waterman Poole, Sh.; William Parr, Poole, U. Sh.; Messrs. Holme, Loftus, and Young, 10, New-inn, Strand, Ag.

Rutlandshire—John Parker, Preston, near Uppingham, Sh.; William Shield, Uppingham, U. Sh.; Messrs. Capes and Stuart, 1, Field-court, Gray's-inn, Ag.

Shropshire—Algernon Charles Heber Percy, Hodnet Hall, Sh.; Joseph Loxdale Warren, Market Drayton (A. U. Joshua John Poole, Shrewsbury), U. Sh.; Harvey Lewis Jones, 72, Austin-friars, Ag.

Somersetshire—Francis Henry Dickinson, Kingweston, near Somerton, Sh.; John Nicholetts, South Petherton, U. Sh.; Messrs. Dynes and Harvey, 61, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Ag.

Southampton—William Aldridge, Southampton, Sh.; Messrs. [illegible], Southampton, U. Sh.; Messrs. Tribe, [illegible], 1, John-street, Bedford-row, Ag.

Staffordshire—Edward Baller, Dilhorn Hall, Sh.; Bowyer Wand (firm Messrs. Keene and Wand, Stafford, Sh.; Messrs. White and Sons, 11, Bedford-row, Ag.

Suffolk—The Right Hon. John Lord Henniker, Thornham Hall, Eye, Sh.; George Layton, Eye (A. U. Messrs. Clarkson, Sparke, and Holmes, Bury St. Edmunds), U. Sh.; Messrs. Abbott, Jenkins, and Abbott, 8, New-inn, Strand, Ag.

Surrey—Thomas Grissell, Norbury-park, Leatherhead, Sh.; William Heydon Smallpiece, Guildford, U. Sh.; Messrs. Abbott, Jenkins, and Abbott, 8, New-inn, Strand, Ag.

Sussex—Francis Burchard, Worsted-place, Sussex, Sh.; William Woodgate, Lincoln's-inn-fields, U. Sh.; Messrs. Palmer, France, and Palmer, 24, Bedford-row, Ag.

Warwickshire—Sir William Edmund Cradock Hartropp, Bart. Four Oaks Hall, Sutton Coldfield, Sh.; Thomas Heath, Warwick, U. Sh.; Messrs. Taylor and Collisson, 38, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Ag.

Westmorland—John Wakefield, Sedgwick House, Kendal, Sh.; John Heelis, Appleby, U. Sh.; George Mounsey Gray, 2, Staples-inn, Holborn, Ag.

Wiltshire—Francis Layborne Popham, Chilton, Sh.; Thomas Bayerstock Merriman, Marlborough (A. U. West Awdry, Chippenham), U. Sh.; Messrs. Lewis, Wood, and Street, 6, Raymond-buildings, Gray's-inn, Ag.

Worcestershire—Charles Noel, Bell Hall, near Belbroughton, Sh.; George Croft Vernon, Hanbury (A. U Messrs. Hyde and Tyrabs, Worcester), U. Sh.; Messrs. Hall and Smith, 11, New Boswell-court, Carey-street, Ag.

Worcester, City of—Charles Bedford, Worcester, Sh.; Charles Sidebotham, Worcester, U. Sh; Henry Bedford, 4, Gray's-inn-square, Ag.

Yorkshire—Andrew Montague, Melton-park, Doncaster, Sh.; William Gray, York, U. Sh.; Messrs. Bell, Brodrick, and Bell, Bow-churchyard, Ag.

York, City of—William Hudson, York, Sh.; Henry Anderson, High Peter-gate, York, U. Sh.; Charles Fiddey, 3, Paper-buildings, Temple, Ag.

NORTH WALES.

Anglesey—Richard William Prichard, Erianell, Sh.; Thomas Owen, Llangefni, U. Sh.; Messrs. Abbott, Jenkins, and Abbott, 8, New-inn, Strand, Ag

Carnarvonshire—Robert Vaughan Wynne Williams, Llandudno, Sh.; David Williams, Bron Eryri, Portmadoc, U. Sh.; Messrs. M'Leod and Cann, 3, Paper-buildings, Temple, Ag.

Denbighshire—Pierce Wynne York, Dyffryn Aled, Denbigh Sh.; John Copner Wynne Edwards, Denbigh, U. Sh.; Messrs. Tooke, Son, and Holland, 39, Bedford-row, Ag.

Flintshire—Whitehall Dod, Cloverley, Whitchurch, Sh.; Arthur Troughton Roberts, Mold, U. Sh.; Nathaniel Charles Milne, Harcourt-buildings, Temple, Ag.

Merionethshire—Thomas Arthur Bertie Mostyn, Kylan, Sh.; Isaac Gilbertson, Bala, U. Sh.; Messrs. Holme, Loftus, and Young, 10, New inn, Strand, Ag.

Montgomeryshire—John Naylor, Leighton Hall, Sh.; Abraham Howell, Welshpool, U. Sh.; Nathaniel Charles Milne, Harcourt-buildings, Temple, Ag.

SOUTH WALES.

Brecknockshire—Wyndham William Lewis, Llanthetty Hall, Sh.; Frederick Rowland Roberts, Aberystwith, U. Sh.; Messrs. Hawkins, Bloxam, and Hawkins, 2, New Boswell-court, Carey-street, Ag.

Cardiganshire—Lewis Pugh, Aberystwith, Sh.; James Webb Jones, Quay-street, Carmarthen, U. Sh.; Robt. Gamlen, 3, Gray's-inn-square. Ag.

Carmarthen, Borough of—David Bowen, Priory-street, Carmarthen, Sh.; Thomas Parry, Carmarthen, U. Sh.; Edward Towsey, Quality-court, Chancery-lane, Ag.

Glamorganshire—Richard Hill Miers, Ynispenllwch, Swansea, Sh.; Alexander Cuthbertson, Neath, U. Sh.; Messrs. Rowland, Hacon, and Rowland, 31, Fenchurch-street, Ag.

Haverfordwest, Town of—John Maddocks, Haverfordwest, Sh.; William Davies, Haverfordwest, U. Sh.; Messrs. Hastings, Best, and Smith, 3, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square, Ag.

Pembrokeshire—Adrian Nicholas John Stokes, Saint Botolphs, Sh.; Jonathan Rogers Powell, Haverfordwest, U. Sh.; Messrs. Tinder and Eyre, 1, John-street, Bedford-row, Ag.

Radnorshire—Jonathan Field, Esgairdrainllwyn, Sh.; Wm. Hosford Daubney, Great Grimsby (A. U. Richard Green, Knighton), U. Sh.; Messrs. Taylor and Collisson, 38, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Ag.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTH.

SCUDAMORE.—On the 4th inst. the wife of Frederick Scudamore, Esq. of Maidstone, of a son, stillborn.

MARRIAGE.

COWIE—STEWART.—On the 18th Jan. at St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, Thomas Hardwicke Cowie, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, to Margaret Baillie, eldest daughter of Duncan Stewart, M.D. Presidency surgeon.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORD LIEUTENANTS.

Yorkshire.—The Right Hon. Lord Londesborough; Sir Thomas Becket, Bart.; John Charlesworth Dodgson Charlesworth, Esq.; Robert John Coulman, Esq.; Thomas Fairfax, Esq.; Henry Hall, Esq.; John Spencer Stanhope, Esq.; John Vance, Esq., M.P.; Frederick William Thomas Vernon Wentworth, Esq.; Sir Thomas Edward Pilkington, Bart.; Colonel Ferrars Loftus, Lieut.-Colonel John Barnett, Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. Edward Gambier Monckton, Captain Cuthbert Athelstan Baines, Captain Charles Augustus Cobbe; Captain Edward Prothero; Joseph Priestley Edwards, Esq.; William Hey, Esq.; William Henry Leatham, Esq.; George Pollard, Esq. (Halifax); William Henry Rawson, jun., Esq.; Francis Salvin, Esq.; Samuel Waterhouse, Esq.; and Francis Frederick Whitehead, Esq.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, March 8.

CLARK, ROBERT, licensed victualler, Holyhead, Anglesea, March 14. and April 11, at eleven, Liverpool. Off. as. Cazenove. Sol. Yates, jun. Liverpool. Petition, Feb. 22.

HARRIS, MORRIS, furrier, Regent-street, March 12 at two, and April 23 at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Pennell. Sol. Sole and Co. Aldermanbury. Petition, March 1.

M'LACHLEN, JOHN, auctioneer, Spital-square, Norton Folgate, March 12 and April 23, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Nicholson. Sols Messrs. Boulter, Northampton-square, Clerkenwell. Petition, March 4.

PLATTS, ALFRED, tailor, Sheffield, March 19 and April 30, at twelve, Sheffield. Off. as. Freeman. Sol. Chambers, Sheffield. Petition, March 4.

ROSS, HUGH HENRY, draper, Liverpool, March 18 and April 14, at twelve, Liverpool. Off. as. Turner. Sols. Sale and Co. Manchester Petition, Feb. 25.

SYMES, JOSEPH, cheesemonger, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge, March 22 at one, and April 19 at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Groom. Sols. Sturmy and Co. Philpot-lane, City. Petition, March 3.

WELLS, JOHN, builder, Bold-place, Dalston, March 16 at two, and April 20 at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Graham. Sol. Ashley, Charles-square, Hoxton. Petition, March 8.

WEST, WILLIAM, and WEST, JOHN, linendrapers, Donnington, Lincolnshire, March 21 at one, and April 19 at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as Edwards. Sols. Heather and Moger, Paternoster-row. Petition, March 2.

WHITE, RICHARD, cut nail manufacturer, Birmingham, March 19 and April 9, at half-past ten, Birmingham. Off. as. Bittleston. Sol Standbridge, Birmingham. Petition, March 14.

Gazette, March 11.

BAKER, THOMAS WILLIAM, tobacconist and cigar dealer, 9, Little Woolton-street, West Derby, Walton-on-the-hill, Lancashire, and 4, Roe-street, Liverpool, March 22 and April 12, at eleven, Liverpool. Com. Perry. Off. as. Morgan. Sol. Griffiths, Otrel-place, Lord-street, Liverpool. Petition, March 2.

BAXTER, ROBERT, currier and leather seller, Wisbech St. Peter, Cambridge, March 22 at two, April 25 at one, Basinghall-street. Com Holroyd. Off. as. Edwards. Sols. Messrs. Abbott, Jenkins, and Abbott, 8, New inn, Strand; Thomas Stead Watson, Wisbech, Cambridgeshire. Petition, March 10.

BURGESS, JAMES, contractor, Over Tabley, Cheshire. April 7 and 28, at eleven, Manchester. Off. as. Lee. Sols. Taylor, 32, Cooper-street, Manchester; and Hartley, Colne. Petition, Feb. 28.

GIBBS, NATHANIEL BIRKETT, chemist and druggist, 81, Connaught terrace, Edgeware-road, March 19, and April 22, at one, Basinghall-street. Com Fane. Off. as. Whitmore Sol. Randall, 56, Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square. Petition, March 10.

HEWITT, CHARLES FRANCIS butcher, 9, Tavistock-street, Plymouth, March 24 and April 21, at half-past ten, Plymouth. Com. Bere. Off. as. Hernaman. Sol. Elworthy, Exeter. Petition, March 4.

HOUGHAM, JAMES BISHOP, school master, Stoke Newington-road, Hornsey, March 24, at half past twelve, and April 21, at twelve. Basinghall-street. Com. Evans. Off. as. Bell. Sol. Nias, Copthall-buildings. Petition, Jan. 11.

JENKINS, ARTHUR HAMMOND, and WOODHOUSE, EDWARD JOHN, wine merchants, Gloucester, March 23 at twelve, April 20 at eleven, Bristol. Com. Stephen. Off as. Acraman. Sols. Lovegrove, Gloucester; Messrs. Abbot and Lucas, Bristol. Petition, Feb. 21

PLUMMER, JOHN, brewer, Britten-street, Chelsea, March 22 at one, April 25, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Holroyd. Off. as. Groom. Sols. Messrs. Lawrance, Plews, and Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, Cheapside. Petition, March 2.

PRIOR, HENRY, and ATKINSON, HENRY, Manchester warehousemen, 125, Wood-street, March 23, at half past one, and April 22, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Stansfield. Sol. Mason, 17, Ironmonger-lane, City. Petition, March 7.

SIMMONDS, HENRY, brick maker and builder, Ore, Sussex, March 23, at two, and April 20, at half-past one, Basinghall-street. Com. Fonblanque. Off. as. Stansfield. Sols. Messrs. Hill and Matthews, 1 Bury-court, St. Mary Axe. Petition, March 9.

SMITH, JOHN JOSEPH, ship owner, Stockton-upon-Tees, Durham, March 18, at eleven, April 22, at twelve, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Com. Ellison. Off. as. Baker. Sol. Fenwick, Tyne-street, North Shields.

SOLOMON, HENRY, furniture broker, 45, Holborn-hill. City, Cumberland-place, Old Kent-road, and 2, Surrey-place, Old Kent-road, March 18 and April 22, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Fane. Off. as. Cannon. Sol. Jones, 9, Quality-court, Chancery-lane. Petition, March 8.

WALKER, JANE, linen draper. Halifax, Yorkshire, April 7 and 29, at eleven, Leeds. Com. West. Off. as. Young. Sols. Wavell, Philbrick, and Foster. Halifax; and Bond and Barwick, Leeds. Petition, March 8.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

Gazette, March 8.

BOHLAL, TALES, merchant. Mogadore, Africa, Feb. 25.

Gazette, March 11.

BETTERIDGE, JAMES, [redacted] dealer and grocer, Watlington, Oxford, Jan. 19.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Carlisle, R. T. brick maker and railway contractor, first, 3d. Freeman, Sheffield.—Dobson, J. optician, first, 8s. Edwards, London.—Davey. C. linendraper, first, 10s Edwards, London. Featherstonaugh, J. coal factor, third, 3½d. Graham, London.—French and Sands, coal factors, &c. second sep. of Sands, 2s Nicholson, London.—Harries, J. carpet warehouseman, second, 1s. 1d. Edwards, London.—Hills, A. oil and vitriol manufacturer, first, 2s. 10d. Graham, London.—Hodson, W. farmer, second, 3½d. Edwards, London.—Jones, P. joiner and builder, 9½d. Morgan, Liverpool.—Marshall, C. brewer, second, 4d. Graham, London.—Marshall, M. cut nail manufacturer, first, 2s. 9d. and second, 4s. 6d. Hope, Leeds.—Monkhouse, W. C. wine merchant, 12s. Hutton, Bristol.—Morley, P. A. linen manufacturer, first, 9d. Christie, Birmingham.—Palfreyman, L. scrivener, third, 13s. 7d. and on new proofs, 18s, 1d. Freeman, Sheffield.—Pearson, J. Z. wine and spirit merchant, third, 1d. and 3-10ths. Hope, Leeds.—Pinnerbury, A. builder, 4s. 2½d. [illegible]

[illegible] 4½d. Whitmore, Birmingham.—[illegible] first, 11½d. Graham, London.—[illegible] Liverpool.—[illegible] Hull.—Wrigley, E. and R. G. [illegible] Hope, Leeds.—Wrigley, E. and R. G. [illegible] Hope, Leeds.—[illegible] of E. Wrigley. 20s. Richardson, London.

INSOLVENT ESTATES.

Apply at the Provisional Assignee's Office, Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, between the hours of ten and three.

Burman, I. clerk, 5s. 3d. [illegible] 6s. 8d.—Hodgson, W. commander in the navy, 4½d. (making 11s.).—King, J. maltster and farmer, 2s. 9½d.—Mawdsley, G. J. T. clerk, 6s. 6d. (making 13s.).—Nathan, M. grate agent and shopseller, 6s. 7½d.—Tribe, T. lieut. in the coast guard service, 2s. 11½d. (making 4s. 9d.)

Amos, N. saddler, 4d. Apply at the County Court, Rugby.

Fletcher, R. grocer and shopkeeper, 6d. Apply at the County Court, Rugby.—Holland, J. builder, first and final, 1s. 10½d. Apply at the County Court, Rawdon.

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, March 1.

Artingstall, W. joiner and builder, Pendleton, Lancashire, Feb. 7. Trust. J. Lofthouse, accountant, Manchester. Sol. S. Simpson, Manchester.—Clarke, W. cabinet maker, Holme, Lancashire, Feb. 23. Trusts. R. Norfolk, Manchester, and T. Challinor, Macclesfield, timber merchants. Sol. J. Barry, Manchester.—Hunt, H. grocer and baker, Buckland, near Dover, Kent, Feb. 12. Trusts. J. Green, grocer, Canterbury; and J. Wood, tallow chandler, Dover. Sol. E. Elwin, Dover.—Tapley, A. draper, Ilkeston, Derbyshire, Feb. 17. Trusts. W. Fryer and W. H. Taylor, wholesale drapers, Nottingham; and W. Butterfield, merchant, Manchester. Sol. J. S. Sykes, Nottingham.—Thompson, J. publican, Telegraph Inn, London-road, Derbyshire, Feb. 1. Trust. J. Wright, farmer, Brampthorpe. Sol. J. Briggs, Derby.

Gazette, March 4.

Burritt, J. W., linen draper, Bradford, Yorkshire, Feb. 23. Trusts. W. Butterfield and W. H. Newton, merchants, both of Manchester. Sols. Hampson and Sons, Manchester.—Edwards, W. upholsterer, Peterborough, Feb. 26. Trusts. T. Tapling, warehouseman, Wood-street, London; and J. Cattel, gentleman. Peterborough. Sols W. C. Sole, Aldermanbury; J. Broughton and A. Percival, Peterborough.—Ford, J. and Cellars, J. joiners and builders, Alderley, Cheshire, Feb. 21. Trusts. J. Kay, plasterer, and W. Griffiths, plumber and glazier, both of Manchester. Sol. J. H Dearden, Manchester.—Longstaff, F. leather dealer, Chester-road, Hulme, Lancashire, Feb. 26. Trusts. H. Bowman, leather merchant, Manchester; and J. T. Cunliffe, farmer, Ardwick. Sols. Hulton and Brett, Salford.—Sturgis, O. and Adams, W. builders, New Finchley-road, Middlesex, Jan. 21. Trusts. J. N. Helling, plumber, Hampstead-road; R. Ohbard, glass merchant, Bridge-street, Blackfriars; and J. Chadwick, stone merchant, Augustus-street, Regent's-park. Sol. H. J. Turner, Percy-street, Bedford-square. Turk, J. butcher, Palling-next-the-Sea, Norfolk, Jan. 26. Trust. J. Woods, auctioneer, Great Yarmouth.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, March 1.

Barratt, J. L. and J. H. and Wilson, P. bible and prayer book warehousemen, Fleet street, Feb. 28.—Beaumont, G. and Hoole, J. warehousemen Manchester, Feb. 25. Debts paid by Beaumont.—Clarke, J. B. and Hellyer, G. millers, Havant and Emsworth. Feb. 26. Debts paid by Clarke.—Coulthart, J. sen. and J. jun. woollen drapers, Liverpool, Feb. 25.—Douglas, J., Rankart, A. and Charton, A. C. stuff merchants, Bradford, as regards Rankart, Dec. 31.—Dove, W. and Rex, J. ironmongers, York, Feb. 21. Debts paid by Dove.—Dunlop, J. and Walkington, S. spirit merchants, Liverpool, Jan. 1.—Ford, J. and Cellars, J. joiners and builders, Alderley, Feb. 21.. Jowitt, T. and Bottle, J. G. file and steel manufacturers, Sheffield, Feb. 24.—Debts paid by Jowitt.—Knowles, J. and Lord, C. chemists and druggists, Todmorden, Jan. 2.—Lomax, C., Lord, J. and Howarth, J. coal proprietors, Fern Hill Colliery, Spotland, Rochdale, as regards Howarth, Feb. 26.—Debts paid by remaining partners. — O'Connor, J. and Bennett, R. W. common brewers, West Bromwich, Feb. 18. Debts paid by Bennett.—Reid, G. sen. and Hayley, T. livery-stable keepers, Huddersfield, Dec. 31.—Robinson, R. and Newstead, W. grocers and tea dealers, Newark-upon-Trent, Feb. 21.—Debts paid by Robinson.—Rowe, R. and Robinson, W. coach builders, Birmingham, Jan. 3.—Skeene, J., Davis, C. and Skeene, S. K. mustard, cocoa, and chicory manufacturers, Oxford, Feb. 19. Debts paid by Davis.—Samuels, L., S. R., and J., lace manufacturers, Nottingham, as regards L. Samuels, Feb. 24. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Stuart, R. and Smith, J. J. stove grate manufacturers, Sheffield, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Smith.—Turner, W. T. and Holloway, T. and B. woollen cloth manufacturers, Cam Mills, Gloucestershire, Feb. 24. Debts paid by Turner.

Gazette, March 4.

Barstow, J., F., and G., builders, Leeds and Pontefract, Feb. 26.—Barnacott, G. V. and Riddell, D. architectural modellers and plain and ornamental plasterers, Cheshire-street, Tottenham court-road, Dec. 25.—Blacke, H. and Redhead, J., linen and woollen drapers and silk mercers, Durham, Feb. 26. Debts paid by Blacket.—Booth, S. & W. and Slater, W. grocers and provision dealers, Heywood, Feb. 26.—Burgess, A. and Peck, W. F. engravers and printers, Manchester, Mar. 2. Debts paid by Burgess.—Carver, J. sen., W., J. jun. and W. J., Derbishire, G. S. and Crossell, T. merchants and commission agents, Lisbon, as regards J. Carver, sen. W. J. Carver, and G. S. Derbishire, Dec. 31.—Carver, J. sen., W., J. jun. and W. J., and Derbishire, G. S. merchants, Manchester and Gibraltar, Feb. 29. Debts paid at Manchester by J. Carver, sen. and at Gibraltar by W. Carver.—Cowell, W. M. and Thomas, J. builders, &c., High-street, Marylebone, Mar. 3.—Dixon, H. and Thwaites, J. coal owners, Keyper colliery, Durham, Feb. 12. Debts paid by Dixon.—Fry, A., J. F., and Tennent, R. M. Rio de Janeiro, July 15, as regards J. F. Fry.—Gadge, J. and Lambourne, T. King's Arms-yard, Moorgate-street, Feb. 24.—Harris, J. and Tomkins, J. shop sellers, Abingdon, Feb. 26.—Ledger, E. and Bannister, W. cigar manufacturers and dealers in tobacco, Liverpool, Feb. 8. Debts paid by Bannister.—Mackay, H. A. F., and D. coal proprietors, Uphall, near Wigan, and Liverpool, Mar. 1.—Moore, A. and G. tailors, Manchester, Feb. 26.—Morgan, F. and Bowen, J. grocers and provision merchants, Claypath, Durham, Feb. 26. Debts paid by Morgan.—Phillips, B. and Sleft, J. ship riggers and stevedores, North-street, Poplar, Feb. 26.

THE FOLLOWING BOOKS [illegible] ARE JUST ISSUED AT THE LAW TIMES OFFICE.

PART IX. of COX, MACRAE, and HINDLEY'S COUNTY COURT LAWS AND CASES, together with INDEX TO PART VI. Price 2s. 6d.

This is the earliest and only complete collection of Reports of Cases relating to the County Courts, and contains every case from the establishment of the Courts. To be continued regularly. Parts I. to VIII. may still be had, price 2s. 6d. each. Part X. is in the press, and will complete the cases to the beginning of 1853.

THE LAW DIGEST, PART XV., for the Half-Year ending December 1. By E. WISE and D. T. EVANS, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. Price 6s. 6d. bds.; 8s. cloth.

This work gives every case, wherever reported, during the half-year, arranged so that the practitioner may find in a moment what is the latest law on any subject on which he may be engaged.

THE NEW RULES and ORDERS, the NEW TABLE of FEES, and the NEW RULES relating to the ADMISSION of ATTORNEYS and the EXAMINATION of ARTICLED CLERKS, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, by R. MALCOLM KERR, Barrister-at-Law. Price 4s. (This may be had also as a Supplement to "Kerr's Common Law Procedure Act," having marginal references to the pages of that work.)

TUDOR'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, with all the Rules, Orders, Costs, Decisions, &c. to this time, with Practical Notes, Forms, and Index, the Orders being placed with the Sections of the Statute to which they relate. By OWEN TUDOR, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s. 6d. cloth.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ORDERS, with the BANKRUPTCY CONSOLIDATION ACT, and Notes of all the Cases decided on its construction. By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of 1849, containing all those ever required in Practice, omitting the Repealed and the Scotch, Irish, Colonial, and Sessional Statutes, with Notes of all the Cases decided on their construction; thus presenting the whole Law as it is, in a compact form for ready use, and with a copious Index By C. J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. (This is in continuation of the Practical Statutes of 1850, 1851, and 1852, which may still be had.)

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES, Part II. of Vol. VI. with a copious collection of Precedents of Indictments. This part contains Forms of Indictments at Quarter Sessions under the New Law. By J. E. DAVIES, Esq., Barrister-at-Law Price 5s. 6d.

THE LAW TIMES SHEET ALMANAC for 1853, comprising, in addition to the regular information of an Almanac, Time Tables of all the Courts under the New Practice, Stamp and Tax Tables, Table for ready Calculation of Income Tax, and the other Information required for immediate reference in the Office. Price only 1s.; or stamped for post, 1s2d. A copy sent to any person inclosing thirteen postage stamps to the office.

THE LAWYER'S POCKET-BOOK for 1853, containing the Almanacs and Time of the Moon's Rising and Setting for the last as well as the present Year, a complete Table of Stamps, Time Tables in Common Law, Equity and Bankruptcy, and much other matter required for Reference in Courts. Price only 6d.

THE SECOND EDITION of KERR'S COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, containing all the New Rules and Orders, the New Table of Fees, and Cases decided to the end of Michaelmas Term. Price 14s. 6d. cloth.

To Readers and Correspondents.

"ALPHA."—The suggestion is good. We shall certainly adopt it.
"W. D."—It was clearly a clerical error of the reporter.
"P. H. S."—His note has been sent to the reporter.
"N. R." (Portsea) is too long for this number.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications.
Whatever is intended for insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of his good faith.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

THE LAW TIMES.

SATURDAY, MARCH 19, 1853.

THE ATTORNEYS' TAX.

LORD ROBERT GROSVENOR has prudently deferred the second reading of his Bill for the repeal of this often-condemned impost until after the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER shall have produced his budget, expressing his hope that the emphatic division on Thursday will receive from the Government the respect which such a majority is entitled to command, and that by a voluntary surrender of the wrong any further adverse proceedings may be rendered needless.

This course was wise, not because it is expected that Mr. GLADSTONE will yield—for he is one of those whom defeat would rather make more resolute—but that he might be left without any plea for diverting attention from the point at issue when the battle comes to be fought again. He would eagerly grasp at any charge of factiousness or undue pressure to create a feeling in his own favour, and against the claimants for justice. We can well afford to wait a little.

The position of our cause is not only more favourable than ever it was before as respects numbers, but also in regard to time. Every former division, we believe, in the previous Parliament took place after the Government had produced its financial scheme for the year, and consequently there was the ready excuse—"It is too late; we cannot alter the whole Budget for this one tax." No such excuse can be put forth now. The opinion of the House has been emphatically declared before the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER has framed his Budget, so that he may easily mould it to the requirements of the House.

The Times, after sneering at the division as the expression, not of the honest opinions of the members, but of the influences brought to bear upon them, and endeavouring thus to induce the Government to resist the decision of the House, turns round to the Attorneys and thus tries to persuade them that the Tax is neither a burden nor an injustice. It says:—

We shall follow his example so far as not to go into the thick of the question; but, as our remarks might wear a look of harshness to a profession as respectable, and, indeed, as necessary as any other, we will just make one observation to show that the tax is not necessarily that hardship some attorneys would have us believe. There are many costly legal institutions maintained in this country in the shape of courts of law, judicial functionaries, prisons, and other modes of punishment and repression. They must be paid for, and, though all derive benefit from them and all help to pay for them, yet it is evident some derive greater and more immediate benefit than others. The persons thus directly, and in the first instance benefited are necessarily the clients of attorneys, and it is fit that those clients should pay something more than others for the common benefit in which they have an extraordinary share. They can only be taxed through attorneys, stamps, and fees, and, as it would be impossible to tax every legal consultation or lawyer's letter, the best way to tax this part of the affair is by a poll-tax on the attorney himself. There is one other alternative, indeed, but it need only be mentioned to be rejected at once—viz., a percentage on every lawyer's bill. What would attorneys say to one per cent. on every account? With ever so small a practice, they would rather pay a round sum and have done with it; particularly as the other course would involve a disclosure of their affairs. The tax, undoubtedly, presses hard on young attorneys with small practice; but they hope in time to be in large practice; and, if they are worth anything, they would rather not see their profession made the refuge of all the penniless schemers in the country. But after all, it is not an attorney's, it is a client's affair. The former charges it on the client in the fee he demands for every consultation, letter, or other necessary step, and, when an ignorant client complains of what he fancies an excessive charge, the attorney is always able to point at his immense admission-fee and his yearly duty.

The fallacy of the argument, that the tax on the attorney is in fact a tax upon the client—just as a tax on tea is borne by the consumer and not by the seller—will be apparent from this, that it is nowaay regulated by the amount of business transacted by the attorney. If that theory of the tax be the true one, the clients of Mr. A., who pay him a thousand a year, should each be charged nine-tenths of it less than the clients of Mr. B. who pay him only 100*l.* a year. But in fact the charges for letters and attendances are to both precisely the same. The Times has energetically assailed the injustice of the Income Tax for taxing the rewards of industry at the same rate as the proceeds of accumulated property; but surely greater still is the injustice of taxing all attorneys equally, whether their profits are 1000*l.* a year or nothing! From this dilemma, at least, the advocates of the tax cannot escape. Either the tax is bad in principle and ought to be abolished, or it is most unjust in its incidence and ought to be amended. If it is a tax on attorneys, it combines the two most objectionable features of any tax—it is at once a class tax and a poll-tax upon the class. If it is, as the Times contends, a tax levied upon clients through the attorneys, then it is most unfairly and iniquitously levied; for the half-dozen clients of one man are made to pay as much as the hundred clients of another.

The supporters of the Attorneys Tax must be indeed hard driven for a defence of it when even the Times can find nothing better to adduce in its favour than the argument we have cited and answered.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER is reported to have thrown out a hint of the repeal of the Articled Clerks' Stamp Duty, instead of the Certificate Duty. If there is not, as we suspect, some error of the reporter's in this, the threat was an effusion of pitiful spite against the Attorneys; for its purport is obvious—it means "I'll pay you off; under pretence of relief I will do you an injury." To any such project the most resolute opposition must and will be offered by the Profession; but we will not believe the insult seriously intended until we see it taking formal shape in the Budget.

LORD BROUGHAM'S LAW OF EVIDENCE BILL.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR has expressed his approval of so much of Lord BROUGHAM'S Bill as admits the wife as a witness, but only permits communications made to her by her husband to be privileged to the same extent, and for the same reasons as those between attorney and client. So far good. This will remove one more impediment to the discovery of the truth.

There remains, however, another obstacle to justice, which we fear will not be so readily thrust aside. Every person acquainted with our tribunals knows how frequently justice is defeated, and the discovery of the truth prevented, by a privilege which the law allows to a witness to refuse to answer any question which he may choose to consider, or even pretend to consider, might involve him in a criminal prosecution. This protection was based upon another principle of our law, that a man should not be compelled to convict himself; and, inasmuch as any evidence given by a witness on oath in one trial might be used in evidence against him on another, to compel him to answer would be to compel a self-conviction. Nobody desires to invade the wholesome rule of our law that forbids a culprit being forced to convict himself; and the problem to be solved is, how to preserve this privilege, and yet to prevent its operating as an obstacle to justice in other matters. Lord BROUGHAM'S bill proposes to effect this double object by the very simple arrangement of protecting the answer—that is to say, to treat communications made in a court of justice as we do those between attorney and client, as confidential, or as a letter written "without prejudice," and prevent its being made use of against the witness in any other proceeding. This plan is not new, nor untried. It was adopted, with admirable effect, in the St. Alban's Inquiry Act, and it is one of the provisions of the recent Bribery at Elections Act.

But Lord CRANWORTH objects to it that, although it will not in form lead to compulsory self-conviction, it will do so in fact; for he fears that witnesses will be pumped to obtain information which may supply the means of a criminal prosecution.

To this objection there are two answers.

First, we contend that, even if such were the consequence, it is no substantial objection. It must be remembered that only criminal acts are now thus protected. A man is compellable to answer questions that might affect his whole property, and yet we find that in practice no evil results proceed from it. The safeguard against the abuse of the power is found in the other rule of law, that a question must be relevant, and in the power vested in the Court to forbid irrelevant questions. Why should more mischief or inconvenience arise from the other class of questions being allowed? If relevant to the matter at issue, why should a man who has committed a crime be allowed the privilege of doing an injury to others, or defeating justice, by refusing to answer? If the question is not relevant, it would not be permitted at all.

Secondly, if his answers supply facts for inquiry, although those answers cannot be used as admissions, there is no harm in that; if there has been crime, why should it not be brought to light? If the witness is guiltless, he has the advantage of being able publicly to declare himself so upon his oath.

If, however, the objection still lingers in any mind, we would suggest, as a first step, and to make trial of it upon a limited scale, that the questions should be allowed to be put only where relevant to the matter in issue, and not when the object is merely to impeach the credit of the witness. This was the objection made by Lord CRANWORTH. The objection is not without weight, although, we think, met by the considerations stated above; but a very great point will be gained if so much is done towards the removal of the present obstacle to justice as would be effected by taking away the privilege so far as relates to questions relevant to the issue—leaving questions merely impeaching credit upon their present footing.

We throw out this suggestion to the Law Lords as a solution of the difficulty suggested by Lord CRANWORTH; and, if thus modified, we hope the clause will have his approval and support.

THE SOLICITORS AND THE EXAMINERS IN CHANCERY BILL.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR has stated in the House of Lords that the nature of the duties to be performed by the Examiners under this bill is such that a Solicitor could not discharge them properly; and hence the new provision limiting the appointment to Barristers. But his Lordship did not state why a Soliciter should not be competent to the work, or why, if competent, he should not be eligible. If the choice of the Chancellor is left open to take from either branch of the Profession, why suppose that he would choose an incompetent Solicitor more than an incompetent Barrister? If the mere fact of being a Barrister of seven years' standing were a guarantee for fitness, there would be some reason in the limitation; but as that is notoriously not the case, and as certainly many Barristers could be found unfit, and many Solicitors could be found capable for the post, with all deference to the LORD CHANCELLOR, we cannot admit the validity of his plea for drawing a new line of limit, that does not mark either competency on one side of it or incompetency on the other. It seems to us not only an unjust, but also impolitic, exclusion.

PROGRESS OF LAW IMPROVEMENT.

THOUGH much has been talked about, little has been done. Lord LYNDHURST suggested that some contrivance for securing a more careful framing of statutes, before they become law, would be at least as useful as a consolidation of existing statutes, and the Lord CHANCELLOR assented, but gave no hope of any practical plan being devised. The Government have promised a Commission to inquire into the means of assimilating the Mercantile Law of England and Scotland. Lord ST. LEONARDS has promised to introduce a clause into the new criminal code for the better protection of women and children against assaults and cruelty. The LORD CHANCELLOR has announced that the consolidation of the law will be commenced immediately, some small subject being first selected by way of experiment.

The SOLICITOR-GENERAL appears to be the only real Law Reformer in the Government. He takes the right view of the present position of Law Reform—that too much has been done or not enough—that the only hope of the Profession lies now in carrying out changes to their completion, so that increased quantity may compensate for diminished fees. As the SOLICITOR-GENERAL must be the next Chancellor, his views on this subject are of more than common interest, for what he preaches now he will probably be called upon to practise. Sir R. BETHELL combines to an extraordinary extent a capacious grasp of intellect with rare practical ability.

SALES BY SOLICITORS.

THE proposition started by a large and influential section of the Profession has excited uncommon interest, and we have received a pile of letters upon the subject, some supporting, others disapproving—opinion appearing to be pretty equally balanced. The arguments for were exhausted in a letter to which we gave a place last week. The arguments against are well put in a letter we publish to-day, and certainly they are very cogent. If there was the slightest probability of the Solicitor becoming the Auctioneer, or anything like it,—in fact, of doing more than the Masters in Chancery have done—it should be stoutly opposed, whatever advantages it might appear to offer. We are promised, also, a statement of the case of the Auctioneers, which will explain to the Profession what they do not appear to be quite aware of at present,—the actual duties and labours of that functionary; which, we are assured, will satisfy the reader that the Auctioneer performs many necessary duties, besides those of the pulpit, which the Solicitor could not do, and that for such work he is by no means overpaid. We, therefore, request our readers and correspondents to suspend their judgments until they have fairly heard the case adduced by all the parties in this controversy, whose importance is too great for it to be hastily decided and disposed of.

THE INCOME TAX.

THE newspapers, and especially the Morning Chronicle, have been teeming with long, tedious, and extremely dull discussion upon the question whether and to what extent a tax on precarious incomes should differ from a tax on incomes arising out of realised property.

Notwithstanding the ingenious pleadings of our contemporary and some of its correspondents, the common sense of the world—the practical experience of every one—shows that there is a difference between the one source of income and the other—that the owner of the one is really a richer man than the owner of the other; and we have no doubt that the maintainers of the equality doctrine in argument would not hesitate in their choice between the two kinds of income, were it offered to them. Their practice would contradict their theory.

Assuming, then, that there is a difference, and that they ought not to be taxed on the same scale, the problem remains, how is the proportion to be ascertained, so as to do something like justice to all?—for perfect justice is unattainable in any scheme of taxation ever yet devised.

It has occured to us that the difficulty may be thus solved. We put it in the form of an illustration.

A. has 300*l.* rental of land.

B. has 300*l.* profits from a profession.

Is B. as rich a man as A.? Certainly not.

If not, why not?

Because if A. dies, his property remains, and the income continues to his successors. If B. dies, the income is lost to his successors.

What, then, will be requisite to make A. and B. equal in point of wealth, and therefore equal subjects for taxation?

Only this: that B.'s successors should be as well off as A.'s successors.

This can be done by an assurance of B.'s life, which would put him on an equality with A.

Therefore, before B.'s income can be fairly taxable, he must be allowed to deduct from it so much as would assure to him at his death the same capital as A. would possess at his death.

There would not be the slightest difficulty in ascertaining this. Given the age, the ordinary tables of an assurance office would show what sum per annum B. must pay to secure at his death a property equal to that of A. Deduct this payment, and the remainder of the income would be the proper subject for taxation. Parliament might enact a table for calculating this deduction, and which any actuary could supply. The only inequality then would be that of health; but this is a contingency to which all are subject, and it would be impossible to make so nice an adjustment. For every purpose of justice to the community, it would suffice that the table was calculated at healthy rates.

BUBBLE ASSURANCE OFFICES.

A TABULAR statement in the Post Magazine Almanac for 1853 reveals some curious facts respecting Fire and Life Offices, and their promoters. We derive from it a further proof of the manner in which the public are deceived and misled, to their great loss; and we learn how a thriving establishment, with offices, directorate, and "Capital Half a Million" may grow, mushroom-like, out of the brain of a coatless man, or a disappointed and discharged Secretary, or a dubiously-educated Gentleman, or an Esquire without reputation, position, or wealth.

During the year 1852 there were registered no less than 70 new offices to carry on the business of Fire or Life Assurance, or both. Of these a few were revivals of defunct establishments.

Only 12 out of the whole number were completely registered, and but 5 profess to have commenced business! Of these 12, one is known to be a respectable company, with the largest list of shareholders to be found in the Registration Books. One is an old and unsuccessful office under a fresh name. In no less than seven instances not a single share has been paid upon, although several of these had "commenced business;" and respecting the other three the information is altogether nil.

In the establishment, or rather registration, of these 70 offices, 114 promoters have been concerned; but for seven of the number no promoters' names are registered.

It is curious to note the trades, professions, and "no-calling," of these 114 promoters. The latter class greatly preponderates. Thus are the qualifications divided:—Of "Gentlemen," there are 30, and of "Esquires," 10; of Merchants 10, and Actuaries and Secretaries 12; of Barristers 6, and of Solicitors 8; of Surgeons and Warehousemen 3 each; of Reverends, Accountants, and Stationers, 2 each; and there are an Author and a "Shoe-manufacturer!" a Doctor of Divinity and a Grocer; an Artist and an "M.P.;" a Civil Engineer and a Baronet; a Bullion Merchant and a Manager of a Life Office; an Architect and a Life Assurance Agent; a Calico Printer and a Marble Merchant; a Cabinet Maker and a Manufacturer; a Printer and a Farmer and Grazier; an Iron Merchant and a Provision Merchant; a Share Broker and a Publisher; a Naval Pensioner and a Shipowner; and a Builder and a Lieut.-Colonel.

No unusual pressure was felt at any period at the Registration Office. The registrations were thus divided, according to the months:—

January . . 8	May . . . 9	September . . 3
February . 5	June . . . 7	October . . . 7
March . . . 8	July . . . 4	November . . 7
April . . . 3	August . 4	December . . 3
Uncertain 2

Thus "the season" had little to do with the work of Company-making; but it will be seen that May and June received more favours than any other two consecutive months; and July and August fewer than any two consecutive months. The tide was at its highest in May, and at its lowest in April, September, and December.

In several instances the company was registered to do an entirely new class of business, as well as to do the public. One sanguine promoter proposed "to assure constant medical attendance to the assured"—thus perpetually flourishing a lancet above the heads of the policy-holders, after the fashion of the Dionysian sword. In another case, the object was "to transact business at the 'diggins'"; and in a third, the purpose was the very questionable one of "guaranteeing the due performance of contracts." More sensible, one speculative society "guarantees the collecting and payment of rents;" while one, more daring than them all, is "for the assurance of money to be paid on the marriage of the assured, or his or her nominee." More impracticable still, one office "insures the delivery of colliers [collier vessels, we presume] on their arrival in London, and a supply of ballast;" and another professes to guard against bankruptcy and its terrors. But enough. This list of quackeries is as tiresome and unwholesome as it is dishonest. The provident should be on their guard against year-old assurance offices, whose promoters happen to be "gentlemen" or "shoe-manufacturers," "esquires" or "grocers," "M.P.'s" or "baronets,"—which seem to vegetate on the air, and have immense capitals on paper, but no paid-up shares—which, like the "Lion of England Life and Fire," have grown out of a defunct "Sceptre;" or, like the "Adamant," have sprung from a long-dormant "Alleviator."

It is an alarming fact, however, and one we would impress on the public mind, that of the seventy assurance offices registered in 1852, only five have commenced business, and that several of these have not received a shilling upon their shares. The question is if their share lists be not altogether impostures. Yet do we hear that some of these bubble offices, through the medium of the agency system, are enabled to "do a good business." But the assured, or rather their dependants, will be sufferers; and on behalf of these we feel apprehension and desire redress. Some practical man in the House of Commons should take this subject in hand. An Inspector of Assurance Offices would be even a more useful public servant than an Inspector of Prisons. His work would certainly be none of the cleanest, but it would do good service.

Since the above was written, we have received a letter from a subscriber stating that he had insured in one of the new Fire-offices—had suffered a loss of 450*l.* for which he had made application to the Board, but could obtain no reply—and inquiring if we could give him any information as to the office and its directors. Unfortunately for him, we can do so. The office is shut up; the secretary and promoter was a returned convict under a false name; the directors are men of straw; and there is not a single bonâ fide shareholder. So our reader loses his 450*l.*

AN ACTION AT LAW UNDER THE NEW PRACTICE. (a)

THE DECLARATION—INDORSEMENT OF NOTICE TO PLEAD.

IT is not necessary in cases where the defendant has appeared to the writ that the declaration should be indorsed with a notice to plead; the notice may be indorsed, or afterwards delivered separately: (sects. 62, 63.) It seems, however, to be essential to signing judgment by default where the defendant has not appeared that the notice to plead should be indorsed (sect. 28, ante, p. 133); and practically, no doubt, it will be indorsed in almost every case. When indorsed it is simply,

The defendant is to plead hereto in eight days, otherwise judgment. Dated the day of A.D. 185 . C. H. plaintiff's attorney.

If delivered separately, it should, of course, be entitled in the court and cause; and instead of the word "hereto," it should be to the declaration herein.

(a) By GEORGE TAYLER, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

SERVICE, &c. OF DECLARATION.

In case of the defendant's nonappearance to a writ not specially indorsed, the declaration indorsed with a notice to plead in eight days is to be filed (sect. 28, ante, p. 133); that is, delivered to the proper officer at the office of the Masters of the Court. In what cases particulars of demand must also be filed has been shown, ante, p. 209.

Where the defendant has appeared to the writ by an attorney having an address within three miles of the General Post-office, there is no doubt the declaration should be delivered at such address. There was formerly a rule in the Q. B., requiring every attorney residing in or within ten miles of London or Westminster to enter in a book in the Master's office an address in London or Westminster where he might be served with notices, summonses, orders, and rules, and ordering that all such not requiring personal service, might be served at the address so entered. In the Court of Ex. there was a slightly different rule. Pleadings, though not mentioned in either, were held to be within both of them: (Blackburn v Peate, 2 C. & M. 244.) The existing rule for all the Courts is that the Masters of the several Courts shall cause to be kept an alphabetical book at their offices, to be there inspected by any attorney or his clerk without fee or reward; and every attorney practising in the said Courts, and residing within ten miles of the General Post-office, shall enter in such book (in alphabetical order) his name and place of business, or some other proper place within three miles of the said Post-office, where he may be served with pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings; and as often as any attorney shall change his place of business, or the place where he may be so served as aforesaid, he shall make the like entry thereof in the said book; and all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings which do not require a personal service, shall be deemed sufficiently served on such attorney if a copy thereof shall be left at the place lastly entered in such book with any person resident at or belonging to such place; and if any such attorney shall neglect to make such entry, the fixing up of any notice, or the copy of any pleadings, notice, summons, order, rule, or other proceeding for such attorney in the Master's office shall be deemed a sufficient notice: (b) (R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 165.) It would seem from this rule that, supposing the attorney has neglected to enter such address, the declaration may be fixed up without any application to, or order of, the Court or Judge.

But there is some difficulty in determining the procedure after an appearance by the defendant in person. The defendant is required in such cases to give an address in the appearance, and by sect. 30, if an address so given is illusory or fictitious, the appearance will be irregular, and may be set aside by the Court or a Judge, and the plaintiff may be permitted to proceed by sticking up the proceedings in the Master's office without further service. By R. G. H. T. 1853, r. 166, however, the defendant is required, upon entering an appearance, to enter in a book, to be kept for that purpose at the Master's office, an address within three miles from the General Post-office, at which all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, or other proceedings not requiring personal service shall be left; and if such address shall not be entered in the said book, or if such address shall be more than three miles from the General Post-office, then the opposite party shall be at liberty to proceed by sticking up all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, or other proceedings in the Master's office, without the necessity of any further service. If the defendant observes both these provisions, there is no doubt that the service of the declaration should be at the address given in the book; but if he has not observed the rule of Court some difficulty arises as to how far the plaintiff is bound to regard the address in the appearance. If this address be fictitious, a more complex difficulty arises as to the plaintiff's proceedings. The subject has been considered in more detail than is necessary in these articles in an article on "Service of Declaration where Defendant appears in person," in last week's number (ante, p. 225), and the practical result seems to be briefly this,—that application should first be made to the address entered in the book, if there is one, and it is within three miles of the General Post-office. If one is not so entered, or it is more than three miles, or it is unsatisfactory, application should be made to the address in the appearance, and if that is fictitious it will depend somewhat on the circumstances of each case whether it will be wiser to proceed under the 30th section or under the 166th rule.

Although the defendant has appeared in person, if he afterwards appoint an attorney, who gives notice to the opposite party before the declaration is served, it must be served on such attorney; for in all cases where a plaintiff has sued out a writ in person, or a defendant has appeared in person, and either party has, by an attorney of the Court, given notice in writing to the opposite party, or the attorney or agent of such party, of such attorney being authorised to act as attorney for the party on whose behalf such notice is given, all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings which, according to the practice of the Courts, are to be delivered to or served upon the party on whose behalf such notice is given, must thereafter be delivered to or served upon such attorney: (r. 167.) (c)

If there be several defendants, and they have appeared personally or by separate attorneys, each defendant or attorney should be served with a copy of the declaration. If several defendants have appeared by one attorney, service of one copy on him is sufficient as to these.

If to a writ not specially indorsed one of several defendants appear, and others do not, the declaration will be in the same form as if they had all appeared: the defendant who has appeared must be served as if he were the sole defendant, and a copy must be filed under sect. 28 for the defendants who have not appeared. And under that section an interlocutory judgment by default may be signed against these defendants at the expiration of the time to plead.

In cases within sect. 33 (ante, p. 132), that is, where one of several defendants has appeared to a writ specially indorsed and others not, and the plaintiff has signed judgment against those who have not appeared, the declaration must be served on the defendant who has appeared, as if he were the sole defendant.

The form of the commencement of the declaration, in this case might have been referred to under the heading "Names of the Parties" (ante, p. 194). For it is necessary that in this case the declaration should suggest the judgment obtained; and the following form is offered, though not without hesitation, on account of the novelty of the proceeding under the 33rd section:

A. B. by, &c. comes and informs the court that a writ of summons indorsed in the special form mentioned in the 33rd section of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, was duly issued at the suit of the said A. B. against C. D. and E. F., and that the said C. D. has appeared to the said writ, and the said E. F. has not appeared thereto, and that by reason of such nonappearance the said A. B. did on the day of last [or instant] sign judgment against the said E. F., whereupon the said A. B. by, &c. sues the said C. D. for (the cause of action which there was against the defendants jointly may be stated).

The service of the declaration need not be personal; and as to service on the defendant, the same language as that used in the above cited rule of court as to service at the attorney's address may appropriately be used to define the mode of service at the defendant's address. It should be on some person "resident at or belonging to" the address given: (Taylor v. Whitworth, 9 M. & W. 478; S. C. 1 Dowl. 600.)

The service should be made before seven o'clock P. M.; if made after that hour it will be deemed as made on the following day: (r. 164.) In case of service after seven o'clock on a Saturday, probably this rule will be held to mean that the service shall be taken as made on Monday.

Service on a Sunday, there is scarcely a doubt, would now be held void, though there is an old case (Walgrave v. Taylor, 1 Ld. Ray. 705) which has been cited to show that it is good. The declaration had been served on Sunday in that case; but the decision was really this, that after the defendant had suffered judgment by default and writ of inquiry to be executed, the Court would not permit the objection to be taken. It has, however, been expressly decided since, that service of a notice of a declaration on a Sunday (like service of a writ, see ante, p. 123) is void, as being within the mischief of 29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 6, though not perhaps expressly included in its terms: (Walker v. Torane, Barnes, 309; Morgan v. Johnson, 1 H. Bl. 628.)

Formerly, where the declaration was filed it was necessary to give a notice of declaration—questions as to the form and service of which have often been before the Courts; and in cases where particulars of demand were required to be given, it was necessary they should accompany the notice. But from the language of sect. 28, and the abolition of the old rules of court, the service of these is not now necessary. Probably in some cases, especially where the defendant is out of the jurisdiction, the Court or Judge will, on making an order giving the plaintiff leave to proceed, impose the condition that a notice of the declaration having been filed shall be served.

After service of the declaration there are two or three minor matters, subsidiary proceedings as it were, which may arise.

AMENDMENT OF DECLARATION, &c.

The plaintiff may, after service, amend his declaration or particulars of demand. Even before the Common Law Procedure Act it was recognised as a general rule that, before judgment, either party was at liberty, upon application to, and by permission of, the Court or a Judge, to amend his pleadings: (Brazier v Jones, 6 B. & C. 196.) As to the declaration, the only limit to the discretion really defined seems to have been, that amendments which would introduce a substantially different claim or cause of action from that in the declaration were not allowed: (Lush's Prac. 384.) Of course the recent statute will tend to make the allowance of amendments less strict than heretofore: (See also ante, p. 107.) The payment of the costs of the application (and those occasioned by the amendment, if the defendant has pleaded or demurred) are almost universally a condition of the amendment being allowed.

SETTING ASIDE, &c. DECLARATION FOR IRREGULARITY.

The defendant, on the other hand, if he thinks there is any irregularity either in the declaration or its service, may apply to set it aside. This application should always be made on an affidavit verifying the declaration, &c.; and when it is necessary to state any matter of fact to ground the application on, an affidavit must be made. Where a summons is obtained to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the several objections intended to be insisted upon must be stated therein: (r. 136.) The preceding is a new regulation, but the following is a former one revived:—No application to set aside process or proceedings for irregularity shall be allowed unless made within a reasonable time; nor if the party applying has taken a fresh step after knowledge of the irregularity: (r. 135.) And the following is a carrying out of what was the former practice:—In all cases where a rule is obtained to show cause why proceedings should not be set aside for irregularity with costs, and such rule is afterwards discharged generally, without any special direction upon the matter of costs, it is understood as discharged with costs: (r. 137.)

A similar application, common formerly, and which will still be made under the new pleading rules, is to strike out a count or counts of the declaration inserted in violation of the rule that several counts shall not be allowed on the same cause of action: (see ante, p. 208.)

And if any pleading be so framed as to prejudice, embarrass, or delay the fair trial of the action, the opposite party may apply to the Court or a Judge to strike out or amend such pleading, and the Court or any Judge will make such order respecting the same, and also respecting the costs of the application, as such Court or Judge shall see fit: (sect. 52.)

APPLICATION FOR PARTICULARS OF DEMAND.

The defendant may also obtain particulars of the plaintiff's demand in many cases where they are not furnished. Beside those actions mentioned at p. 209 ante, in which particulars of demand must be delivered or filed with the declaration, the Courts have always exercised, on the application of the defendant, an equitable jurisdiction in ordering the delivery of particulars of demand, and that proceedings be stayed in the meantime: (Boulnois v. Mackenzie, 4 Bing. N. C.

(b) This word "notice" is unusual and untechnical in this position; most likely it is the result of a clerical error, and has been substituted for "service" by mistake. From its connection it will probably be considered to be equivalent to the latter.

(c) For the future, when the New Rules of Practice of Hilary Term last are cited in these articles, it will be by its number of the rule merely, as in this case.

127.) As a general rule they do so in all cases where it appears to be necessary for the furtherance of justice that the defendant should have more specific information than is given by the declaration. The cases in which this application is usually granted are more particularly stated in Arch. Pract. p. 1252; Lush's Pract. p. 373. The application for such an order should be made to a Judge at chambers in the first place.

If the particulars so obtained or those given under the rule of court referred to above are considered not sufficiently explicit, a precisely similar application may be made for an order for "better particulars."

A summons for particulars and order thereon may be obtained by a defendant before appearance, and may be made, if the Judge think fit, without the production of any affidavit: (r. 20.) (This rule may be noted as an addendum to the heading "Proceedings after Service," ante, p. 124.) And a defendant is allowed the same time for pleading after the delivery of particulars under a Judge's order, which he had at the return of the summons, unless otherwise provided for in such order: (r. 21.)

NOTES ON THE NEW RULES OF PRACTICE OF THE COMMON LAW COURTS.

(Continued from p. 225.)

We proceed, in continuation of our plan, to the further consideration of these rules, viz.:—

Appearance of several Defendants by the same Attorney.

R. 2. If two or more defendants in the same action shall appear by the same attorney and at the same time, the names of all the defendants so appearing shall be inserted in one appearance.

This rule is an extension, to all the courts, of a similar rule which formerly existed in the Court of Ex: (R. G. M. T. 1 Will. 4; 1 C. & J. 275.) The sole object of the rule would seem to be, to prevent unnecessarily incurring costs in entering separate appearances for several defendants who have retained the same attorney to defend them, and in the subsequent proceedings in the action. Therefore, an attorney appearing for two or more defendants jointly sued, will be entitled only to the costs of one appearance, and if one defendant obtains a verdict in his favour, he will only be allowed one half of the costs of his appearance as against the plaintiff: (Holroyd v. Breare, 4 B. & Ald. 43.) Neither would a plaintiff be entitled to deliver separate declarations for each of the defendants so appearing, nor to the costs of the same. These views would appear to embrace the whole practical effect of the rule. If several defendants defend separately, and apparently by different attorneys, but all the business is really done by one, they are not entitled to charge by separate bills of costs, but must make a joint charge: (Nanny v. Kenrick, 2 D. P. C. 334.) So if several defendants appear by separate attorneys who are members of the same firm, costs will only be taxed as if they had appeared by the same attorney: (Gambell v. Earl Falmouth, 6 M. & M. 859.) And if one of several defendants alone employs the attorney for all of them, the others are not entitled to costs at all: (Starling v. Cozens, 3 D. P. C. 782.) The appearance of several defendants by the same attorney will not, however, deprive them of their right to sever in their pleas, if their defences are different and independent; and they would be entitled to the costs of so pleading, and the evidence necessary to establish their pleas.

Undertaking of Attorney to appear.

R. 3. An attorney not entering an appearance in pursuance of his undertaking shall be liable to an attachment.

The former Rules of Court on this subject were R. G. M. T., K. B. and C. P. 1654; and H. T. 2 Will. 4, r. 31. By the first rule it was ordered that an attorney who has undertaken to appear shall be compelled to cause an appearance to be entered, or be liable to an attachment, or struck off the rolls, as the case requires, and the defendant, when he appears, shall plead as of the time when he should have pleaded, if his appearance had been duly entered. The rule of H. T. 2 Will. 4, extending to all the Courts, was simply that any attorney who undertakes to appear shall enter an appearance accordingly, without assigning any specific remedy for nonperformance of the undertaking. It appears from the reports that the Courts have always compelled an attorney to perform an undertaking of this nature with scrupulous fidelity, as well with a view no doubt of discouraging any temptation of collusion with a client to delay or defeat his adversary in the prosecution of his rights, as also of upholding the important principle of good faith in all transactions with mankind in his professional character. Hence, in the case of Wigg v. Rook et Ux. 6 Mod. 86. an attorney, on sight of a writ against husband and wife, undertook to appear for them, but afterwards would not do it. A declaration was delivered, which he received de bene esse, and judgment was entered for want of a plea: the Court set it aside; but ordered the attorney to be laid by the heels; and it was said, "that if an attorney undertakes to appear, and afterwards will not do it, upon summons before a judge, he shall be compelled to do it; and for an attorney to undertake to appear, and not to do it afterwards, is a contempt of the Court."

But an application of this description, it must be observed to the honour of the practitioner, is of rare occurrence; and, as a plaintiff may now proceed in his action under the Common Law Procedure Act, without an appearance being entered for a defendant, the rule will be of still less practical utility. Recourse, however, to the rule may become necessary, where a plaintiff, in consequence of the attorney's neglect to appear according to his undertaking, has been delayed going to trial at a particular sittings or assizes, or where the object of the attachment is vindictiveness or punishment on the part of the applicant. When a plaintiff has been thus prejudiced in his proceedings in the action, the terms that the defendant should plead instanter, and take short notice of trial would undoubtedly be imposed: (Hudson v. Handley, 1 C. & J. 373, n.) Before moving for an attachment, the attorney should be requested to enter the appearance pursuant to his undertaking, otherwise the Court would discharge the rule: (Jacob v. Magnay, 12 L. J. 93. Q. B.) The same end is sometimes satisfactorily attained, and at a less expense, and with less delay, by taking out a summons before a Judge at chambers, to show cause why the attorney should not enter the appearance.

A question may arise whether a verbal undertaking to appear can be enforced against an attorney. There would seem to be no substantial difference between the case of a written and a verbal undertaking, except perhaps in the medium of proof, to stand in the way of enforcing the verbal one. The principle upon which the Courts exercise a summary jurisdiction over an attorney, in compelling him to perform a guarantie given by him in his professional character, where such an instrument is not in writing or void for want of a consideration, according to the Statute of Frauds, would seem to be applicable to the case of a verbal undertaking: (See Re Greaves, 1 C. & J. 374; Re Hilliard, 14 L. J. 225, Q. B., 2 D. & L. 919.) "Even supposing the undertaking," the Court observed in giving judgment in the first of these cases, "to be void by the Statute of Frauds, the Court may, nevertheless, exercise a summary jurisdiction over one of its own officers, an attorney of the Court. . . . An attorney is cognisant of the law; and if he gives an undertaking which he must know to be void, he shall not be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong and say that the undertaking cannot be enforced."

A case was recently, in the early part of the present vacation, before Parke, B. at chambers, which well illustrates the principle in question. There the attorney for the plaintiff, in the course of conversation with the defendant's attorney on the day on which his time for pleading would expire, mentioned that he might want further time to plead, and the latter said that if he did, he should have it, and afterwards being unable, until late in the evening, to get the abstract of pleas from his counsel, he applied to the former to give further time having taken out a summons for the purpose, as he found it was necessary to obtain a judge's order for pleading the pleas prepared, which however was refused: whereupon he delivered on the following morning such pleas as would prevent the plaintiff from signing judgment as for want of a plea, and afterwards took out a summons to add a plea in the abstract which he was prevented from pleading by reason of the time promised being withheld. Parke, B. on hearing the application held that the promise ought to have been fulfilled, and made an order for adding the plea, and with costs to be paid by the plaintiff's attorney.

It is safer and more usual, however, to require the undertaking to be given in writing.

Changing Attorney.

R. 4. No attorney shall be changed without the order of a judge.

By an order of the K. B. and C. P. in Michaelmas Term 1654, it was provided that no person without a rule of Court or an order of a Judge, and notice to the adverse party or his attorney, shall change or shift his attorney; and if done by rule or order, such attorney is to take notice at his peril of the rules in the cause whereunto the former attorney was bound to take notice, and shall also pay such first attorney, upon demand, all such fees as shall be taxed to be due to him. A similar rule likewise existed in the Ex.: (May v. Pike, 6 Dowl. P. C. 197.)

The difference between the ancient and modern practice, it will be seen, is in regard to directing the change to be by the order of a Judge instead of by a rule of Court, with the view of diminishing the costs of such a proceeding. But the application has, of late years, been invariably made to a Judge at chambers. The object of the rule itself is to prevent a party from being harassed by a number of attorneys appearing for his opponent, and without affording him the means of knowing who is his real representative. When therefore an attorney has once appeared or acted, he cannot afterwards be changed by the party without an order. Hence it was said by Lord Holt, "You can't change your attorney without leave, though he be ever so great a cheat:" (Anon. 7 Mod. 50.) Until an order is obtained accordingly, the opposite party is justified in treating the former attorney as still representing the principal. In Powell v. Little, 1 Bl. 8, the plaintiff had privately changed his attorney in the cause. The defendant afterwards paid the attorney the debt in dispute for the use of the plaintiff; the Court held it a good payment, because the attorney was changed without leave. But proceedings taken by an attorney changed without an order are not, however, null and void. Therefore it is no ground for treating a rule nisi for a new trial as a nullity, and signing judgment upon the verdict in the action, because the rule was obtained by a different attorney from the attorney on the record, without an order to change him: (Doe d. Bloomer v. Branson, 6 D. P. C. 490,) Nor would a plea pleaded by a different attorney than the attorney who appeared for the defendant be such a nullity as would entitle the plaintiff to sign judgment as for want of a plea: (Hill v. Mills, 2 D. P. C. 696; Bayley v. Thompson, 2 D. P. C. 655.) Proceedings taken by another attorney, without obtaining an order to change the former attorney, are merely irregular, and may be set aside on that ground. But an order to change will in no case be necessary where the opposite party has treated the new attorney as the attorney in the cause: (Farley v. Hebbes, 3 D. P. C. 538.) So a plaintiff may issue execution by a different attorney from the attorney on the record without an order (Tipping v. Johnson, 2 B. & P. 357; Bevins v. Hulme, 15 L. J. 226 Ex.; 15 M. & W. 88); or enter satisfaction on the roll (Marr v. Smith, 4 B. & A. 466), because the original attorney's authority and retainer determine with judgment being obtained in the action. A person who proceeds at first in person, and then appoints an attorney, may give the opposite party notice of the fact by the very step which the attorney takes in the cause as attorney, without any formal notice of his appointment: (Jones v. King, 2 B. C. C. 192.) To obtain an order to change the attorney, a summons should be taken out for that purpose, and a Judge's order made thereon; a copy of which should be served on the opposite attorney, for, until it is served, the order is inoperative (Rex v. Boyd, 2 D. P. C. 147); and the party is not bound to notice the proceedings of the new attorney. As a security to the attorney for any costs he may have incurred for the party who applies to change him, the order is made and drawn up conditionally upon payment of his bill to be taxed by the Master. A copy of the order appointing him is then annexed by the new attorney to the proceeding which he next takes in the cause, and served upon the opposite party, or his attorney. There would appear to be no necessity to enter the change by way of formal suggestion on the record, as, for instance, when a new appointment of his attorney takes place, in the case of a plaintiff after declaration and before replication, or in the case of a defendant after plea and before rejoinder. It is sometimes done in practice; but its omission would not be a ground of error, and therefore wholly immaterial. The new attorney's name may be inserted in the proceedings, without formally noticing his appointment.

THE MAGISTRATE, AND PAROCHIAL AND MUNICIPAL LAWYER.

Summary.

SURETIES were given by a treasurer to a municipal corporation for duly accounting during the whole time of his continuing in office. Under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58, he was elected annually, and continued in office until after the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, when he was elected during the pleasure of the council. It was held that his sureties were not thereby discharged: (Mayor, &c. of Berwick v. Oswald, 20 L. T. Rep. 306.)

A. was summoned under the Poundkeepers' Act (6 Geo. 4, c. 43) for a penalty. The magistrates adjourned it for a fortnight, instead of a month, as usual. At the adjourned meeting A. did not appear, and was convicted in his absence. Before the court closed, he came in and protested against the conviction, declaring that the adjournment for a fortnight was without his knowledge, and one of the magistrates present thereupon refused to sign the conviction. The Court refused a mandamus to compel him. (Reg. v. Creagh, 20 L. T. Rep. 316.)

CHILDREN IN WORKHOUSES.—On Saturday was printed in a Parliamentary paper obtained by Mr. Rice, M.P. an abstract return of the number of children in the workhouses of the several unions and parishes in England and Wales on the 25th March, 1851, and 1852. On the 25th March 1851, there were 27,032 boys in the workhouses, and 22,420 girls, making 49,452. On the 25th March last the number was 46,600 boys and girls, of whom 5,297 were capable of entering upon service.

Government have purchased the Brixton House of Correction, which has ceased to be used as a prison since the completion of the County Gaol on Wandsworth-common. It is supposed that it is intended to convert the building into barracks.

The Berlin police has just done a very clever thing. A Jew, occupying an old dilapidated house in an obscure street, and suspected as a receiver of stolen goods, was secretly arrested in the night and carried off to prison. His shop, however, was opened as usual the next morning; a policeman disguised as a Jew was stationed in the back-room, and several others of the force lay hid in the cellar. It was not long before customers began to make their appearance. They were requested by the supposed Jew to accompany him to the cellar, where the proprietor of the shop was busy, and would discuss the bargain. They were there seised, gagged, and handcuffed, and kept till they could be conveyed at night unobserved to prison. By this stratagem the police has succeeded in entrapping not only the chief professional thieves, but several servants, who unsuspectedly robbed their masters.—Berlin Correspondent of the Daily News.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

Summary.

AN extremely interesting case on Copyhold Law is Eddleston v. Collins, 20 L. T Rep. 298, from the Court of Appeal. A deputy-steward, who was a minor, took a surrender of copyholds, the property of a married woman, by herself and her husband. The surrender was held to be valid, inasmuch as the office of a deputy steward is ministerial merely, and not judicial. In Re S. Thomas, 20 L. T. Rep. 299, the costs of an order vesting the estate of a lunatic mortgagee in the mortgagor were directed to be paid by the mortgagee, and the committee was ordered to convey at the expense of the lunatic's estate, except the stamp on the vesting order, which the mortgagor was ordered to pay. Where a lunatic, resident abroad, was entitled to a sum in Consols, which, in consequence of no dividends having been claimed for thirteen years, had been transferred to the National Debt Commissioners, the Lord Chancellor ordered the fund to be transferred to the name of the Accountant-General, in trust for the lunatic, and the dividends to be paid to him: (Re Saryaswista, 20 L. T. Rep. 299.)

Where a mortgagee had been in possession of the mortgaged premises for upwards of twenty years, and then, in answer to a letter of mortgagor's solicitor, requesting to know when he could see him as to his claims on the property, he replied he did not see the use of a meeting "unless some party is ready with the money to pay me off:" it was held to be a sufficient acknowledgment to take it out of the Statute of Limitations: (Stansfield v. Hobson, 20 L. T. Rep. 301.)

Two Charity cases of some interest are reported from the Rolls Court, but they do not require special notice in this place. They will be found at 20 L. T. Rep. 301, 302.

A. by will bequeathed to B. all the property which he should leave in the colony of the Cape of Good Hope. A person living at the Cape was indebted to testator in a sum secured by a promissory note. The note was held to pass under the word "property" in the will: (Scarey v. Harrison, 20 L. T. Rep. 302.)

A case on the construction of a lease of a coal mine, reported from the Court of Error, turns upon the language of the deed, and therefore is too long for description in this summary. It must be read in the report: (James v. Cochrane, 20 L. T. Rep. 310.)

SALES BY SOLICITORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I was both surprised and sorry to see your correspondent X.'s suggestion in your paper of the 26th ult., and an approval of the suggestion. I hoped that your next number would have contained some communication showing the disadvantages of the proposed plan; but instead of that I find letters highly approving of the course. I believe there are many of my professional brethren who, like myself, either have not the leisure or the liking for entering into a discussion of the various topics which from time to time are started in your valuable publication. But on questions which seem seriously to affect the Profession, silence amounts to culpability; and as this appears to me to be such a question, my present communication is addressed to you, in the hopes of inducing others freely to express their opinions on the matter.

For my own part, I confess I have no wish to turn auctioneer, even in the restricted sense and limited capacity which your correspondent X. thinks so desirable. In your article in your paper of the 5th inst. you intimate that, at the first glance, it appears to be a lowering of the Profession for attorneys to become auctioneers. Let me ask whether the second or any subsequent glance really alters the aspect. The meaning of your correspondent can only be collected from his letter. He proposes that the solicitor should be licensed to dispose of his client's estate by auction, that is to say, he may become auctioneer in the service of his client. You add, it is suggested that attorneys shall sell the property of their clients as solicitors for the vendors by way of bidding.

This leaves it as it was before. You say, "for this purpose he would not need to mount a pulpit, nor to speak a puff, nor to say Going, going, gone!" Surely, Sir, it cannot have escaped your penetration, that if this great boon were to be inflicted on the Profession, one of the qualifications necessary to be a successful practitioner would be to be a good auctioneer. It would not be necessary that the solicitor should mount a rostrum and puff without compunction, and say Going, going; but a certain class of the Profession would, without hesitation, adopt that course; and a large proportion of small proprietors having property to dispose of, and having no family solicitors, would, previously to their employment of a solicitor, carefully inquire which of the various practitioners in their neighbouring town was the best auctioneer, and their selection of the solicitor would be regulated by the information they obtained in answer to their inquiry.

Indeed, Sir, we are going down the hill fast enough, as this proposition seems strongly to indicate; but at present we have, at any rate, our respectability as a Profession left to us. But should we retain that if we were to become auctioneers, even in the proposed limited character? I think not.

Your correspondent, "An Attorney," in your paper of the 5th instant, states his intention to take out an auctioneer's licence when the proper time arrives. I submit that that is the proper course for those to take who desire to act as auctioneers. Don't degrade the whole Profession (for a degradation it assuredly would be), because certain individuals find it necessary to act as auctioneers. Let those who wish so to act pay for the licence and act. They may mount the rostrum and puff ad libitum; but don't let us as a body imagine that we can gravely and with great dignity hold an auction, even for our clients' estates, and lose nothing of our professional prestige. Besides, Sir, if we are to profit by the plan, we must of course charge as auctioneers, and how can we then pretend to keep our professional character intact? My anxiety that the Profession shall not lose caste, must be my excuse for this hastily-written letter.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

NEWTONIENSIS.

Answers to Queries.

PRACTICE.—LEASEHOLDS.

In reference to the inquiry of "C." in your number of the 19th ult. I beg to say that, as a rent with powers of distress and re-entry will have to be reserved to C., his attorney will be entitled to prepare the lease, there being no distinction between the case put and a conveyance in fee, reudering rent, which, and the duplicate, is always prepared by the vendor's attorney: (Doe dem. Bateman v. Freeman, 2 B. & Al. 168.) C. N.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

Summary.

A POINT as to the liability of a shareholder to calls, where the arrangements of the company, on the faith of which he subscribed, had not been carried out, was decided by the House of Lords in the Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland v. Leech, 20 L. T. Rep. 297. There was a treaty for the amalgamation of two companies. At a special general meeting of the company into which the other was to be merged, it was resolved that 4,000 shares of the merged company should be taken, a deposit of 2*l.* 10*s.* per share paid, and the line surrendered on payment of certain expenses. A list of the parties to whom the 4000 shares were to be allotted was forwarded to the secretary, and the name of the defendant appeared in it for 170 shares. Afterwards he applied for and obtained thirty more shares, and paid the deposit on the whole, and signed the subscription contract and deed. At a subsequent meeting of the shareholders, the arrangement was confirmed, and the amalgamation ordered to be carried out. Defendant refused to pay calls on his shares, on the ground that the amalgamation was not actually accomplished, but there was only a recommendation to that effect, and so the House of Lords, upon appeal, has held.

In Re Long's Estate, 20 L. T. Rep. 305, a company, taking leasehold land, under the powers of their Act, was ordered to pay the costs of the annual sales of stock representing the purchase-money, for the purpose of distributing the fund.

An elaborate judgment of a Court of Error, on a question as to the construction of certain agreements between two companies as to leasing the line by one to the other, is that of the West London Railway Company v. The London and North-Western Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. 307. The main point in dispute was whether the lessees were bound to use the line for passenger traffic. But the case is much too complicated for analysis.

WINDING-UP.

A SUIT had been commenced against a company which was ordered to be wound up. By direction of the Master the official manager prosecuted the suit, which was dismissed, with costs to be paid by the official manager. The decree was subsequently altered by the insertion of the official manager's name before the description. Defendants issued a subpœna against the official manager personally, and an attachment followed. Was he personally liable? V. C. Wood held that he was not so, but only as official manager; but his Honour seemed to be of opinion that the Court had jurisdiction, if it pleased to use it, to award costs against an official manager personally: (The Official Manager of the Grand Trunk, &c. Railway Company v. Brodie, 20 L. T. Rep. 305.)

PETITIONS, ORDERS, MEETINGS, APPOINTMENTS, CALLS, &c.

[Announced, issued, and made, during the past week.]

Gloucester, Aberystwith, and Central Wales Railway Company.—Call of 1*s.* per share on all the contributories to be paid by March 29 inst.—Finney.

THE LAWYER.

Summary.

EQUITY PRACTICE.—V. C. Stuart has decided that a plaintiff examining a witness in support of his case is not now prevented from taking a decree against him: (Robinson v. Briggs, 20 L. T. Rep. 304.)

On motion for a decree plaintiff gave notice of reading one affidavit, but at the hearing proposed to read that, and another, and defendant's answer; and a defendant in the same interest as plaintiff proposed to read the answer of a co-defendant. But it was held by V. C. Wood that no affidavit but that one could be used; that defendant's answer could be read without notice; but that a defendant could not, under any circumstances, read a co-defendant's answer: (Cousins v. Vasey, 20 L. T. Rep. 305.)

COMMON LAW.—Wightman, J. has ruled on circuit, in Davies v. Pritchard, 20 L. T. Rep. 316, that the rule excluding a wife's evidence does not prevent the widow of a testator from giving evidence in an action against the executor.

A point of Nisi Prius practice is reported from another circuit. In Buckmaster v. Meikeljohn, 20 L. T. Rep. 316, Williams, J. stayed execution where there appeared to be a bonâ fide intention to contest the verdict, on the defendant bringing the amount of damages into court.

In the Law of Attorneys there is an interesting case reported from Nisi Prius. Lord Campbell, C.J. has held that one partner in a firm of attorneys is not liable on a bill of exchange or note given by another in the name of the firm for money left with such partner to be placed out on mortgage, unless there has been a course of dealing between the partners of drawing and accepting bills or notes. But such other partner is liable for the money, although it was paid to his partner without his knowledge, and by him appropriated to his own use: (Harman v. Johnson, 20 L. T. Rep. 314.)

WRIT OF PONE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—In reply to "Studens" (Law Times, March 12, 1853, p. 231), I beg to say that, by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 2, it is enacted that "all personal actions brought in the Superior Courts of Common Law shall be commenced by writ of summons"—and by sect. 229 all the enactments and provisions of that Act, with respect to writs for the commencement of personal actions (except as to the test, &c. &c.), are made to extend and apply to the Courts of Pleas at Lancaster and Durham; that the mode of proceeding in the Court of Pleas at Durham by process called a writ of pone, was this:—It issued out of the Court of Chancery at Durham, directed to the sheriff of that county, commanding him to put, by gages and sure pledges, C. D., so that he answer A. B. of a plea, &c. in the Court of Pleas, at the return thereof, on, &c.

If C. D. appeared, an action was prosecuted in the Court of Pleas in like manner as if it had been commenced by summons.

Most of the practitioners who have considered the subject, hold that the writ of pone has been extinguished by the recent statute, because all personal actions are to be commenced by serviceable process. Others contend that the writ of pone has not been extinguished; and this they endeavour to support by alleging that 2 Vict. c. 16 enacted that the process in all actions thereafter to be prosecuted in the Court of Pleas at Durham by serviceable process, shall be by writ of summons, and the writ of pone was supported afterwards. And I presume that they also contend that where a statute is made in the affirmative, without any negative expressed or implied, it doth not take away the common law (2 Inst. 200), and that the writ of pone is by common law. This presumption is advanced, because I am told that the learned Commissioner of Bankruptcy sitting at Newcastle-on-Tyne is of opinion that the writ of pone may still issue. But, according to my reading of the statute, the language not only implies, but contains, a negative; and therefore I am of opinion that the writ of pone is abolished.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

A. T. STEAVENSON.

Darlington, March 15, 1853.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent "Studens," I beg to inform him that the writ of pone is not abolished in this county.

The 2nd section of the Common Law Procedure Act directs that all actions brought in the Superior Courts of Common Law shall be commenced by writ of summons; but as the pone issues out of our local Court of Chancery, the intention of applying the provisions of the Procedure Act to the Court of Pleas at Durham, with respect to writs for the commencement of personal actions, is not effected by the 229th section.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Durham, March 14, 1853. DUNELM.

COUNTY COURTS.

Summary.

THREE interesting cases in Insolvency are reported from Ireland, where the law on all the points in question is the same as our own, and therefore the cases are authorities here. In Re Murray, 20 L. T. Rep. 314, defending proceedings to try a right was held not to be a vexatious opposition, although the verdict was against the defendant. In the same case it was held that, where an insolvent possesses himself of money belonging to the trustees of his marriage settlement, and purchases with it property in a foreign country, which he returns on his schedule, it will be deemed a "making away" with his property, even though the trustees do not oppose. In Re Watt, 20 L. T. Rep. 314, a poor-rate collector who had paid a penalty for not paying in his collection weekly was remanded for breach of trust on account of a balance remaining in his hands on the same collection. Where a trader had contracted a debt when in a state of insolvency, but during some months after had reduced his liabilities, he was deemed not to have contracted a debt without probable expectation of paying it: (Re Egan, 20 L. T. Rep. 314.)

LATE CASES ON THE LAW AND PRACTICE OF THE COUNTY COURTS. (a)

X. CASES ON CERTIORARI.

A WRIT of certiorari facias, or of certiorari, as it is ordinarily termed, is issued from a Superior to an Inferior Court for removing any record or other proceeding into the Superior Court, which thereupon supersedes the jurisdiction of such Inferior Court, and makes all subsequent proceedings therein entirely erroneous and illegal. This writ issues of right, and is granted upon an ex parte application, which should be made to a Judge at chambers, and not to the Court. This was decided in Bowen v. Evans, 1 Cox & Mac. 207, which was an application for a writ of certiorari to remove a replevin suit, under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 121, from a County Court into one of the Superior Courts at Westminster. And in Robertson and another v. Womach, 1 Cox & Mac. 363, it was held that the words "by leave of a Judge," mean by leave of a Judge at chambers. An application, therefore, under sect. 40 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, for a certiorari to remove a plaint from a County Court must be made only at chambers.

Cases of partnership accounts under sect. 65 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, cannot be removed by certiorari, as, even should the defendant waive the question of jurisdiction, the Courts of Common Law have no machinery by which they can decide the claim of partners, and could only send such cases to a Court of Equity: (Durrant v. Tomlin, 14 L. T. Rep. 289.) Where a plaint in a County Court for 20*l.* damages was removed by certiorari into a Superior Court, and another plaint, including the same cause of action, but laying the damage at 5*l.*, was entered, a prohibition having been moved for, it was held that the pendency of the first action in the Superior Court was no ground for issuing a prohibition to the County Court in the second: (Edwards v. Rogers, 1 L. M. & P. 196.)

If the cause has been improperly removed, the opposite party should apply to the Court or a Judge for a writ of procedendo, which is a judicial writ issuing from the Superior Court, and commanding the Judge of the County Court to proceed in the cause: (Pollock's Prac. Co. Co. 117.)

In all cases in which jurisdiction was given to the County Court by stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, the judgment of the Court was final and conclusive between the parties, no method of reviewing the Judge's decision, whether in point of law or fact, existing. In cases, however, in which a more extended jurisdiction is given by the late Act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, there is an appeal to a Court constituted for that purpose; and in actions where the debt or damage sought to be recovered is above 20*l.*, or where a jurisdiction beyond its ordinary limits is given to the Court by agreement of the parties, if either party is dissatisfied with the direction or determination of the County Court in point of law, or upon the admission or rejection of any evidence, he may appeal from the County Court to any of the Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster.

To obtain a writ of certiorari to remove an action of replevin, it is required by sect. 121 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, that a declaration should be made that the title to a corporeal hereditament, &c. is in question, or that the rent in respect of which the distress had been taken was more than 20*l.*, and also that a bond should be entered into, with sureties, to be approved by the Clerk of the Court, to prosecute the suit with effect and without delay, and to prove before the Court by which the suit should be tried that such title was in dispute, or that there was ground for believing that the said rent or damage was more than 20*l.* It was held that it is not necessary that these conditions should be complied with before applying for a certiorari. It was held, also, that the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, does not apply to actions of replevin: (Mungeam v. Wheatley, 1 Cox & Mac. 445.)

It was determined in Fowler v. Golding, 1 Cox & Mac. 253, that a certiorari will be granted, on the ground that a jury had been applied for, and that a fair trial could not be had in the County Court by a jury from the locality.

A plaint in an action of trespass was entered in a County Court; both plaintiff and defendant appeared at the hearing, and the case was fully heard. The Judge, however, postponed the delivery of his judgment. In the meantime an application was made to a Judge at chambers for a certiorari to remove the plaint to a Superior Court. It was held that it was not too late to make the application: (Mitchell v. Thompson, 1 Cox & Mac. 271.)

It has been held that a certiorari does not lie to remove a plaint entered, under sect. 122 of the County Courts Act, for the recovery of a tenement. A question of title is not necessarily involved in a plaint for the recovery of tenements: (Price v. Price, 1 Cox & Mac. 333.)

An action having been brought in the County Court, demanding 20*l.* for damages done to certain premises by lime kilns of the defendant, the plaint was removed by certiorari, on the ground that, inasmuch as the value of the lime-kilns would be destroyed if the plaintiff were to obtain a verdict, and that they were worth more than 20*l.*, the cause was not within the jurisdiction of the County Court. A second plaint was then brought, demanding 5*l.* for the same injury, but stating it to have accrued between a longer period of time. At the hearing the defendant pleaded in abatement that the former suit was pending; but the Judge proceeded to hear the cause. On a motion for a prohibition, it was held that a prohibition would not lie to restrain the Judge from proceeding with the second action: (Edwards v. Rogers, 1 Cox & Mac. 373.)

Sect. 16 of the County Court Extension Act enacts, "that no judgment, order, or determination given or made by any Judge of a County Court, nor any cause or matter brought before him, or pending in this court, shall be removed by appeal, motion, writ of error, certiorari, or otherwise, into any court whatever, save and except in the manner and according to the provisions hereinbefore mentioned." And sect. 2 of the same Act enacts that this and the General County Courts Act shall be construed as one. It was held that the first-mentioned section is to be construed with reference to sect. 90 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, and that the certiorari is not thereby taken away or limited to cases within the former jurisdiction: (Jones v. Holdsworth and another, 1 Cox & Mac. 426.)

In the case of Parker v. The Bristol and Exeter Railway, 1 Cox & Mac. 435, it was also held that when an application is made to a Judge of one of the Superior Courts at chambers for a certiorari, he should be put in possession of all the facts, the situation of the parties, and the stage of the cause, so as to be enabled properly to exercise the discretion given by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 90; and therefore, where a certiorari had been obtained without the Judge having been informed that the cause had already been heard in the County Court, the writ was set aside. Parke, B. in delivering his opinion in this case observed, "I have not the least doubt upon the point whether the certiorari is taken away by the 16th section of the County Courts Extension Act, and I am clearly of opinion that it is not, although it becomes unnecessary to decide that here. That Act, by the 2nd section, provides that such Act and the previous County Court Acts shall be read and construed as one Act, and as if the several provisions in the said recited Acts contained, not inconsistent with the provisions of that Act, were repeated and re-enacted in it; and section 16 enacts that no certiorari is to be allowed except in the manner and according to the provisions thereinbefore mentioned. The only question then is, whether there is anything in the Extension Act (the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61) inconsistent with the provisions of the other County Court Act (the 9th and 10th Vict. c. 95), under which a certiorari may be issued in accordance with the 90th section: clearly there is not, except it may be said there is a power of appeal given. But a power of appeal is not inconsistent with a power or right also to have a certiorari. On the application for a certiorari, the party applying should certainly communicate all the circumstances attending the case to the Judge, because, upon such information, it is he who is to exercise the discretion given him by the Act as to security for costs, or imposing such other terms as he may think fit; and here, it appears, material facts were not communicated to the Judge, and he may or may not have exercised his discretion; but how could he do so unless all the facts were brought before him?"

A certiorari was issued to remove a County Court judgment into a Superior Court for the purpose of suing out an execution upon it from the Superior Court, pursuant to the powers given by the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 2. It appears doubtful, however, whether the 22nd section of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110 applies to the present constituted County Courts. That section says, that in all cases where final judgment shall be obtained in any action or suit in any inferior court of record, in which, at the time of passing of this Act (Aug. 16, 1838), a barrister of not less than seven years standing shall act as judge. The County Courts Act, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, passed Aug. 28, 1846: (Copeman v. Gladden, 16 L. T. Ex. 393.)

(a) By GEORGE HARRIS, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

In Brookman v. Wenham, 16 L. T. Rep. 492, 15 Jur. 249, it was held, that the certiorari is not taken away by the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 16; it is sufficient to serve the writ of certiorari at the office of the chief clerk.

COUNTY COURT DEFECTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The three complaints made by "Observer" are certainly not chargeable against the County Courts as a system.

"Observer," as a solicitor practising in the courts, ought surely to know that moneys are only payable to the plaintiff or his agent (rule 29); and that the clerk is expressly prohibited signing "any acquittance which might be necessary" (rule 16). Defect 1 rests therefore with "Observer" himself.

The clerk is bound to have some one in attendance every day during office hours; and in the case stated "Observer's" client might, I conceive, have compelled repayment of his expenses. Under any circumstances, however, this defect is not chargeable to the Court, but to an official individually.

Thirdly, as to letters. Does "Observer" reply to or write letters for which he is certain he will receive no remuneration? If the clerk of a court replies to one letter, he must to all; and, so soon as suitors found their correspondence attended to, this correspondence would (in large agricultural districts) absorb the greater portion of the clerk's time, for which he would not be paid—no, not even his postages.

It may not be unnatural, perhaps, for professional men, especially those who deem it infra dig. to enter these courts, to dislike them; but I think nine-tenths of the unprofessional public are undoubtedly of opinion that the County Courts (as a whole) have given the greatest satisfaction to the country.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

C.

MERCANTILE LAWYER.

Summary.

WE have several cases to note in the Law of Bankruptcy. The Lords Justices have again, in Ex parte Manico, 20 L. T. Rep. 300, mitigated the adjudication of a Commissioner, who had refused a certificate or protection to a bankrupt who had begun without capital as a wine merchant, bought wine on credit, which he immediately pledged to a broker, who sold it for nonpayment. He had been moderate in his expenses, and there was no proof of intended fraud. The Court of Appeal reduced the punishment to a suspension of the certificate for two years and depriving him of protection for six months. We cannot see the justice of this. If a poor man obtains goods by a false pretence, and so cheats a tradesman, he is tried and imprisoned; and morally there is no other difference between his crime and that of a man who takes up goods he cannot pay for, and pledges them immediately, than that the latter is the greater crime. We confess ourselves unable to understand this leniency towards that non-criminal form of cheating which is practised by bankrupts and insolvents. Many of them are greater rogues, and commit worse robberies, than the thieves who are tried in our criminal courts and transported.

Where, since the date of a bankruptcy, certain shares which formed part of the estate had greatly increased in value, the estate was ordered to be credited with one-half the increased proceeds, including dividends, with liberty for the creditors to prove for the residue of their demand: (Re Turner, 20 L. T. Rep. 300.) Where, upon appearance to a creditor's summons under sects. 78 to 82 of the Consolidation Act, the trader debtor admitted only a part of the demand, and made an affidavit that he believed he had a good defence upon the merits as to the residue, and the Commissioner dispensed with a bond being entered into to pay the disputed residue: it was held by the Court of Error in Oldfield v. Dodd, 20 L. T. Rep. 313, not to be an act of bankruptcy.

In the Law of Debtor and Creditor there is a case to be noted briefly. A. was indebted to B. and others. He conveyed freehold, leasehold, and personal estate to B. (without prejudice to the mortgage B. had on the property, and to his character as receiver of the whole) on trust to sell and divide proceeds among such creditors as B. in his absolute discretion should think fit. There was an ultimate trust to A. and his heirs. B. was not described as a creditor, but only as a trustee; and no other creditor ever knew of the existence of the deed. C. obtained a judgment, and seized the property in execution. The deed was properly held to be revocable, and therefore void: (Smith v. Hurst, 20 L. T. Rep. 303.)

COURT PAPERS.

Equity Courts.

NOTICE AT THE CHANCERY REGISTRAR'S OFFICE.

APPEAL MOTIONS ON CLAIMS.—All appeal motions from orders made on the hearing of claims are to be set down with the appeals, and not with the appeal motions; and the solicitors are requested, at the time of setting down such appeal motions on claims, to produce at the order-of-course seat the notice of motion, which must state that it is an appeal from an order of the Master of the Rolls, or one of the Vice-Chancellors, made on a claim.

NEW ORDER IN CHANCERY.

SETTING DOWN ADJOURNED CAUSES.

4th March, 1853.

The Right Honourable Robert Monsey Lord Cranworth, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britan, by and with the advice and assistance of the Right Honourable Sir John Romilly, Master of the Rolls, the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor Sir Richard Torin Kindersley, the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor Sir John Stuart, and the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood, doth hereby, in pursuance of the Act of Parliament made and passed in the 15th and 16th years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to abolish the Office of Master in Ordinary of the High Court of Chancery, and to make provision for the more speedy dispatch of business in the said Court," and in pursuance and execution of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, order and direct:—

That when any cause shall, at the original or any subsequent hearing thereof, have been adjourned for further consideration, such cause may, after the expiration of eight days, and within fourteen days from the filing of the certificate or report of the chief clerk of the judge to whose court the cause is attached, be set down by the registrar in the cause book for further consideration, on the written request of the solicitor for the plaintiff or party having the conduct of the cause, and after the expiration of such fourteen days the cause may be set down by the registrar on the written request of the solicitor for the plaintiff, or for any other party; and the request to set down the cause may be in the form or to the effect set forth in the schedule hereto, marked (A); but the cause, when so set down, shall not be put into the paper for further consideration until after the expiration of ten days from the day on which the same was so set down, and shall be marked in the cause-book accordingly. And notice thereof shall be given to the other parties in the cause at least six days before the day for which the same may be so marked for further consideration; and such notice may be in the form or to the effect set forth in the schedule hereto, marked (B.)

CRANWORTH, C.
JOHN ROMILLY, M. R.
RICHD. T. KINDERSLEY, V. C.
JOHN STUART.
WILLIAM PAGE WOOD.

SCHEDULE (A.)

IN CHANCERY.

A. v. B.

I request that this cause, the further consideration whereof was adjourned by the order of the day of , may be set down for further consideration before his Honour the Dated, &c.

C. D.
Solicitor for (the plaintiff.)

SCHEDULE (B).

IN CHANCERY.

A. v. B.

Take notice that this cause, the further consideration of whereof was adjourned by the order of the day of , was, on the day of , set down for further consideration before his Honour the for the day of .

Yours, &c.

C. D.
Solicitor for (the plaintiff).

To Mr.
Solicitor for (the defendant).

Common Law Courts.

FEES OF CLERKS OF ASSIZE.

IN pursuance of an Act, passed in the session of Parliament held in the 15th and 16th years of the reign of her Majesty, entitled "An Act to make provision for a permanent establishment of officers to perform the duties at Nisi Prius, in the Superior Courts of Common Law, and for the payment of such officers, and the judges' clerks, by salaries, and to abolish certain offices in those courts," we, the undersigned, being two of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, have caused the undermentioned table of fees to be prepared, specifying the fees proper to be demanded and taken on the Circuits by the officers and clerks at Nisi Prius, belonging to the Superior Courts of Common Law, namely:—

Clerks of Assize, as Associates on the Circuit.

	£	s.	d.
Every record of Nisi Prius delivered to be entered for trial	1	5	0
Every trial of a cause, from plaintiff ...	1	0	0
——— from defendant ...	0	15	0
——— if the trial continues more than one day, then for every other day, from plaintiff and defendant, each...	0	10	0
Returning the postea...	0	5	0
Every cause made remanet, at the instance of the parties, to be paid by plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be	0	10	0
Every cause withdrawn, to be paid by the party at whose instance it is withdrawn	0	5	0
Re-entering every record of Nisi Prius, made remanet, &c.	0	2	0
Every reference, from plaintiff and defendant, each	0	5	0
Every amendment of any proceeding whatever	0	2	0
Every order or certificate	0	5	0
Every special case, or special verdict, in addition to the charge for ingrossing and copying, at the rate of 4*d.* per folio, from plaintiff and defendant, each	0	10	0
Attending any court, or otherwise with any record or other proceeding, under writ of subpœna or order of court, per day ...	1	0	0

And no other fees than those before-mentioned shall be demanded or taken by the associates, marshals, clerks, criers, or other persons, performing any duties at Nisi Prius on the Circuits, but all such other fees are hereby abolished.

Given under our hands at the Treasury Chambers, Whitehall, this 23rd day of February, 1853.

W. E. GLADSTONE and ALFRED HERVEY, Two of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury.

We, the undersigned, Judges of the Superior Courts of Common Law, do settle, allow, and sanction the before-mentioned table of fees, prepared by the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, and we do hereby establish the same, under the provisions of the aforesaid Act of Parliament

CAMPBELL, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench.

JOHN JERVIS, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas.

FREDERICK POLLOCK, Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer.

W. H. MAULE, T. N. TALFOURD, and C. CROMPTON, Judges of the Superior Courts of Common Law.

The before-mentioned table of fees having been sanctioned and allowed by the Lord Chief Justices, the Lord Chief Baron, and other Judges, as required by the before-mentioned Act of Parliament, we do hereby order that the said table of fees be inserted and published in the London Gazette.

Treasury Chambers, Whitehall, the 24th day of Feb. 1853.

W. E. GLADSTONE and ALFRED HERVEY, two of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE ATTORNEYS' TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I understand, from the debate on Lord Robert Grosvenor's motion, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer is willing to consider the question of the attorneys' certificate-duty, with a view to some re-adjustment, though not an entire repeal.

The reasons which are urged for continuing the tax are twofold:—First, that it yields an amount of revenue which cannot be conveniently spared; secondly, that it excludes improper characters from the profession.

The suggestion I have to make would avoid both these objections, and seems easily practicable.

Let all attorneys pay admission and certificate duties as at present, and deduct their certificate duty from their income tax.

This would be as satisfactory a way of settling the question as any other likely to be proposed. The exclusion test would be as stringent as ever, and a considerable proportion of the revenue would be preserved. Young gentlemen making nearly 150*l.* a year would not escape both the income tax and certificate duty; nor is it reasonable they should. The large class really most worthy of consideration, who maintain and educate their families on 150*l.* to 400*l.* would have to pay one tax only, instead of two; and those in lucrative practice would probably be recon-

[illegible] settlement of both the certificate duty [illegible] income tax. I am, Sir, yours, &c.

THOMAS JOHNSON.

Manchester, March 21, 1853.

JOURNAL OF PROPERTY.

Public Sales.

On Thursday, March 17, 1853.

By Mr. Mapin, at the Mart.

A freehold semi-detached cottage residence, known as Grosvenor cottages, and situate at Tiptree Rise, Walthamstow, Essex; let at 25*l.* per annum each—produced 72*l.*

A brick-stuccoed dwelling-house, No. 16, St. James's terrace, Back-road, Shadwell, of the annual value of 22*l.*, term 5½ years; ground-rent 4*l.* per annum—17*l.*

The lease of No. 286, Strand; let at 73*l.* per annum, held of the authorities of Magdalen College for 12 years unexpired, at 43*l.* per annum—60*l.*

A six-roomed dwelling-house on the Mercers' Estate and being No. 19, Paterson-street, Stepney, let at 22*l.*, term 30 years; ground-rent 4*l.*—20*l.*

MONEY MARKET

English Funds.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Frid.
Bank Stock	..	..	..	229½	..	shut
3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	100⅝
3 per Cent. Consols Annuities	100½	100½	100½	100	99⅝	99⅝
Consols for Account	100½	100⅝	100½	100⅝	100	99⅞
New 3 per Cent. Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	126
New 3½ per Cent. Annuities	103⅛	..	..	103⅛	..	shut
Long Annu. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	..	..	..	..	..	..
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Oct 10, 1859)	..	..	..	..	..	..
Do. 30 yrs. (exp. Jan. 5, 1860)	..	..	..	6¼	..	..
India Stock	..	..	..	..	..	..
India Bonds (1,000*l.*)	..	..	45	..	50	45
Do. do. (under 1,000*l.)	..	45	50	48	45	45
South Sea Stock	..	..	..	..	..	..
Do. do. Old Annuities	..	..	..	..	..	shut
Exchequer Bills, 1000*l.*	14*	10*	14*	10*	..	13*
Do. do. 500*l.*	14*	10*	.	10*	8*	13*
Do. do. Small	13*	10*	..	14*	8*	11*

* Premium.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

GUERNSEY.—On the 10th inst. at 15, Cumberland-street, the Lady Guernsey, of a daughter.

HARRIS.—On the 13th inst. at 5, Sussex-place, Regent's park, the wife of William Harris, Esq. Lincoln's-inn, of a son.

NEWARK.—On the 16th inst. at Torney-street, the Viscountess Newark, of a daughter.

TURNER.—On the 18th inst. at 12, The Terrace, Kilburn, the wife of Hubert F. Turner, Esq. solicitor, of a son.

MARRIAGES

FINNIS—BURNAND.—On the 17th inst. at St. James's church, Westbourne-terrace, William Finnis, Esq., LL.B. of Trinity College, Cambridge, barrister at-law, third son of the late James Finnis, Esq. of Newfield, Ayrshire, and Tulse-hill, Surrey, to Antoinette, youngest daughter of George Burnand, Esq. of Sussex-square, Hyde-park.

DEATHS.

BLAKENEY.—On the 8th inst. at Greenwich, suddenly, of congestion of the brain, aged 49, James Blakeney, Esq. lately Crown Solicitor for the county of Galway, in Ireland.

CLEE.—On the 16th ult. at his house in Wakefield, Robert Clee, Esq. solicitor, aged 63.

CRAKER.—On the 11th inst. at Stow-on-the-Wold, Gloucestershire, Jackson Craker, Esq. aged 76, and for thirty five years resident manager of the bank in that town.

KINGSLEY.—On the 14th inst. at No. 18, Hyde-park-square, Katherine Eliza, the eldest daughter of the Vice-Chancellor Kingsley.

HODGSON.—On the 9th ult. at his residence in Nelson-square, Bradford, Yorkshire, Mr. Joseph Hodgson, solicitor, aged 51.

SCATCHERD.—On the 16th ult. at Morley House, Morley, near Leeds, Norrisson Cavendish Scatchard, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, aged 73.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, March 15.

BOTTOMLEY, JAMES, contractor, Over Tabley, Cheshire, April 7, and 28, at eleven, Manchester. Off. as Lee. Sol. Sedgeley, Knutsford. Petition, Feb. 28.

BOTTOMLEY, WILLIAM, grocer, Mansfield, Notts, April 1 and 29, at ten, Nottingham. Off. as. Harris. Sols. Shutt[illegible], Nottingham. Petition, March 5.

[illegible], Preston, April 8 and 29, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Lee. Sols. Higson and Robinson, Manchester, [illegible], Feb. 18.

DUTTENHAVEN, JOSEPH, corn dealer, Broadwall, Christchurch, Blackfriars-road, March 29, at half-past one, April 26, at one, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Stansfeld. Sols. Angell, Bedford-court, Fleet-street. Petition, March 12.

GEE, WILLIAM, muslin manufacturer, Manchester, April 8 and 29, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as Fraser. Sols. Messrs. Sutcliffe, Ribbon Bridge, Yorkshire. Petition, March 4.

GRAHAM, FRANCIS ROBERT, licensed victualler, Fleet-street, City, April 4, at one, May 5, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. at Johnson. Sols. Willis, Queen-street, Cheapside; and Lewerisse and Co. Old Jewry-chambers. Petition, March 10.

HEWITT, JOHN GALE, and REED, WILLIAM JUNIUS, chemists' manufacturers, Horseferry-road, Limehouse, March 31, at eleven, April 29, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Bell. Sols. Miller and Hoss, King William-street. Petition, March 12.

HODGES, ROBERT STEN, builder, Wolverhampton, March 31 and April 21, at twelve, Birmingham. Off. as. Whitmore. Sols. Corser and Underhill, Wolverhampton, and Motteram and Knight, Birmingham. Petition, March 12.

TEMPLE, ROBERT, grocer, Brixley, Norfolk, March 29, at half-past two, April 29, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Cannan Sols. Nicholls and Doyle, Verulam-buildings, Gray's-Inn, and Deaks, East Dereham, Norfolk. Petition, March 4.

YOUNG, FRANCIS, draper, Union-place, Walworth-road, March 22, at half-past one, April 26, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Off. as. Graham Sols. Reed and Co. Friday-street, Cheapside Petition, March 11.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

Gazette, March 15

JONES, ENOCH, iron founder, Elton, Bury, Lancashire, March 10.

Gazette, March 18.

AYRES, WILLIAM PORT, nurseryman, Blackheath, April 1 and 29, at one, Basinghall-street Com. Fane. Off as Cannan Sols. Bristow and Tarrant, 2, Bond-court, Walbrook. Petition, March 12

BOYS, JOSEPH, draper, High-street, Peckham, March 30 and April 26 at half past one, Basinghall-street. Com Lonsdale. Off. as Stansfeld Sol Il Braddon, 8, Gray's-Inn place Petition, March 14.

BROADHEAD, JAMES, manufacturer, Scholes, Woodside, Yorkshire, April 11 and May 2, at twelve, Leeds. Com Ayrton. Off. as. Hope. Sols Carus and Cudworth, Leeds Petition, March 7

BROCK, THOMAS, coal and potatoe merchant, Kingston-upon-Hull, April 18 and May 4, at twelve, Kingston-upon-Hull Com Ayrton Off as Carrick Sols. Levett and Champney, Kingston-upon-Hull. Petition, March 9.

BUTT, FREDERICK ARTHUR, grocer and cheesemonger, 22, Henry-street, Pentonville, April 1 at half past two, April 29 at half past one, Basinghall street. Com Lane Off as Whitmore. Sols Fraser and May, 76, Dean-street, Soho. Petition, March 18

CASBURN, JOHN FRANCIS BACKHILL, licensed victualler, King's-cross, Cumberland-row, March 23 and May 6, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com Goulburn Off. as Nicholson. Sols Dimmock and Buthey, 2, Suffolk-lane, Cannon-street Petition, March 15

CLAY, THOMAS KYNE, woollen warehouseman, 17, Ironmonger lane, April 1, at eleven, April 29, at twelve, Basinghall-street. Com. Goulburn. Off. as. Nicholson, Sols. Miller and Hoss, 76, King William-street. Petition March 10

DUNNE, JOSEPH HENRY, and VENABLES, JOHN, ship owners and merchants 9, Craven-street, Strand, March 29 and May 6 at eleven, Basinghall-street Com. Goulburn. Off. as Nicholson. Sol. William Philp, 26, Bucklersbury. Petition, Feb. 23.

LANGHAM, GEORGE, grocer and provision dealer, Ashton-under-Lyne, April 5 and May 3, at twelve, Manchester Off. as Pott. Sol Brooks, Ashton under-Lyne Petition, March 14.

HEAP, JOHN, sen. and HEAP, RICHARD, silk printers, Longsight, Manchester, April 8 and 29, at twelve, Manchester. Off. as. Lee Sols. Taylor, 72, Cooper-street, Manchester, and Hartley, Colne Petition, March 8.

JOHNSON, JOHN, cabinet-maker, Wakefield, April 11 and May 2, at eleven, Leeds Com Ayrton. Off as. Hope Sols Westmorland and Taylor, Wakefield. Petition, March 14.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES

Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends

Adams and Co. engineers, second sep. of W B Adams, 3*d* Cannan, London—Arnatt and Co. J B, tailor and draper, first, 5*s.* 11½*d.* Lee, Manchester.—Blundell, R. builder and corn dealer, second, 7*d* Cazenove, Liverpool—Ford and Hadfield, paper manufacturers, first, 6½*d* Lee, Manchester—Harris and Bush, brewers, third, 1*s.* 6*d* Cannan, London—Heathwaite, J cheesemonger, first, 1*s* 11*d* Cannan, London.—Roberts, J dealer in potatoes, first, 17*s* 6*d* Cazenove, Liverpool.—Rufford, Rufford, and Wrenge, bankers, second, 5*l* Whitmore, Birmingham—Sandle, J P cattle dealer and market gardener, first, 3*s* Cannan, London—Smith and Irvine, merchants, first, 6*d*. Bird, Liverpool. Thompson, J. linen draper, second, 2*d*. Groom, London.

INSOLVENT ESTATES

Pierce, T L. R. 5*s* 10*d* Apply to R Prall, solicitor, Chatham

Assignments for the Benefit of Creditors.

Gazette, March 8.

Burgess, W. plumber and glazier, Pendleton, Lancaster, Feb 26 Trust. E R. Ratcliffe, warehouseman, Pendleton Sol. W. M. Atherton, Manchester.—Evans, S. lodging-house keeper, Bath, Somerset, Feb. 11 Trusts S Evans, draper, and R. L. Wenlock, furniture broker, both of Bath. Sol R H Hellings, Bath.—Fletcher, W. H. butcher, Canterbury, Mar. 5. Trusts C. Mead, cattle salesman, and S. Martin, butcher, both of Canterbury. Sol. R. Walker, Canterbury.—Lane, C plumber, painter, and glazier, Cuckoo-hill, Hastings, Mar 3 Trusts C Womersley, upholsterer, Hastings; and H. Beck draper, St Leonards-on-Sea. Sol. J. G Langham, Hastings.—Terry, D ironmonger, Dover, Kent, Mar. 1. Trusts. W Udal, factor, Birmingham; and J. G. Drury, ironmonger, Canterbury. Sols. F. Knocker, Dover, and R. Sankey, Canterbury.

Gazette, March 11.

Harpraves, W. R., Andrews, S., and Powell, H. linen drapers, under the firm of Powell and Co. Lisson-grove, Marylebone, Feb. 24. Trust. G. Howes, warehouseman, St. Paul's Church-yard. Sol. A. Jones, Size-lane.—Lodge, J. dealer in canvass, Stockton, Durham, Feb. 26. Trust. J. S. Hopkin, canvass manufacturer, Arbroath. Sol. T. Crosby, Stockton.—Martin, W. butcher, farmer, and grazier, Kelvedon, Essex, Feb. 12. Trust. C. Everett, miller, Feering. Sols. Banks and Stevens, Witham.—Nevill, C. licensed victualler, New Talbot Inn, Smethwick, Stafford, Dec. 3. Trust. W. Downing, maltster, Smethwick. Sol. E. Hickman, West Bromwich.—Peirpoint, S. grocer, Great-church Paddington, Middlesex, Mar. 7. Trusts. R. G. Chorley, wholesale grocer, Whitechapel; and W. R. Jones, wholesale cheesemonger, Jewry-street, Aldgate. Sol. T. M. Castle, Jewry-street.—Price, J. grocer and provision dealer, Liverpool, Lancaster, Mar. 8. Trusts. E. Crosfield, wholesale grocer, and E. Appleby, corn and provision merchant, both of Liverpool. Sol. J. Tates, jun. Liverpool.—Slater, C. coach builder, Birkenhead, Chester, Mar. 3. Trust. R. Dickinson, victualler, Birkenhead. Sol. J. Neal, West Derby, near Liverpool.

Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, March 8.

Allen, J. J. and Simpson, P. Feb. 9. Debts paid by Allen. —Ryland, S. and Halsall, R. candlewick manufacturers and common brewers, Manchester, March 1. Debts paid by the copartnership as candlewick manufacturers by Ryland, and as common brewers by Halsall.—Barber, M. and Burgess, G. tailors and drapers, Macclesfield, March 5.—Bellamy, W. and Biddle, J. german silver platers, Sheffield, March 4.—Brierley, J. and Saxilby, R. glass dealers, Manchester, Feb. 1. Debts paid by Saxilby.—Brodrick, W. and Bell, W. attorneys and solicitors, Bow Churchyard, Dec. 31.—Bunbury, T. and Merredew, E. A. ribbon manufacturers, Wood-street, Cheapside, and Coventry, Feb. 28.—Clegg, J., Sloth, S. and Bell, J. woollen manufacturers, Halifax, March 5.—Davies, D. and Max, G. wholesale clothiers, Broad-street, Cheapside, Jan. 1. Debts paid by Davies.—Drake, W. and Straker, F. railway truck makers, Wakefield, March 1.—Embleton, J. and Pegg, H. painters and paper hangers, Manchester, March 8. Debts paid by Embleton.—Erwood, J. Enoch, W. H. and Conquest, G. paper, stainers, High-street, Hoxton Old Town, and Culford-road, Hackney, March 4. Debts paid by Erwood and Conquest.—Hague, T. and Pearce, J., plasters, Rotherham, Dec. 31. Debts paid by Pearce.—Hamilton, T. and R. engineers, millwrights, ironfounders, bell hangers, and whitesmiths, East Dereham, March 5.—Hargreaves, W. R. Powell, H. and Andrews, S. linen drapers, Lisson-grove, Marylebone, Feb. 24.—Jones, C. and Mooney, A. hosiers and smallware dealers, Liverpool, March 8.—Knight, W. and S. wholesale and retail linen and woollen drapers, silk mercers, hosiers, and habe dashers, Devonport, March 31.—Lear, C. and J. coach makers, Westminster-bridge-road, Lambeth, March 4.—Lewis, J. and F. F. milliners and dress makers, Gloucester, March 2. Debts paid by F. E. Lewis.—Mirrehall, C. B. Knowles, W. and Segar, W. coal miners, coal owners, and coke burners, White Rose Colliery, Newport, as regards Segar, March 8 Debts paid by remaining partners.—Mottram, T., Hawkins, J. and Hawkins, R. M. merchants and cutlery manufacturers, Sheffield, as regards Mottram, March 3. Debts paid by remaining partners Rothercliff, J. and F. G lithographers, St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross, as regards F. G. Rothercliff, Feb. 26.—Pontifex, R. and Mallory, H. coppersmiths, brass founders, copper, steel, and brass plate makers, Upper St Martin's-lane, March 4.—Reynolds, N. and Turner, W. cotton waste dealers, Manchester, March 1. Debts paid by Turner.—Rodgers, J., G. and W. and Staniforth, W. T. manufacturers of cutlery, Sheffield, as regards W. Rodgers, Feb. 26. Debts paid by remaining partners.—Spencer, G. H. and J. furriers, Pilgrim-street, Ludgate-hill, Feb 21 Debts paid by G. H. Spencer.—Stark, L. Butler, W. and Powell, H. J. pipe manufacturers, Saville-place, Lambeth-walk, Surrey, as regards Powell, March 8 Debts paid by remaining partners.—Todd, H. W., Laing, W. G., Todd, R. B. and M'Dougal, R. general drapers and mercers, Manchester, as regards M'Dougal, March 1 Debts paid by remaining partners.—Wallace, J. and Johnson, I. carriers, Long-lane, Bermondsey, March 7.—Wallbourne, H. B. and Daniels, N. tin plate manufacturers, Bailbrook, Feb. 24.

Gazette, March 14.

Abbott, R. H. and Humphreys, W. tailors and clothiers, Cornhill-street, March 9. Debts paid by Abbott.—Arrowsmith, E. and R. tailors, drapers, and undertakers, Burnley, March 8. Debts paid by R. Arrowsmith.—Barley, J., H. and T. and Paton, A. C. cloth merchants, Huddersfield, March 8. Debts paid by T. and H. and T. Barbour.—Bigg, H. D., J. and P. P. Green, B. R., Houghton, R. S., Fernyhough, J. R., and Carter, A. commission merchants and agents, London, and Port Louis, Isle of Mauritius, as regards Houghton, June 30.—Bradshaw, W. O and Hopkinson, W. E. timber merchants, Little Bolton, March 7. Debts paid by Bradshaw.—Brooks, W. J. and North, R. F. money lenders, Manchester, March 10 Debts paid by North.—Brown, T. and F. hosiers and glovers, Cheapside, London, Feb. 24.—Butterworth, J. F. and I. F. paper stainers and paper hangers, London, Bath, and Bristol. Debts paid by F. P. Cathcart.—Cathcart, F. W., Whiting, E. and Cathcart, E. B. government proprietors and printers, Maidstone, as regards Whiting, March 8. Debts paid by E. W. and E. B. Cathcart.—Dalrymple, J. and Neil, C. drapers and tailors, Sheffield, March 7 Debts paid by Neil.—Gardiner, L. and A. merchants and manufacturers, Manchester, March 8. Debts paid by L. Gardiner.—Gregory, E. and M. drapers and mercers, Gravesend, March 1.—Harker, F. S. and J. T. drapers and tea dealers, Bacup, March 1. Debts paid by F. J. Barker. —Heywood, J. and Horsfield, J. joiners and builders, Cheetham, near Manchester, March 7.—Hobson, G. and H. tailors, Ensbury-place, south, and Lombard-street, Feb. 28. Debts paid by S. Hobson, at Finsbury-place, and G. Hobson, at Lombard-street.—Howorth, S. Crabtree, J. and T. woollen manufacturers and merchants, Sugar Holme Mill, Newchurch, near Manchester, and Oporto, Dec. 31. Debts paid by S. Howorth and J. Crabtree.—Irwin, J. O. and Chester, F. architects, surveyors, and valuers, Manchester, Sept. 30.—Ledbetter, W. H and Newnham, J. brewers, Tonbridge Wells, Feb. 18.—Ledbetter, W. H. and Kelsey, H. E. and H. brewers, Tonbridge Wells, Jan. 17, 1853.—Lowther, T. N. and G. L. clock case manufacturers and cabinetmakers, Red-lion-street, Clerkenwell, Dec. 31. Debts paid by T. N. Lowther.—M'Lauchlan, H. and Bacon, H. drapers, Sheffield, March 7. Debts paid by M'Lauchlan.—Milburn, W. and Shaw, T. woolstaplers and fellmongers, Darlington, March 9.—Palmer, W. T. and Webber, C. J. dealers in Price's candles, Stockwell, March 7.—Petty, I. W. and Myles, G. engravers, printers, and lithographers, Manchester, March 5. Debts paid by Petty.—Romers, J. Meads, J. and Simpson, T. ship chandlers, Liverpool, March 8., Debts paid by Meads and Simpson.—Slater, S. and Seaton, W. electro-plate manufacturers, Birmingham, March 9. Debts paid by Slater.—Warburton, J., Whitehead, J., Pollard, J. and Whitehead, R. berlin wool manufacturers, Holbeck, Leeds, Jan. 1, 1853.—Wallis, R. and Thompson, A. iron and brass founders, Horncastle, March 9.—Wilson, P. G. M'Ivor, L. and Chippendale, T. merchants and commission agents, Liverpool, March 8. Debts paid by Wilson and L. M'Ivor.

REPORTS

OF

ALL THE CASES ARGUED AND DETERMINED

IN ALL THE

COURTS OF LAW AND EQUITY, IN BANKRUPTCY, INSOLVENCY, NISI PRIUS, THE CRIMINAL COURTS, AND IN IRELAND,

FROM SEPTEMBER, 1852, TO MARCH, 1853.

Equity Courts.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Reported by C. H. KEENE, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law.

(Before Lord ST. LEONARDS, L.C.)

July 19, 20, and 21.

McCALMONT v. RANKIN.

Ship Registry Act—Lien—Consignment—Cargo—Freight—Proceeds of sale—Fraud—Defendants not parties to record.

Plaintiffs, merchants in Liverpool, by letters, agreed with the English agent and representative of a colonial firm to accept the agency of his principals, and, in consideration of all consignments being made to them, to make certain advances. The plaintiffs accordingly made advances to a considerable amount, and were advised by the colonial firm of its intention to consign a ship and its cargo to them, to the credit of the consignors; and they forwarded to the plaintiffs a power of attorney, duly executed, to sell the ship on its arrival in England. On the faith of such information, and on the credit of such promised consignment, they made a further advance to the English agents. The colonial firm subsequently became embarrassed, and previously to the sailing of the ship assigned it, with the cargo and freight, to a second colonial firm, who duly registered the ship in their own names; and who very shortly afterwards (having changed the former master) assigned it to a third colonial firm, who duly registered it in the name of one of its partners. Such third colonial firm retained the new master, and consigned the ship and cargo to its own agents at Liverpool, with a power of attorney to sell the ship, and with the usual invoices, specifications, and bills of lading of the cargo to be delivered to their Liverpool agents. On its arrival in England, plaintiffs claimed possession of the ship and cargo, which being refused them, they filed a bill for sale of the ship, declaration of a lien on the proceeds, and for an account against all the members of the three colonial firms (except one member, a partner both in the first colonial firm and the English branch), the assignees in bankruptcy of the English agents of the first colonial firm, and the master of the ship. None of the defendants, except one, a member both of the third colonial firm and that of its Liverpool agents, had been served with subpœna. The consignees of the third colonial firm sold the ship after the bill had been filed. The Court, affirming the decision of the Vice-Chancellor, Held, that the registered owner and others claiming an interest in the ship and cargo were necessary parties, and that no case of actual fraud having been made out, the plaintiffs had no lien on the ship, or the produce of its cargo, when sold.

The plaintiffs in this suit were merchants, carrying on business at Liverpool in copartnership, under the firm of M'Calmont, Brothers, and Co. Messrs. H. J. and D. Mackay were merchants and copartners, carrying on business at St. John's, in New Brunswick, North America, whose agents in Liverpool were "Mackay, Brothers." Early in 1841, H. Mackay, on behalf of the firm of H. J. and D. Mackay, and also of Mackay, Brothers, wrote several letters to the plaintiffs, in which he offered to them the agency of his principals on their agreeing to grant them an open credit for 10,000*l.* to be secured by a mortgage of some mills and other property in St. John's. To this, by a letter of the 1st of February, 1841, they consented, on such two firms winding up their establishments at Liverpool, and removing to Glasgow, and on their transferring all shipments of supplies required by the St. John's firm to the plaintiffs as their agents.

The plaintiffs accordingly opened an account with the firm of Mackay, Brothers, and commenced the business of their agency, received remittances and consignments, and made large advances thereon.

In June, 1841, Messrs. H. J. and D. Mackay, being in the possession of a vessel called the Miracle, wrote to the plaintiffs informing them of their intention to consign it to them, and forwarded to them a power of attorney to sell the ship, and also a bill of lading of the cargo, upon which ship and cargo the plaintiffs made an advance. Before such vessel had reached, or had even been consigned to the plaintiffs, the Messrs. Mackay made it over to Messrs. Crane and M'Grath (who were registered in America as its owners), and assigned to them the cargo and freight. Messrs. Crane and M'Grath having appointed a new master, subsequently executed a bill of sale to Mr. John Pollok, the managing partner of Messrs. Rankin and Co. a firm in America, and who was immediately registered as its sole owner. He then transmitted to Messrs. Rankin, Gilmour, and Co. the Liverpool agents of the last-mentioned firm, a power of attorney to sell the ship, and a bill of lading of the cargo. On the arrival of the ship in Liverpool possession of the ship and cargo was demanded on the part of the plaintiffs, and refused by the then master, on the ground that they had been bought by Messrs. Rankin and Co. from Messrs. Crane and M'Grath.

The plaintiffs then filed their bill, alleging that the sales and transfers of the ship and cargo to Crane and M'Garth, and by them to John Pollok, were the result of a scheme devised between them and H. J. and D. Mackay, for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs and depriving them of the benefit of the power of attorney and consignment previously made to them; that Crane and M'Garth had not given any good or valuable consideration for the sale and transfer of the ship and cargo; and that Rankin, Gilmour, and Co. had, through the firm of Robert Rankin and Co. of which John Pollok was the managing partner, constructive notice of the plaintiffs' lien and claim on the ship, cargo, and freight, and praying for a declaration that the transfers and sales of the ship and cargo were fraudulent, and made for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs; for delivery up to them of the ship, cargo, certificate, and papers; for execution of a proper transfer or bill of sale to them; or for sale of the ship by the Court, and declaration that the plaintiffs had a lien upon the proceeds of such sale for what balance might be found due to them on their account; or if the ship and cargo, or either, had been sold, for an account of the proceeds and declaration of lien as aforesaid; but if the Court should be of opinion that the subsequent transfers and sales had deprived the plaintiffs of their claim upon the ship, &c. then for a declaration that they had a lien for their balance on the nominal or ostensible considerations given for the ship and cargo, and an order for payment of such balance; for an account between the plaintiffs and H. J. and D. Mackay and Mackay, Brothers; and for an injunction (which was afterwards refused by the Master of the Rolls) to restrain the sale of the ship and cargo by the firm of Rankin, Gilmour, and Co.

It was proved that Messrs. H. J. and D. Mackay had informed the plaintiffs of their intention to consign to them the Miracle, and that they had sent to them a power of sale to enable them to sell; that by the time that announcement had reached London, the house in St. John's, which was represented in England by Mr. James Mackay, was about to fail, and that coming to the knowledge of the plaintiffs, they refused to make any further advance; and in consequence of that, the St. John's house, by their representative in England, immediately considered how they could prevent the ship or its proceeds reaching the plaintiffs, who had made advances at that time amounting to 14,469*l.* although no more than 10,000*l.* were originally stipulated, and how they could make use of its proceeds to enable them to obtain further funds for their own use; that they were desirous not to give effect to the power of sale which they had sent to the plaintiffs, but to realize the property of the ship in some other way. It was proved, also, on the part of the plaintiffs, that Mr. James Mackay, as the representative of the St. John's house, had, before the arrival of the letter which had been sent from America, intimated to the plaintiffs that the ship Miracle had in fact started for England to the plaintiffs as consignees, and that it was upon the faith of that information that the advances were made.

The facts of the case and an abstract of the evidence will be found reported at length, 8 Hare 1, and 19 L.J. 215.

The questions raised were—

First, whether Messrs. Crane and M'Grath and John Pollock were necessary parties to the suit.

Second, whether such a scheme of fraud had been made out as would enable the Court to give relief; and Third, whether such an agreement existed as would give the plaintiffs a right to the vessel, or, if not a right to the vessel, a right to its proceeds.

The Vice-Chancellor Wigram decided that the suit was defective for want of parties; that no case of actual fraud had been made out; and dismissed the bill so far as it related to the ship and the proceeds of the sale; but rather than decide it adversely, gave either party liberty to try the question of the plaintiffs' claim on the cargo and freight by an action at law.

The Court of C. B. the defendant having elected to try the questions at law, decided that the plaintiffs, under their bill of lading, had a legal title to the cargo; but the Vice-Chancellor, on the hearing of the cause, on further directions, dismissed the bill, with costs.

From that decree the plaintiffs appealed.

Bethell and Cairns appeared for the plaintiffs.

Sir W. Page Wood, Bacon, and Bird Allen for the defendant Rankin.

The following cases and those which are referred to in the judgment were cited:—Du Hourmelin v. Sheldon, 4 M. & Cr. 525; Davenport v. Whitmore, 2 M. & Cr. 177; Batteruby v. Smyth, 3 Mad. 110; Hughes v. Morris, 16 Jur. 603; Ex parte Yallop, 15 Ves. 60; Browne v. Blount, 2 Russ. & M. 83; Follett v. Delany, 2 De G. & S. 235; Kirwan v. Daniel, 5 Hare, 493; Langley v. Fisher, 9 Bea. 90; Haille v. Smith, 1 Bos. & P. 563; Gaussen v. Morton, 10 B. & C. 731; Mestaer v. Atkins, 5 Taun. 381.

The several Acts of Parliament alluded to in the judgment were also referred to.

The Lord Chancellor.—The principal question in this case is one of great importance as regards the operation of the Navigation Act upon contracts. There was no actual contract between the parties for the ship Miracle, it was only for the purpose of meeting the advances that the ship was consigned to the plaintiffs; it was consigned to them in order that what was owing to them might be paid by its proceeds when sold. The letters which passed, it is contended, amounted to an agreement, upon the faith of which the advances were made, and this certainly appears to have been the real state of the case. The plaintiffs have acted honourably, but on the part of the defendants this was not an honest dealing as between merchant and merchant; still this Court must proceed upon the ground of law. The first difficulty which presents itself on the part of the plaintiffs is this:—James Mackay, who was the registered owner of the vessel in St. John's, in order to turn the property into money, and to prevent the London house from having the benefit of it, transferred it to Messrs. Crane and M'Grath, who are not before the Court. It was insisted that they were mere nominal parties, and that consequently when they transferred the property to the partners in Rankin's house, Rankins were in point of fact the only real owners of the ship, and that the claims of Crane and M'Grath might be passed by as of persons having no real interest. I am clearly of opinion that I can do no such thing; who the actual purchaser was, is not the question which I have to decide. They were the registered owners, and under the Acts of Parliament that I shall presently consider, they had the legal title. They gave a large consideration for the transfer of the vessel to them. Now they are not before the Court; and I cannot hear it said in their absence that this was not a real transaction. That title subsequently became vested in Pollok, and the result is, that, since the filing of the bill, the vessel has been sold, and the proceeds have been realised. Now, the parties by their bill, are relinquishing their claim to the vessel; and although they insist that, by reason of the fraud throughout the transaction, they might follow the vessel as they certainly might the proceeds, they abandon their claim to the former, and allow the legal and equitable title to have passed, and do not seek to disturb it; yet they say that this Court, by its general jurisdiction, can follow the proceeds in a case like this, and make the Messrs. Rankin, who have received the money, the produce of the sale, with the knowledge of the title of the plaintiffs, liable to their demand. In the first place, I am clearly of opinion that this is not a fraud which can be remedied by this Court, as against this party. This is a trick or contrivance on the part of the St. John's house to prevent the London house from having the produce of the ship and cargo, and to prevent it from getting the benefit of securities to which it was morally entitled. This is not such a fraud as this Court can reach, although it is a transaction which it is impossible for this Court to speak of in any other than terms of reprobation. In order to consider to what relief a party might be entitled, I must glance at the Acts of Parliament. It has been supposed that these Acts of Parliament gave rise to a great difference as regarded the question of contracts. The 26 Geo. 3, c. 60, provided that, where property in a ship was transferred, the certificate of registry should be endorsed upon and recited in the bill of sale or other instrument in writing, otherwise it was to be void. The great object was to keep the certificate of registry always in view, so that the devolution should shew who the real owner of the vessel was. The 34 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 14, recited the former Act, and that doubts had arisen whether every transfer in the property of a ship was required to be made by some bill or other instrument; or, in other words, whether the contract for the transfer of such property might not be made without any instrument in writing at all. Now, Lord Eldon (8 Price, 274, note) stated, that Lord Liverpool was very much astonished when he was told that his Navigation Act did not include contracts, and a subsequent Act was passed for the express purpose of including them. That Act declared that no transfer, contract, or agreement for the transfer of property in a ship should be valid or effectual for any purpose whatever, either at law or in equity, unless such transfer or contract or agreement for transfer should be made by bill of sale or instrument in writing, containing such recital as was prescribed by the recited Act. The omission, therefore, was supplied, and it is a mistake to suppose that the early statutes of Geo. 3 were not repealed by the Acts of the subsequent reign. The statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 105, repealed all the former Acts, and that of c. 160 made a new enactment. In that Act no particular mention is made of contracts or agreements, but there is a general provision, that "so often as the property in any ship shall, after registry, be sold, the same shall be transferred by bill of sale or instrument in writing containing a recital of the certificate of registry, &c. otherwise such transfer shall not be valid and effectual for any purpose whatever, either at law or in equity." That statute was followed by the 3 & 4 Wm. 4, c. 55, in the same words, and by the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89. Therefore, from the 6 Geo. 4 to the present time, in point of fact, contracts and agreements were not specifically referred to. Now it would be a most extraordinary proceeding on the part of the Legislature to suppose that, having made a general law which did not touch contracts, and finding that they had missed their point, having passed another Act which expressly included contracts, then, when repealing all former Acts, consolidating and improving the laws, they should make a general provision which should exclude contracts, and I think it perfectly clear that the Acts now existing do relate to contracts. They relate to contracts because they relate to every disposition. Nothing can be plainer than the words of the Act. What is the subject of sale? A chattel,—a ship. What is the form of transfer necessary? Anything,—a bought and sold note,—anything that shews that the one party parts with and that the other acquires the property is sufficient. It is not a real subject; it is a mere chattel; and therefore if you use the words "I contract with you to sell and to let you have the ship Miracle at 4,000*l.* to be paid to-morrow, or to be paid down," it is a perfectly good transfer, provided you comply with the terms of the Act. To suppose that contracts are here left out appears to me impossible, because the words are, "that as soon as the property in any ship is to be sold." I apprehend the true construction is, that no contract can be valid unless it complies with the conditions in this Act. It does not abolish or repeal the law as regards the regulation of contracts, but it continues in this general form the regulation as to contracts which before had been imposed; the general terms are sufficient, and I think sufficient to require that every contract shall be in compliance with the Act. Now there are many of these provisions which shew clearly that the notice, &c. were not to have the slightest operation, for in cases where there are successive sales, and which are entered into within a given number of days, and two or more are on the registry, the party first bringing the certificate shall have a right to the property as against other parties who are even prior to him on the registry. It is a mere question who first brings the certificate of registry to have the property endorsed upon it; so that the whole form of the Act negatives any equity arising out of the doctrine of notice. The true ground, both in law and equity, is, that you must have an effectual transfer at law if you mean to have a good title; and if you have an effectual transfer at law, it is just as effectual in equity. Now, in regard to the question of fraud, the cases are very few. Mestaer v. Gillespie was not decided on the question of fraud, which was there raised. There have been cases very much like fraud in which no relief has been granted. Lord Eldon never laid it down that fraud itself would be an exception; and Sir William Grant, who assisted him in the case of Mestaer v. Gillespie, did not go with the question of fraud, although an issue was directed to try it. In one of the cases before Sir William Grant, it appeared that a Mr. Dawson, one of several partners, assigned to a Mr. Bland and his partner a ship by a proper bill of sale. The ship was then at sea; and on her arrival in London, to which port she belonged, the plaintiffs took possession, and applied to the captain for the certificate of registry, to get it endorsed within ten days after the arrival of the ship, as required by the Act of Parliament; but the captain, acting in collusion with the assignees of the seller (as the case has been stated), delivered it to them. The Master of the Rolls was of opinion that the registry precluded it, and dismissed the bill; and in Barker v. Chapman, referred to by the Vice-Chancellor in Thompson v. Leake, 1 Madd. 39, he thought that there was no case made out for relief, either on the ground of accident or fraud. All the cases, so far as they have gone, are decided against the relief, but I am not prepared to say, nor do I lay it down that there may not be such a case of actual gross fraud as would enable the Court to give relief. It has been clearly decided by Lord Eldon, that while that express clause stood in the Act in regard to contracts, there could be no relief upon a contract, and he refused relief where the certificate was not duly recited. There was there a bonâ fide contract, and the money was paid, but it was informal, because it had not a proper recital, according to the Act, on the face of it; and he said that the Act prevented him from looking at it and giving relief under the contract. Where a contract is void at law, there can be no relief in equity; that may be laid down as a general rule; but I do not mean to say that it admits of no exception. Now, what is the case here? In the first place I am of opinion that there is no actual fraud, and therefore, upon the mere ground of fraud I cannot give any relief as against the registry. The contract is one of those which, according to Brewster v. Clark, this Court cannot enforce. In that case there was a regular contract, but it had not a proper recital of the certificate. Here the power of sale consists only in the letters that passed, and which are anything but a contract. The late Act of Parliament applies to contracts qua contracts (because if they do not amount to that, they amount to nothing) just as much as the preceding Act, which does so in express words, and which provision, I think, was intended to be carried over and given effect to by the latter Act of Parliament. Then the contract required all the same formalities, the same recital, and the same registration, and the certificate of the same indorsement, as any other transfer would have in order to make an effectual transfer. If this is not contract, it cannot operate to bind the ship in any manner as regards this Court. I am of opinion that, as a transfer, it is void both in law and equity. In the case before the Lords Justices, the contention was, that the contract amounted to an actual transfer of property; but the moment you enunciate that proposition, the Act precludes you from entertaining the jurisdiction; because the Act says that, as a contract operating as a transfer to sell it amounts to nothing, it shall be inoperative for any purpose whatever both in law and equity. I am precluded, therefore, as a judge in equity, from giving it effect under the general rules of the Court, because the moment it is said that it operates as a transfer it is obnoxious to the rule provided by the Act of Parliament. I think, therefore, I am entirely precluded from giving any relief as regards the transfer of the ship itself. Then it has been argued that I might and ought to give effect to these transactions as regards the proceeds of the vessel, although I cannot affect the vessel itself. The party here claims the right under certain documents which he alleges vest the property of the vessel in him, but for the Ship Registry Act. Being forced to relinquish that title, he still says he has an equity to that, which represents the vessel—the price produced by its sale. How can this Court give any relief as regards the proceeds of property which could not be given as against the property itself? There may be cases put with regard to other transactions, in which this Court would follow the money and would not follow the property, but I think the right to the money here must spring out of the right to the vessel. The right created was to the vessel; if there was any right created for the consignment it was of the vessel; and the vessel by its proceeds was to pay its debts; but before effect could be given to that inchoate right, before it ever ripened into a contract, the Act stepped in and enabled the party who was in the act of giving effect to it, to stop it and to prevent it from becoming a legal and binding act. If it did not become a legal and binding act, how then can equity affect the proceeds of property which by law has become no longer liable, and which belongs to somebody else? Suppose, for example, the Messrs. Rankin had got the ship and had thought fit to keep it to the end of time; now, if it is admitted they would have been entitled to retain the ship, and that the plaintiffs had no claim, it would be singular indeed if the other party could hold the property in defiance of the owner, and that you could never touch the property itself; that an equity did not exist so long as it was kept in specie, but the moment it was converted you might demand the money: what is that but indirectly breaking in upon the intention of the Act of Parliament, and giving the man a right of property in the vessel, though he cannot have the vessel itself? The Act of Parliament intended that the property and the right of property should go hand in hand, and that he who had the vessel should have an equitable right to the property. The cases, if it were necessary to go into them, would prove that. My clear opinion is, that this property, while it was in specie, not being such as under the documents which have been produced would give any title in the plaintiff, that it does not—that the certificate does not—give him the title he now claims to its produce. Upon the whole, therefore, I think that the plaintiffs are not entitled to the relief they claim; I must dismiss the appeal, and if the case had not been elaborately considered in the court below, I should not have dismissed it with costs. I very much disapprove of the conduct of the defendants, but under the circumstances, I cannot help dismissing this appeal with costs.

Reported by Owen Davies Tudor, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

(Before Lord Truro, L.C.)

Tuesday, Jan. 13.

Re Trusts of the Settlement of W. A. Dalton and Harriet, his wife; and Re 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96.

Trustees' Relief Act—Practice—Marriage settlement — Construction — Provision for children—Insolvency of parents.

Under a marriage settlement a sum of 4,232*l.* 16*s. Bank Three per Cent. Annuities, was vested in trustees upon trust to pay the dividends to the husband and wife jointly for their lives, and to the survivor of them, for his or her life, upon condition that they, or the survivor of them, should from time to time, and at all times, during the minority of their children, find and provide them with suitable diet, clothing, and general maintenance and support, in proportion to the circumstances and condition in life of the husband and wife, and to the expectancies of such children, notwithstanding the portions of such children should not have become vested or payable. The husband afterwards presented a petition under the Insolvent Debtors Act, whereupon an official assignee was appointed, and protection was granted to him upon the terms of his paying* 30*l. a-year out of the dividends of the trust funds in payment of his debts. Subsequently the husband and wife assigned all their interest in the fund to A. B. in consideration of* 500*l. lent to them. The trustees, on a demand being made upon them by A. B. paid the fund into court under the provisions of the Trustees' Relief Act, and the infant children presented a petition praying that the whole of the dividends of the trust fund might be applied for their maintenance and support, as it was not more than sufficient for that purpose. A. B. opposed this petition:*

Held, however, affirming the decision of the Court below, that the children were entitled to have the whole of the dividends according to the terms of the settlement:

Held also, that it was a proper question to determine, and that the Court was competent to deal with it under the Trustees' Relief Act.

This was an appeal from the decision of the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce under the following circumstances:—By an indenture dated the 29th of July, 1839 (being the settlement made on the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton), a fund was vested in trustees upon trust (among other things) that they, the said trustees, during the joint lives of Mr. Dalton and his wife, should pay the interest, dividends, and annual produce of the trust moneys and securities into the hands of Mr. Dalton and his wife, or upon their joint receipt or acquittance for the same; and from and after the decease of either of them, then to pay the said interest, dividends, and annual produce to the survivor of them for his or her life, but without any power of anticipating the said interest, dividends, or annual produce, or any part thereof; and, subject to the aforesaid trusts, it was declared and agreed that the trustees should stand possessed of one equal moiety of the trust moneys, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce thereof, in trust after the decease of either of them, Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, to pay over such moiety unto the survivor of them for his or her own absolute use and benefit; and as to the remaining moiety of the trust moneys and premises, in trust for the child, or, if more than one, for such child or children of the marriage as Mr. and Mrs. Dalton should during their joint lives by any deed or deeds jointly appoint, but so nevertheless that no share in the capital should be absolutely vested in any child, being a son, until twenty-one, or being a daughter, until twenty-one or marriage, and in default of such appointment, and so far as the same should not extend, in trust for all the children of the marriage equally, in manner therein mentioned: and it was by the same indenture also declared that it should be lawful for the trustees, at any time during the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, or the survivor of them, or after their decease at the discretion of the trustees, to apply all or any part of the share or presumptive share to which any child might be entitled, for or towards the education, preferment, advancement, or benefit of such child. And it was thereby agreed and declared the true intent and meaning of the indenture and of the parties thereto, that the dividends, income, and annual produce of the said trust moneys and premiums respectively were thereby reserved and secured to the said W. A. Dalton and Harriet his wife, and the survivor of them, upon condition only that they, the said W. A. Dalton and Harriet his wife, and the survivor of them, should from time to time and at all times during the minorities and minority of all and every the child or children of them the said W. A. Dalton and Harriet his wife, find and provide such child or children with suitable diet, clothing, and general maintenance, and support, in proportion to the circumstances and condition in life of them the said W. A. Dalton and Harriet his wife, and to the expectancy or expectancies of such child or children respectively, notwithstanding the portion or portions of such child or children should not have become vested or payable; and it was thereby also provided and declared that from and after any such advance should have been so made in the lifetime of the said W. A. Dalton and Harriet, his wife, amounting either alone or in the whole to one-third part of the share or shares respectively, then and in such case and from thenceforth the said W. A. Dalton and Harriet, his wife, and each of them should be wholly released and discharged from the condition or obligation contracted by the indenture to find and provide such child or children with diet, clothing, or maintenance as aforesaid. It was by the indenture also declared that the trustees should, after the decease of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, pay and apply for the maintenance and education of any child the interest, dividends, and annual produce of the portion to which such child should for the time being be entitled in presumption or expectancy, and invest the remainder of the interest, dividends, and annual produce to accumulate; and it was further declared that on failure of issue of the marriage, or in default of any child becoming entitled under the provisions of the settlement, the trustees should, on the death of the survivor of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, stand possessed of the moiety of the said trust moneys and premises, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce thereof, or of such part or parts thereof respectively as should not have become vested or been applied or appointed under any of the trusts or provisions contained in the settlement, in trust for Mr. Dalton absolutely. Mr. and Mrs. Dalton having made certain joint and several promissory notes, the latter was, in August 1844, taken in execution, for the sum of 67*l.* for the debt and costs of an action brought by the indorsee of the notes, whereupon she applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for protection, and an official and creditor's assignee under the insolvency were appointed. In November 1844 the commissioner made an order for the protection of Mrs. Dalton, upon condition of the payment of the claim for which she had been taken in execution, by the yearly sum of 40*l.* by half-yearly payments out of the funds settled by the indenture. Mr. Dalton was taken in execution in the month of November 1844, whereupon he petitioned the Court of Bankruptcy for protection, and an official assignee was appointed. In February 1845, the commissioner made an order for the protection of Mr. Dalton, directing that a proposal made by him for the payment of his debts should be carried into effect,—namely, that Mr. Dalton should pay to the official assignee 30*l.* in each year until his debts were discharged by half-yearly payments of 15*l.* each.

In the month of December 1845, Mr. and Mrs. Dalton assigned to Robert Obbard all the dividends, interest, and annual proceeds to which they were entitled during their joint lives in the fund, then subject to the trusts of their marriage settlement (being the capital sum of 4,232*l.* 16*s.* Consolidated Three per Cent. Annuities), and also all that one moiety of the capital itself, and the dividends, interest, and annual proceeds thereof, to which Mr. Dalton would become absolutely entitled by virtue of the settlement in the event of his surviving his wife, and also all that the other full and equal moiety or half part of the capital sum, and the dividends, interest, and annual proceeds thereof, to which Mr. Dalton would become entitled, in the event of his surviving his wife, and there not being any child who should become entitled thereto by virtue of the settlement, and also a certain life policy of assurance upon the trusts therein mentioned, for securing to R. Obbard the sum of 500*l.* lent by him to Mr. and Mrs. Dalton. The trustees, it appeared, did not act upon the order of November 1844, which was made by the commissioner on Mrs. Dalton's petition for protection. With regard, however, to the order made on Mr. Dalton's petition by the commissioner, they from time to time, upon the joint authority of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, paid to the official assignee 15*l.* half-yearly, and the balance of the dividends to Mr. and Mrs. Dalton on their joint receipt.

In July 1849, R. Obbard served the trustees with a notice, that the sum of 500*l.* and a considerable arrear of interest was then due, requiring them not to pay the dividends to any person but to him, R. Obbard, and also not to transfer the sum of 4,232*l.* 16*s.* Consolidated Three per Cent. Annuities to any person without the previous consent of R. Obbard. The trustees thereupon transferred the sum of 4,232*l.* 16*s.* Consolidated Three per Cent. Annuities into court, together with the dividends then due under the provisions of the Trustees' Relief Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96. The infant children of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, in March 1850, presented a petition, which, after setting forth the before-mentioned facts, stated that for some time past Mr. and Mrs. Dalton had omitted to provide them with suitable diet, clothing, and general maintenance and support, in proportion to the circumstances and condition in life of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, and the expectations of the petitioners, and that sums were owing for such diet, clothing, and general maintenance for the time past; that no advancement had been made to any of the petitioners under the provisions contained in the settlement. The petition then prayed that the dividends of the trust funds might be applied for the suitable diet, clothing, and general maintenance and support of the petitioners, in conformity with the indenture of settlement. On the 13th June, 1850, the petition coming on to be heard before Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, his Honour directed that the dividends of the trust funds, viz. of the 4,232*l.* 16*s.* Bank Three per Cent. Annuities, should be paid to Mr. G. E. Evans, a solicitor, who had been consulted by Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, during the minority of the petitioners, or until further orders, Mr. G. E. Evans undertaking to see the same from time to time properly applied in their maintenance and support.

From this order Mr. R. Obbard now appealed, upon the ground that he had, as mortgagee, a prior claim on the funds.

On the part of the petitioners, it appeared from affidavits in support of the original petition, that they had been brought up with considerable expectations, in consequence of their being in expectation of having a large fortune on the deaths of certain relations; that at the present time Mr. and Mrs. Dalton were in great distress and poverty; that none of the petitioners were able to earn their own livelihood; and that the dividends of the trust funds were not more than sufficient to provide them with diet, clothing, and general maintenance and support. It was, on the other hand, alleged by Mr. Obbard, and denied on the other side, that Mr. Obbard had advanced the 500*l.* for the purpose of enabling Mr. and Mrs. Dalton to maintain their children.

Malins and Daniel, for R. Obbard, in the first place took the objection that it was not a proper case to be dealt with under the Trustees' Relief Act; that that Act was intended merely to enable trustees who had money in their hands to discharge themselves from all liability by paying it at once into court whenever they had reason to suppose that there would be danger or difficulty incident to the administration of the fund upon their own responsibility; but the Act did not contemplate the conferring of power upon the Court to deal with adverse interests, or with cases of disputed facts upon petition under the Act. (In Re Bloye's Trust, 1 Mac. & G. 488.) Secondly, they contended, on the merits of the case, that the children were, at the utmost, only entitled to one-half of the dividends as against their parents, and in a case raised between the parents and the children, the Court could not, upon the ground that the whole of the dividends were wanted for the maintenance and support of the children, order that the whole thereof should be applied for that purpose; that in the present case the distress and the poverty of the parents would make no difference in the rights of the parties so as to take from the mortgagee a part of the security to which, under the deed of assignment, he was clearly entitled. They also contended, that under the order made by the commissioner, the official assignee was only entitled to two half-yearly payments of 15*l.* until Mr. Dalton's debts were paid, and subject to those payments, Mr. Dalton had full power to assign to Mr. Obbard his interest in the trust funds.

J. V. Prior, for the official assignee, appointed under Mr. Dalton's insolvency, insisted upon his right in respect of the two half-yearly payments of 15*l.* in priority to the mortgage.

Wigram and C. Hall, in support of the order of the Court below, insisted that as the objection to the jurisdiction had not been taken before the Vice-Chancellor, it could not be taken now. But even assuming that it could, it was clearly of no avail, as a disputed question of fact might be decided upon petition. (Re Upton Warren, 1 My. & K. 410.) That as all Mr. Dalton's interest in the funds vested in the official assignee on his obtaining the order for protection, he had nothing at the date of the mortgage to assign to Mr. Obbard. Moreover the order of the Court below was right, as it carried into effect the intention of the settlement, by giving to the children the whole of the dividends for their maintenance and support, as they were only just sufficient for that purpose.

Malins, in reply.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said that, in his opinion, and after fully considering the subject, he could see no objection to the order of the Court below, which had been appealed against. That the first point was, whether the question was of such a nature as the Court could properly decide upon a petition. And in reference to this, it had been urged that the evidence was conflicting, as to a certain fact connected with the purpose for which the advance of 500*l.* was made. It was not his opinion that the fact itself was material, as it did not appear that the 500*l.* were lent for any purpose specifically applicable to the children, but for the relief of their parents. His lordship said that he gave no opinion what the case might have been if the money had been borrowed for the payment of a school debt, or for any other purpose which had direct reference to the children; but as the case stood, the fact did not seem to him to affect the case upon which he had now to give his decision. His lordship also said that he thought that it was unnecessary to enter into a discussion of another point, viz. the objection which had been raised on the ground of Mr. Dalton's interest being vested in the official assignee. That the terms of the settlement were what the Court ought really to look at, and from them it was clearly to be gathered that the object of the deed was to secure the interest of the children, and what the Court had now to do was to give effect to that object according to the terms in which the parties had expressed themselves in reference to it. That it was admitted that a condition or trust was annexed to the application of the income for the parents; and the question was, whether, if the parents failed to perform that condition, they were to be entitled to the same interest as if no such condition had been attached. That it appeared, on looking at the terms of the deed, that the duty of the trustees, in the event of the parents not performing the condition, was to apply the trust funds in the same way as it was intended that the parents should themselves do. That being the case, it was the duty of the Court, which ought to put itself in the place of the trustees, to act in the same manner, and to do what the parents ought to have done, viz. apply the fund for the maintenance of the children. The question which then arose was, how the Court was to ascertain the amount which ought to be applied. It had been shewn that Mr. Dalton had been in an independent position, the situation and expectation of his children ought to be in accordance with that of their father. That they were entitled to receive such an education as would enable them to associate on equal terms with those of their own class; and relatives and friends who might be disposed to assist their parents in their present reduced circumstances, might naturally expect that the trust funds should be applied for the education of the children. That no argument could be founded upon the question which might very naturally be asked, what, in such a case, would become of the parents? His lordship said that he was of opinion that they were entitled to all the residue of the funds after providing for the maintenance of the children; but he was also of opinion that he was carrying into effect the intention of the deed, and of the parties to it, by directing so much of the funds as the children required were to be applied for their benefit. That the present appellant, although he might have advanced his money, did so, knowing all the circumstances of the case, and, it seemed, acting under advice; but his lordship observed he thought that there must have been something connected with the transaction which had not been brought to his notice, as it could scarcely be supposed that any competent person would advise a gentleman to lend 500*l.* on such a security. That if Mr. Obbard had lent his money from motives of benevolence and kindness, it was to be regretted that what he had done had resulted in disappointment. His lordship then concluded by saying that on the whole he was of opinion that the order of the Vice-Chancellor was consistent with the power of the Court, and that there was no need to postpone the case in order to put it in any other train of decision; that neither Mr. Dalton nor Mr. Obbard could take anything until after the maintenance of the children had been provided for; and that the fund was so limited that the whole of it must be applied for that purpose. That the appeal ought, therefore, to be dismissed with costs.

Dec. 19, 1851, and Jan. 12 and 22, 1852.

HARBY v. THE EAST AND WEST INDIA DOCKS AND BIRMINGHAM JUNCTION RAILWAY COMPANY.

Railway company — Agreement — Construction — 85th section of Lands Clauses Consolidation Act — Restoration of surface.

The lessees and occupiers of land made use of by them as a ropery, in consideration of the terms entered into with them by a railway company in a certain agreement withdrew their opposition to a Bill, according to which the railway was to pass through the ropery. In the agreement it was stipulated (among other things) that the railway should be constructed so as when finished the present level of the ropery should not be in the slightest degree altered at any portion thereof, nor the surface, area, length, or extent thereof in the least respect diminished, notwithstanding that the section of the said railway, lodged in Parliament, shewed that where the line passed through the said ropery would be cut through and carried away:

Held, affirming the decision of the Court below, that the railway company were bound to restore the surface so as to be available for all the purposes to which it might have been applied before the construction of the railway, and not for the purposes of a ropery exclusively.

The meaning of a covenant on the lessee's part in a mining lease to restore the surface to its original condition, is, that the ground shall be restored for all the practical purposes and uses to which it had been formerly applicable.

This was a motion, by way of appeal, on the part of the defendants, the East and West India Docks, and Birmingham Junction Railway Company, to discharge or vary an order of the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, of the 17th of June, 1851, whereby he in effect decided that according to the true construction to be put upon an agreement entered into between the plaintiffs and the defendants, the owners of a certain ropery, or the plaintiffs, its lessees, were entitled to as firm, strong, and solid a surface as the undisturbed earth presented in its original state before the railway was commenced.

The circumstances of the case were as follow:—

The plaintiffs had taken a lease of the premises in question, which they occupied as a ropery.

The defendants intending to construct a railway which would pass through the ropery, in order to get rid of the plaintiffs' opposition, pending their application to Parliament, entered into an agreement with them as to the mode of constructing the railway through the ropery as follows, viz.: that the construction should be of such a character "that when finished the present level of the said ropery shall not be in the slightest degree altered at any portion thereof, nor the surface, area, length, or extent of the said ropery in the least respect diminished, notwithstanding that the section of the said railway lodged in Parliament shews that where the line passes through the said ropery, it is intended to alter the level thereof; and notwithstanding that the plan of the said line shews that a portion of the said ropery will be cut through and carried away." There were other clauses in the agreement which, as they were not acted upon, it is needless to state at length, by which power was given to the company to substitute another ropery for the plaintiffs', or to pay the plaintiffs 8,000*l.* in full for all their interest in the lease and damage to their ropery.

The defendants proposed to cross the ropery of the plaintiffs by means of a bridge, but disputes having arisen between them as to the nature of the bridge, the defendants forthwith entered into possession of the plaintiffs' premises, having served them with a notice under the 85th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act; the plaintiffs then filed their bill, and obtained an ex parte injunction. However, upon the company undertaking to build a bridge to the satisfaction of an engineer to be approved of by the plaintiffs, the injunction was dissolved by consent. The plaintiffs and defendants afterwards still continuing to dispute as to the proper mode of making the bridge, an application was made to the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce to decide upon the proper construction of the agreement; and his Honour, on the 17th of June, 1851, decided the question in favour of the plaintiffs as before mentioned. On the 26th of November, 1851, the plaintiffs applied to Vice-Chancellor Parker, and obtained an order for a sequestration against the defendants, but the same was suspended for a month in order to give the defendants an opportunity, if they should be so advised, of applying by way of appeal to the Lord Chancellor; whereupon the defendants appealed from the order of the Vice-Chancellor Parker granting the sequestration, as well as from the order of the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, the latter of which appeals, however, was alone heard.

Roll, Daniel, and Bazalgette, for the appellants, contended that the plaintiffs being only lessees, were only entitled to the surface of the ground; that the applicaton of the plaintiffs to Parliament in opposition to the defendants' Bill, was confined merely to the destruction of the ropery; and that it was clearly intended by the parties to the agreement that, in consideration of the plaintiffs withdrawing their opposition, the defendants would make a level surface, equally available for the purposes of the ropery as that formerly enjoyed by the plaintiffs, and nothing more. That the case came within the 85th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, as the agreement did not provide for the amount of compensation, and that the notice was in conformity with the terms of the agreement. They moreover submitted to the Court that there had been such acquiescence on the part of the plaintiffs, with regard to the construction of the railway, as precluded them from taking so late any objection to what was proposed to be done by the defendants.

Bethell, Malins, Follett, and Logie, in support of the order of the Vice-Chancellor, contended that the construction which the defendants wished the Court to put upon the term "surface," occurring in the agreement was obviously absurd, as the effect of such a construction would be to prevent the plaintiffs from building on the land, or from converting it to any other purposes than that of a ropery. That the notice given under the 85th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act was given in violation of the agreement. That there had been no acquiescence on the part of the plaintiffs, who had filed their bill as soon as they had reason to suppose that the defendants intended to break through the agreement.

Roll, in reply.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said that it appeared to him that the question turned entirely upon the construction of the agreement, which had two main objects in view. That the appellants contended the agreement had only one object,—viz. the restoration of the surface for the purposes of a ropery. In his lordship's opinion there was no doubt but that the restoration of the surface for such a purpose to a given level was the first object; but the agreement had also the object of preventing the railway company from using the land by means of an open cutting; but it did not express how deep below the surface the railway was to be made, in the event of its not being carried over the plaintiffs' ropery. That it appeared that the plaintiffs were the first who used the land for the purposes of a ropery; but that there was nothing to shew that it was in future intended to confine the use of the land to the purposes of a ropery. Indeed, it appeared that two houses had been built thereon by the plaintiffs, and it was asserted that they had it in contemplation to build some more there; that although perhaps this was a circumstance to which it was not necessary to attach much weight, nevertheless, when the point was to be considered for what purpose generally the restoration was to be made, his lordship thought that the question to be answered was, whether he was warranted in holding, or whether there was any more reason for saying that the restored surface was intended only to be of a sufficient degree of strength to support a light carriage, and not a heavy carriage, or a house; and how was he to fix the limit as to weight which the restored surface was to bear, and how was it to be ascertained? His lordship said that he saw nothing in the agreement to qualify its plain meaning, and that as there was nothing in it to restrain its operation to the tenancy of the plaintiff, he thought the surface ought to be restored so as to make it available for all the purposes to which the adjoining surface was available; nor could he justly adopt the construction contended for by the defendants, viz. that because the agreement contained a stipulation for the restoration of the level for the purposes of the ropery, that therefore such agreement implied that the restoration should take place for that purpose exclusively. That in the case of a mining lease, where there were covenants on the lessee's part to restore the surface to its original condition, the obvious meaning was that the ground should be restored for all the practical purposes and uses to which it had formerly been applicable. His lordship therefore came to the conclusion that the construction which the Vice-Chancellor had put upon the agreement was essentially correct, and that the appeal ought to be dismissed with costs.(a)

ROLLS COURT.

Reported by J. MACAULAY, Esq. of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Monday, May 3.

AYLES v. COX.

Vendor and purchaser—Good title—Conditions of sale—Mistake or error in description—Compensation—Exceptions.

One of the conditions of sale was, that "if any mistake or error be made or discovered in the description of the premises, or any other whatever, shall

(a) The defendant did not proceed with the second appeal motion, and a month's further time for the issuing of the sequestration was granted, on payment of the costs of the motion.

ROLLS COURT.

appear in the foregoing particulars, such mistake or error shall not annul the sale, but a compensation or equivalent shall be given or taken, as the case may be, such compensation or equivalent to be settled by the Master in case the parties differ." One of the lots was described as "being copyhold of the manor of D." but it turned out to be partly freehold:

Held, that this did not amount to mistake or error description, but that the thing described was altogether different from the thing as it actually existed, and that a good title could not be made.

Some property was sold by auction in this suit. Lot 10, a cottage and about three acres, was described as "being copyhold of the same manor" (Dover-court), and lot 11 was similarly described.

By the 5th condition of sale it was provided as follows:—"That if any mistake or error be made or discovered in the description of the premises, or any other error whatever shall appear in the foregoing particulars, such mistake or error shall not annul the same, but a compensation or equivalent shall be given or taken, as the case may require; such compensation or equivalent to be settled by the Master, in case the parties differ."

Benjamin Johnson became the purchaser of lot 10 for 465*l.*

By an order of the Court it was referred to the Master to inquire whether a good title could be made to the premises comprised in lot 10.

In the Master's office it turned out that lot 10 was partly freehold and partly copyhold, and lot 11, instead of being copyhold, was wholly freehold. The vendor required compensation for so much as was freehold.

The Master reported that a good title could not be made to the premises comprised in lots 10 and 11, and the plaintiffs took exceptions, insisting that the Master ought to have found that a good title could be and had been made out to both lots.

R. Palmer and Waller in support of the exceptions.—The condition of sale was that a compensation or equivalent should be not merely taken but given, as the case might be, and that in case of mistake or error of description, or any other error whatsoever. This was sufficiently comprehensive to include the case of describing a freehold as a copyhold. The only mistake was in describing the property as of less value than it really was, and the purchaser would have no reason to complain, inasmuch as he got a better bargain; but they declined completing the purchase except on the terms of receiving a compensation. They cited Twining v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 325; and Leslie v. Thompson, 20 L.J. (N.S.) ch. 561.

Grenside, for the purchaser.

The Master of the Rolls.—You have sold a different thing from that which, by your conditions of sale, you purported to sell. It is not a mistake or error. You have agreed to sell copyhold, and you make title to freehold. It may be said it is better, but it is not what the purchaser bargained for, and he has a right to have copyhold if he wishes. The exceptions to the Master's report must be overruled.

March 10 and 29, and April 2.

IVE v. KING.

Will, construction of—Survivors—Tenant for life—Substitution—Period of vesting.

A testator gave real and personal to his wife for life, and after her decease to her executors, to sell and divide the proceeds in moieties, one of which they were to divide into five shares, and to pay each share to a person named by the will, and in case of the death of any or either of them before his wife, the testator, their shares to go to their husbands or wives, if any, and if not, to their respective children, or, if no children, then to the survivors of them, share and share alike. The other moiety the testator directed to be divided in the same way among five persons, and in case of the death of any or either, then he gave their respective shares to their children, if any, and if not to the survivors of them."

Held, that the second moiety was given to the first legatees as tenants in common.

That one of the five persons to whom the second moiety was given in the first instance having survived the tenant for life, took one-fifth absolutely.

That the children of original legatees who survived the testator, but died in the lifetime of the tenant for life, and also the children of those who were living at the execution of the will, but died in the lifetime of the testator, were entitled.

That the children of a person believed by the testator to be living at the execution of the will, but who was, in fact, dead, came under the same principle as the children last mentioned.

That where one of the original legatees named in the will died in the testator's lifetime, the class of children to take by substitution was to be ascertained at the death of the testator; but where the legatee survived the testator, and died in the lifetime of the tenant for life, the class was to be ascertained at the death of the legatee.

That the class entitled to a share under a gift to the survivors was to be ascertained at the death of the legatee whose share went over, or at the death of the testator, whichever last happened.

The question in this case arose upon the construction of the will of John Deverill, late of Langley Marish, Bucks, dated 26th February, 1819. The testator thereby gave his freehold estate, situate in the George-green, Langley Marish, to his nephew, John Deverill, his heirs and assigns, subject to and charged with an annuity of 5*l.* in favour of Elizabeth Deverill, the widow of testator's brother, George Deverill, during her life; and the will then continued thus:—"I give and devise all that my freehold estate in Horsmoor-green, in the parish of Langley Marish, to my wife Elizabeth for life, and also the dividends arising from whatever stock I may die possessed of in the public funds, the use of my household furniture, plate, linen, china, and also all other the rest, residue, and remainder of my estate and effects, of what nature or kind the same may be, after my just debts, funeral and testamentary expenses are paid, to my said wife Elizabeth for life; and from and immediately after her decease, I give and devise the said freehold estate situate in Horsmoor-green, as before described; and also give all the stock in the public funds which I shall die possessed of, and also all my household furniture, plate, linen, china, and all other my property that may be then remaining, to William Ive and Thomas Ashton, my executors hereinafter named and appointed, their heirs and assigns, for ever, in trust that they, the said William Ive and Thomas Ashton, shall sell the said freehold estate in Horsmoor-green by public auction or otherwise, in the best manner they can, and also to sell out all the said stock in the public funds, and to dispose of my household furniture, plate, linen, and china, and also to collect all other of my property that may be then remaining into their hands; out of which I direct my said executors shall pay and reimburse themselves all reasonable expenses in the execution of this my will; and I also bequeath them a further sum of 15*l.* each for their trouble; and whatever may be then remaining in their hands I direct may be divided into two equal parts, the one moiety or half share thereof I give in five equal shares; that is, one share to Elizabeth, the widow of my late brother George, one share to my brother William, one share to my brother Thomas, one share to my sister Mary Merrick, and the remaining share to my sister Elizabeth Edwards: and in case of the death of any or either of them before my said wife Elizabeth, then their respective shares to go to their respective husbands or wives, if any, and if not, then to their respective children, and, in failure of children, then to the survivors of them, share and share alike; and the other moiety, or half part thereof, I give as follows: 10*l.* thereof to Ann Edwards, sister of Edward Edwards, of Slough, Bucks, baker, should she be then living, as a token of my wife's friendship for her; and the remainder of the said moiety, or half part, to my wife's sister, Ann Smith, her brother Charles King, her brother John King, her brother Henry King, and her brother Thomas King; and in case of the death of any or either of them, then their respective shares to their children, if any, and if not, then to the survivors of them, share and share alike." The testator died on the 8th of June, 1837. Elizabeth Deverill, William Deverill, and Elizabeth Edwards died after the execution of the will, but before the testator's death, all three leaving children, some of whom died before the testator, some since his death, and some are still living. Some of these children were born before the date of the will. Thomas Deverill and Mary Merrick died during the life of the testator's widow, having had children, some of whom died in testator's lifetime, some since, and some are still living. Ann Smith died before the date of the will, leaving children, who are now living. Charles King died a bachelor after the date of the will, but before the testator. John King died after the will, but before the testator, leaving children, some of whom died before the testator, some since, and some are still living. Henry King is still living. Thomas King died during the tenancy for life, leaving children who are still living.

Eddis for the plaintiffs, the trustees.

Pownall for John and William, two of the children of Elizabeth Deverill, who died after the execution of the will, but before the testator's decease, contended that all children living at the date of the will and survived the tenant for life, took, notwithstanding the death of their parents in the lifetime of the tenant for life.

Smyth for a child of Elizabeth Edwards, who died before the death of the testator.

Fane for John Edwards, son of Elizabeth Edwards, he having died before the tenant for life.

Baggallay for Henry King, now living.

Sidebotham and H. C. Jones for other parties.

The following cases were cited:—Lejeune v. Lejeune, 2 Keen, 701; Smith v. Smith, 8 Sim. 353; Salisbury v. Petty, 3 Hare, 86; Giles v. Giles, 8 Sim. 360; Jervis v. Pond, 9 Sim. 549; Gray v. Garman, 2 Hare, 268; Ranelagh v. Ranelagh, 2 Myl. & K. 441; Cripps v. Wolcott, 4 Madd. 11; Edwards v. Edwards, 21 L.J. (N.S.) ch. 324; Collins v. Johnson, 8 Sim. 356, n.; Lyon v. Coward, 15 Sim. 287; Masters v. Scales, 13 Beav. 60; Christopherson v. Naylor, 1 Mer. 320; Watson v. England, 15 Sim. 1; Butler v. Ommaney, 4 Russ. 70; Waugh v. Waugh, 2 Myl. & K. 41; Thornhill v. Thornhill, 4 Mad. 377; Tytherleigh v. Harbin, 6 Sim. 329; Crowder v. Stone, 3 Russ. 217; Bebb v. Beckwith, 2 Beav. 308; Darrel v. Molesworth, 2 Vern. 378; McKinnon v. Peach, 2 Keen, 555.

The Master of the Rolls was clearly of opinion that the second moiety of the residue was given to the five legatees as tenants in common in equal shares; the testator, by speaking of "their respective shares," having clearly shewn his intention that each should take a distinct share. But on the other points he reserved his judgment.

Monday, March 29.—The Master of the Rolls stated the facts of the case. There were in this case four classes of claimants; first, a legatee, who survived the tenant for life; second, the children of those legatees who survived the testator, but died in the lifetime of the tenant for life; third, the children of those legatees who were living at the execution of the will, but died in the testator's lifetime; fourth, the children of a legatee who was dead at the execution of the will. The original bequest to Henry King was of one-fifth of the second moiety; and he having survived the testator's widow, was absolutely entitled to that one-fifth. As to the second and third classes of claimants, he was of opinion that the children of the legatees were entitled. His Honour took a distinction between this case and those in which the original legatees were not mentioned nominatim, but as members of a class, and he was of opinion that it came within the authority of Lejeune v. Lejeune, 2 Keen, 701. There was a difference in the wording of the gifts over of the shares in the two moieties, the reference to the deaths of the legatees of the second moiety being simply "in case of the deaths of any or either of them," without specifying any time. The words, "in case of the death," had reference to the same period as to each moiety, and meant in case of death before the period distribution. As to the fourth class, viz. the children of Ann Smith, the case of Tytherleigh v. Harbin, 6 Sim. 329; Giles v. Giles, 8 Sim. 360; Jarvis v. Pond, 9 Sim. 549, are not applicable, for in those cases there was a substantive gift to the children, whereas in this case the children founded their claim on a mere clause of substitution. His Honour could find no authority precisely in point, but he could not see any substantial distinction between a gift by way of substitution to the children of a person known to be living at the date of the will and one to the children of a person believed by the testator to be living at the time, though, in fact, he was dead. And he thought the cases in favour of the children of Ann Smith taking if she had died on the day after the making of the will were to be applied to the present case.

Friday, April 2.—The Master of the Rolls, in reference to the periods at which the classes of children entitled to take by way of substitution were to be ascertained, and also as to the construction to be put upon the limitation to survivors, observed that in cases where one of the legatees named in the will died in the testator's lifetime the class of children to take by substitution was to be ascertained at the testator's death, but where the testator survived the legatee and died in the lifetime of his widow, the tenant for life, the class of children to take by substitution was to be ascertained at the death of the legatee; so that in each case the share of a legatee dying before the period of distribution vested in such of his children as survived both their own parent and the testator. The class entitled to a share under the gift to the survivor being to be ascertained at the death of the legatee, whose share went over, or at the death of the testator, whichever last happened.

V. C. PARKER'S COURT.

VICE-CHANCELLOR PARKER'S COURT.

Reported by Geo. S. Allnutt, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

April 1 and June 21.

Ex parte The Incumbent and Churchwardens of Brompton.

Apportionment of charities—8 & 9 Vict. c. 70—"Parish."

A bequest of money had been made for the benefit of the poor of the town of K. The money was laid out in lands, which had been vested in trustees, who had applied the rents for the benefit of the poor of the parish of K. There was no municipal or market town of K. but a place called the town of K. was situate in that parish and an adjoining parish, though there were no defined metes or bounds to distinguish it:

Held, that this charity was apportionable under the above Act.

The Court has a discretion whether the charities within the above Act are to be apportioned or not.

This was a petition by the incumbent of the district church of Brompton and others for the purpose of having an apportionment made under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, of the charitable gifts which had been made to the parish of Kensington, of which parish the district of Brompton formed a part. The charities upon which the questions arose were called the Campden charities, the particulars of which were as follow:—Baptist Viscount Campden, by his will dated the 12th of October, 1629, made the following bequest: "I do also give and bequeath the sum of 200*l.* of lawful money of England to be equally employed for the good and benefit of the poor of the town of Kensington for ever, in such manner as the Right Honourable Edward Lord Noel and Sir William Blake, knight, and the churchwardens of the said parish of Kensington from time to time, shall think fit to establish for ever." By a deed dated the 20th of October, 1635, certain lands called Chare Crofts, purchased with the 200*l.* bequeathed by Lord Campden, were conveyed to sixteen trustees, to the intent that they should let the same, and yearly employ the rents "for the use, good, and benefit of the poor of the town of Kensington, according to the true intent and meaning of the said will of Lord Campden." Viscountess Campden, by her will dated the 14th of February, 1643, bequeathed as follows: "I give and bequeath to my loving friend Sir John Thorogood, D. Gardiner, esq. Mr. Williamson, William Arnold, John Arnold, Robert Saywell, Francis Blake, Philip Coleby, and Francis Dyson, all of them being parishioners of the parish of Kensington, in the county of Middlesex, and to the churchwardens of the said parish church for the time being, the sum of 200*l.* of lawful money of England, to be paid unto them within eighteen months next after my decease, if they do purchase land of inheritance therewith to the clear yearly value of 10*l.* a-year above all reprises at the least:" the testatrix then directed that a moiety of the rents should be from time to time annually applied for and towards the better relief of the most poor and needy people that were of good life and conversation, and that should be inhabiting within the said parish of Kensington; and that the other moiety should be yearly for ever applied to put forth one poor boy or more, being of the said parish, to be apprentice or apprentices. By a deed dated the 8th of November, 1644, certain lands called "Butt's Fields," which had been purchased with the last-mentioned legacy, were conveyed to eight persons, including the vicar and churchwardens of Kensington, upon the trusts of Lady Campden's will. By a deed dated the 29th of January, 1682, Chare Crofts and Butt's Fields were conveyed to twelve persons upon trust, to let the same and employ the rents for the good and benefit of the poor of the town of Kensington from time to time, according to the true intent and meaning of the wills of Baptist Lord Campden and Lady Campden. In 1742 it was ordered by the Court of Chancery, that new trustees should be appointed, &c. and accordingly a conveyance was made to them by the heir of the surviving trustee, upon trust, for the good and benefit of the poor of the town and parish of Kensington, according to the wills of Baptist Lord Campden and Lady Campden. From this time the lands appeared to have been managed and the rents applied by a body of trustees, the vacancies in the body being from time to time filled up by the existing trustees. At different periods the following districts were created out of the parish of Kensington, viz.—Brompton; St. Barnabas; St. John's, Notting-hill; and St. James, Norland. The present petition came on to be heard before Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, when the trustees of the charities objected that Chare Crofts was not held upon trust for the parish, but for the town of Kensington; and further that these charities having been managed by trustees independently of the vicar and churchwardens of the parish, they were not within the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70. By the order made by Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce on that occasion, and dated the 31st of March, 1849, it was referred to the Master to inquire and state what charitable devises, bequests, or gifts had been made or given to or for the use of the parish of Kensington, within the meaning of the Act, and how, and in what manner, such charitable devises, bequests, or gifts respectively, or the produce thereof respectively, ought to be apportioned between the district parishes and the remaining part of the parish according to the provisions of the Act; and that the Master should settle and approve of a scheme for the distributions of the proportions of such devises, bequests, and gifts respectively, or the produce thereof respectively, as should be so apportioned to the district parish, &c. By the consent of all parties the Master made a separate report, dated the 22nd of November, 1851, as to the charitable devises, bequests, and gifts only; and by that report he set out several leases of Chare Crofts, by persons stating themselves to be trustees for the parishioners of Kensington, and some vestry minutes of Kensington parish, in which the trustees of Chare Crofts were stated to be trustees of the poor lands; he also set out an Act of Parliament, 17 Geo. 3. c. 64, by which, after reciting a desire that a workhouse should be built for the parish, and reciting the different deeds by which the Campden lands had been settled, and that the vicar, churchwardens, overseers of the poor, and parishioners of Kensington, were desirous that the estates should be let out on lease, and that the rents of such part of the said charity estates as belonged to the poor of the said parish should be from time to time applied in the manner therein mentioned, in aid of the funds for building the workhouse, it was enacted, that leases should be granted as therein mentioned, and that 5*l.* part of the rents should be applied for putting out boys apprentices under Lady Campden's will, and that the remainder of the rents should be applied in aid of the funds for building the workhouse, and when all the moneys borrowed for the purpose of building the workhouse should be repaid, the lands should be held on the old trusts; and that those moneys had long since been repaid, and the lands in question freed from the burdens imposed by the Act. The Master further stated, that at the date of Lord Campden's will there was a place called the town of Kensington, and that there were separate Acts of Parliament (3 & 4 Wm. & Mary, c. 128; 9 Wm. 3, c. 37; 35 Geo. 3, c. 74); all of which related to the lighting and watching of the town of Kensington; and that there was a place called the town of Kensington, situate in the parishes of St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, and St. Margaret's, Westminster; that there was no municipal corporate town or market town in the parish of Kensington, and that the place called the town of Kensington had not any known or defined metes or bounds to distinguish it from other parts of the parish of Kensington. The Master then found that the distribution of the rents of Chare Crofts and Butt's Field had been at all times made to persons parishioners of the parish of Kensington residing in various parts of the said parish, without limiting any portion thereof to persons residing in any part of the said parish that could be termed or denominated the town of Kensington, and that the said charity estates had ever since the original foundation, except during some part of the period between the years 1682 and 1742, been always vested in a separate body of trustees. Upon this report the petition now came on to be heard.

Wigram and B. L. Chapman appeared for the petitioners.

Russell and Giffard contended that the case was not within the Act, and referred to Doe dem. Higgs v. Terry, 4 A. & E. 274; Doe dem Jackson v. Hiley, 10 B. & C. 885; Doe dem. Hobbs v. Cockerell, 10 B. & C. 478; Allason v. Stark, 9 A. & E. 255; and Rex v. Halesworth, 3 B. & Ald. 717.

Selwyn appeared for other parties.

Swanston and Goodeve, for the vicar and churchwardens of Kensington parish.

W. M. James for the Attorney-General.

JUDGMENT.

Thursday, June 24.—The VICE-CHANCELLOR (after stating the order dated the 31st March, 1849, and that the Master had by his report dated the 22nd of November last, found that the charitable gifts or bequests given or bequeathed by Baptist Viscount Campden and Elizabeth Viscountess Campden were charitable devises, gifts, or bequests made or given to or for the use of the parish of St. Mary Abbotts, Kensington, within the meaning of the Act of Parliament) said, that this petition was heard only as to the question arising with regard to Lord and Lady Campden's charities, and as to these, two questions were argued,—the first was, that Lord Campden's bequest originally was for the benefit of the poor of the town of Kensington, and the objection was taken that the town and parish of Kensington were not identical, and therefore that the report finding that this was a charity for the use of the parish of Kensington was erroneous. That point was fully argued, and upon it his Honour stated his opinion at the time, that the Master upon the evidence had come to the right conclusion, and that Lord Campden's charity was a charity for the benefit of the parish of Kensington. The second question that was argued was, whether these Campden charities were or were not to be apportioned under the 8th & 9th Vict. c. 70, s. 22. Now the Master set out in detail the history of these charities to the present time, commencing with the wills of Lord and Lady Campden, and in his report he stated the application which had been made of them. He said it appeared by the books of the trustees, and he found that the incomes of the charity estates had always been applied to or for the use and benefit of the poor of good life and conversation of the parish of St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, and for apprenticing poor boys of the parish, and then he concluded his report by finding, as his Honour had already stated, that these were charitable gifts within the meaning of the Act in question. Now his Honour could not doubt that the Master's finding in this respect was correct, that is to say, that the Campden charities were charities which the Court had authority and jurisdiction to apportion under the Act; and if that were so, it appeared that the question whether they were in fact to be apportioned was a question that was not open upon the order which the Court had made, for the Court directed that the Master without exercising any discretion should at once proceed to settle a scheme for apportioning all the charities that he should find to be charities within the Act. There was nothing before his Honour to shew what view of the statute the Court took in making the order beyond the order itself. There was no report referred to of any judgment that the Court pronounced in making the order. His Honour found that in the case of the West Ham Charities (2 De G. & Sma. 218), the Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that in cases of this kind the Court had a discretion to be exercised as to whether the charities within the Act were to be apportioned or not. He proposed to make a reference that the Master should inquire whether there were any, and what charitable devises, bequests, or gifts that had been made and given for the use of the poor of the parish of West Ham, and whether it was fit and proper, having regard to the state of the parish, that such devises, bequests, or gifts should be apportioned between the district of St. John's and the remaining part of the parish under the statute, and in that case to approve of a scheme for such apportionment." Now, it did appear to his Honour that this case of the West Ham Charities proceeded on what he might call a sounder view of the Act of Parliament than that which was applied in the present order, if the order, as he thought it did, regarded the provisions of this statute as imperative,—as provisions binding the Court to apportion all charities coming within the scope of the Act. The language of the Act was, that it should be lawful for the Court to apportion between the remaining part of the parish, and the district and separate parish, or district parish, or district chapelry, any charitable devises, bequests, or gifts which should have been made or given to or for the use of any such parish, or the produce thereof; and in any such case to direct that the distribution of the proportions of these gifts should be made and distributed by the incumbents or spiritual persons serving the church, or by the churchwardens of any such district and separate parish, &c. as the Court of Chancery might think expedient. Now, there was no doubt that in construing statutes words of permission were very often construed as if they were imperative or obligatory on the Court, but this was by no means an universal rule; it must depend on the subject-matter, and the context of the Act of Parliament. The words here were, it is to be "lawful" to apportion any gifts, and in any such case to give directions. It did not appear to his Honour that "any" there should have the force of "every," which would necessarily follow if the provisions of the Act were to be imperative on the Court. Again, it appeared to him that the subject-matter almost forbid the construction which made it imperative on the Court to make the apportionment, because it could not have been the intention of the Legislature that every parish charity, which might be an entire thing,—a charity for founding a school or hospital,—should at all events be apportioned under the provisions of this Act of Parliament. It appeared to him that the sound view of the Act must be, that the Court should have a discretion, and in exercising that discretion that the Court should be guided by the consideration whether or not the administration of the charity was or not affected by the division of the parish into districts to the prejudice of the inhabitants of the new district. It appeared to him, that on the present order the Court had reserved to itself no discretion on that subject, and being of opinion that these were gifts within the statute, he could only affirm the Master's report, and the Master must then proceed under the remaining part of the Vice-Chancellor's order.

Friday, July 23.

GOODMAN v. DRURY.

Will—Construction—Vested interests.

A testator charged lands with an annuity of 15*l. to M. F. and after her death charged the lands with the payment of* 100*l. to each of the three children of M. F. and which sums he bequeathed to each of them accordingly; and he directed the same to be paid within six months after the decease of M. F. or to such of them as should be then living. One of the children died in the lifetime of M. F. and it was* Held, that the legacy was not vested.

This was a special case filed under the following circumstances:—

V. C. PARKER'S COURT.

Henry Bates, by his will dated the 2nd of July, 1827, devised certain real estates to John Goodman, for his life, "charged and chargeable as hereinafter mentioned," and after his death, to William Goodman, his heirs and assigns. The testator then charged the devised estates with an annuity of 50*l.* to his wife, and, after her death, with an annuity of 15*l.* for his niece, Mary Freeman, for her life. The testator then proceeded as follows:—"And from and after the decease of my said niece, I do hereby further direct that the said hereditaments and premises shall stand and be further charged, and I do hereby onerate and charge the same with the payment of 100*l.* a-piece to Richard, Mary, and Louisa Freeman, the children of my said niece, Mary Freeman, and which said several sums of 100*l.* I do hereby give and bequeath to each and every of them accordingly, and do direct the same to be paid and payable respectively within six calendar months next after the decease of my said niece, Mary Freeman, or to such of them as shall be then living." The testator died in 1835, and his widow died in 1836. Mary Freeman, the daughter of the testator's niece, married Mr. Drury, and died in the lifetime of her mother, the annuitant. Mary Freeman, the testator's niece, died in 1851, and the question submitted to the Court by this case was, whether the legacy of 100*l.* had absolutely vested in Mrs. Drury, so as to entitle her husband, who had taken out administration to her, to receive it.

Russell and Pryor, for the devisee of the estate.

Malins and Shapter, for Drury, the husband.

The following cases were referred to: Farmer v. Francis, 2 Sim. & Stu. 505; and Re Bartholomew, 1 Mac. & Gord. 354.

The Vice-Chancellor said, that when there was a gift of personal estate to a legatee, the postponement of the payment to a future period did not prevent the legacy from vesting. This, however, was not the case where there was a gift of money charged on real estate. Whatever might be the terms of a gift of money charged on land, if the payment should be postponed, the legacy would not vest until the time of payment. There was an exception to this rule, where the postponement of the payment might appear to have reference to the situation or convenience of the estate. Here the direction was, that the estate should be charged with the payment of 100*l.* to each of the three children of Mary Freeman, and which sum he did thereby give and bequeath to them accordingly. Had the will stopped there, the children would have vested interests. It went on, however, to say, "I direct the same to be paid to them within six months after the decease of Mary Freeman, or to such of them as shall be then living." This contingency attached to the time of payment, and made, he thought, the legacy contingent on the legatee surviving Mary Freeman.

Monday, July 26.

CLIFTON v. RICHARDS.

Practice—Discharge from custody.

A defendant was taken into custody upon an attachment for want of answer, and then filed his answer and purged the contempt. Upon an ex parte motion on his behalf, the Court ordered him to be discharged upon his depositing 40l. to answer any costs to which he might be liable on account of the contempt.

Horace Wright, on behalf of the defendant in this case, applied ex parte for his discharge from custody under the following circumstances. The defendant was in contempt for want of answer, and being about to put in his answer, he was arrested by the serjeant-at-arms under an attachment for the contempt. He then proceeded with the serjeant-at-arms to the record-office and filed his answer. It was now proposed that the defendant should pay the fees of the serjeant-at-arms, amounting to 6*l.* 10*s.* and deposit 25*l.* to answer any other costs the defendant might be liable to pay to the plaintiff or his solicitor on account of the contempt. The proceedings on the attachment, it was alleged, were irregular, and a motion would be made to set them aside.

The Vice-Chancellor said, that the defendant having purged his contempt by filing his answer, it was most desirable that he should be discharged. The question was, upon what terms, in the absence of the plaintiff, this should be done. His Honour thought that the offer for the deposit should be increased, and that the defendant should deposit 40*l.* to answer any costs to which he might be liable, and upon such deposit being made he might be discharged.

V. C. KINDERSLEY'S COURT.

VICE-CHANCELLOR KINDERSLEY'S COURT.

Reported by W. H. Bennet, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law.

March 6 and 22.

Will—Legacy—Vested interest—"Survivors or survivor."

A testator gave and bequeathed to his son W. W. "the dividends, interest, and annual produce to arise from certain stock for his life;" and after his decease he gave the principal sum to all and every the child and children of his said son W. W. to be equally divided between and amongst them share and share alike, &c. "the same to be transferred to him, her, or them, on their severally and respectively attaining the age of twenty-one years," with allowance for maintenance and education in the meantime. W. W. attained twenty-one and died, having had one child only, who died an infant in W. W.'s lifetime:

Held, that the child of W. W. took a vested interest in the principal of such sum of stock.

The testator gave two like bequests to another son and a daughter E. W. respectively for life, with like directions on the death of such daughter: and as to all three legacies on the tenants for life dying without issue, then upon the death of either, the dividends, &c. so given to him, her, or them so dying, shall be paid and payable to the survivor and survivors of them:

Held, that the interest of the infant child of W. W. had been divested, and that the other son and daughter as survivors took the principal of such stock.

The words of the testator's will, upon which the above questions turned, were as follow:—I, John Westwood, &c. "give and bequeath unto my son, H. F. Westwood, the dividends, interest, and annual produce to arise from the sum of 3,000*l.* New Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Bank Annuities now standing in my name in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England for and during the term of his natural life; and from and immediately after his decease, I give and bequeath the said principal sum or stock of 3,000*l.* unto all and every the child and children of my said son H. F. Westwood to be equally divided between and amongst them, share and share alike, if more than one, but if there shall be but one such child, then the whole of the said principal stock or sum of 3,000*l.* to such only child; the same to be paid or transferred to him, her, or them, on their severally and respectively attaining the age of twenty-one years, the interest and produce thereof to be in the meantime applied for and towards their maintenance and education."

The testator gave two other sums of 3,000*l.* stock each to a daughter, Eliza Westwood, and to another son, William Westwood, for life, with precisely similar directions on their respective deaths.

The testator then went on as follows:—"And it is my will that the interest, dividends, and produce of the said three several principal stocks or sums of 3,000*l.* so given to my said sons and daughter as aforesaid, shall begin and be made at the end of six months next after my decease, provided they shall then have attained the age of twenty-one years; but in case of their not being then of that age, it is my will and intention that the said interest, dividends, and annual produce shall and may in the meantime be applied in and towards their respective maintenance and education in such manner as my executors shall in their discretion think fit; and upon the death of either of my said sons or daughter without issue, then I direct that the interest, dividends, and produce as aforesaid, given and bequeathed to him, her, or them so dying shall be paid and payable to the survivors or survivor of them my said sons and daughter in equal shares and proportions." The testator then gave two small legacies to his two sisters, and then gave all the rest, residue, and remainder of his property in the funds, and all other his estate and effects whatsoever and wheresoever, and of what nature or kind soever, and every part thereof, unto his said daughter and his said youngest son William Westwood. The testator died in May 1833. A suit was subsequently instituted to administer the estate of the son William, and it appeared that he died, having attained the age of twenty-one, having had an only child, who had died an infant in his lifetime. The widow of William, as his executrix, proved his will, and took out letters of administration to their infant child. The sum of 3,000*l.* stock, to the dividends of which William was entitled for life, had been transferred into court, and two petitions were now presented,—one by Henry F. Westwood, the surviving brother, and the husband of Eliza Westwood, praying that the money might be paid out to them, and the other petition by the widow and executrix of William, praying that it might be paid out to her.

Wigram and Faber for the first-mentioned petitioners.

V. C. KINDERSLEY'S COURT.

Malins and Welford, for the widow and executrix of William.

The arguments on both sides are shortly stated in the Vice-Chancellor's judgment. The authorities and cases cited during the arguments were:—Williams on Executors, 989; Hughes v. Sayer, 1 P. Wms. 581; Billingsley v. Wills, 3 Atk. 219; Massey v. Hudson, 2 Moriv. 180; Ranelagh v. Ranelagh, 2 Myl. & K. 441. For the second petitioner:—Batsford v. Kebbel, 3 Ves. 363; Hallifax v. Wilson, 16 Ves. 168; Jones v. Jones, 13 Sim. 561; Re Bartholomew, 1 M'N. & G. 354; Tribe v. Newland, 16 Jur. 286.

JUDGMENT.

Monday, March 22.—The Vice-Chancellor.—The question upon these two petitions turns upon the construction of the will of John Westwood. At the date of his will he had three children, as appears by his will, all of whom appear to have been under age at the time when he made his will—Henry Frederick, Eliza, and William; and the question turns upon the gift of a legacy of 3,000*l.* stock for the benefit of William's children; and as similar legacies were given for the benefit of the other children, and as one of the clauses in the will relates to the three legacies, it is necessary to consider the gifts of all three legacies. After giving certain specific property to the eldest son, the testator proceeds to give in these terms (the Vice-Chancellor then read the terms of the three several legacies). He, the Vice-Chancellor, then said,—In each case it is a specific legacy, for the testator points to its being a "sum of 3,000*l.* 3*l.* 10*s.* per cent. Bank Annuities, now standing in my name in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England." So far, therefore, there is not very much doubt about the construction, but after giving the three legacies, the testator proceeds thus:—He first directs, what is not material to this question, that the interest and dividends of each of these sums of stock should begin to be paid at the end of six months, if the legatees have then attained the age of twenty-one. But then comes the clause which creates a limitation over in a certain event, which it is very material to consider. "And upon the death of either, then I direct," &c. He then gives two small legacies to other persons, and then gives the residue to his daughter and youngest son William. Now, the points upon which the question turns are these: they relate at present entirely to the legacy given for the benefit of William and his children. He attained twenty-one, and had one child; that child died in early infancy, without leaving any issue in the lifetime of William; then William died, having no issue living at his death. In that state of circumstances the representative of the child of William claims to have the legacy as having become vested, not divested. On the other hand, the two children, Henry Frederick, and Eliza, who survived William, claim it by virtue of the gift over. There is a third alternative which might be contended for, but which has not been contended for upon this petition, although the parties are before me, namely, whether the residuary legatees are not entitled; whether the gift to the children gave no vested interest to the child of William, and the gift over is void, and therefore no gift at all after the death of William. That has not been argued; still it is a possible construction of the will. Now in order to determine the questions arising upon this will and this state of facts, the matter divides itself into two points: first, whether, under the prior gift, the child of William took any vested interest at all; and if it did not, it is not necessary to consider what is the effect of the ulterior clause—the ulterior limitation over—upon the interest of that child; but if the child of William did take a vested interest under the prior gift, then it comes material to consider the second point, which is, what is the effect of the gift over in the event that has happened, of William dying without having left any issue living at his death? Now with respect to the first point, as to whether the child of William took a vested interest or not; it has been contended that in this case there is no gift of the corpus of the legacy of the stock until the death of William; that the gift of William is only of the dividends; and that the gift to the children being to take effect after the death of William, and it being first the gift of the principal, it is contended that the child did not take a vested interest; and the cases of Batsford v. Kebbell, and Billingsley v. Wills, which are the common vouchers upon cases of this kind have been relied upon. Batsford v. Kebbell was this case. The testatrix gave Robert Endley the dividends of 500*l.* Three per Cent. Annuities until he should arrive at the age of thirty-two years, at which time she directed the executors to transfer to him the principal for his own use. The question was, as Robert Endley died before he attained the age of thirty-two years, whether he had a vested interest in the stock; and the Lord Chancellor (Loughborough) decided that he had not; and most justly and reasonably, because the Court saw that, upon the true construction of that will, the testatrix did not mean Robert Endley to take anything but the dividends, unless he attained the age of thirty-two years; and the Lord Chancellor pointed out the distinction between the gift of the dividends and the gift of the principal. He says, "The testatrix meant to give the dividends, whether he attained the age of thirty-two or not, as long as he lived, but did not mean to give the principal, which is a distinct gift, unless he attained the age of thirty-two years; and, therefore, the Court determined that Robert Endley did not take a vested interest. The case of Billingsley v. Wills is a case a little more complicated, but still the principle of it is easily to be perceived. The gift was in this form. [His Honour read from the report in 3 Atk. 219.] At the time the testator made his will, Capel Billingsley had three children,—a son and two daughters. Lord Hardwicke saw clearly that no child could possibly have a vested interest till the death of Capel Billingsley, because it was first of all the eldest son who was to be excluded, and if there should be no sons, but only daughters, then the eldest daughter was to be excluded. Moreover, there was this clause:—"But no elder son, in case there shall be more than one son, or any elder daughter, if there be any younger daughter of Capel Billingsley living at his decease, shall have any share or interest in the 1,500*l.*" Lord Hardwicke said, these words, "living at his decease," applied not only to the passage "if there be any daughter," but also to the passage "if there be any sons," if there be more than one son. Therefore it comes to this: that it was a limitation over to persons as to whom it could only be ascertained who would answer the description at the death of Capel Billingsley; ex necessitate, it was not a vested interest at the death of Capel Billingsley. Now these two cases have been often supposed to establish this proposition, which I am satisfied they were never meant to establish, and have not been held to establish, namely, that merely because the dividends of a sum of stock are given in the first instance to A. for life, and then afterwards there is a gift of the capital of that stock over to one of his children, that is a vested interest; but it is not a vested interest, because there is a difference between the gift of the principal and the gift of the dividends. That is not the principle established by these cases; and to shew that it is not, I would refer to a case which was not cited in the argument, but which is an important case,—or rather two cases of the same name—Chaffers v. Abell, both of which are reported in 3 Jur. 577. The two cases relate to two different wills, and therefore was evidently two causes, though there seem to have been two parties of the same name. In the first case I read the marginal summary:—"A testator bequeathed a certain sum of stock (that is, an aggregate sum of stock) to trustees to pay 40*l.* per annum to his daughter for life," (not even the dividends of any government stock), "and after her decease, to pay, assign, and transfer the sum of 10,000*l.* stock equally among all and every the child and children of his daughter, share and share alike, to be paid and transferred to them when and as soon as the youngest should attain his or her age of twenty-one." At the death of the testator, the daughter had four children, one of whom died before the youngest attained twenty-one: the youngest only survived the daughter, yet it was held that the four children took a vested interest in the stock. Now, it might have been equally contended there that there was no gift of the principal until the death of the daughter; and not only so, but there was actually no intermediate gift of the dividends of that sum of stock, which was given to the children; it was only a direction out of the dividends of an aggregate sum of stock to pay 40*l.* a year to the daughter; and yet the Court held that it was a vested interest in the children. In that case, it is true, there was the gift of an aggregate sum of stock to the trustees in the first instance; but in the next case of Chaffers v. Abell, 3 Jur. 578, there was no gift to trustees at all, and therefore it is extremely like the case before me. Ann Page, by her will, gave to her sister, Mary Abell, the interest of 500*l.* Five per Cent. Navy Stock, standing in the name of the testatrix "in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England,"—exactly, so far, like the case before me,—to her own separate use, and not subject to the control of her present or future husband; and at her death the said 500*l.* to be divided between her children, share and share alike. Now it is impossible to conceive a case more exactly on all fours with the case now before us. It was a gift not to trustees at all, but a gift to the sister during her life of the dividends of a specific sum of stock, mentioned to be stock standing in the name of the testatrix only, without any gift of the principal; and after her death, the said principal sum of stock was given over to her three children. The sister had three children at the death of the testatrix, but only one survived her; and it was held that the three children took vested interests. It seldom happens that a case is found more exactly on all fours with the case under consideration; but even if it were not here the case, I have no hesitation in saying that the cases of Batsford v. Kebbell and Billingsley v. Wills have been repeatedly misrepresented, as determining this an abstract proposition, that in all cases where there is only a gift of the dividends in the first instance to A. for life, and then a gift over, after the death of the tenant for life, of the corpus of the stock, in all cases, under all circumstances, the effect is to make the gift over a contingent and not a vested interest. I am, therefore, of opinion that the child of William on its birth took a vested interest in the stock. And I may here observe that the gift is to the children; and then there is another clause directing the time of payment to be at the age of twenty-one, which in the ordinary way makes it a vested gift; and there is the direction also with regard to the application of the interest and dividends, which is not material to the present question. Then assuming that I am right in saying that the child of William took a vested interest at its birth, the next point for consideration is, what is the effect of the limitation over upon the death of William without issue? Does that clause divest the interest that was vested in the children, or what is the effect of it? Now, of course, with respect to the words, "on the death of either without issue," these words, "dying without issue," are in themselves capable of three different constructions. The first is an indefinite failure of issue—failure of issue generally; the second is, "dying without issue," that is, the class of issue before mentioned, by interpolating the word "such;" and the third is, without issue living at the death of the person mentioned as the person dying: and upon the first construction, if that were the right one, if it meant an indefinite failure of issue, the gift over of course would be void. The gift over can only be made valid, by assuming that the "dying without issue," means either dying without "such" issue, or "dying without issue living at the death of the party." That is the only way, by one or the other of these two constructions, that the gift over can be made valid at all; and I need not say that the Court will always, if it can, lean to that construction which will make the gift over, which will make every part of the will effective, if it can do so without violence. Does it, then, here mean "dying without such issue," that is, am I to interpolate the word "such?" or does it mean dying without issue, living at the death? Now, in order to give the just interpretation to this clause, we must have regard to the fact, that the limitation over applies not merely to the particular legacy given for the benefit of William and his children, but that the clause is applicable to legacies given to all the three children, including William; and the language is this:—"On the death of either of my said sons or daughter" (there being three of them at the date of the will), "without issue," then I direct that the interest, dividends, and produce as aforesaid given and bequeathed to him, her, or them so dying shall be paid and payable to the survivor and survivors of them, my said sons and daughter, in equal shares and proportions." So upon the death of either without issue, the gift over is of the interest and dividends to be paid and payable to the survivors and survivor of the other two; that is, to such one or two of the others that shall survive the party dying without issue. Now, it may be stated to be a general rule,—I do not say without exceptions, arising out of different contexts, but as a general and primâ facie rule,—where there is a gift over to the survivors or survivor of several persons after the death of one of them without issue, the words (without issue) are construed to mean without leaving issue living at the death. That may be stated as a general primâ facie rule. For the purpose of shewing that it is the rule, I refer to Ranelagh v. Ranelagh, first decided by Sir J. Leach, and afterwards upon appeal by the Lord Chancellor (Brougham), in which Sir J. Leach says, "I adopt the language of Sir W. Grant in Massey v. Hudson, and I take the rule to be, that, primâ facie, a bequest over to the survivors and survivor of two or more persons after the death of one without issue, affords a presumption that an indefinite failure of issue could not be in the testator's contemplation. In that case Sir W. Grant considered, therefore, that the presumption was repelled; consequently, the limitation over was to the survivor, and his or her executors, administrators, and assigns; and the testator therefore had not solely in view the personal enjoyment of the survivor. In the case of Ranelagh v. Ranelagh, there is no circumstance to repel the presumption; on the contrary, the presumption is fortified by the fact, that the legacies are in the first instance given for life only, as here, and the limitation over is on the determination of the life estate, to which determination the survivorship must refer. If this plain rule is adhered to, there will be no confusion in the subsequent cases." Now in this case there is no larger interest given to William than for his life; the limitation over is in case he dies without issue, to the survivors; and it is a direction to pay the dividends, interest, and produce to the survivors or survivor, sons and daughters of the testator, in equal shares and proportions. There is mention, as there was in Massey v. Hudson, of executors, administrators, and assigns' and, moreover, it is not a simple gift of the stock, but it is a positive direction to pay the interest and dividends of the stock to the survivors of them. The words "survivors or survivor," clearly must be used in their natural sense; that is, such one of them (or both of them if both survive) as shall be living at the death of William: That must be the meaning of it, because if he meant "the other of them," why say "the survivors or survivor." He knew how many of them there were,—they were his own children. He speaks of them nominatim,—"his eldest son, his daughter, and his youngest son." He says, "if either of them die without issue, then pay the dividends of the stock to the survivors or survivor;" if both of the others survived that one, then pay the dividends of that stock to those two in equal shares; if only one of them survived the party dying, then pay the dividends of the stock to that one,—shewing as clearly as possible an intention of conferring a personal benefit on the survivors or survivor. I am of opinion, therefore, that the limitation over, upon the death of any one of them without issue, is to be construed, in that case, on the death of any one of them without leaving issue living at the death. Having got thus far, and considering that I have to interpret this will in the same manner as if the testator had used these words,—that is, on the death of any one of them without issue living at his death, then pay the dividends to the survivors or survivor, the question is, how does that apply to the children in the first instance? It is perfectly true that where a legacy is given to one for life, and after his death to his children, with a gift over, if he dies without issue, and there is nothing to restrict the dying without issue to "issue living at his death," it has been held that the words "without issue" shall be limited to the class of issue before mentioned, that is, the children to whom the first gift is made, as if the words had been "such issue;" and that has been argued at the bar, and very tersely and correctly stated to be the true rule. But what is the ground on which the Court has felt it could be justified in using that violence to the words, and interpolating the word "such?" Why, the ground is this,—that as there is nothing to restrict "dying without issue" to "dying without leaving issue living at the death," the limitation would be void if it were not for the interpretation which it applied to it; it means the particular issue before mentioned. This is commonly called the referential construction—that is, you refer the language of the gift over to the language of the prior gift, in order to limit the general term "issue" to the particular class of issue mentioned in the prior gift; but as I have said, the reason is, because the gift over would be void if you did not do that. But where the dying without issue is in express terms, or, as in this case, by the proper construction of the will, limited to dying without leaving issue living at the death, no reason then exists for interpolating the word "such." The limitation over is valid, without the necessity of resorting to that expedient of doing violence to the words; and I am not aware of any case in which, a legacy being given to one for life and after his death to his children, with limitation over, if he dies without leaving issue living at the time of his death, the word "issue" has been restricted to the children, as if the words "such issue" had been used by the testator. I believe no case can be found in which a construction of that sort has been placed in the way I have mentioned; indeed, such a construction might entirely defeat the testator's intention, for if the words were construed to mean, if he dies without "such" issue; that is, without leaving children only, see what might happen. He might have a single child, attain twenty-one, marry, and leave a family, and die before the tenant for life, and then that child and the issue of that child would be entirely excluded, because the tenant for life would have died without "such issue," that is, without children living at his death. Upon the whole case, therefore, I am of opinion that the child of William Westwood took a vested interest in the 3,000*l.* stock, but that vested interest was liable to be divested by the death of William Westwood without leaving issue living at his death; and that event having happened, the gift over takes effect. I may observe, with reference to the construction that I have put upon this will, that, in the first place, it does no violence to any one clause in the will; it does not interpolate a single word in the will; it does not refuse its full operation to any single word used by the testator, and gives to every word the primary and natural and legitimate signification, without any distortion whatever; and, moreover, the interpretation I have given to this will, would, not only in the event that has happened, but in any event that can happen, be far more in accordance with what one may fairly suppose to be the general intention of the testator, than any other construction that can be put upon the words. These reasons alone, I apprehend, would be sufficient to recommend this construction to the consideration of [illegible] not only as [illegible] are cordance [illegible] Therefore [illegible] the two [illegible] son and [illegible] stock which [illegible] that is to say, [illegible] cular, granting [illegible] viving [illegible]

V. C. [illegible] V. C. KINDERSLEY'S COURT. V. C. [illegible] COURT.

Friday, May 7.

HARRISON v. OGILVY.

Practice—Service of petition—Payment of money out of court.

This was an objection raised by the registrar of the court to the drawing up of an order which had been previously pronounced, on the ground that certain parties who were interested in a fund in court had not been served with copies of the petition on which the order had been made.

Campbell now stated these facts to the Court for its directions. It appeared that a sum of money had been paid into court, which was the amount of a mortgage security and interest paid by a mortgagor, in a suit to redeem the mortgage. The trustees of this mortgage security were such for three sisters (infants), and an order had some time since been made by the Court that the amount should be divided into thirds, and one-third carried to the "separate account" of each sister. This had not, however, been done; but on two of the sisters coming of age, they had obtained payment of their respective amounts in the usual way, leaving the remaining third of the fund in court, standing to the general credit of the cause. The third sister had now applied for her remaining third share, and the registrar thought that, as the fund was still standing to the credit of the cause generally, the mortgagor and the two other sisters ought to have been served with the present petition.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, that he considered there was clearly no necessity to serve the mortgagor; and that, as to the two sisters, he considered the practice to be, that when the Court had actually made an order directing the whole amount in court to be divided and carried to the separate accounts of the several parties, although the order had not been drawn up and acted upon, that these parties were not necessary parties to be served.

March 25 and 26, and June 25.

IN THE MATTER OF THE WINDING-UP ACTS, 1848 AND 1849, and Re WOLVERHAMPTON, CHESTER, AND HOLYHEAD RAILWAY COMPANY.

ROBERT'S CASE.

Winding-up Acts—Contributory—Costs—Upfill's case.

A provisional committee-man applied to have 100 shares allotted to him. The managing committee had come to a resolution that each provisional committee-man should take twenty-five shares. The scheme was abandoned. R. the provisional committee-man, having paid a sum of 105*l. as a full satisfaction for deposit and call on the twenty-five shares offered to him:*

Held, that he was not a contributory.

On appeal from the Master's decision, finding that R. was a contributory:

Held, that the costs of the appeal ought to come out of the general assets of the intended company, but in certain cases should be paid by the official manager personally.

This was a motion to discharge an order of the 5th March, 1852, excluding the name of Mr. Roberts from the list of contributories to the contemplated company, upon which the name had been originally placed by a decision of the Master.

The facts of this case were almost precisely similar to those in Hutton v. Bright already reported from the House of Lords, 19 Law T. Rep. 269, and in which case the former decision of the House of Lords in Upfill's case was in effect overruled. It has been thought advisable to give the Vice-Chancellor's judgment in the present case, inasmuch as it was pronounced before the opinion of the judges was given in Hutton v. Bright, and as affording an opportunity of giving the exact words of the "question" of the House of Lords proposed to the judges in that case, which were not before quite correctly reported, the precise words of the case having been slightly altered after the Lord Chancellor had penned it.

The question for the judges was as follows:—"Do the facts above stated afford sufficient evidence at law to warrant (in an action against A.) a verdict that A. is liable to a creditor in the employment of the managing directors for work done necessary for obtaining the Act of Parliament." Baron Parke delivered the opinion of the judges, and having stated the facts of the case, said:—"It was the unanimous opinion of the judges who heard the argument, that, before the decision of this House in Upfill's case, the facts stated in the question would not have warranted a verdict that A. is liable to a creditor on the employment of the managing directors for work done necessary for obtaining the Act of Parliament." See the judgment of the House of Lords in Hutton v. Bright, ante 19 Law T. Rep. 269.

E. P. Cooper and Roxburgh argued the present case at great length on the 25th and 26th March last.

Malins and Selwyn for Mr. Roberts supported the order to exclude his name from the list of contributories.

The cases cited were Upfill's case, 2 House of Lords Cases, 674, S.C., 19 Law T. 449; Carmichael's case, 16 Law T. 189; Carrick's case, 1 Sim. N.S. 505; S.C.; 17 Law T. 269.

On the 25th June the Vice-Chancellor gave the following

JUDGMENT.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR.—This case came on before me by way of appeal by the official manager from a decision of the Master, by which the name of Mr. Roberts had been displaced from the list of the contributories to this contemplated railway company. It is contended by the official manager that this case is precisely within Upfill's case, because the two conditions on which Mr. Upfill was held to be a contributory are the same here. 1st. That Mr. Roberts was a provisional committeeman; and 2nd. That he had accepted shares in that character. Now it is not disputed by Mr. Roberts that he was a provisional committeeman; and as to his having accepted shares, three grounds are stated to shew that he had done so—1st. That Mr. Roberts had signed the agreement required by the Registration Act. 2nd. That he had applied for shares, which had been allotted to him by the usual letter of allotment; and 3rd. That he had paid the stipulated deposit, and also a call in respect of those shares. On the other hand, it is contended for Mr. Roberts that there never was a complete or final acceptance of those shares; and that what he paid was only what he was considered to have been liable to at law, as the law was then supposed to be. The question comes to this, whether this case is or is not within the principle of Upfill's case. Now this principle, as far as I understand it, is this: that although a provisional committeeman is not liable as such to contribute to the expenses incurred to establish a company which had failed, on the other hand, any individual agreeing to take shares and paying the necessary deposit did not thereby become liable, because they were shares in a company which had, in fact, never been formed; but still, notwithstanding these two principles, if the committeeman said, "If the company be formed I will take so many shares in the contemplated company," that there he does become liable to contribute to the expenses to form that company. Now the principle in Upfill's case requires this, that there should be an appropriation and final acceptance of shares, and if there is not this complete and final acceptance of shares I will not, as Lord Cranworth said with reference to such cases, do anything to extend the principle enunciated in Upfill's case. I certainly will not be one to extend it. Now, what are the facts of the case before me? They are these:—By a letter of the 10th October, 1845, Mr. Roberts wrote to Smith, the secretary of the proposed company, requesting that his name might be placed upon the list of the provisional committee—and his name was accordingly so placed. He never attended any of the meetings of the committee, nor took any part in the proceedings; but he certainly was a member of that committee. On the same 10th of October, the acting part of the committee passed a formal resolution to the effect that every provisional committeeman was entitled to have 100 shares, but must take twenty-five shares to qualify him for the office of committeeman. Now, considering that it has been determined that as committeeman it means only this, that he had only, out of his sense of public utility, and for the benefit of mankind, taken upon himself the office, it is difficult to think how it was necessary to qualify him for such a function that he should necessarily take twenty-five shares in such projected company. Whether this resolution I have mentioned was ever communicated to Mr. Roberts does not, I think, appear, except so far as the letter of the 18th October does so, which, however, does not allude to any resolution as to the taking of the twenty-five shares by him as provisional committeeman. Annexed to this letter was a form of application for shares, intended to be filled up by Mr. Roberts. It was accordingly filled up and sent by him. This was dated on the 1st November, 1845, and to which is the postscript,—"Please let me hear from you." Now, the question here is, what was the effect of these letters of the 29th October and 1st November. The letter sent by Smith (the secretary) was a notification to Roberts that if he pleases he may have 100 shares. Now, the answer does not say, "I do accept them;" but says, "If 100 shares are allotted to me, I will accept them and pay the deposit on them." Now, it is clear that Roberts did not consider that five shares had been allotted to him, and this letter of his did not conclude any contract by which both parties could be bound. He writes to know how his application for 100 shares had been dealt with. Now, supposing 100 shares had actually been allotted to him and sent, what would there have been the effect of such a state of things, it is not necessary for me to decide. Now, nothing further was done in the way of communication until the 20th November, when another letter was sent. On the 17th, however, a resolution had been come to by the managing committee that the provisional committeemen should be requested to take up and pay for twenty-five shares. Now, does not this shew what was the view taken by this committee—not that they were going to allot shares, but that they were casting about to raise money to pay their way and get rid of those liabilities which had been incurred. It is beyond question that they were thinking how to raise this money to pay the expenses, and so requested the committeemen to take and pay for twenty-five shares. Mr. Roberts had applied for 100 shares, but instead of saying they had allotted him 100 shares, they request him to take up twenty-five shares as a favour, not as a right. Now, on the 19th, two days after the resolution requesting the parties to take the twenty-five shares, a letter was sent by the secretary to Mr. Roberts, By that letter he was directed to go to the bankers, and get the necessary receipt filled up, that he might obtain the scrip; and the form of receipt is annexed to the letter. Now, instead of taking up the twenty-five shares, he takes no notice of this letter, and, in fact, he never went to the bankers or paid the deposit of 2*l.* 2*s.* per share, or in any way complied with the requisitions of this letter. Then this takes place: Notwithstanding the encouraging prospects held out to the public, the managing committee come to the determination to abandon the company and wind up their affairs. [The Vice-Chancellor here read the various resolutions, that no further expenses should be incurred; that the scheme should be abandoned, &c.] Then comes the resolution that a letter should be sent to each provisional committeeman, requesting payment of 52*l.* 10*s.* There is no evidence that this letter was received by Mr. Roberts; but the only communication received by him on the subject was the resolution of the 19th of February, that a call be then made for another 52*l.* 10*s.*, making in the whole a sum of 105*l.* and which said, "If you pay this last sum, 'you shall be protected from the creditors of the company.'" Now, what all this amounts to is, The concern is abandoned, and the fair thing is, that each member of the provisional committee should pay what would enable them to pay off and satisfy all their liabilities. Although they designate it a call, yet they had no power to make any such call. In the end Mr. Roberts pays this 105*l.* How am I to treat this as a deposit and payment for twenty-five shares? If he had paid it, and received a letter of allotment, and all this whilst the concern was going on, it might possibly have been so held; but when the concern is abandoned, and he pays it, "If you make this payment, you shall be protected from the creditors," and he makes a payment accordingly, this surely cannot bring this case within the principle of Upfill's case. On both grounds, therefore, I am of opinion that neither on the ground of allotment, nor on the payment or acceptance of shares can Mr. Roberts be held to be a contributory. The only remaining point is, that Mr. Roberts signed the memorandum by which he agreed to become a provisional committeeman, and under which memorandum is required to be his qualification office. But it has been decided, in numerous cases, that the signing such a memorandum does not constitute him a shareholder or contributory (Carmichael's case and Carrick's case decide this), and if it had not been so decided I should myself have come to that conclusion. My opinion upon the whole is, that the Master's decision is right,—that this appeal must be dismissed, and the provisional manager must pay Mr. Roberts the costs of the appeal and the costs of the proceedings in the Master's office, and be entitled to have them again out of the estate of the intended company, in his hands as official manager.

As before stated, the judgment of the House of Lords in Hutton v. Bright was pronounced on the 28th of June. At the conclusion of the Vice-Chancellor's judgment in the present case, Malins, for Mr. Roberts, asked that the costs of the appeal should be ordered to be paid by the official manager personally,—he designated it as a wanton case, brought on pending the decision of the House of Lords in Upfill's case, the judgment in which had not been yet pronounced; and as a mere experiment.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said,—It appears to me that official managers have in several cases totally forgotten their duty, and, by applications to the Court, have applied the money of others, whose interests they were bound in fact to protect; my opinion is, that an official manager ought generally to be quiescent. But here is a case where his own counsel have strongly recommended the appeal, and in the uncertain state of the law, as it then stood, the Master might not have discouraged the official manager's application. Now, unless where their own counsel are of a strong opinion that there is a good case, or unless the Master had suggested it, or unless a number of contributories had agreed to join in the application, I should generally make the official manager pay the costs. Thus, indeed, I should have done in the present case, unless I had been of opinion that this was a fair case. It is very close to Upfill's case, and I think that there was encouragement given by the Master—and I think not improperly—that, as there were many similar cases pending, there should be an appeal in the present case.

The costs of the application to be paid out of the funds in the official manager's hands.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Reported by OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

(Before Lord Chancellor TRURO.)

June 11, 13, and 14, 1851, and Jan. 14. 1852.

SMITH v. PINCOMBE.

Family compromise set aside—Constructive fraud—Non-disclosure of material facts

A family compromise will not be binding, unless there has been an honest disclosure by each party to the other of all such material facts known to them relative to the title of either, as are calculated to influence the judgment in the adoption of the compromise; and if any advantage be taken by either of the parties of the known ignorance of the other, such facts would render the same void in equity, and liable to be set aside.

A married woman, by her next friend, instituted a suit to set aside a compromise, alleging that her husband refused to join as plaintiff, but she did not prove such refusal. An objection was taken to the form of the suit, that the husband ought to have joined as co-plaintiff; the husband, however, not having objected to the form of the suit, and having put in his answer to the bill, and appeared in support of it, the objection was overruled.

A decree cannot be objected to on the ground that relief is thereby granted to a defendant, when such relief is necessarily incidental and consequential to the relief which the Court is bound to grant to the plaintiff.

Where a party neglects to call the attention of the Court below to a mistake in the decree, and the decree is affirmed on appeal upon the general merits of the case, the costs of the appeal ought not to be affected by such mistake.

Remarks on prolixity in bills.

This was an appeal by the defendants William and Thomas Pincombe against the decree of the late Vice-Chancellor of England, under the following circumstances:—The bill was filed by Mary Pincombe Smith by her next friend, against her husband, William Smith (who, as the bill alleged, declined to sue as plaintiff), and Thomas Pincombe and William Pincombe, executors and trustees under the will of John Pincombe, deceased, and other persons interested under his will. The object of the suit was to set aside a compromise which the plaintiff had entered into with the defendants T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe, as executors and trustees under the will of the testator John Pincombe; the bill alleging that they had possessed themselves of the documents and writings of the testator, and among them of two wills, one dated in 1834, the other 1837, and that the plaintiff was led by the defendants T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe to believe that her title to the estate depended entirely on the will of 1837; that the will of 1834 was altogether withheld from her knowledge; and that the plaintiff, her husband, and attorney, all entered into the compromise in ignorance of the existence of the will of 1834, and under the belief that the plaintiff's interest was derivable only under the will of 1837, the defendants T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe having full knowledge at the same time that the plaintiff had a good title to the estate under the will of 1834. The defendants, T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe, by their answer, insisted that the plaintiff, her husband, and solicitor had full notice of the will of 1834, and denied that they had suppressed that will or misled the plaintiff in any respect with regard to the compromise. Evidence on the question was entered into by both parties. Upon the cause coming on to be heard before the late Vice-Chancellor of England, a decree was made by which it was declared that the compromise in the pleadings mentioned, and the several orders and instruments made and executed pursuant thereto, were fraudulently obtained by the defendant, W. Pincombe, and with the knowledge and privity of the defendant, T. Pincombe, and that the same ought to be set aside, and it was thereby ordered that the defendant, W. Pincombe, should execute a declaration of trust of the term in the pleadings mentioned, and that the defendants, T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe, should deliver up all title-deeds and papers in their possession or power relating to the Great Woods estate, and other real estates of the testator, and that the defendant, W. Pincombe, should account for all rents received by him in respect of the said estates since the compromise, and that the defendants, T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe, should pay to the plaintiff and her husband their costs of the proceedings at law in the pleadings mentioned, and of the compromise, and of restoring the plaintiff and her husband to their rights; and that the plaintiff and her husband should return the moneys received by them under the compromise, and should release the defendants therefrom, and that the costs of the defendants other than T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe should be paid by the next friend of the plaintiff, and be repaid by the last-named defendants. From this decision the defendants, Thomas and William Pincombe, appealed.

Bethell and Terrell, for the appeal, commented on the evidence, and urged that the case made by the appellants was utterly improbable, as they called upon the Court to believe that the plaintiff being aware of her rights under both wills, had elected to take under the will which gave her the smallest benefit. They cited Broderick v. Broderick, 1 P. Wms. 239.

Shee, for the defendant W. Smith, the plaintiff's husband, and the children of the marriage.

Rolt, Follett, and Kerslake, for the defendants T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe, for the appeal, took several objections to the decree. First, that a gross fraud was charged by the bill, but was not proved, and there being, looking at the case in the worst aspect for the executors, a mere oversight committed by them, the decree was clearly wrong. (Farraby v. Hobson, 2 Phil. 255; Glascott v. Lang, 2 Phil. 310.) Secondly, the plaintiff's husband, W. Smith, ought not to have been made a defendant, the suit was, therefore, improperly framed. Thirdly, that as the bill alleged that the husband declined to sue, the decree ought not to have been extended to a declaration of his rights, but ought to have been confined to those of his wife. Fourthly, that the decree did not state to whom the accounts were to be rendered or the rents paid. Fifthly, that the defendants T. Pincombe and W. Pincombe ought not to have been directed to pay the costs of the proceedings at law, which had no relation to the compromise, nor to pay the costs of the children and the parties in remainder, whom the compromise did not in any way effect, and who were, therefore, they submitted, unnecessary parties to the suit. Moreover the bill was, they contended, unnecessarily prolix. Lastly, the transaction was a family compromise of doubtful rights, and that the Court would, therefore, support it, when no fraud had been shewn to exist in the conduct of the executors.

Bethell, in reply, cited, as to the objection to the husband being made a defendant, Reeve v. Dalby, 2 S. & S. 464; Hughes v. Evans, 1 S. & S. 185; Sigel v. Phelps, 7 Sim. 239; Davis v. Prout, 7 Beav. 288; Wake v. Parker, 2 Keen. 59. He also contended that a family settlement would not be supported if one party acted under a mistake of which the other party was cognisant. (Gordon v. Gordon, 3 Swanst. 400.)

The LORD CHANCELLOR, after stating the before-mentioned facts, said,—That the case which was presented, was in substance a case which the Court denominated fraud, and the material issues tendered by the bill were, first, whether the plaintiff, her husband, or her attorney, had knowledge of the will of 1834 prior to entering into the compromise; secondly, whether the appellants had knowledge of that will; thirdly, whether the appellants and their agents intentionally suppressed and withheld all information of the existence and effect of that will from the plaintiff, her husband, and attorney, and whether they knew that the compromise was entered into under the influence of that state of ignorance. [His lordship then, at considerable length, examined the case as made by the bill and answer, and the evidence on both sides.] His lordship then observed, that having deliberately considered the case made by the bill, and the case of the appellants made by the answer, and the evidence given on behalf of the respective parties, he had come to the conclusion that the material parts of the case stated in the bill were established by the evidence, and that if his conclusions in regard to the facts of this case were correct, he apprehended there could be no question as to the legal result, and that the compromise ought to be declared to have been fraudulently obtained, and ought to be set aside, together with the deeds executed by the parties, with the view of carrying such compromise into effect. It was not, in his opinion, necessary to cite many authorities in maintenance of the legal result which he had stated, and that he should therefore content himself with stating the principle of law upon which his decision was founded, and name two or three decided cases of undoubted authority in which that principle was recognised and acted upon. That principle was, that to render a family compromise binding, there must be an honest disclosure by each party to the other of all such material facts known to them relative to the rights and title of either, as were calculated to influence the judgment in the adoption of the compromise, and that any advantage taken by either of the parties of the known ignorance of the other of such facts would render the same void in equity, and liable to be set aside. That principle was, his lordship considered, recognised by Lord Eldon in the case of Gordon v. Gordon, 3 Swanst. 400; by Sir John Leach in Hawes v. Oxale, 4 Russ. 34; by Vice-Chancellor Shadwell in Green v. Perkins, 6 Sim. 576; and by Lord Langdale in Pickering v. Pickering, 2 Beav. 31. That upon the view of the facts and of the law which he had stated, so much of the decree of the Vice-Chancellor ought to be affirmed as declared the compromise to be fraudulent, and decreed that it must be set aside with the deeds referred to in the bill, subject to the question whether the suit had been instituted by the proper party as plaintiff, that is, by the wife apart from her husband; but with regard to that question, there was no doubt that in a suit for the recovery of property belonging to a wife the husband must be a party, and generally as a plaintiff jointly with his wife; but there were recognised exceptions to the rule requiring the husband to be plaintiff; and one exception, necessary to be allowed for the protection of the wife, was, where the husband refused to become a co-plaintiff. If, where that fact occurred, the Court did not admit the wife to sue by her next friend, there would be an obvious failure of justice to a very great extent; and in the present case the bill alleged that the husband refused to join; but it had been objected that, as that allegation precluded a demurrer to the bill upon the ground that the husband was not co-plaintiff, the fact ought to have been proved in the cause, which had not been done. The objection, therefore, resolved itself into the point, whether the fact of the husband's refusal was judicially verified sufficiently for the Court to act upon. The objection was strictly a technical objection, and one of which the party was entitled to the full benefit where it was clearly shewn to be well founded; but, like all other technical objections which operated to defeat the justice of the case, it ought to be clearly made out before it was allowed. In the present case, the husband had made no objection to the form of the suit as it existed, he had put in his answer as a defendant, and he had appeared by his counsel at the bar, and not only had not made any objection, but had appeared in support of the bill; his lordship, therefore, conceived that the fact of the husband having put in such answer, and so appeared and conducted himself, was sufficient to support the allegation in the bill that he had refused to join in the suit; for if he did not refuse (no matter for what reason) to join as co-plaintiff, what conceivable ground could be assigned for his not having joined as co-plaintiff. It was true, that the husband in his answer stated that which amounted to a refusal to join in the suit; but in holding that the objection was not available, his lordship said he did not act upon that statement in the answer, but upon the conduct on the husband's part which he had stated. The propriety of making the husband a defendant was maintained by the counsel for the plaintiff on two other grounds. First, it was said that, inasmuch as the testator, by the will of 1834, restricted his daughter, who was then unmarried, from alienation, it was clear that he intended that her estate, whenever she might marry, should be for her separate use, and that such being the case, it was in accordance with the acknowledged general practice to make the husband a defendant; and, secondly, it was argued that, as under the compromise, the wife was to have an annuity of 25*l.* in case of her surviving the husband, it was necessary that the wife should be the sole plaintiff in a suit for setting aside the compromise, and relinquishing the benefit of that annuity; but as his lordship was of opinion that the frame of the suit might be supported upon the ground of the refusal of the husband to join as co-plaintiff, it was, he said, unnecessary for him to consider the other grounds. Upon this subject his lordship observed, he would merely add, that the objection to the frame of the suit did not appear to have been taken in the Court below; but would seem to have been either a mere afterthought or else to have been purposely reserved as a ground for an appeal, a practice to which no encouragement should be extended. His lordship then said, that it had been further objected against the decree, that it gave relief to the defendant, W. Smith, to which he, not being a plaintiff, was not entitled; but he did not think the objection was valid, because the relief granted to him, and to which the objection was referred, was only such relief as was necessarily incidental and consequential to the relief which the Court was bound to grant to the plaintiff. The compromise could not be set aside in part, and the plaintiff's right to have the compromise set aside being established, the Court could not withhold a decree to that effect, because such decree must subsequently benefit the husband; he was therefore of opinion that the decree was not objectionable upon that ground. That a fourth objection to the decree was that the decree ordered the costs of the action of ejectment to be paid by the appellants to the plaintiff; that in regard to that objection there was not any ground upon which that part of the decree could be maintained, as his lordship did not consider they were costs incidental to the compromise or costs to which the plaintiff had any claim; that it appeared to him that they were inserted in the decree by inadvertence, that the short-hand writer's notes of the judgment as pronounced by the Vice-Chancellor contained no mention whatever of those costs, from which he inferred that that part of the prayer of the bill had not been adverted to during the argument, and that no discussion had taken place respecting it; and that his Honour's attention not having been called to the point, he pronounced a decree granting relief according to the prayer of the bill, without being aware that the prayer included the costs in question; that he had not heard that any application had been made to the learned judge to correct the minutes in that respect; but that it rather appeared that the objection was reserved to be urged for the first time upon the argument on the appeal. A party was entitled to have a decree corrected upon a well-founded objection urged at that time; but in a case where a decree upon the general merits of the case was affirmed, his lordship did not think it ought to affect the costs of the appeal, as otherwise it would furnish a bounty upon vexatious appeals by parties omitting to call the attention of the Court below to obvious inadvertencies, which would be corrected, upon application, by the Court, or probably consented to by the opponents if pointed out. He did not consider any judgment, in truth, to have been pronounced upon the point, and that the direction was inadvertently inserted, and that therefore no appeal was necessary in regard to it, as it might have been set right below. That the decree, therefore, ought to be corrected in this respect. That with regard to the objection of prolixity in the bill, his lordship was not prepared to say that it was so prolix, that the plaintiff ought to be made to pay any part of the costs; if the prolixity was so gross as to amount to impertinence, the proper course for the appellants to have taken was to have excepted; and although it was the duty of counsel to take reasonable care to avoid even unnecessary verboseness, yet so difficult oftentimes was the attempt to be explicit and minute, and yet concise, and so difficult, if not impracticable, would it often be for the Court to determine where that was accomplished and where it was not, that though the Court might have an impression that the pleadings were more lengthy than they need have been, his lordship said he should not feel that he was acting justly towards the pleader or the suitor if he were to visit the latter with any part of the costs on that ground. It ought to be a gross and palpable case of prolixity to enable the other party to take the objection, and then the objection ought to be taken by way of exception, and not kept back, as in this case, to serve as a makeweight to an unfounded appeal. His lordship was therefore of opinion that, subject to the correction of that part of the decree which ordered the costs of the action of ejectment to be paid by the appellants to the plaintiff, the appeal ought to be dismissed with costs.

Reported by C. H. Keene, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law.

July 8 and 9.

Re The Royal Bank of Australia, ex parte Robinson.

Re The Royal Bank of Australia, ex parte Meux's Executors.

Joint-stock Company—Winding-up Acts—Contributory—Misrepresentation by directors.

R. the director of a banking company, in pursuance of a resolution not authorised by the deed, took 100 shares (in addition to those which were necessary for his qualification as a director, and for which he had signed the deed), and gave a promissory note for £500, in respect of them, payable at four months. The 100 shares were not allotted according to the provisions of the deed; R. did not pursue the deed in respect of such shares, but received the dividends, the payments of which were regularly entered in the company's books. The note, when due, was not paid.

On the winding up of this company, R. was held to be a contributory in respect of such 100 shares.

M. a director of the same company, took 500 shares, and gave a promissory note for £2500. M. died, and before proving his will, his executors (upon inquiry) were informed by the surviving directors that their testator had only twenty shares upon which the whole capital had been paid. There was no entry of his ever having received any dividends in respect of the 500 shares. On the faith of the representation of the directors (who had cancelled the 500 shares), the executors distributed M.'s assets. On the winding up of the company, the Master ordered M.'s executors to be placed on the list of contributories in respect of the 500 shares, but,

On appeal, affirming the decision of the Vice-Chancellor, the order was discharged.

If directors (by a transaction not authorised by their deed) become possessed of a greater share in the capital of a company than they would otherwise have been entitled to, the Court will not allow them if it should turn out successful, to insist upon it as a real transaction, and if unsuccessful, to reject it as unauthorised. Directors would be bound by such a transaction, although they could not enforce it against the shareholders. Although a director is bound by an unauthorised transaction as between himself and the shareholders, it does not at all follow that he can claim the benefit of it.

If, upon the representations of directors, the assets of a deceased shareholder are administered, it will require a very strong case to induce the Court to relieve the shareholders, should such representations be even false.

The Court would rather consider directors making such misrepresentations as personally liable to the shareholders than attach the assets in the hands of a legatee; especially if such assets should have been administered for any length of time.

These were separate motions, by way of appeal, to discharge two several orders made by the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce under the Winding-up Acts. The facts of each case will be found in 17 Law T. 14, 48.

Sir W. Page Wood, Bacon, Daniel, Busk, Roxburgh, and Cairns were the several counsel engaged.

The following cases were cited:—Cockburn's case, 15 Jur. 28; Stanhope's case, 3 Del. & S. 198; Gouthwaite's case, 3 Del. & S. 258; Burnes v. Pennell, 2 Ho. of Lords cases, 497; Bosanquet v. Shortridge, 4 Ex. 699; 19 Law T. Rep. 196.

The Lord Chancellor.—The first question which arises in both cases is, whether or not the directors were bound by the transactions into which they entered. I cannot decide upon either of them with any great satisfaction to my own mind; but that is a circumstance which must certainly happen in these cases; for an attempt to do justice between the parties, having regard to the manner in which these transactions are carried on, and at the same time not to break in upon any rule of law, is, indeed, difficult, and in endeavouring to preserve any rule of law you may have to decide contrary to equity and perhaps good conscience; still, the rules of law must be preserved. Now, these directors assumed to buy on credit a very large proportion of the capital of the company. Mr. Robinson's transaction, in my opinion, is not distinguishable from the case of the other directors who took shares. These directors never could have sustained as a transaction binding upon the shareholders, these purchases, or, as they are called, subscriptions; if they had been brought before them, and they had objected, they might have insisted that they, the directors, should be compelled to pay up at once that which was due upon the shares. I am clearly of opinion that these shares were not taken in a way which is binding upon the company. The directors were not entitled to allot to themselves a very large proportion of the capital of the company, without bringing in a single shilling in aid of the company. They give only promissory notes payable at some distant period. They made entries of interest as it became payable on their several notes, and take credit for the dividends to which they would properly have been entitled, as if they had made the payments, the whole remaining no doubt on paper, and forming (as they represented) a real transaction. I am of opinion that they are bound, as between themselves, and their shareholders. If the shareholders chose to bind them by it, they are entitled to do so. I never will maintain, in a court of justice, that directors (having the power by their deed to manage the affairs of the company, and to exclude the shareholders from becoming acquainted with the nature of their dealings) who, behind the backs of the general body of shareholders, entitle themselves to a great proportion of the capital of the company, can be at liberty, if the company should flourish, to insist upon that as a real transaction; and if it should turn out not as they had hoped, to throw it up, as a transaction which was not authorised or sanctioned by the deed. I should hold them bound by the transaction, although they might not be entitled to enforce it against the general body of shareholders. Mr. Robinson, in that respect, cannot be distinguished from the others; he was a party to the original transaction; he knew that he had not paid, and he also must be taken to have been aware it was not represented to the body at large, though it was to be so represented. If the directors had represented to the shareholders the capital which was really paid up, this company must have stopped at once; but by misrepresentation they led on the persons whose interest it was their duty to protect, and I cannot allow them to escape from that common calamity of which they themselves have been the authors. Mr. Robinson went to Australia, and these bills followed him; payment was demanded of him; he did not say that he was not liable, but that he was unable to pay the note. It was not thought right or prudent to press for payment, but before he went to Australia, he and his co-directors concerted this improper transaction, which was duly entered in the books. I hold him bound by that entry—the debt is due from him, and I must, therefore, affirm the order of the Court below as regards him, and dismiss the appeal. It does not at all follow, as a necessary consequence, that because a director is bound by his improper act as between himself and his shareholders, that therefore he could have claimed the benefit of it. It is, in my opinion, very right that the law in that respect should not be so. If a man will do that which is improper and illegal in order to obtain a benefit to himself, he may and often ought to be bound as far as regards a loss, and yet at the same time not be entitled to a benefit which he attempted improperly to obtain. I feel, therefore, not the least difficulty in affirming the decision of the Court below as regards Mr. Robinson. In Meux's case, the question of law stands on the same footing as that of Robinson. There is this difference: Mr. Meux died in the early part of the year 1842, and never was credited with any dividends. He makes no entry of this transaction in his own private books. His executors apply, before proving the will, to this company to ascertain what shares their testator had, and what had been paid up; the answer is, that the testator held twenty shares, upon which 10*l.* a share had been paid up. Although it was argued that this was an answer which called upon the executors to inquire, yet I think it was a statement on which the most prudent man might have acted, and on which he might properly have relied. A year afterwards they write to know whether any dividend was due upon these twenty shares; they subsequently sold the shares, in the belief that they had no longer any liability or interest in the concern. An attempt is now made to make the vendors contributories to this winding up, because their testator, Mr. Meux, remained a shareholder, as they contend, to the amount of these 500 shares. These directors had, without the knowledge of their shareholders, entered into an irregular transaction, and when the application was made by Mr. Meux's executors, there had been no representation to the shareholders that any capital had been realized from the shares so improperly taken by the directors. It was at that time a transaction resting simply upon the note and upon the agreement between the directors; it never was a concluded transaction. There were no particular shares which could be considered as belonging specifically to a particular director. Mr. Meux being dead, the survivors, who were then the directors, cancelled that transaction. Now, it is very difficult to say that they were not at liberty to do so: it had never been communicated to the shareholders,—no benefit had been derived from it, no damage had been sustained. This is a case, no doubt, which tries the doctrine of law and equity very strongly. Mr. Meux himself was an original wrong-doer, and his release enures for the benefit of his assets. But shareholders ought not to be at liberty to say that their directors are to make a representation upon the faith of which executors act and distribute assets, and that they are not to be bound by those representations. It would require a very strong case to induce me to relieve the general body from representations made by directors, though improperly, which have led to the distribution of assets. In answer to the party asking me to recall those assets, I should be more disposed to think that the directors who made those representations would be personally liable for any losses sustained by reason of those representations to the general body of shareholders, than inclined to visit upon the assets in the hands of the legatee of the family of the deceased party the effect of those misrepresentations. I am bound to hold that the general body is bound by the representations of the directors, and that the representatives of Meux were properly discharged from their liabilities, and I am very far from thinking (were I called on) that I should decide that they had the power to place in the state in which they found it, that incompleted improper transaction, as a transaction binding upon Mr. Meux. Now, Mr. Meux's executors had to administer his assets: if this application had happened immediately after the transaction, I might still have held that the executors could not be released; but the assets have been released seven years. After such a period of time it is impossible for me to enter into an inquiry of what has become of those assets, and to trace them through the different persons who might have enjoyed the benefit of these transactions. Such an inquiry would perhaps ruin many persons in order to give to these shareholders a benefit to which they were never entitled. I have given to them the benefit as against those directors who had continued their liability, and who had represented themselves and been regarded by the general body of shareholders as persons who had paid up their capital upon these shares.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

Reported by OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Tuesday, March 2.

Ex parte JAMES WHITAKER, re JAMES WHITAKER and JOSEPH CROWTHER, Bankrupts.

Certificate—Jurisdiction.

Semble, that with regard to the question whether a certificate ought to be refused or granted to a bankrupt, the Court has no jurisdiction to direct the commissioner to review his judgment.

The bankrupts, James Whitaker and Joseph Crowther, carried on trade as dyers in partnership together. Upon their application for certificates of conformity, the commissioner suspended the certificate of Joseph Crowther for three years, and refused to grant any certificate to James Whitaker; but he gave protection to both after three months' imprisonment. From this decision of the commissioner James Whitaker now appealed.

Bacon and Steere, on behalf of the appellant, applied to the Court to refer back the matter so far as regarded the question of the appellant's certificate, upon the ground that, since it was before the commissioners, several facts had been discovered which would in all probability induce him to come to a different conclusion as to the appellant's conduct, so as to allow him a certificate. That the Court had full power to send back the matter to the commissioner under the general power of appeal given by the 12th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, notwithstanding the 207th section of the same statute enacts that the order of the commissioner, allowing, or suspending, or refusing a certificate of conformity, shall not be reversed by him, unless it shall afterwards appear to him to have been obtained by false evidence or fraud.

Mottram, for the assignees.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE said, that he felt considerable doubt whether the Court had jurisdiction to direct the commissioner to review his decision. He thought that to make such an order would be in effect to disregard altogether the enactment in the 207th section of the statute, and to treat the matter as if there were no such section.

Lord Justice Lord CRANWORTH said that in his opinion, if the Court had no power to refer the matter back to be reheard de novo by the commissioner, a certificate obtained from the commissioner under such an order of reference would be of no avail to the bankrupt. The matter was then heard before their lordships upon the new facts, whereupon they made the same order with respect to the appellants as the learned commissioner had made with respect to the other bankrupt; but their lordships said that they gave no opinion as to what decision they should have come to, had they been obliged to form an opinion upon the materials only which were brought before the learned commissioner.

Thursday, June 10.

HALLIDAY v. OVERTON.

Power of appointment—Construction—Confined to coverture.

M. H. a widow, with six children, on her second marriage executed a settlement, whereby, after reciting that the rents, issues, and profits of the property to be thereby settled should be to the separate use of M. H. for life, and, after her decease, for the further purpose of making of the reversion and principal thereof a provision for the children of her former marriage, certain real and personal property then belonging to M. H. was vested in a trustee, in trust to pay the income to M. H. for her separate use for life; and, after her decease, in trust for such persons and in such manner as she, in and by her last will and testament, or instrument testamentary, or in the nature of a will, in writing, to be signed and published by her in the presence of three or more credible witnesses, upon testamentary consideration only, during her intended coverture, should direct or appoint:

Held, affirming the decree of the Court below, that the power of appointment was confined to the coverture, and consequently, that an appointment made by M. H. by will, after her husband's death, was not valid.

This was an appeal from the decision of Sir John Romilly, M.R. (see 19 Law T. Rep. 482), upon the construction of a settlement, under the following circumstances. In September 1825, Mary Heathcote, a widow, having six children by her former husband, intermarried with Mr. E. Drayton. On the 23rd of September a settlement was executed, whereby, after reciting that the rents, issues, and profits of the property to be thereby settled should be for the separate use of Mary Heathcote, and after her decease, for the further purpose of making of the reversion and principal thereof a further provision for the children of her former marriage, certain real and personal property belonging to the said Mary Heathcote was respectively conveyed and assigned to a trustee, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns upon trust, after the solemnization of the marriage, to pay the rents, issues, and profits of the said real estate, and the interest, income, and annual profits of the said trust funds "to the said Mary Drayton during her natural life, for her separate use and benefit, without power of anticipation, and from and after the decease of the said Mary Drayton then to stand seised and possessed respectively of the several and respective premises in trust to and for such person and persons to and for such trusts, intents, ends, and purposes, and in such manner respecting the same, and of all and every or any part thereof, as she, the said Mary Heathcote, in and by her last will and testament, or instrument testamentary, or in the nature of a will in writing, to be signed and published by her in the presence of three or more credible witnesses, upon testamentary consideration only, during the intended coverture shall direct and appoint, and for want and in default of such last-mentioned direction or appointment, and as to so much and such part of the said premises whereof no complete direction or appointment shall have been made in trust for the children of the said Mary Heathcote, equally to be divided between them, share and share alike, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants."

Mr. Drayton died during his wife's life-time without having any issue by her. After that event Mrs. Drayton made a will, dated in November 1845, purporting to be in exercise of the power given to her by the settlement, and executed in conformity therewith; and she thereby devised and bequeathed all her real and personal property to four of her six children of her former marriage. Upon a claim being filed, two points arose: The first whether the power of appointment was not confined to the time of her coverture, so not to be exercisable by her afterwards. The second, whether in the event of the Court determining that the power could not be exercised after the death of the husband, the children of Mary Drayton took fee-simple estates or only life estates in the real property comprised in the settlement. The Master of the Rolls (see 19 Law T. Rep. 482) held, first, that the appointment by Mrs. Drayton was invalid, and the power could only be exercised during coverture. And, secondly, that under the settlement the children took only life estates in the real property.

Lloyd and Speed, for the plaintiffs, the appellants.

Roundell Palmer and Sheffield, for parties in the same interest as the plaintiffs.

Amphlett, in support of the decree.

Lord Justice Lord CRANWORTH.—The matter lies on the surface. The parties making the settlement made it in a blundering manner. (His lordship then stated the facts of the case, and the terms of the settlement.) Now it is contended that the settlement gave Mrs. Drayton power to make an appointment, either during or after coverture. This depends upon the words "upon testamentary considerations only during the intended coverture." It was urged by the appellants that those words are to be taken as being within a parenthesis. I do not, however, think so. I concur with the Master of the Rolls that there are two independent restrictions on her power: first, it is to be exercised during coverture only; secondly, upon testamentary considerations only. The question is not free from obscurity, but in my opinion this is a more rational and grammatical construction, and the recital is as consistent with this construction as with the other. The order of the Master of the Rolls, as to this part of the case, is in my opinion right.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—I feel some doubt upon the point; but upon the whole I come to the same conclusion.

Amphlett then proceeded to argue the second point, but ultimately an arrangement was come to between the parties upon the terms of the appellants not paying the costs of the appeal.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

Wednesday, July 28.

Ex parte SHERLOCK.—In re SHERLOCK.

Certificate meeting, appointment of—198th section of Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849.

Under the 198th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, the commissioner has power to appoint a sitting for the consideration of the certificate of a bankrupt, and it is not necessary, in order to give the Commissioner jurisdiction, that an application for that purpose should be made by the bankrupt himself.

This was an appeal against the decision of Mr. Commissioner Stevenson, refusing the bankrupt a certificate or any further protection. A preliminary objection, however, was taken by the counsel for the bankrupt, namely, that whatever the merits of the case might be, the commissioner had no jurisdiction in it, as the sitting to consider the allowance of the certificate did not take place upon the application of the bankrupt. The question turned upon the consideration of the 39th section of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, and the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106 (the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849), s. 198, repealing the former Act. By the 39th section of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, it is enacted, "that it shall be lawful for the Court authorised to act in the prosecution of any fiat in bankruptcy already issued or hereafter to be issued, on the application of the bankrupt named in such fiat to appoint a public sitting for the allowance of such certificate to the bankrupt named in such fiat (whereof, and of the purport whereof, twenty-one days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette, and to the solicitor of the assignees); and at such sitting any of the creditors of such bankrupt may be heard against the allowance of such certificate; but it shall not be requisite for such certificate to be signed by any of the creditors of such bankrupt; and such Court, having regard to the conformity of the bankrupt to the laws relating to bankrupts and to the conduct of the bankrupt as a trader before as well as after his bankruptcy, shall judge of any objection against allowing such certificate, and either find the bankrupt entitled thereto, and allow the same, or refuse or suspend the allowance thereof, or annex such conditions thereto, and allow the same, or refuse or suspend the allowance thereof, or annex such conditions thereto as the justice of the case may require: provided always, that no certificate shall be such discharge unless such Court shall, in writing, under hand and seal, certify to the Court of Review that such bankrupt has made a full discovery of his estate and effects, and in all things conformed as aforesaid, and that there does not appear any reason to doubt the truth or fulness of such discovery; and unless the bankrupt make oath in writing that such certificate was obtained fairly and without fraud, and unless the allowance of such certificate shall, after such oath, be confirmed by the Court of Review, against which confirmation any of the creditors of the bankrupt may be heard before such Court." The 198th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act is as follows:—"That forthwith after the bankrupt shall have passed his last examination, the Court shall appoint a public sitting for the allowance of his certificate (whereof, and of the purport whereof, twenty-one days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette, and to the solicitor of the assignees), and at such sitting the assignees, or any of the creditors of such bankrupt, who shall have given to the registrar of the Court three clear days' notice in writing of his intention to oppose, may be heard against the allowance of such certificate; and the Court, having regard to the conformity of the bankrupt to the law of bankruptcy, and to his conduct as a trader before as well as after his bankruptcy, and whether the allowance of such certificate be opposed by any creditor or not, shall judge of any objection against allowing such certificate, and either find the bankrupt entitled thereto, and allow the same, or refuse or suspend the allowance thereof, or annex such conditions thereto, as the justice of the case may require."

Swanston and Renshaw, for the bankrupt, in support of the objection, contended, that although, according to the 39th section of the repealed statute, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, it is enacted expressly that the application for the certificate must be made by the bankrupt himself, and there is no the same express enactment in the 198th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act; still, upon a fair construction of that section, it was evidently contemplated by the Legislature. [Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE suggested that the Gazette in which notice of the meeting was given, and which was not in Court, ought to be produced.] In the last Act, it is provided, that notice of the sitting for the allowance of the certificate is to be given to the petitioning creditor of the assignees, and the assignees and creditors are to give to the registrar three days' notice of their intention to oppose the allowance of certificate; but nothing is said about notice being given to the bankrupt, the person most interested in the proceedings—an omission which evidently shows that it was considered by the Legislature that he was to take the initiative, thus rendering notice to him unnecessary; a contrary construction might lead to very great injustice. Again, by the terms made use of in the last Act, —"allowance" or "refusal" of certificate, an application for it is clearly implied. Moreover, the certificate was a privilege to be conferred upon bankrupts in proper cases; and it would be no hardship to the creditors that the question of certificate should not be taken into consideration, because by the bankrupt remaining without his certificate, all his property and he himself personally would be liable to their demands; on the other hand, the commissioner had no authority to call a meeting for the purpose of granting or refusing a certificate, for which the bankrupt did not ask, and when, perhaps, actuated by honest motives, he might prefer that his liabilities should remain undiminished.

Bacon and Speed, who appeared on behalf of the assignees, were not called upon by the Court.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—Our opinion of the true construction of the 196th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, especially when compared with the 39th section of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, and, I should say, independently of that statute, is, that the bankrupt's application is not necessary to give the commissioner jurisdiction on this subject. It is a different question whether the bankrupt has had the means of preparing himself; if he has not we will now consider it—it is quite apart from the present question. (a)

Friday, Aug. 6.

FIELD v. JEGON.

Wife's equity to a settlement—Purchase of annuity.

A lady aged sixty-six, without issue, claimed her equity to a settlement as against her husband's assignees out of a sum to which she became entitled; the Court considering, under the circumstances, that she was entitled to have the whole settled upon her for her life, ordered an annuity to be purchased out of it equal in amount to the interest of the sum, and the residue to be paid to the assignees of the husband.

The question in this case was to what provision the wife was entitled, under her equity, to a settlement as against her husband's assignees. The material facts were briefly as follows:—The husband was living with his wife, who was sixty-six years of age, and had no issue, and they were between them entitled to about 110*l.* annually, arising from two pensions allowed to them from some public institutions. The sum the wife became entitled to was about 2,000*l.*

James, for the wife, submitted to the Court that the whole of the sum ought to be settled upon the wife.

Druce, for the assignees, contended that a part only would be sufficient, or at any rate, considering the lady's age, that she had not, and that it was improbable that she ever would have any issue, the better plan would be to purchase an annuity for the wife equal in amount to the interest of the 2,000*l.* and that the residue of that sum, after the purchase of the annuity, might be paid at once to the assignees—that such a scheme would be equally good for the wife, and much better for the creditors.

The COURT, thereupon, ordered such annuity to be purchased as suggested, to be settled to the wife's separate use, without power of anticipation, and the residue of the 2,000*l.* after purchasing the annuity, to be paid to the husband's assignees.

ROLLS COURT.

Reported by J. MACNAGHTEN, Esq. of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Saturday, July 10.

TIPPIN v. LONGMAN.

Will, construction of—Discretion of executors—Relations held to mean next of kin—Advertisements for relations—Claims.

A testator gave property to his daughter for life for her separate use, and after her death to her issue; but if she should die without issue, he directed advertisements to be inserted in the papers for the information of his relations, to whom, that is, to such of them as claimed within two months he left the before-mentioned property, to be divided between them according to the discretion of his executors. The executors predeceased the testator, and no advertisements were inserted. The daughter survived her father and died without issue:

Held, that "relations" meant next of kin living at the death of the daughter, among whom the property was to be divided.

This was a case upon the construction of the will of William Dance, dated the 15th of August, 1806, whereby the testator bequeathed certain property to his daughter, Mary Ann Dance, for life, for her separate use, and after her death to her children, if she should have any. But provided his daughter should die without issue, he then directed that advertisements should be inserted in the daily papers for the space of one week, for the information of his relations, to whom, that is to say, to such and such only as should make their claims within two months after such advertisements. He left the before-mentioned property to be divided between them according to the discretion of his executors, excepting his nephew, Thomas Dance. Should he (the testator) survive his daughter, he willed his property to his relations above mentioned, with the exception of his nephew, Thomas Dance, above mentioned. Mary Ann Dance survived the testator, but died without issue; and the executors named in the testator's will died in his lifetime. No advertisements were ever inserted in the papers, as directed by the testator's will. The plaintiff having taken out letters of administration both to the testator and his daughter, brought the matter before the Court, and the case now came on to be heard.

Shapter in support of the plaintiff's claim, insisted that there was no implied gift to the relations as a class, and that as the discretion in the executors was a mere personal confidence, the case of Fordyse v. Bridges, 10 Beav. 90, had decided that there were no means of exercising it after the death of the executors. Even if the Court should hold that the relations were entitled, the bequest ought to be confined to the next of kin living at the death of the testator, that is to the daughter alone. He cited Urquhart v. Urquhart, 13 Sim. 613; Ware v. Rowland, 2 Phill. 635.

Nichols, contrà, for the next of kin.

The MASTER of the ROLLS thought there was a distinction to be taken between "relations" and "next of kin;" and in this case he was of opinion that the bequest was to those of the testator's relations who were within the Statute of Distributions at the time of the daughter's death, provided they made their claim within the time specified. That view of the case was strengthened by the expressions at the end of the will, from which it appeared that the testator intended to exclude his daughter. The provision in the will as to claiming within a specified time could not now be complied with, but the relations would not for that reason be deprived of the benefit given them under the will any more than they would have been if the executors had survived the testator and had refused to conform to the directions of his will. The property must be divided per capita, equally among the next of kin living at the death of the daughter.

July 10, 12, and 13.

WILSON v. EDEN.

Will, construction—Devise of real estate—Leaseholds.

Devise of all testator's messuages and lands at a particular place, and all other his real estates in certain places, and elsewhere in Great Britain: Held, to include leaseholds.

This case arose upon the construction of the will of the late Sir Robert Johnson Eden, dated the 14th of April, 1815, whereby he directed his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, to be paid, and charged all his real and personal estate with the payment thereof and of the pecuniary legacies or sums in gross thereinafter bequeathed; and he directed that his personal estate not specifically bequeathed should be the primary fund for these purposes. The testator then gave several legacies and annuities, and he charged all and singular his real estates thereinafter devised with the payment of the several annuities; and he gave and bequeathed all the rest, residue, and remainder of his personal estate, goods, and chattels whatsoever and wheresoever, after and subject to the payment of his just debts, funeral, &c. and the said legacies and bequests (except the said annuities) thereinbefore given by him, and all his estate and interest therein, to his brother Morton John Davison, late Morton John Eden, absolutely to and for his own use and benefit. The testator next gave and devised all and singular his manors or lordships, rectories, advowsons, messuages, lands, tenements, tithes, and hereditaments situate, lying, arising, or being at or near Windlestone, &c. in the county of Durham or in the city of Durham, and Brignall, in the county of York, and all other his real estates in the counties of Durham, York, and elsewhere in Great Britain, and all his estate and interest therein, to trustees and their heirs in trust for his said brother for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, and in default of such issue to Sir William Eden, his heirs and assigns. The testator's brother, Morton John Davison, died without issue in June 1841, and the testator, on the 18th of July following, made a codicil, which he thereby "ratified, confirmed, and republished." The testator died in 1844, seised and possessed of freehold and leasehold estates. The testator died in 1844, seised and possessed of freehold and leasehold estates. The question in the cause related to the leaseholds, which were claimed on the one hand by Sir William Eden, as passing with the freeholds under the ultimate devise to him, and on the other hand by the next of kin of the testator, on the ground that they were comprised within the absolute bequest of the personalty to the testator's brother, which failed by his death in the testator's lifetime. The cause came on to be heard before the late Lord Langdale, who, on the 30th of June 1848, decided that the case came within the Act 1 Vict. c. 26; but that nevertheless the effect of the devise was not altered by the provisions thereof, and that the leaseholds passed under the residuary bequest of the personalty. (See the report 11 Beav. 237.) Leave, however, was given to take the opinion of a Court of Law, and a case was sent to the Court of Ex. and was argued in November 1830; and the Barons certified that the leaseholds passed under the devise of the real estates (see the report 5 Ex. Rep. 752); another case was then sent to the Court of Q.B. who agreed with the Court of Ex.; and the cause now came on upon the equity reserved.

Elmsley and Giffard, for the plaintiff, insisted that a clear distinction had been drawn by the testator between his real and personal property, and that the Court of Common Law had come to a wrong conclusion by not attending to this distinction, and if so extensive a construction was given to the 20th section of the 1 Vict. c. 26, as was contended for by the devisee of the real estate, the result would be that a bequest or devise of leasehold or copyhold estates would also pass freehold estates.

Roupell and Goldsmid, for certain of the next of kin in the same interest as the plaintiff.

R. Palmer, Lloyd, Faber, Welford, Dickinson, and others, for other parties.

The following cases were cited:—Arkell v. Fletcher, 10 Sim. 299; Lane v. Earl Stanhope, 6 T. R. 345; Goodman v. Edwards, 2 Myl. & K. 759; Weigall v. Brome, 6 Sim. 99; Lowther v. Cavendish, 1 Eden, 99; Hobson v. Blackburn, 1 Myl. & K. 571; Hall v. Fisher, 1 Colly. 47; Thompson v. Lawley, 2 Bos. & P. 303; Day v. Trigg, 1 P. Wms. 286; Bootle v. Blundell, 19 Ves. 494; Doe dem. Dunning v. Cranstoun, 7 Mees. & Welsb. 1; Watkins v. Lea, 6 Ves. 633; Parker v. Marchant, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 279; Hartley v. Hurle, 5 Ves. 540; Whitaker v. Ambler, 1 Eden, 151; Moor v. Raisbeck, 12 Sim. 123; Farrer v. Winterton, 5 Beav. 1; Cole v. Scott, 1 Macn. & G. 578; Eunes v. Smith, 2 De G. & S. 722.

The MASTER of the ROLLS, without hearing counsel in support of the claim of the devise of the real estate, said he was compelled to differ from Lord Langdale, and to confirm the certificates of the two common law courts, before whom, as well as before Lord Langdale, the case had been very elaborately argued. He was of opinion that the case was governed by the provisions of the 1 Vict. c. 26, and that the leaseholds passed under the devise of the real estates. The costs of all parties to be paid out of the fund.

VICE-CHANCELLOR TURNER'S COURT.

Reported by J. HENRY COOKE, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

April 22 and 28.

M'DONNELL v. POPE.

Landlord and tenant—Change of tenancy.

Where premises were let to A. and certain acts, as to payment of rent and otherwise, were done by A. and B. and after the death of A., B. continued to pay the rent, and then the landlord sued B. and C. who were the executors of A. for the rent:

Held, that although the joint acts of A. and B. were consistent with the notion of a joint letting, yet, as the landlord denied that there was such, the estate of A. was still liable for the rent, notwithstanding the subsequent acceptance of rent from B.

The claim in this case was filed by Mr. M'Donnell, the landlord of a certain house and premises, at Chepstow, against Miss Pope and Mr. Thompson, the executrix and executor of the will of Mrs. Pope, deceased, for the recovery from her estate of arrears of rent from the year, 1847. The plaintiff filed affidavits, positively swearing that he let the house in question to Mrs. Pope alone. The defendants, by their affidavits, detailed various circumstances of payments of rent made, sometimes by Mrs. Pope, sometimes by Miss Pope, and sometimes by both, and since the death of Mrs. Pope, the payment of rent by Miss Pope; and the defence therefore was, first, that the letting was joint, and therefore on the death of Mrs. Pope it was at an end, and her estate no longer liable; and in the second place, that the acceptance of rent from Miss Pope after her mother's death was the creation of a new tenancy in her, and for the rent upon which she alone and in her own individual character was liable. From part of the evidence it appeared that Miss Pope, since her mother's death, had been discharged under the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors. The defendants admitted assets of the testatrix.

Bolt, for the plaintiff.

Daniel and Druce, for the defendants, said, that the defence was twofold: first, that the letting was (a) After this judgment had been delivered the bankrupt was brought into court, and was about to be sworn and the appointment of the assignees on consideration of the certificate had been made, on the application of the said bankrupt. It appeared, however, from the statements made in court, that that was not the correct, and that the notice was merely an old form under the previous Act filled up.

originally a joint letting to Mrs. Pope and her daughter, and, therefore, survived to the daughter; and, secondly, that if not originally a joint letting, yet the plaintiff had, since the decease of Mrs. Pope, constituted Miss Pope his tenant, and put an end to the former tenancy. (Thomas v. Cooke, 2 B. & Ald. 119; Doe dem. Hull v. Wood, 14 M. & W. 685; Lyon v. Reed, 13 Mee. & W. 285; Johnson v. Huddlestone, 4 B. & C. 932; Clarke v. Moore, 1 Jou. & Lat. 723; Doe dem. Hornby v. Glenn, 1 A. & E. 49.)

Rolt, in reply, argued that however plain the intention might be to change the tenancy, and however good such intention might be as between the landlord and Miss Pope, it could not be good against the estate of Mrs. Pope without the assent of Mr. Thompson, the co-executor; and it might well be that the lease was beneficial to that estate. (Graham v. Whichelo, 1 Cromp. & Mees. 188.)

Wednesday, April 28.—The Vice-Chancellor.—The first point is, whether the letting was to Mrs. Pope alone, or to her jointly with the defendant Miss Pope; and, secondly, whether, if that were so originally, the plaintiff, after the death of Mrs. Pope admitted Miss Pope to be tenant by the acceptance of rent from her, and permitting her to retain possession of the premises. As to the first point, it seems pretty clear that the original letting was to Mrs. Pope alone. The affidavits for the plaintiff distinctly state that, and it is nowhere negatived by the affidavits on the other side. Several circumstances were urged as indicating a joint tenancy, but I think they cannot be put higher than as being consistent with a joint tenancy; these are not inconsistent with the view that Mrs. Pope was the sole lessee, and therefore cannot prevail against the direct denial of the joint tenancy by some of the affidavits in evidence. The second point is more open to doubt, but the case for the defence fails here too. For the defendants it was urged that the circumstances attending the case brought it within Thomas v. Cooke, but that case is explained by the case of Graham v. Whichelo, and I think it is clearly referable to this ground,—that a new letting in presenti to an old tenant operates as a surrender of the old lease, because the landlord has no power to let, except the old lease be surrendered. So if the new letting be to a new tenant with the assent of the old tenant, because in that case the intention of the parties will be presumed to be to do such other things as are necessary to be done to give effect to their acts. But we must carry the application of the decision in Thomas v. Cooke beyond the reason of the rules if we are to say that a bare acceptance of rent from the party in possession without any assent or even knowledge on the part of the executor of the deceased lessee shall constitute evidence of a new letting by the landlord to the party from whom the rent is received. There must be an assent to the change by the original lessee or those claiming under him. After weighing the observations in Thomas v. Cooke, I cannot give them more weight here than was allowed them in Graham v. Whichelo. The change of tenancy in 1849 was not assented to by the executors of the old tenant. Thomas v. Cooke goes entirely on the ground I have mentioned, that there had been an actual letting by the landlord with the consent of the old tenant. The case of Graham v. Whichelo explains it very satisfactorily.

Friday, April 30.

ASHLEY v. ALLDEN.

JONES v. ASHLEY.

Costs of two suits—Infant—Next friend.

Where two suits have been instituted on behalf of an infant, and on the hearing the Court has retained the second bill and reserved the costs, the Court will not at a subsequent stage refuse provision for the costs of that suit.

The clerk to the solicitor of the plaintiff in a first suit is not necessarily an unfair and improper next friend to the infant in a second suit.

A bill was filed by one executor in his own name, and in the name of his infant cestui que trust, against the co-executor, praying accounts against the defendant, but not any accounts against the plaintiff, the co-executor. The bill did not, on behalf of the plaintiff's executor, contain any offer to pay into court any money or assets he held of the testator's estate. A second bill was filed on behalf of the infant against both executors, praying the usual administration accounts. A motion was made to have the second bill taken off the file, but the Court (Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce) did not make any order in the terms of the notice of motion, but made an order directing accounts entitled in both suits, and retained the second bill, reserving the costs both of that suit and of the motion. The case now came on upon further directions and costs, and the question, as stated in the judgment, was argued upon the costs of the motion, and the costs of the second suit.

Rolt and Terrell for the plaintiffs in the first suit.

C. P. Cooper for the plaintiffs in the second suit.

The Vice-Chancellor.—The only question for consideration is, as to the costs of the second suit, and a motion by the plaintiffs in the first suit to take the second bill off the file. The Court, by an order on that motion, made in both suits, reserved the costs of the second suit, and of that motion. I am, therefore, bound to consider that the Court did not then hold that the second bill was improperly filed: because, if it had, it would clearly have been the duty of the Court to order the second bill to be taken off the file, and to have made the order in the first suit only, and not in the second suit at all. And not only this order, but whatever has been done since, has been entitled in both suits. The question, therefore, is, whether the Court, having adopted the second suit, and directed a reference to take accounts in both suits, I can consistently with justice consider that the costs in the first suit only are to be provided for, without any subsequent improper conduct being shewn in the second suit. I am in this position, that the Court at the hearing did not consider the second suit altogether wrong; but the Court intended to keep the costs of the motion as a check on the parties in the conduct of the suit. I feel, therefore, to some extent, bound by that order; and, notwithstanding my reluctance to allow two suits to be charged upon the infant's estate, I do not think, if the motion had come as an original motion before me, that I could have made any other order. The original bill was filed by Mr. and Mrs. Ashley concurrently with the infant against the other executor, and not stating that they themselves had any assets, nor praying generally that all accounts might be taken, but only an account from the defendant, the other executor; not offering to pay into court the assets which they had in their hands, nor praying any account to be taken against themselves, nor offering to account themselves. In these circumstances the second suit is instituted on behalf of the infant against both the executors. I cannot say this is improper. Then the objection is raised that the next friend in the second suit is a clerk of the solicitor to the defendant in the first suit. I cannot say that he is such an improper person as to be the next friend as to deprive him or the other plaintiffs in it of all right to their costs. The order of Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce is most happily adapted for meeting the justice of the case; and I feel satisfied that if the Court had thought that the second suit was altogether improper, or that the retaining it was of no use whatever, it would have been then dismissed. I will therefore make an order for the costs in both suits.

June 4 and 5.

CAMBRAY v. DRAPER.

Legatee—Executor—Release—Indemnity—Costs.

A. B. a testator who had entered into a contract for supply of goods, died before it was complete, leaving a few legacies, and subject thereto his property, which was all personal, to his wife. The testator was the executor of his late father, and also of his late brother. Claims were then unsettled as to these two estates. The executors of A. B. paid the legacies, but refused to pay over the residue to the widow unless the larger portion were retained as an indemnity fund for twenty years against any claims relating to the contract as to the estates of the father or brother. This the widow resisted, and filed a bill for the administration of the estate of A. B. and payment of the residue. No claims were established against the estate of A. B. The Court determined that, although the executors had required the impounding of an indemnity fund for too long a period, still that was no reason for depriving them of the costs of the suit.

The bill in this case was filed for the administration of the estate of the late Mr. Philip Cambray, and for the payment over of the residue of the same to the plaintiff, who was his widow, and the defendants were the executors of his will, and the cause now came on upon further directions and costs. The testator was possessed of personal property only, and by his will dated August 1846, after giving some pecuniary legacies, bequeathed the whole of his estate to his wife absolutely. The bill was filed by Mrs. Cambray against the executors, and contained many charges of fraud, which were denied by the answer and not substantiated by the evidence in the suit. It alleged the payment of the legacies, and the complete distribution of the estate, excepting as to the 4,000*l.* or 5,000*l.* residue due to the plaintiff. It was alleged, and admitted, that at first the executors agreed to pay over the balance, less 1,000*l.* to be invested in their names and in hers, as an indemnity against any claims on a certain contract for wheat by the testator, left incomplete at his death, and against any claims in respect of any unsettled claims against his estate, he being the executor as well of his father as of his brother. Subsequently the executors refused to pay even the residue until their accounts had been examined by a professional man on behalf of Mrs. Cambray, although she declared herself perfectly satisfied. The accounts were at length audited, and a deed of release and indemnity drawn, according to which the indemnity fund was to be kept in its then state till twenty years from the date of the indenture. The plaintiff refused to concur in the fund being impounded for more than three years. The executors, by the answer, stated that the accounts of the testator's debts and funeral expenses had never been fully taken; and that the defendants had reason to believe that some liabilities of the testator were still outstanding. In particular, it was stated that the testator had been the personal representative both of his father and of a deceased brother, and that legal proceedings were taken against him during his life, and still continued against his estate, in his character of personal representative to each of them his father and brother; and that the testator had very shortly before his death stated that he had contracted for the purchase of 500 quarters of wheat, which contract, if it existed, was still incomplete, but about which the defendants could learn nothing.

Russell and Rudall contended, that the executors having refused to pay over the residue, without an unreasonable demand being complied with, which had rendered the suit necessary, ought not to be allowed any costs.

Bacon and Speed, for the executors.—Charges of fraud having been made and not substantiated, would be of itself sufficient reason for the plaintiff paying the costs. (Gibson v. D'Este, 2 Younge & Coll. 542.) And as to the unreasonableness of demanding an indemnity, that was sufficiently answered by the case of Norman v. Baldry, 6 Sim. 621; and still more so by that of Knatchbull v. Fearnhead, 3 Myl. & Cr. 122.

Russell was heard in reply.

Saturday, June 5.—The Vice-Chancellor.—The only question in this case is, whether these executors are to be deprived of their costs. It is not asked that costs should be given as against them. The ordinary rule undoubtedly entitles executors to the costs of a release by the legatee; and where the legatees refuse to release the executors by deed, they (the executors) have a right to the costs of a suit in equity instituted for the purpose of taking the accounts, because that is the only way in which the executors can be effectually discharged, viz. by the decree of this Court. It is, I think, on the same principle that the executor or other person administering to the estate is entitled to be indemnified by the legatee in the case of his paying over the residue after the payment of debts. The course which it is requisite that executors should observe is clearly shewn by the decisions, and in none more than in Knatchbull v. Fearnhead. In that case the breach of trust had been committed by the testator in 1801, thirteen years before his death. His executors had never even heard of the breach of trust, or of the existence of the trust under which their testator had rendered himself liable; and they had long since paid and distributed the whole of the assets of their testator. Yet, the testator having left assets to answer the breach of trust, if they had not been administered, his executors were held personally liable to make good this breach. It is evidently, therefore, the anxious duty of the Court to take care that executors are properly protected as to costs when called on to pay over the balance of the testator's estate. I will not say that in no case is it possible for executors to be so unreasonable as that they cannot be deprived of their costs of coming here for the indemnity of this Court; but this I do say, that it must not only be shewn that the executor has insisted on an indemnification to which he had no right, but that he has insisted oppressively on such an indemnity. What then is the position of the parties in this case? The testator died in 1848, and it appears that he had a short time previous to his decease entered into a large contract for wheat. Independently of that, this testator is the administrator of his deceased brother, and the executor of his deceased father: and it appears that demands have already been made upon these defendants in respect of claims against the testator in both of these capacities. No executor can be said to make an unjust claim, if, under such circumstances, and with such indeterminate liabilities against the estate of his testator, he requires from the legatee an indemnity against them before paying over his balance. But the indemnity thus required is said to be unreasonable because the executor proposed that the estate should be impounded for twenty years. Unfortunately the law has not provided any means for ascertaining what shall be a sufficient indemnity. The Trustee Act of 1850 provides a method, but it cannot be said on whom the residuary legatee disputes the amount of the indemnity, and besides, it was passed since this suit was instituted. In this case, it appears that the solicitor for the legatee had himself approved of the indemnity proposed by the executor, and that the legatee afterwards went back from it. But if a difference arises on the question of the indemnity, does it follow, on the bill raising the question what indemnity the executors are entitled to, and my opinion being that they are entitled to some indemnity, and there being no other complete indemnity than having the accounts taken in this Court—does it follow, I say, that the executors are to be deprived of their costs because they have insisted on too much, or rather on having the fund locked up for too long a period? I think twenty years is an unnecessarily long period to keep the fund impounded; but it is not because the executor has asked for too long a period of impoundment, he is, therefore, to be deprived of his costs. There is, therefore, no sufficient case to deprive these executors of their costs. As to the arguments founded on the executors having proceeded to distribute part of the fund, and that they were therefore bound to go on with the whole, I think there is no weight at all in it. It is one thing to pay a few small legacies, and another thing to part with the possession of the whole residue. There will, therefore, be the usual decree in a suit by residuary legatee for administration of the estate.

Aug. 2 and 3.

MORGAN v. MILMAN.

Specific performance—Defective execution of a power.

An estate was settled to such uses as father and son should jointly appoint by deed, and subject thereto to the use of the father for life, then to the use of the son for life, with remainders over. The father and son contracted with a railway company to sell part of the estate, but the price was thereafter to be settled. The company advanced part of the money to the father and son on their joint receipt, expressed to be "in respect of the lands, part of our estates," required by the company. The father then died, and subsequently other parts of the settled estates were contracted to be sold to the same company. In a suit filed for specific performance, the Court Held, first, that the joint receipt was not such a defective execution of the power as would be aided by the Court; and, secondly, that the contract was not such a contract as would be enforced against the remainder-men.

This was a bill for specific performance. Certain estates were settled to the use of the late Sir Charles Morgan, bart. for life, with remainder to the use of the present Sir Charles Morgan, bart. his son, with divers remainders over in strict settlement. The father and son had a joint power of appointment by deed, executed in a particular form as to attestation, under which they could acquire the fee-simple in the estate. The father and son entered into a contract with the South Wales Railway Company to sell part of the land, but, under the circumstances detailed in the judgment, no regular exercise of the power of appointment was made, but part of the purchase-money was paid to the father and son on their joint receipt. The father then died, having appointed his son, the plaintiff, the present baronet, his executor. The plaintiff contended that the receipt operated as an execution of the former, which, though defective in form, the Court would aid, and that the company were bound to complete their contract, and therefore that he, the plaintiff, would be entitled to the purchase-money, whether belonging to the estate of his father, to whom he was executor, or as belonging to him in his own right; on the other hand, the parties entitled under the settlement insisted that the power not having been duly exercised, ought not to be enforced against by the aid of the Court, and therefore that the money was subject to the trusts of the settlement.

Sir W. P. Wood, Rolt, Glasse, Osborne, Millman, and Woolley for the same parties. They cited and commented on the following cases:—Coventry v. Coventry, 2 P. W. 222; Campbell v. Leach, Ambl. 749; Shannon v. Bradstreet, 1 Scho. & Lef. 52; Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234; Blagden v. Bradbear, 12 Ves. 466; Pigott v. Pennie, 2 Sugd. Pow. 168, 6th edit. 99.

Tuesday, Aug. 3.—The VICE-CHANCELLOR.—This was a bill by the present Sir Charles Morgan for the specific performance of a contract with the South Wales Railway Company. The case was singularly circumstanced. By a settlement, the estates in question were settled to such uses as the late Sir Charles Morgan and his son (the plaintiff) should jointly appoint, subject thereto, to trustees for 500 years, then to the late and present Sir C. Morgan successively for life, with remainder to the sons of the present Sir C. Morgan in tail. There was a power in the settlement for the trustees (with consent of the late and present Sir C. Morgan, or the survivor of them) to agree with any railway or canal company for the sale of any part of the settled lands, and for the consideration-money to be paid for taking the same, and for the loss or damage which might be caused thereby. The settlement also contained the usual power of sale and exchange, and the moneys to arise from such sale were to be held for the same uses as the settled lands; so also as to the purchase moneys of lands to be taken by any such companies under the above power. In December 1845, the South Wales Railway Company being about to pass through these estates, the late Sir C. Morgan authorised his solicitor to negotiate with them for any part of the land which they might want. In March 1846, the company gave the usual notices to take part of the land. A surveyor valued the part proposed to be taken at 8,000*l.* The company did not agree to this, but offered 7,500*l.* Pending this valuation, Sir C. Morgan's solicitor wrote to the company's solicitor as to the title which the company would require, and he stated in his letter the joint power of appointment, and said he hoped therefore there would be no objection to the late and present Sir C. Morgan receiving the purchase-money without procuring any further consents. As the company wanted the land, it was agreed that they should deposit in the bank a sum of money sufficient to cover the whole purchase-money demanded, and that thereupon they should be let into possession, the total amount of the purchase-money to be afterwards settled by reference or by a jury. 8,000*l.* were accordingly so deposited, and the company was then asked to allow part of this sum to be paid at once to Sir C. Morgan and plaintiff. This they refused. But afterwards they said they would permit 7,500*l.* to be paid out on a receipt being given. Accordingly the following receipt (signed by the late Sir C. Morgan and plaintiff) was delivered to the company, viz. "30th Sept. 1846. Received this day of the South Wales Company the sum of 7,500*l.* on account of the compensation money to be ultimately fixed and to be paid by the said company in respect of the lands, part of our estates, required for the South Wales Railway." The 7,500*l.* were then transferred into the name of the late Sir C. Morgan, and abstracts of the titles to the lands were delivered, but nothing further was done until his death. Since then 20,000*l.* had been agreed to be given by the company for the above-mentioned land, and other lands included in the settlement. The first power of appointment was never exercised, and it was now gone, by the death of Sir C. Morgan. The plaintiff, who was his executor, and also one of the donees of the joint power, contended that the defective execution of the power would be aided by the Court, and that he was entitled, against the company and the trustees of the settlement, to the purchase-money. The cases left no doubt that a valid contract for sale which could be enforced against a donee of a power would also be enforced against the remainder-man; but the cases went no further. A mere intention of the donee of a power to sell under it, would not bind the remainder-man. Then, was there in this case such a contract as bound the plaintiff, and could be enforced against him? I am sorry to say, that in my opinion there is not; the nearest approach to it is in the receipt for the 7,500*l.* but the lands are not sufficiently described there; the words are — "Lands, part of our estates." But what lands were meant? This the document does not inform us. Parol evidence could not be admitted to explain the meaning, and the receipt was not so connected with the notices as to enable them to be referred to for the purpose. Independently of this, the contract was to sell at a price to be afterwards fixed. That price never was fixed, and therefore specific performance could not be had, and the remainder-man under these circumstances, could not be bound. The case of Campbell v. Leach, Ambl. 740, was much referred to in the argument. But it appeared from Sugden on Powers (see Appendix, No. 25), that there were letters in that case which probably contained the contract. It was clear from the note in Sugden, that the letters were written by the infant's father, and in all probability the case must have gone upon that. My conclusion, therefore, is, that on the whole of this case there is no such contract as I can enforce against the remainder-man; and therefore, perhaps, the strict course would be to do no more than dismiss this bill. I will, however, if the parties desire it, direct a reference to the Master to inquire whether it would be proper for the trustees to adopt this contract with the company.

Common Law Courts.

BANKRUPTCY.

BRISTOL BANKRUPTCY COURT.

(Before Mr. Commissioner HILL.)

July 27 and Aug. 24.

Re T. G. PHILLIPS.

Opposition to certificate—Witnesses examined in the absence of the bankrupt—Privilege of attorney's clerk from giving evidence against the bankrupt as to transactions occurring previously to the bankruptcy—Right to privilege passing to assignees.

Where the ground of opposition goes to the refusal of a bankrupt's certificate altogether, the depositions of witnesses examined in support of an alleged fraudulent removal of property, taken in the absence of the bankrupt, cannot be read or referred to; but the Court, upon the objection being taken, will adjourn the meeting for the production and re-examination of the witnesses de novo.

The clerk of an attorney stated to have been concerned in the preparation of a deed, by which it was sought to charge the bankrupt with having made a fraudulent preference and disposition of property in favour of a relation, has the same privilege as his principal, and cannot, on claiming such privilege, be called on to give evidence against the bankrupt on the application of the assignees, and such privilege does not pass to the assignees or the creditors under the adjudication, but is inherent in, and the personal privilege of, the client, the bankrupt, and is not divested by bankruptcy.

The bankrupt, who was a grocer and tea-dealer at Newport, in Monmouthshire, had been adjourned on his last examination sine die, without protection, and had subsequently been arrested and imprisoned in Monmouth Gaol, having been taken up on a writ of capias issued on a certificate granted under the 257th section of the Act. After remaining in prison some months, he applied, under the 259th section, for his discharge, being before the period thereby limited for bankrupts remaining in prison for offences committed against the Bankrupt Laws had expired, and was, on such application, discharged by the Court ad misericordiam. He afterwards passed his last examination, and now (July 27th) came up upon an application for his certificate.

Abbot supported.

W. Bevan, for Mr. Jerram, of London, the assignee, and principal creditor, opposed the allowance of the bankrupt's certificate, on the grounds of improperly contracting debts, fraudulent preference, and disposition of property, keeping improper books of account, and for concealment of property; and was proceeding to refer to the depositions of witnesses on the file, in support of the last ground of opposition, when Abbot objected to those depositions being read or referred to; they were not taken in the presence of the bankrupt, but at a meeting of which he had no notice, and he had no opportunity of cross-examining.

Mr. Commissioner HILL allowed the objection, and adjourned the meeting for the production and re-examination of the witnesses de novo; the ground of opposition going, as the learned commissioner observed, to the refusal of the certificate altogether. Adjourned to 24th August. Objection allowed.

Tuesday, August 24.—At this, the adjourned certificate sitting, the witnesses were re-examined,—Abbot attending to cross-examine and support the application of the bankrupt for his certificate.

Bevan, contrà (Whitefield for him).

The witnesses now somewhat varied in their statements of facts from the evidence they had given on their first examination; and did not completely substantiate the charge of concealment and removal of property, being two full chests of tea, alleged to have been improperly obtained from Mr. Jerram, the assignee, and opposing creditor, on the eve of bankruptcy, and as alleged, removed from the stock a day or two previously to the messenger going into possession. At an earlier stage of the proceedings, a lady had been examined as a witness, by the assignee,—in whose favour the bankrupt had executed a mortgage of some property at Newport, which it was now sought to impeach, as having been made in contemplation of bankruptcy, and fraud of the creditors; and this subject formed the ground of opposition for fraudulent preference and disposition of property. It was elicited on examination of this witness, that the instructions for and preparation of the mortgage were given to, and that the deed was prepared and execution obtained by, the clerk of an attorney, then practising at Newport, who was stated at the time to have been concerned for the bankrupt, in the transaction of the mortgage. The attorney's clerk was summoned to-day to give evidence on the part of the opposing creditor and assignee, touching the preparation and execution of this deed, with the object of discovering the circumstances under which it was executed, and in support of the opposition of fraudulent preference; the party in whose favour it was made, being a relative of the bankrupt, and the clerk attended in obedience to the summons. Upon being sworn, this witness objected to give his evidence, or to disclose any facts relative to the transaction, and claimed privilege as having acted on the occasion as the clerk of the solicitor stated to have been concerned for the bankrupt in the preparation of the deed, and refused to state what took place in reference to it, and on being asked for whom or on whose behalf he claimed such privilege, answered on behalf of the bankrupt. It was thereupon argued for the opposition, and in support of admitting the evidence,—first, that clerks to attorneys or barristers were not within the reason and exigency of the rule, as to privileged communications between solicitor and client, although it might be otherwise if the principals themselves were present and claimed the privilege on behalf of the client; and, secondly, that if such privilege existed, and applied to the client before bankruptcy, it became divested, and transferred to the assignee, after the adjudication; and the creditors, therefore, now had a right to the evidence, and to the discovery sought of the witness, for the purpose of ulterior proceedings, if not in opposition to the present application for certificate.

Mr. Commissioner HILL observed, there were circumstances of grave suspicion attaching to the case; but with respect to the privilege claimed, he was of opinion that the evidence could not be disclosed, and the clerk had the same privilege as his principal, if present, and sought to be examined, would have, and neither could be permitted to give evidence of what had come to their knowledge as professional advisers of the client, and in the course of their employment; and with respect to the right to call for the disclosure argued to have passed to the assignees by the bankruptcy and adjudication, ruled that such privilege does not pass to the assignees or the creditors, but is inherent in and the personal privilege of the bankrupt, which is not divested by bankruptcy, but remains intact in the client.

Evidence rejected; certificate of second class; suspended for six months without protection.

(Upon this question see the recent case before Vice-Chancellor Turner, of Chant v. Brown, 19 Law T. Rep. 361; and see also Mills v. Oddy, 6 Car. & P. 728; Taylor on Evidence, 632, and cases there cited.)

(Before Commissioner Mr. Serjeant STEPHEN.)

Friday, Sept. 24.

Re JAMES FREDERICK LAWRENCE.

Witness objecting to be sworn—Conscientious objections—Committal—Order to intercept post letters.

A witness, who, from conscientious motives only, not being a member, or entertaining the principles of, the Society of Friends, or belonging to the denomination of people called Separatists, cannot object to be sworn when the oath is tendered; and it is not permitted by law that any such privilege shall extend to a witness so situated and refusing. Upon the objection being persisted in, the witness will be committed to prison; and the Court has no discretion but to exercise its authority; but the solicitor prosecuting the inquiry may waive the oath, and the witness will then be discharged from custody and examined without it.

When a bankrupt absconds, and does not surrender, the Court will make an order to intercept, and for delivery of, post-letters addressed to his place of business, to the official assignee.

The petition in this matter was filed on the 10th instant, by Messrs. Hodgkinson and Barnside, of Upper Thames-street, London; the bankrupt residing and carrying on business as a paper-maker, at Wookey Hole, near Wells, Somerset; and the adjudication made on the following day. The bankrupt did not surrender, and had absconded with a large amount of property in his possession.

W. Bevan, solicitor for the petitioning creditor, had obtained an order of the Court, directing that all post-letters addressed to the bankrupt at his place of business, should be delivered to the official assignee; and to-day witnesses were summoned for examination touching the estate of the bankrupt, and with the object of discovering his retreat, as well as for the discovery of the effects supposed to have been fraudulently removed. Mr. J. P. Lawrence, brother of the bankrupt, attended in obedience to the summons served on him; but on the oath being tendered to the witness, he objected to be sworn, stating that he was an Independent, and had conscientious objections to the oath proposed.

Mr. Commissioner STEPHEN.—You are called upon to be sworn as the law requires, and you must submit to do so, or take the consequences.

Witness.—I am commanded by an authority superior to earthly law, to "Swear not at all." I have no desire to set myself above the law, but I can only give you, "Yea," and "Nay," and for so doing, I must take the consequences.

Mr. Commissioner STEPHEN.—Do you profess to be one of the people called Quakers?

Witness.—No.

Mr. Commissioner STEPHEN.—I do not understand you to belong to the class called Separatists?

Witness.—I am a Separatist from the Church of England, but attend at Highbury Chapel; the congregation of which, it appeared, were not denominated Separatists but Independents.

Mr. Commissioner STEPHEN.—If you were acting upon a principle of conscience, in the course you have taken, it is impossible not to respect your motives, however we may lament your misguided judgment. In the meantime it is my duty to send you to prison.

Witness.—Well, I will go.

Mr. Commissioner STEPHEN.—Then stand down whilst the warrant for your committal is making out.

Committed.

[The witness was further asked, if he had a little time given him, whether he thought there was any chance of his altering in his determination? but he replied, "None whatever," and very coolly submitted to his fate of being sent to prison; he was then removed in custody, but during his temporary absence, the solicitor to the petitioning creditor very liberally intimated, that if the witness could be got to answer at all, he (the solicitor) would not press for his committal. He was thereupon recalled, and having given such information as was asked without oath, the learned Commissioner observed that he had not thought himself called on to interfere with the discretion of Mr. Bevan, the solicitor prosecuting the inquiry, but if the committal had not been waived, the duty of the Court was to send the witness to prison unconditionally.—REPORTER.]

Scotch Reports.

DIGEST OF SCOTCH CASES.

COURT OF SESSION.—FIRST DIVISION.

Saturday, Jan. 31, 1852.

ORR and BARBER v. THE UNION BANK OF SCOTLAND.

Letter of credit—Forged draft—Repetition—Liability—Scotch and English banks.

A. merchant in Glasgow, obtained a letter of credit from a bank in Glasgow upon a bank in England, in favour of B. and C. merchants in Liverpool. The bank in England paid away the contents of the letter of credit on a forged draft:

Held, that an action at the instance of A. B. and C. for recovery of the amount, did not lie against the Scotch bank.

This was an action to recover from a bank a sum of money given for a letter of credit which had been cashed to a party who had absconded with the money.

Upon the 22nd October, 1844, the late Mr. Gordon Campbell, merchant in Glasgow, with the view of making a remittance to the plaintiffs, Orr and Barber, at Liverpool, paid into the Union Bank at Glasgow a sum of 460*l.* 9s. and received in return a letter of credit, addressed to the Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Company, in the following terms:—

"Union Bank of Scotland, Glasgow,
"22nd October, 1844.

"No. 15,583, A, A.—Please to honour the drafts of Messrs. Orr and Barber to the extent of 460*l.* 9s. which charge to the Bank.

"I am, your very obedient servant, (Signed) "JA. WATSON, Cashier.

"460*l.* 9s.—Entered, M. G. H.

"To the Manchester and Liverpool District Bank, Liverpool.—'Not transferable.'"

On the same day, Mr. Campbell wrote with it to Messrs. Orr and Barber; and the letter of advice, with the letter of credit itself, reached, in due course of post, the counting-house of these parties. When the letter of credit reached Liverpool, Mr. Orr, the only partner of the firm resident in this country, was absent in Ireland. During his absence, their clerk, F. R. Smith, was left in charge of the office, and he advised Mr. Campbell of the receipt of the letter of advice, and accompanying remittance. When Mr. Orr returned, Smith had absconded, and in the meantime the letter of credit had been presented to the Manchester and Liverpool District Bank, along with a draft for the whole sum contained therein, bearing to be subscribed "Orr and Barber." This draft was honoured by the Liverpool Bank, who retain it and the letter of credit as the evidence and voucher of payment; but Messrs. Orr and Barber aver that that payment was made upon a forged draft, and as the Liverpool Bank refuse to make a second payment, the present action has been instituted for recovery of the sum paid into the hands of the defendants at Glasgow by Mr. Campbell.

This action was raised at the instance of Orr and Barber, and also by Campbell, as executor and representative of his brother, "both parties suing as principals, and not one with the consent of the other." The ground of action was based upon the averment, that the defendants failed to perform what they undertook to do, in consideration of the 460*l.* 9s. and did not effectually establish a credit with the Liverpool District Bank in favour of Orr and Barber; and that that bank did not accept or fulfil the mandate contained in the letter of credit, and did not honour the drafts of Orr and Barber to the extent therein mentioned, or to any extent.

The defendants (the Union Bank) lodged in process documentary evidence to prove that in the accounts between the banks, the Union Bank, as on the 22nd October, 1844, credited the Liverpool Bank with the payment, and that these accounts were at once settled according to the invariable practice subsisting between the two banks.

The Lord Ordinary having found for the defendants, the plaintiffs appealed. The process was debated last session, and the Court ordered cases to be prepared, and to be laid, along with the whole cause, before the judges of the whole Court, for their opinion.

For the plaintiffs, it was contended that a letter of credit is not a transference of debt. It is merely a mandate to the party addressed to supply the person named in the letter with a sum of money, and, upon doing so, to charge it to the writer of the letter. But no debt arises against the writer of the letter until the request in the letter is complied with. (1 Bell. Com. 373; 1 Lex Mercatoria, 606, by Bearves; Molloy de Jure Marit. B. II. c. 10, s. 36; Pothier, Contrat de Change, Part II. Art. 3, s. 3, No. 236.) Payment upon a forgery is a nullity, and cannot be charged upon the party whose name is forged. (Thomson on Bills, 258, see note; Borland v. The Thistle Bank, Feb. 768; Mer. Dict. 877; Byles on Bills of Exchange, 6th edit. 266; Chitty on Bills, 8th edit. 425, 426; Bayley on Bills, 5th edit. 318, 320—322, 369, and 371; Storie on Promissory Notes, 464; Johnson v. Waidle, 3 Bing. N. C. 225. See also 1 Bell's Com. 373; Starkie on Evidence, last edit. 780; Calder v. Aitchison, 10th Sept. 1831; House of Lords Rep. 5 M. & S. 410; Pothier, Contrat de Change, p. 2, art. 3, s. 3; Bolt, 4 Bing. 473; Main v. Bailey, 10 Ad. & El. 616; Thomson, 320. It was not necessary to give Orr and Barber a title to sue that they should themselves be contracting parties with the defendants, provided a stipulation was made or implied in their favour. Stair, 1, 10, 5, p. 95; Ersk. 3, 1, 8; Merchington v. Vernon, 1 Bos. & P. Rép. 101. See note.

The defendants maintained that the obligation undertaken by them, by granting the letter of credit, has been fully discharged. They deny that they became bound to guarantee Messrs. Orr and Barber should actually receive into their hands the sum of 460*l.* 9s. They contend that the only obligation undertaken by them was to establish a credit with the Liverpool Bank in favour of Orr and Barber, and that as they granted a good and available letter of credit on the Liverpool Bank, being a solvent bank, no recourse can lie against them at the instance either of Campbell's representatives, or Orr and Barber, unless they return to the defendants the letter of credit dishonoured and unpaid. They can only be liable to refund to Campbell, if he could have no defence to an action at the instance of Orr and Barber for payment of the sum due by him to them. But by transmitting the letter of credit, Campbell has discharged his debt. (Warwick v. Noakes, 21st June, 1791; Peake's Cases, 67,) The letter, therefore, quoad Campbell, was a good document, and he has therefore no title to insist in this action. (See also Bayley on Bills, 138.). The Liverpool Bank having paid upon a forgery, the forged document is the property of Orr and Barber, who are entitled to receive it from that bank. But no action lies at their instance against the defendants, who never contracted with them. (Johnson v. Windle, Nov. 8, 1836; 3 Bing. N. C. 225.)

The case having been again called to-day,

N. C. Campbell appeared for the plaintiffs.

Inglis and Wood for the defendants.

The LORD PRESIDENT announced that a majority of the consulted judges were of opinion that the conclusions against the bank were not well-founded. His own previous opinion was thus confirmed. The duty of the Union Bank, after having received the money from Campbell, was quite plain. It was to establish a credit in favour of Orr and Barber at Liverpool; and this duty was regularly performed by them. The credit was acted on, and the contents of the letter were handed over to the person left in charge of the place of business of Orr and Barber, and admittedly entitled to receive their letters. The clerk absconds, and the simple question now is,—is this an action the conclusions of which can be sustained against the Union Bank in consequence of anything they may have done. It is impossible to find any grounds in law on which to found neglect of duty on their part, and there is nothing else which would render them liable. They established at Liverpool all that was required of them; and it is plain to demonstration, therefore, that it is not to the Union Bank that the plaintiffs must look for redress. As to English law, we have nothing to do with it. We are to administer our own law; and all we have to determine is, whether there is a good ground of action against the Union Bank of Glasgow, to compel them to pay the amount of this letter of credit, which has passed away from them entirely. He concurred in the opinions of the consulted judges that there was not.

Lord FULLERTON.—This case is one of great nicety, and certainly of great practical importance. Such a claim as that of the plaintiffs requires to be very rigorously investigated; and the effect of such inquiry on me has been to create a very decided opinion that the action cannot be sustained. On the supposition that all the parties are subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts in this country, can there be a doubt that your lordships would reject the claim as now made, and would oblige those plaintiffs to proceed against the bank who cashed the cheque, as the party truly in fault? and this seems to rest on a very obvious principle. While the draft or cheque is the voucher against the receiver of the money of its payment, the letter of credit on which the bank pays is the voucher of that bank against the bank by which the letter was granted. When the persons, then, who have bought the letter of credit, and got it, chose, like the plaintiffs, to demand repayment of the price, it is clear that, in order to support that demand, they must produce and redeliver the letter of credit. No doubt, when admitted that it has not been acted on, its production is of no importance. It may, like any other mandate not acted on, be recalled. But when, on the other hand, the correspondent avers that the credit has been acted on, and payment made, and he retains the letter of credit as a voucher, it is indispensable for the parties claiming repayment of the money from the bank which received it, to recover the letter of credit, the voucher between the two banks, out of the hands of the bank retaining it, before they can advance one step in the action. Now, that is the case here; and the conclusive answer, in these circumstances, would have been,—take your steps against the bank which, as you aver, paid unduly; you can have no claim against us till you restore to us the letter of credit which is retained by our correspondents as a voucher against us in accounting with us, the Union Bank. The circumstance of the correspondents, the Manchester and Liverpool District Bank being subject to the law of England, really makes no difference in the case. That bank must either pay or redeliver the letter of credit; and if they aver as the ground of their refusal that the money was paid, that will just raise the question with the proper parties in England which the plaintiffs now seek, most unreasonably, to press against the defendants here, whether or not it was a payment which is good against the plaintiffs. But to find the defendants liable to repay, while the plaintiffs cannot redeliver the letter of credit, given only in consideration of the advance, seems unsupported by every principle of law, or even of ordinary fair dealing.

Lord CUNINGHAME also concurred.—The case of Warwick v. Noakes, 1 Peake's Cases, p. 67, shews that parties in England delivering a bill for value to an onerous purchaser, and which is despatched by post to a third party, in terms of his request, is not responsible for the contents of the bill if it is lost or embezzled; and the case of Johnson v. Windle, 3 Bing. N. Cases, p. 225, proves that there is no excuse for not bringing the action in England against the parties who committed the wrong (if any was committed), on the ground that a suit could not be maintained in England against the District Bank for want of the bill. Now, looking on the present as a case of mandate or obligation in mercantile business, I am of opinion that this is a case juris gentium, and depends on the law of trade generally, and not on any point peculiar to our municipal system. If so, it is believed to be the custom of the Supreme Courts both of England and Scotland, from the obvious policy of making the law of trade the same over the whole empire, to admit authoritative precedents in each country of intelligible and clear import, without seeking the aid of foreign counsel. In these circumstances, he could not sustain the present action against the defendants, whose conduct had been altogether blameless and unexceptionable, when the parties alleged to have been chiefly in fault in paying on a forged receipt are not sued, though amenable in their own forum.

Lord IVORY concurred with the majority of the Court.

Equity Courts.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Reported by C. H. KAINS, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law.

July 22 and 23.

ABEY v. ARNOLD.

Breach of trust—Liability of trustee—Specialty debt.

The liability arising from a breach of trust held to create only a simple contract debt.

The Courts will not readily imply a covenant so as to create a binding obligation on the part of a trustee.

A sum of 2,262*l.* Bank Three per Cent. Annuities was assigned to Thomas Arnold and the defendant William Arnold upon certain trusts,—2,095*l.* a part of such sum, was afterwards transferred by the Accountant-General into their joint names. The fund was subsequently transferred into the name of Thomas Arnold alone, who sold it out, received the proceeds, and applied them to his own use. Thomas Arnold died in 1844, and appointed the defendant, Arnold, and another person his executors. A suit was instituted for the administration of the testator's estate, under the direction of the Court, and the Master, by his report, found that his estate was liable to the amount of 1,970*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* in respect of the sum of 2,095*l.* Bank Three per Cent. Annuities which had been sold out, and that the same constituted a debt and liability by specialty. The question was, whether that liability, in consequence of the breach of trust, was a specialty or a simple contract debt, the trust funds having been assigned to the new trustees by the deed appointing them upon the trusts of the settlement.

Lord Cranworth, V.C. on the hearing of the cause on further directions, decreed that the cestuis que trusts were creditors by simple contract only for the amount so misapplied.

From that decree they now appealed.

Willcock, Malins, and Osborne appeared for the appellants, and cited Gifford v. Manley, Ca. temp. Talb. 109; Benson v. Benson, 1 Pr. Wms. 130; Lord Montford v. Lord Cadogan, 19 Ves. 633; Mavor v. Davenport, 2 Si. 227; Randall v. Lynch, 12 East, 179.

Teed and F. Webb supported the decree of the Vice-Chancellor, and cited—Vernon v. Vaudry, 2 Atk. 119; Cox v. Bateman, 2 Ves. sen. 19; Turner v. Wardle, 7 Si. 80; Wood v. Hardesty, 2 Coll. 542; Bartlett v. Hodgson, 1 T. R. 42.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—There is no difficulty in this case. A breach of trust does not create a specialty contract debt. That is clear on the authorities of Cox v. Bateman and Vernon v. Vaudry. In the case of Lord Montford v. Lord Cadogan, it was decided that the general words, "it is declared and agreed," amounted to a covenant, and all the cases in which sums misapplied have been held to be specialty debts, were cases in which the misapplication was contrary to a declaration made under seal. In Bartlett v. Hodgson, "it was declared and agreed that the trustees and their heirs should not be chargeable with, or accountable for, any money arising in execution of the said trusts but what the person or persons so to be accountable should actually receive." In that case, 2,800*l.* had been misapplied, and the Court held that, although the trustees were accountable for what they received, they were not so, as being under a covenant. The Courts will not readily imply a covenant; there must be words upon which the Court can act. The only point which I have to decide is, was Mr. Arnold, at the time of his death, under any covenant? I am of opinion that he was not. The assignment was made from the old to the new trustees upon the trusts of the settlement. There are no words which amount to a covenant. There is nothing to raise the obligation; no action at law could be maintained; and this Court can only enforce the obligation quâ trust. There has been a breach of trust, but there being no words which can raise a covenant, I must dismiss this appeal with costs.

Tuesday, July 27.

GARDEN v. INGRAM.

Lessor and lessee—Covenant to insure—Refusal of lessee to join in a receipt for money receivable under the covenant at the instance of his mortgagee and his lessor.

A lessee who had covenanted to insure leaseholds against fire in the joint names of himself and his lessor, mortgaged them by demise, and the mortgagee, under a power of sale, sold them. The premises were subsequently damaged by fire, and the lessee refused to join the lessor in giving a receipt to the insurance office to enable the mortgagee to receive the money payable under the policy, on the ground of an alleged purchase to himself, and of having a lien on the policy for money expended by him in reinstating the premises. On a claim filed by the mortgagee and his purchaser, it was Held, affirming the decision of the Court below, that the lessee as mortgagor had no lien, and that he was bound to sign the receipt.

The remainder-man is entitled to the benefit of a policy effected by the tenant for life.

A lessee is not entitled as against his mortgagee to a lien for repairs on a policy which passed to him under the mortgage.

This was an appeal from a decision of the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce.

The claim was filed by the plaintiff as mortgagee by demise, and by a purchaser from him against the defendant, the mortgagor of certain leasehold premises, to compel him to deliver up a policy of insurance against fire, and to sign the usual receipt to the office for 190*l.* being part of the sum in which the premises in question were insured, and which had been partially destroyed.

The defendant, who, by his original lease, had covenanted to insure the premises from loss or damage by fire, in the joint names of himself and his lessor, mortgaged them in 1840 to the plaintiff, with a power of sale in default of payment, and who, in 1849 (the money not having been paid), in pursuance of the power, contracted to sell them to a purchaser, who subsequently became bankrupt, and whose assignees refused to complete. The plaintiff then agreed to sell the premises to the plaintiff James, with a stipulation, that as such purchaser he should have the benefit of the insurance money. Part of the premises, pending these negotiations, were destroyed by fire, and the loss sustained was settled at 190*l.* The plaintiff James, as such purchaser (the claim alleged), had rebuilt the premises, and had expended the full sum of 190*l.* in their reparation, and to whom the insurance company were willing to pay the amount on the joint receipt of the defendant and his lessor. The lessor had signed the receipt, but the defendant refused, on the ground that the plaintiff had, previously to the sale to James, contracted to sell the same to him; that on that understanding he had taken possession of the premises, and commenced clearing away the ruins, preparatory to their rebuilding, and had incurred considerable expense. The policy was in the hands of the defendant, who claimed a lien upon it for what he had so expended.

The Vice-Chancellor made a decree in the terms of the claim.

From this the defendant appealed.

Rogers supported the order of the Vice-Chancellor.

T. H. Terrell for the appeal.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—The first question to be decided is, is not the mortgagee entitled to the benefit of the policy effected by the lessor and mortgagor? There are cases on the books upon the rights of persons in different interests to the benefit of policies of insurance, and I could have wished that they had been cited. It has been decided, that if a tenant for life insures, the remainder-man is entitled to the benefit of the policy. The policy in this case was intended as an indemnity to the lessor, and was effected in the joint names of the lessor and lessee, because the former had an interest in it; any advantage under it would enure to his benefit as landlord; and if the fire had happened before the date of the mortgage, the defendant could not have done any act which would have prevented any benefit receivable under it from being directed, according to its original destination. It must have gone, according to the terms of the covenant, in reinstating the property. Now, the parties interested in this policy are claiming against each other; and in the light in which I view this case, it is not very material to consider, whether, under the mortgage-deed, the policy passed to the mortgagee or not, because as whatever was to be received under it must be applied in reinstating the premises, the mortgagee would, of course, have the benefit. The defendant, the lessor and mortgagor, had covenanted to keep the property insured, and he could never be heard as claiming the money against his mortgagee. Independently of that circumstance, I am of opinion that the policy passed to the mortgagee. As regards the claim of the defendant to a lien on the policy in respect of the money which he says he has, as mortgagor, laid out in repairs, I am of opinion that he has no claim whatever to a shilling of his expenditure: he, as mortgagor, has the benefit of the expenditure, for he can redeem at any time; and if the premises are sold, they will fetch a higher price. He cannot claim for his expenditure as coming in aid of the policy, for the insurance office have the right of reinstating the premises, and if it should so avail itself, the expenditure of the mortgagee becomes a voluntary act on his part. I am of opinion that it is perfectly within the rules of this Court to compel the defendant to give up the policy, and to join the lessor in giving the necessary receipt. This appeal must be dismissed, with costs.

Wednesday, July 7.

Re RUGBY, WARWICK, AND WORCESTER RAILWAY COMPANY.

Ex parte PRENCE and EVANS.

Joint-Stock Companies Winding-up Acts—Company—Costs of winding up—Call to pay costs—Contributory—Discretion of the Master—Upfill's case considered.

An Act of Parliament for the construction of a railway not having been obtained, the directors, under a power in the deed, dissolved the company, and returned to such of the scripholders as consented to the cancellation of their shares 15s. per share, being part of a deposit of two guineas, with an undertaking that they would return such further sum as the committee of management should declare payable after the final settlement of all claims on the company and the directors. The company was subsequently wound up. There were no liabilities, and no funds for the payment of the costs of the winding up:

Held, that the Master had jurisdiction to make a call upon the contributories in respect of such costs.

Held also, that such of the scripholders as had received the 15s. per share were not liable to refund it, such sum having been paid to them in consideration of the cancellation of their shares:

Held also, that such scripholders, although they were not liable to refund the 15s. per share, were not exempt from a common and equal liability with the other contributories to the payment of the costs of the winding up, inasmuch as they had reserved to themselves by their contract with the directors a right to participate in the future assets of the company.

The winding-up Acts do not alter legal or equitable liabilities. They do not impose liabilities, legal or equitable, which did not before exist.

Incomplete companies or abortive schemes are within the operation of the winding-up Acts.

This was an appeal from a decision of the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, the facts of which are reported at length in 17 Law T. Rep. 58; they are briefly alluded to in the Lord Chancellor's judgment.

Russell, Winstanley, and Field (of the Common Law Bar) appeared for the appellant, and argued that the being a contributory did not necessarily entail the payment of all kinds of debts. Parties might be contributories merely because they might have something to receive, others because they might have something to pay. The appellants were parties entitled to receive, and although in that sense contributories, they were not members of the company. The call made by the Master could not be enforced, because it was not a call for a definite sum, but a call for the payment of a balance, which had not been ascertained; that it ought to have been for a definite and ascertained sum; that the Master had not considered the several liabilities of the contributories, as he was bound to do, under the provisions of the Act; and cited Hunter's case, 1 Si. N.S. 435, and the 83rd sect. of the Winding-up Act, 1849.

Daniel, for the official manager, contended that Hunter's case did not apply; that the parties under whom the appellants claimed had signed the deed, and were therefore entitled to whatever benefits might accrue from the company; and that being entitled to the benefit, they were subject to the burthen. (Ex parte Jay, 5 De Gex & S. 122; and 18 Law T. Rep. 167, 282.)

Russell, in reply.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—This is rather a singular case. The parties here bought of the persons who took in this incipient railway company certain scrip shares in the share market; the persons to whom they had been allotted had executed a certain deed between the different subscribers and the persons who were to be the officers of the company, and therefore, having bought those shares, and accepting the liabilities, and claiming the benefits, they must be considered as bound by the provisions of that instrument. Now that instrument particularly provided that each party should pay a deposit of two guineas per share, and that he should not be liable for any further call on account of expenses or otherwise, until the proposed Act of Parliament should have been obtained, unless the same should be required by the standing orders of the Houses of Parliament, and then only to the extent so required. The directors were authorised, at any time before the Act should be obtained, and of their sole authority, to dissolve the company; and thereupon to wind up and adjust its business transactions and liabilities, and for those purposes to represent and to act on behalf of and bind all the subscribers thereto, and their respective executors. The company failed to obtain their Act of Parliament, and the directors issued circulars to that effect, stating that they would shortly lay the accounts before the shareholders; that they had determined, in accordance with the wish of many of the shareholders, to return immediately 15s. a share to the holders of the scrip; that the scripholders were to send in their scrip, and be paid on their signing a paper stating that they, being entitled to so many shares in the railway the scrip of which was therewith sent, assented to the cancellation of the shares on their receiving 15s. on each share, and such further sum as the committee of management should declare payable after the final settlement of all claims on the company and the directors; such sums were to be "in full for all my share and interest whatsoever in the undertaking." Profit, no doubt, there could have been none; but still they were to have no other claim on the company. The appellants accepted the 15s. a share, and signed the documents to which I have referred. There can be no doubt that the Act that was then done was within the powers of the deed, and it was binding on all the parties. I must suppose this proposition to have been made with a knowledge of the state of the assets at the time it was made. Now, the acceptance of it has this effect,—it at once removes the scripholder, as a shareholder, from the company. He has no right to any further interference: he gives up his scrip, which is cancelled; but what he has a right to is this, to retain the 15s. which is paid to him as the price of the cancellation of his shares, and also to whatever the committee of management think his ultimate portion of the residue, after payment of all the claims on the company and on the directors; but he has no power to interfere,—he must take what the committee of management allot to him. There was, therefore, a very full consideration for the 15s. It appears, therefore, to be a contract binding all parties, and one with which this Court ought not to interfere. If matters had remained in that state, no question would ever have arisen between these scrip shareholders and the company themselves; whether the creditors could ever have come against those shareholders beyond their two guineas a share would have depended on a very different question; that would have depended whether the scripholder had or not, by dealing or by contract, made himself liable to the particular demand which a given creditor might attempt to establish against him. Upfill's case may be considered as no longer binding; that is to say, the House of Lords having considered it as compounded of fact and of law, it did not present such decision as the House was bound to follow. Although there was a difference of opinion as to whether the House had power (I apprehend it has) to correct its own errors, yet everybody was of opinion that case, depending on law and on fact, the House of Lords was at liberty, on a statement of facts, to decide according to the law (as they did decide it) applicable to such state of facts; the consequence of which was, that in a case, stronger than Upfill's, that is, where a party had paid his deposit (which in Upfill's case he had not), and where he had received a notice of the resolution of the committee, which according to Upfill's case he had not, and therefore a stronger case, it was decided that there was no liability; that there was no contract to which he could become liable to answer. As to the Winding-up Acts, they do not alter legal or equitable liabilities. They enable this Court to wind up even incomplete companies; that has also been decided in the House of Lords: the Acts apply to a company which never becomes complete—an abortive scheme is within their operation; still they do not impose liabilities, legal or equitable, which did not exist before. Now, these are costs of a proceeding which has been allowed by the Master and sanctioned by the Court—costs incurred in the winding up of a company, and not in respect of anything else; they are not costs of attempting to get in assets. Are, therefore, the appellants liable or not to contribute to their payment? I am of opinion that they are, although they are not liable beyond the two guineas; and although I may, perhaps, not hold them liable to refund the 15s. a share which they have already received, yet they are liable to contribute to the costs; and for this reason; they have reserved to themselves, by their contract with the directors, a right to participate in the further assets of the company if there should be any; the Act of Parliament applies to a company like this, which is not completely wound up, although it is dissolved; the case falls properly within the Acts, and as costs having been incurred in carrying out the intention of the Acts, these parties are properly contributories; if there ultimately should be any assets which would pay more than 15s. a share, they would be entitled to their share. So far, therefore, I think that they were properly put on the list of contributories, and that the Master's power under sec. 83 cannot be interfered with, he has the discretion, and the Court will give him credit for exercising that discretion, and will consider that his decision in that respect must generally be considered as final. But here the Master has decided a rule of law besides. He says (for that is the effect of his decision) that not only are these parties contributories generally with the other parties in respect of the costs of the winding up, but they are contributories in respect of the 15s. a share which they received out of the assets, that they must pay 15s. a share if it be necessary to the extinction and payment of the cost of winding up before anybody else who has not received that sum shall be called upon to pay a farthing. That certainly looks equitable, because it is putting everybody on the same footing; but the question is, is it legal? That is what I have to decide. Is it according to the rights of the parties? The official manager represents the general body; what right have the general body to come against these parties to whom they have paid the 15s. a share for a good consideration? Why are these parties to refund their 15s.? No authority has been cited for the purpose of supporting such a proposition as that, and I do not apprehend that there is any. The cases that have been quoted do not bear upon it. In the case of a legatee, if a legatee receives more than he is entitled to, he is paid by the trustee or executor; he could not claim against such legatee, but the other legatees who are disappointed may. They may say: "You have been paid more than your share of the assets," and so on; "You have got more than you are entitled to, to the exclusion of us;" but here the directors have exercised the power which was confided to them; they bind all the parties to the association, and they cannot get back that money. I think that the Master has, therefore, miscarried in making these parties liable exclusively in respect of the 15s. a share. It is money that they are entitled to keep; but that does not exempt them from a common and equal liability to the costs of winding up with the rest, for their own benefit as well as the benefit of the others, and, therefore, they are in that respect contributories within the meaning of the Act of Parliament, and I must therefore hold that the order of the Master is to be so far rectified as to place everybody on the same footing. I shall not send it back to the Master, or incur any further expense. I shall endorse the order with this: "The Court, declaring that the scrip shareholders who have received their 15s. a share, are not bound to bring that into contribution for the call now made for costs, let the Master's order stand as a call on all the parties rateably of 4s. a share, irrespective of the 15s. a share received by some of them, and so on."

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

Reported by OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

July 28 and August 4.

PLOWDEN v. HIDE.

Will—Revocation—Heir at law—Devisee.

A. contracted for the purchase of an estate at S. B. and made his will, devising it upon certain trusts; subsequently he took a conveyance of the estate at S. B. to the usual uses to bar dower:

Held, affirming the decree of the Court below, on the authority of Rawlins v. Burgis, 2 V. & B. 382, that the devise of the estate at S. B. was thereby revoked.

The same testator A. being the owner of an estate at B. which had been conveyed to him to the usual uses to bar dower, mortgaged the estate, and the proviso for redemption was, that the estate should be reconveyed to him, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, or to such other person or persons, to such uses and in such manner as he or they should direct; afterwards the testator made his will, devising the estate at B. upon certain trusts, and subsequently he paid off the mortgage and took a reconveyance of the estate at B. to the usual uses to bar dower:

Held, reversing the decision of the Court below, that as to the estate at B. the will was not revoked by the reconveyance of the mortgaged estate.

This was an appeal from the decision of the Vice-Chancellor Kinderaley, under the following circumstances:—In the year 1809, Henry Chicheley Plowden mortgaged in fee certain hereditaments in the parish of Boldre, forming part of the Newton-park estate, and he afterwards paid off the mortgage; whereupon, by indentures dated the 22nd and 23rd April, 1811, the same hereditaments were reconveyed to uses to bar dower, viz. "to the use of such person or persons, and for such estate or estates, and in such parts, shares, or proportions, manner or form, and either with or without power of revocation and new appointment, as the said Henry Chicheley Plowden shall by deed or will direct, limit, or appoint; and in default of such direction, limitation, or appointment, or until any such shall be made and take effect, and as to such estate or interest as shall not be directed, limited, or appointed, to the use of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden and his assigns, for and during the term of his natural life, without impeachment of or for any manner of waste; and after the determination of that estate by any means in his lifetime, to the use of John Dyneley, his executors, administrators, and assigns, upon trust, nevertheless, for the only benefit of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden and his assigns, to the intent that any wife of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden may be excluded from all dower or thirds, or right and title to dower or thirds of and in the said premises; and from and immediately after the determination of the said estate hereby limited to the said John Dyneley, his executors, administrators, and assigns, to the use of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs and assigns, for ever." Soon after, the said Henry Chicheley Plowden borrowed 3,000*l.* of William Newton, on mortgage of this estate, and by indentures of lease and release, dated respectively the 30th April and 1st May, whereby, after reciting the indentures of lease and release of the 22nd and 23rd April, 1811, the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, in consideration of the 3,000*l.* advanced by Newton, appointed and conveyed the estate to Newton in fee, subject to a proviso for redemption, whereby it was declared and agreed that if the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs, appointees, executors, administrators, or assigns should pay or cause to be paid unto the said William Newton, his executors, administrators, and assigns the sum of 3,000*l.* with interest at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum, on the 1st November then next ensuing, then the said William Newton, his heirs and assigns, and all and every other person and persons claiming under him or them, should and would, upon the request and at the costs and charges of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, reconvey and reassure the hereditaments and premises unto the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, or to such person or persons, to such uses and in such manner as he or they should direct, free from incumbrances.

In 1809 Henry Chicheley Plowden purchased certain lands called Hornscroft, at South Baddesley, at a sale by auction, for 1,900*l.* These lands were both freehold and leasehold, and were comprised in lot 1. There was, however, no written contract, nor any evidence as to the terms of the contract for the purchase.

On the 15th May, 1811, Henry Chicheley Plowden made his will, whereby he devised to John Dyneley, his heirs and assigns, "all and every my messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and all other my real estate whatsoever, or which I have contracted to purchase, situate in or near the parishes of Boldre and South Baddesley, in the county of Southampton, or elsewhere in England, or to which I, or any person or persons in trust for me, am, is, or are seised or entitled, for any estate of freehold and inheritance, or of freehold only, in possession, reversion, or expectancy, or of which I have power to dispose of or appoint by this my will, with their rights, members, and appurtenances, to hold to the said John Dyneley and his heirs;" to the use of the testator's wife during her widowhood; and after the determination of her estate, upon trust to sell, and divide the produce into fifteen parts, of which James Chicheley Plowden, the father, hereinafter mentioned, was to have four.

By an indenture, dated 9th November, 1811, and grounded on an indenture of lease, after reciting that the freeholds and leaseholds forming Hornscroft had been put up to sale, and that Henry Chicheley Plowden had been declared the highest bidder for and purchaser thereof at the price of 1,800*l.* and that it had been agreed that the hereditaments intended to be thereby conveyed, and forming the freehold part thereof, were of the value of 400*l.* and that it had been agreed that the said sum of 400*l.* should be the apportioned part of the said sum of 1,800*l.* to be paid in respect of and as the purchase and consideration money for the pieces of land and hereditaments thereinafter mentioned, and expressed to be thereby conveyed; it was witnessed that, in pursuance of the said agreement, and in consideration of 400*l.* paid as therein mentioned, certain persons therein mentioned conveyed unto the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs and assigns, the said hereditaments called Hornscroft, to hold, unto the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs and assigns, to such uses as the said Henry Chicheley Plowden should appoint; and in default of and until and subject to any such appointment, to the use of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden and his assigns for his life; and after the determination of that estate by any means in his lifetime, to the use of the said John Dyneley, his executors, administrators, and assigns during the said Henry C. Plowden's life, upon trust for the benefit of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, and to the intent that any wife of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden might be excluded from dower, and after the determination of the estate so limited to the said John Dyneley to the use of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs and assigns, with remainder to the use of the said John Dyneley, his executors, administrators, and assigns, during the life of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, and his assigns, in trust for the said Henry Chicheley Plowden; with remainder to the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs and assigns, for ever.

The mortgage to Newton was afterwards paid off, and an indenture of release dated the 7th December, 1813, grounded on an indenture of lease, was made between the said William Newton, of the first part, the said Henry Chicheley Plowden of the second part, and the said John Dyneley of the third part; and thereby, after reciting the said indentures of the 30th April and the 1st May, 1811, it was witnessed that in consideration of the sum of 3,000*l.* to the said W. Newton paid by the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, in full for the said mortgage money and interest, he, the said William Newton, did bargain, sell, and release unto the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, and to his heirs and assigns, all and every the hereditaments comprised in the said indenture of the 1st May, 1811, to hold the same, unto the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs and assigns, for ever; nevertheless, to the use of such person or persons, &c. (in the same words as were made use of in the indenture of the 23rd April, 1811).

In 1821, Henry Chicheley Plowden died, and his widow entered into possession of his real estates, and amongst others those comprised in the before-mentioned indentures as tenant for life under his will, and remained in possession of them until her death, in 1848. James Chicheley Plowden, the heir of the testator, died intestate, as to his interest as such heir-at-law. In a suit instituted to carry into execution the trusts of the will of Henry Chicheley Plowden, the following questions arose:—First, as to the estate at South Baddesley, which the testator had contracted to purchase before the making of his will, whether his subsequently taking a conveyance to the usual uses to bar dower was a revocation of the will. Secondly, as to the estate at Boldre, mortgaged to Mr. Newton, whether the reconveyance by that gentleman did not revoke the devise of that property contained in the will. Sir R. T. Kindersley, V.C. held that as to the devise of both estates there had been a revocation. The first question his Honour considered quite free from all doubt; with regard to the second, his Honour said, that with respect to the mortgaged property, he thought the testator had an estate in fee-simple in the equity of redemption at the date of his will, and that it would follow, if he confined himself to this view of the matter, that a subsequent conveyance of the legal estate to the testator, in any other form than the fee, would be a revocation of the devise. The devisee had, however, a right to refer to the particular terms of the proviso for the redemption in the mortgage deed, as shewing an agreement between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, that upon the repayment of the mortgage money, the premises should be reconveyed, not simply to the mortgagor in fee, but in some other special form; and that if the legal estate was, as first reconveyed in the form in which, by the terms of the proviso, it was agreed to be reconveyed, the reconveyance did not operate as a revocation of the devise. That the terms of the proviso for redemption did not, however, warrant a reconveyance to uses to bar dower on the payment of the purchase-money, and a reconveyance to such uses, therefore, was a revocation of the devise. He could not decide that a contract to convey to A. his heirs, appointees, and assigns, imported that the conveyance was to be made to uses to bar dower as in the present case. And he referred to the judgment of Lord Langdale in Bullin v. Fletcher, 1 Keen, 376, as a clear and an important authority on that part of the case. An appeal was thereupon presented by parties interested in the estates under the trusts of the will, against the decision of the Vice-Chancellor.

Willcock and Jessell, for the appeal.

Malins and Erskine, for parties in the same interest.

J. Russell and Lewin, for the heir-at-law.

Sir W. P. Wood, Glasse, Daniel, Hetherington, and Stevens, for other parties.

Harmood v. Oglander, 6 Ves. 222; Brydges v. Chandos, 2 Ves. jun. 417; Youde v. Jones, 11 Sim. 163; Thellusson v. Woodford, 13 Ves. 209; Goodtitle v. Otway, 2 Hen. Black. 522; Welby v. Welby, 2 V. & B. 187; Tickner v. Tickner, 2 Atk. 742; Doe v. Potts, Dougl. 718; Williams v. Owens, 2 Ves. jun. 595; Ward v. Moore, 4 Madd. 368; Brain v. Brain, 6 Madd. 221; Bullin v. Fletcher, 2 My. & Cr. 432; Poole v. Coates, 2 Dru. & War. 497; Lock v. Foote, 5 Sim. 618; Anson v. Lee, 4 Sim. 364; Tennant v. Tennant, L. & G. 516; Rawlins v. Burgis, 2 V. & B. 382; Ruscombe v. Hare, 6 Dowl. 1; 2 Bligh, N.S. 192; Innes v. Jackson, and Jackson v. Innes, 16 Ves. 356; 1 Bligh, 104, were cited and commented on.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—The question of revocation or ademption, the only question argued before us in this case, relates to two distinct portions of the real estate of Mr. Henry Chicheley Plowden, the testator in the cause; one included in a mortgage of the 1st of May, 1811, and a conveyance of the 7th of December, 1813; the other included in neither of those instruments, but comprised in a deed of the 9th of November, 1811. With regard to the latter portion, I am unable to distinguish this from the case of Rawlins v. Burgis, which was decided in 1814 by a careful judge, since followed in more than one instance, and never, so far as I am aware, overruled. I do not think that we ought to refuse to follow it now. Whether, if the point of revocation or redemption that it determined were new, I should have held an opinion in conformity with that decision or not, is a question as to which it is unnecessary for me to say anything. With respect to the other portion, the title stands thus:—the hereditaments of which it consists having been acquired by the testator, were, by his desire, conveyed on the 23rd of April, 1811, in this manner: "To such uses as the testator should by deed or will appoint, and in default of and until appointment, to the use of the testator for his life, with remainder to the use of Mr. Dyneley, his executors, administrators, or assigns, during the testator's life, in trust for the testator, with remainder to the use of the testator, his heirs and assigns, for ever. Very soon afterwards, namely, on the 1st of May, 1811, he mortgaged those hereditaments in fee, Mr. Dyneley as his trustee joining in the mortgage to the mortgagee, Mr. Newton, whom in December 1813 the testator paid off, whereupon, by his direction, Mr. Newton, on the 7th of December, 1813, conveyed the mortgaged hereditaments to the testator and his heirs, to such uses as the testator should by deed or will appoint, and in default of and until appointment, to the use of the testator for his life, with remainder to the use of Dyneley, his executors, administrators, and assigns, during the testator's life, in trust for the testator, with remainder to the use of the testator, his heirs and assigns for ever." The testator's will devising these hereditaments having been made on the 15th of May, 1811, the point has arisen whether the effect of the conveyance of the 7th of December, 1813, was or was not to render the will inoperative as to them; a suggestion which, however startling to common sense, however foreign to natural equity, is yet rendered plausible, if not sound, by the state of the law of England, as it stood before the testator died in 1821,—a state upon this particular subject which was discreditable to a civilised country. It has since been altered, but not with reference to the property of men who had ceased to live before 1833. Their property is subject to the old law, which, however, was such as upon the present point, that no man I suppose would be willing, without absolute necessity, to treat a case as falling within it. Does the necessity exist here? I think not. I am of opinion that the object, the intention of the deed of the 1st of May, 1811, was to make the mortgage in fee and not otherwise to affect the title of the mortgaged property; and the conveyance of the 7th of December, 1813, having been to the same uses and for the same purposes as the uses and purposes by which it stood affected immediately upon the making of the mortgage of the 1st of May, 1811, my view of the matter is, that the conveyance of 1813 did not, in freeing the property from the mortgage, affect the title to the lands or the testator's interest in them, or his power over them otherwise than so far only as to make that wholly or in part legal which before had been merely equitable. It is true that Mr. Dyneley never was more than a mere trustee for the testator; this, however, seems to me to make no difference, for if it is conceded, as, in my opinion, it ought to be, that by the deed of mortgage, the testator meant the mortgage merely, and nothing more. Why should it be supposed that he ever intended the land to be reconveyed by the mortgagee simply to the use of the testator in fee, he himself having before the mortgage, as well as after the mortgage, caused them to be conveyed for his benefit to the uses usual for preventing dower? From the only reports that I have seen of the argument before the able judge, in whose court this petition originally was, I collect that neither Ruscombe v. Hare, nor Innes v. Jackson, before Lord Eldon, nor Jackson v. Jackson, before the House of Lords, nor any of that class, were cited before him. This I regret, for I might otherwise not have been placed under the necessity of differing from one whose judgment and the long intimacy I have the happiness to claim with him, make me estimate at least as highly as my own. He seems to have considered the proviso for redemption without reference to those authorities; that is the effect of the judgment. [Counsel here stated that those cases had been cited.] The judgment, however, does not allude to them; and I am not quite sure that were I to do so myself (that is, consider the proviso for redemption without reference to that class of cases), I should not arrive at his conclusion; but neither am I convinced that I should, for, perhaps, if my opinion ought to turn upon the language of the proviso, the expressions used are at least as much in the appellant's favour as against him, the clause being thus worded: "Provided always, and it is hereby declared and agreed that if the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs, appointees, executors, administrators, or assigns, shall and do well and truly pay, or cause to be paid, unto the mortgagee, his executors," and so on, "3,000*l.* with interest for the same without any deductions in the usual way"—then follow the usual string of unmeaning words,—"then and in such case, and immediately after such payment shall be made as aforesaid, the said William Newton, his heirs and assigns, and all and every other person or persons claiming or to claim, by, from, through, or under him or them, shall and will upon the request, and at the costs and charges of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, reconvey and re-assure, or cause to, be reconveyed and re-assured, the said capital and other messuages, farms, and hereditaments hereby limited and appointed, released and conveyed, or intended to be released and conveyed, to them, and every part thereof, with their appurtenances, unto the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, or to such uses, and in such manner as he or they shall direct free from all incumbrances to be created by the mortgagee." On the whole, having, since the argument before us, read the authorities then cited, and every other within my knowledge, that it could on this dispute be important to refer to, and thinking that as to the question of revocation or redemption, this case stands exactly on the footing on which it would have stood if the testator, having immediately before the mortgage, been simply seised in fee, had upon paying it off, taken from the mortgagee a simple reconveyance to himself in fee, because, having immediately before the mortgage, held the property subject to the usual limitations for preventing dower, he, upon paying it off, took from the mortgagee a conveyance or reconveyance, having limitations, the same in form, and substance, and object (even the trust being the same) as existed when the mortgage was made. I am of opinion that it may, consistently with Tickner v. Tickner, with Rawlins v. Burgis, and with every established rule of law, be held as I do hold, that this testator's testamentary dispositions are equitably in force with respect to the mortgaged portion of his real estate, and that so far at least it is not incumbent upon the Court to defeat his wishes, disappoint his intentions, and subvert his will.

Lord Justice Lord CRANWORTH.—I concur in the result at which my learned brother has arrived, and in a great measure upon the same grounds. It might be unnecessary for me to do more than to express that concurrence, but as we differ from the learned Vice-Chancellor, I thought it right unconnected with my learned brother, to put my view of the case down, so that I may state that also. It is unnecessary for me to go through the facts, because they have been already stated. The question divides itself into two branches; first, as it regards the South Baddesley land; and, secondly, as it regards the property at Boldre mortgaged to Mr. Newton. With respect to the former, there is no doubt of the soundness of the opinion appealed from, unless we are prepared (which we are not) to act in opposition to the case of Rawlins v. Burgis, decided by Sir Thomas Plumer in 1814. The purchase in this case was made at an auction, and in the absence of evidence one cannot assume that there was any special stipulation as to the form of conveyance to be made. The purchaser, therefore, became equitable owner in fee; and Rawlins v. Burgis, decides that in such circumstances a conveyance to the purchaser to the usual uses to bar dower, operates as a revocation of the previous devise of the equitable fee. As to the lands at South Baddesley, therefore, the present case cannot be distinguished from, and must be governed by, that authority. Indeed, as to these lands, the petitioner can hardly be said to have seriously questioned the correctness of the Vice-Chancellor's decision. The main contention before us was as to the messuages and lands at Boldre, mortgaged to Newton. The Vice-Chancellor decided that the devise of this property was revoked by the reconveyance in December 1813; and my impression during the argument was in favour of that decision, but subsequent consideration of the doctrine applicable to such cases, has led me to a different conclusion. Sir Richard Kindersley reasoned thus:—If a person seised in fee made a mortgage in fee, in the ordinary way, reserving the right of redemption to himself and his heirs; and then before the Act of 7 Wm. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 26, had come into operation, devised his equity of redemption, a subsequent reconveyance to him and his heirs by the mortgagee upon the mortgage debt being paid off, did not affect the previous devise of the equity; but if the reconveyance was made not to the mortgagee in fee, but to him, to the usual uses to bar dower, this effected a revocation, for the same reasons as are applicable to the case of a purchaser. The conveyance in such a case was not merely a uniting of the legal with the equitable estate, it effected and created new rights and incidents in the property, and so operated as a revocation of the devise. Assuming that to be clear in the case of a simple mortgage in fee, with the right of redemption reserved to the mortgagee, and his heirs, the Vice-Chancellor then proceeded to consider how far that general principle was affected by the special terms in which, in this case, the redemption was reserved. The reconveyance is to be "unto the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, or to such other person or persons, to such uses and in such manner as he or they shall direct." Even taking these words to indicate the form of reconveyance, which was the most favourable interpretation for the appellant; still, although such a proviso would have warranted a reconveyance to such uses as the mortgagor should appoint, and in default of appointment to him and his heirs; and though a reconveyance so made would, upon this construction of the proviso, have effected a revocation, yet the language used did not, in the judgment of the Vice-Chancellor, warrant a reconveyance in the form actually adopted, namely, to such uses as the said Henry Chicheley Plowden should by deed or will appoint, and in default of appointment, to the use of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden for life, with remainder to the use of the said John Dyneley himself for life, and in trust for the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, with an ultimate limitation to the use of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden, his heirs and assigns. His Honour was of opinion that these uses differed materially from those warranted by the proviso for redemption, and so that the reconveyance not having been made in the stipulated mode, operated as a revocation of the previous devise. Of the correctness of this reasoning, so far as relates to the first branch of it, there cannot, I think, be any doubt. Taking the case of Rawlins v. Burgis to be a binding authority, I can discover no distinction in principle between the case of a person entitled in fee and an equity of redemption in lands mortgaged in fee, and that of a person equitably entitled to lands under a contract to purchase them. If a conveyance to the ordinary uses to bar dower caused, before the statute of 1837, a revocation of the will in the latter case, it must have had the same effect in the former. Such a construction is in conformity with what would have happened if the devisee had been the owner of the legal instead of the equitable fee. If a person seised in fee made his will before the statute, and thereby devised his inheritance, and afterwards conveyed his legal estate so as to take it back to himself, not in fee simple absolutely, but to the usual uses to bar dower, this unquestionably was a revocation of the devise, and on this analogy the decision in Rawlins v. Burgis was founded, applying to the devise of the equitable fee the doctrine applicable to a will affecting the legal estate; and, as I have already stated, I see no reason for thinking that a different rule should be applied to the devise of an equity of redemption from that governing the case of a person entitled to the fee simple by contract as a purchaser. So far, therefore, I concur in the view taken of the law by the Vice-Chancellor. But as to the second branch of this reasoning, I think there is at all events very considerable doubt. I am not prepared to assent to the proposition that if an equity of redemption in a mortgage in fee, had before the Act been reserved to such uses as the mortgagor should appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of the mortgagee and his heirs, then a reconveyance to the usual uses to bar dower would have operated as a revocation of a devise made before the reconveyance. When the legal owner in fee, after devising his estate, conveyed it by feoffment or by lease and release to such uses as he should appoint; and, in default of appointment, to the use of himself for life, with remainder to a trustee during his life, and with the ultimate use to himself in fee, there was a change of the seisin; but if the owner of an estate had an absolute power of appointment as well as the legal fee, that is to say, if his estate stood limited to such uses as he should appoint; and in default of appointment, to the use of himself in fee, the consequences might be different. In such a case, if the owner, after making his will and devising, had made an appointment so as to take an estate with the ordinary uses and limitations to bar dower, I know of no authority deciding that this would be a revocation of the will. There would in such a case, be no change of seisin, and so the principles applicable to a devise by a person having a mere estate in fee simple, do not necessarily apply. And if this would not have been a revocation at law, it would seem to follow that it would not have been a revocation in equity, when the subject-matter of the devise was an equity of redemption. Upon this point, however, it is not necessary for me to say that I differ from Sir Richard Kindersley; for even, assuming his view of the law to be correct on this second point as well as on the first, still I think that here there was no revocation, and that upon grounds not apparently brought before the Court below in the argument. The principle upon which I conceive this case must rest is, that by the deeds of the 6th and 7th of December, 1813, the estate was reconveyed to precisely the same uses to which it had stood limited previously to the mortgage. It is a well-established principle, that in the absence of express stipulation to the contrary, a mortgage is to be considered in this court as a mere charge, taking out of the property so much as is necessary for accomplishing the object; and leaving all not so abstracted precisely as it stood before the mortgage. The equity of redemption, therefore, attaches on the estate of the mortgagor, with all the same rights, restrictions, and qualifications to which his legal estate had been previously subject. When, therefore, the mortgagor pays off the mortgage, and takes a conveyance of the property to the same uses to which it had stood limited previously to the mortgage, he is, in fact, only doing that which has been described as bringing home the legal estate, or as clothing the equitable with the legal estate, and all the authorities shew that there was no revocation of a devise of the equitable interest made while the legal interest was outstanding. That is precisely what was done here. The estate previously to the mortgage stood limited to such uses as the said Henry Chicheley Plowden should by deed or will appoint; and in default of appointment to the use of him for life, with remainder to the use of John Dyneley, his executors and administrators, during the life of, and in trust for, the said Henry Chicheley Plowden and his assigns; and after the expiration of those estates, to the use of the said Henry Chicheley Plowden and his heirs. When the mortgage was paid off, in 1813, the property was reconveyed to these same uses, bringing the case within the rule to which I have referred. Of course, however, if the mortgagor had expressly stipulated that the right of redemption should be reserved in a manner not according to the previous state of the property mortgaged, the general rule would then give way to such express stipulation; and the only remaining question, therefore, here is, whether there is any such express stipulation to be found on the face of this mortgage. I am clearly of opinion that there is not. I have already adverted to the language of the proviso for redemption. Sir Richard Kindersley reasoned on the assumption that it was intended to point out a peculiar mode of reconveyance. He did so, because he considered that was the view the most favourable for the party against whom he was deciding, and not because it was the correct construction of the proviso. This, I think, may be fairly inferred from the whole tenor of the observations in this case, in which I concur. There is a profusion of words in the proviso in question; in truth, it is no more than a proviso for repayment of the mortgage-money to the mortgagee, and a reconveyance to Mr. Plowden, his heirs, or assigns. The word "appointees" can hardly be said to have any meaning beyond the word "assigns," and like those which follow, "such person or persons," is, in fact, tautology. It must, therefore, be treated merely as a reconveyance to the mortgagor and his heirs, and it does not shew any intention affecting the nature of the estate out of which the mortgage was granted. I am very glad, therefore, consistently with what I consider the principles applicable to this case, to be enabled to support and give effect to the will of the testator.

ROLLS COURT.

Reported by J. MACAULAY, Esq. of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Jan. 28, Feb. 9, and March 29.

COULTHURST v. CARTER.

Will, construction of—Gift to parents—Gift to issue by way of substitution—Period to which words referable—Class, children of one of.

The children of a deceased parent who formed one of a class cannot take by substitution when the parent could not have taken according to the terms of the will:

A testatrix bequeathed a moiety of her residuary personal estate on the death of her niece without leaving issue, and after the death of the survivor of her niece and niece's mother, to the children then living of A. A. deceased, and the issue then living of any child of A. A. dying in the lifetime of the niece, such issue taking only their parent's share: and if all or any of the children of A. A. should die without issue in the lifetime of the niece, gave their share or shares among the children of M. H. living at the decease of the niece. The niece died without having been married; then the niece's mother died. M. H. died before the niece, leaving children:

Held, that the children of M. H. were entitled under the will.

The question in this case came before the Court on a special case, under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35. It appeared that Eleanor Waisman, by will bearing date 15th December, 1825, devised and bequeathed to John Nicholas Coulthurst, William Sidgwick, and Thomas Kendall, and the survivor of them, his heirs, executors, and administrators, all her real estate, and all her personal estate not specifically bequeathed, to hold to them and the survivor, &c. for ever according to the nature or tenure thereof upon trust, to pay debts, funeral expenses, and legacies out of the personal estate, and to invest the remainder; and upon further trust, to pay, or otherwise permit the testatrix's niece Mariana Wainman during the term of her natural life, and from and after her death her (Mariana Wainman's) mother, during the term of her natural life (if she should survive her daughter, and left no issue her surviving), to receive and take the rents arising from the testator's real estate, and the interest of the residue of her personal estate devised to her trustees as aforesaid, the same to be paid and payable to, or received by, his said niece, and after her death without issue, to or by her said mother during their respective lives when and as the same should from time to time be received or payable, and after the decease of her said niece and also after the decease of her (the niece's) said mother, in case the estate thereinbefore limited to her said mother, should take effect, upon further trust that they the said N. Coulthurst, W. Sidgwick, and T. Kendall, or the survivor of them, or the heirs, executors, or administrators of such survivor, should sell and dispose of the testatrix's real estate. Then follows this clause:—"And my will and mind is, and I do hereby direct that the money to arise by such sale or sales as aforesaid shall sink into and become part of my residuary personal estate, which I dispose of as hereinafter mentioned, that is to say, in case my said niece shall die leaving issue, then I give and bequeath my said residuary personal estate, and every part thereof, unto, between, and among all and every the child and children, and the issue of any deceased child or children of my said niece Mariana Wainman, living at her decease, equally to be divided between them, share and share alike, and to their respective executors, administrators, and assigns, the issue of such deceased child or children nevertheless taking the share or shares to which their parent or parents would have been entitled if living at the decease of my said niece. And I order and direct that my said trustees, and the survivor of them, and the heirs, executors, and administrators of such survivor, do pay and deliver, and transfer the same accordingly. And in case my said niece Mariana Wainman shall die leaving no issue, I will and direct that my said trustees, and the survivor of them, and the heirs, executors, and administrators of such survivor, shall and do, within six months after the death of the survivor of my said niece and her mother, pay from and out of my personal estate the legacy or sum of 100*l.* unto, between, and among such of the children of Abraham Margerison, as shall be then living equally share and share alike; and as to all the rest and residue of my said personal estate and effects whatsoever, in the event aforesaid, namely, the death of my said niece, leaving no lawful issue her surviving, I give and bequeath the same from and after the death of the survivor of them my said niece and her mother, as follows, namely, one undivided moiety or equal half-part thereof unto, between, and amongst such of the children of the late Richard Margerison and the issue of any deceased child or children of the said R. Margerison as shall be then living, and to their respective executors, administrators, and assigns, share and share alike, such issue of any such deceased child or children of the said R. Margerison nevertheless taking the share or shares only that their parent or parents would have taken in case such parent or parents were then living. And the other undivided moiety or equal half-part thereof unto, between, and amongst the child and children then living of Ann Armitage, deceased, the sister of my late father, and the issue then living of any child or children of the said Ann Armitage dying in the lifetime of my said niece, and to their respective executors, administrators, and assigns, share and share alike, the issue of any such deceased child or children of the said Ann Armitage nevertheless taking only the share or shares that their respective parent or parents would have taken if living at the death of my said niece. And in case all or any one or more of the children of the said Ann Armitage shall die without issue in the lifetime of my said niece, then I give and bequeath the share or shares of him, her, or them so dying unto, between, and amongst the child and children of Mary Haigh, niece of my late father, who shall be living at the decease of my said niece, and to their respective executors, administrators, and assigns, equally to be divided between them share and share alike. And I order and direct my said trustees to convey and assure, pay, deliver, and transfer, the same accordingly."

The testatrix died on the 27th of December, 1825, having appointed her trustees executors of her will, who proved the same on the 27th of March, 1826. The testatrix died possessed of freehold, copyhold, and personal estates. Mariana Wainman was both her heiress-at-law and heiress according to the custom of the manor of which the copyholds were held, and she was also her sole next of kin at the time of her death. On the 15th of July, 1830, Mariana Wainman died without having been married; and on the 13th of January, 1850, Ann Wainman, her mother, died. These were ten children of R. Margerison, some of whom survived the testatrix, but all of them were dead before the 13th of January, 1850; but there were then living many both children and grandchildren of these children, some of them issue of the children of R. Margerison, who died before, and some of them of the children who survived the testatrix. The children of Ann Armitage were seven in number, of whom four sons and a daughter died without issue before the 16th of December, 1825. Hannah Armitage, a sixth child, married the defendant, John Carter, on the 15th of August, 1805, and died on the 7th of March, 1847, leaving two children, John Armitage Carter and Rebecca Ann Wainman, who afterwards became the wife of the Rev. Wm. Lisle, and died in September 1850, and to whom there is now no personal representative. John Carter, however, took out administration to his late wife. Mary Armitage, the remaining child of Ann Armitage, married Mr. Haigh, and died on the 29th of September, 1823, having had eight children, of whom seven are defendants; and Ann Haigh, the eighth, died on the 21st of March, 1849, leaving her seven brothers and sisters her only next of kin at the time of her death, but no representation has been taken out to her. Mariana Wainman, by her will dated the 30th of August, 1829, gave and bequeathed to her mother, Ann Wainman, all her personal estate and effects whatsoever, and thereby appointed Ann Wainman sole executrix and residuary devisee and legatee; and the will was proved on the 30th of January, 1851. On the 2nd of May, 1846, Ann Wainman, by her will, appointed the defendants, Parnall Robert Maillard and Thomas Pulvertoft Phirkill her executors, who proved the same on the 29th of January, 1850. Thomas Kendall, one of the trustees of the testatrix Eleanor Wainman's will, having died, the surviving trustees, Coulthurst and Sidgwick, sold all the real estate, and got in all her personal estate, and the residue, after payment of debts and legacies, amounted to about 2,000*l.* one moiety of which was now claimed by four different parties; first, by John Carter, as personal representative of his late wife; secondly, by John Armitage Carter and William Lisle, in right of his late wife, on the ground that John Armitage Carter and Mrs. Lisle were the only children of Hannah Carter, who survived her and Ann Wainman; thirdly, by the defendants, the children of Mary Haigh; and, fourthly, by the defendants, Maillard and Phirkill, as personal representatives of Mariana Wainman, the testatrix's heiress-at-law and sole next of kin; and the question now was, who was entitled to this moiety of the testatrix's residuary real and personal estate secondly given by her will.

Roupell and Wickens contended that the children of Ann Armitage could take nothing unless they survived both Mariana Wainman and her mother, and therefore the children of Hannah Carter could take nothing. The question was not quite so clear as regarded the children of Mary Haigh.

Walpole and Turner for the next of kin.

Monday, March 29.—The MASTER of the ROLLS.—I reserved my judgment upon the question whether the children of Mary Haigh, a child of Ann Armitage, who was dead at the date of the will, was excluded. It is a settled rule that children of a deceased parent, who formed one of a class cannot take by substitution when the parent could not have taken according to the terms of the will. Mary Haigh was dead at the date of the will; had she lived till the period of distribution she could have taken only as one of the children of Ann Armitage; she therefore could not have taken under the bequest to the child and children then living of Ann Armitage, the reference being to the death of the survivor of Ann Wainman and Mariana Wainman. If, therefore, the proper construction was, that the issue of a child of Ann Armitage could only take by substitution for their parent, these children of Mary Haigh were not entitled to any interest in the share of the residue. This was a principle established by Peel v. Catlow, 9 Sim. 372; Waugh v. Waugh, 2 Myl. & K. 41; Christopher v. Naylor, 1 Mer. 320. But if the construction was that the issue of a deceased child of Ann Armitage did not take by substitution for the parent, but as passing objects of the gifts, the case was varied, and then if the only condition expressed by the words of the will was that they shall be issue of a child of Ann Armitage who died in the lifetime of Mariana Wainman, and which issue shall be living at the decease of the survivor of Ann Wainman and Mariana Wainman, then the children of Ann Haigh answer the conditions; and the circumstance that Ann Haigh died before the date of the will could not affect the rights of her children; and such was the principle of the cases of Tytherleigh v. Harbin, 6 Sim. 329; Giles v. Giles, 8 Sim. 360; Jarvis v. Pond, 9 Sim. 549, which held that if there was a substitutive gift to the children of a particular person, and to the issue of such of them as should be dead leaving issue, the issue of a child dead at the date of the will would be entitled to a share. In this case, the condition which was to entitle the children of Ann Armitage to take was that they should have survived Ann Wainman and Mariana her daughter; and the condition which was to entitle the issue of the children of Ann Armitage to take was, that the children should have died in the lifetime of the daughter, Mariana Wainman, and that the issue of the children should have survived her and her mother. Upon the first part of the gift, the first question is, who are the objects of it? The gift is to the children "then living" of Ann Armitage, and to the issue "then living" of the children of Ann Armitage dying in the lifetime of the niece. The object, therefore, according to the natural import of the word "and," are both the children of Ann Armitage living at the decease of the niece and her mother, and the issue of the children of Ann Armitage, who might have died in the lifetime of the niece. Upon this standing alone, and if not controlled by any other part of the will, I should be of opinion that there was an original and independent gift to the issue of a child of Ann Armitage, who was dead at the time of the distribution, and that, consequently, the issue of Mary Haigh, who had died before the date of the will, but which issue survived the mother and daughter, Ann and Mariana Wainman, but died before the date of the will, would be entitled. Upon the words taken alone, this appears to be the meaning; the word "dying" does not here import futurity, or require as a condition to entitle the issue of a deceased child to take, that the child of Ann Armitage should die after the date of the will, but implies that the child shall have died in the lifetime of the niece Mariana Wainman. I am next to consider whether this construction is contracted by the subsequent words of the will; and the latter part of this clause in the will, coupled with the state of the family existing at the date of the will, throws considerable doubt on the construction. The state of the family at the date of the will was this: there was only one child of Ann Armitage alive, and of the other children of Ann Armitage who had previously died, one alone, Mary Haigh, had left issue. My first impression was, that the words, "and in case all," &c., would in truth have given the same thing to the children of Mary Haigh as the construction to be put on the former clause, and this argument was strongly pressed upon me; but upon the best consideration I am able to give I have arrived at the conclusion that this is not the true construction of the clause, and that the words "shall die," in the subsequent part of the clause imports futurity, that is, death after the date of the will, and that in the prior part of the clause the word "dying" has not any such effect, but simply imports the circumstance of death at any time prior to the decease of Mariana Wainman, whether it is before or after the date of the will. The result of this construction would be, that the testatrix, when she made her will, contemplated that her estate was to be divided into as many shares as there were children of Ann Armitage then living, or dead having left issue; that in case a child of Ann Armitage then living should die, leaving issue, before the niece, the issue who survived the niece and her mother would take that child's share; but that if a child died before the niece without leaving issue, the share would go to the issue of Mary Haigh. To explain this in the actual state of the family, if the actual state of the family were in truth present to the mind of the testatrix when she made her will, it would be this, that her estate was, in the event of the death of Mariana Wainman without issue, to be divided into two portions, one of which was to go to the issue of Mary Haigh, who survived Mariana Wainman and her mother, and the other portion was to go to Hannah Carter; but that if she died before the niece, leaving issue, it was to go to the issue, but if she left no issue that share was to go to the issue of Mary Haigh who should be then alive. It is obvious to me that the intention of the testatrix has been to a great extent defeated by the words she has used, which, in the case of a child of Ann Armitage living at the date of the will, made it a condition before the issue of such children could take, that the child should have died in the lifetime of the niece. It is obvious that she did not anticipate or provide for the event which has occurred,—viz. that of the niece, Mariana Wainman, dying before her mother, and of Hannah Carter, the child of Ann Armitage, surviving Mariana Wainman and dying before Ann Wainman; but I cannot make a will for her, and the words she has used plainly import a gift over only in the event of Hannah Carter dying in the life of Mariana Wainman. I am of opinion, however, that intestacy only extends to the half which Hannah Carter would have taken had she survived both the niece and the mother; and I am of opinion, therefore, that one-half of the testator's property went to the children of Mary Haigh, who survived Ann Wainman, and that the other half is undisposed of, and goes to the next of kin of the testatrix.

Saturday, June 26.

WEBSTER v. WEBSTER.

Practice—Foreclosure—Decree absolute in the first instance.

This was a suit for foreclosure and a mortgage, and came on to be heard on bill and answer. One of the defendants by his answer disclaimed; and the other, who was entitled to redeem, did not by his answer nor by counsel at the bar claim time to redeem. Under these circumstances

C. Webster, on behalf of the plaintiff, asked for a decree of foreclosure, absolute in the first instance and without a reference to the Master to ascertain what was due to the plaintiff.

W. Forbes and Sidebottom, for the respective defendants.

The MASTER of the ROLLS made the decree as asked by the plaintiff.

VICE-CHANCELLOR PARKER'S COURT.

Reported by GEO. S. ADLETTE, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

May 4, 5, and 6.

COOMBE v. BROMLEY.

Solicitor and client—Partnership—Breach of trust. A. B. and C. were trustees of a sum of stock, the trusts being for themselves and their respective children. Upon the suggestion of D. their solicitor, who was in partnership with E., they associated D.'s name with their own names in the trust, and by a deed dated in 1822, and executed by the four trustees, the trusts of the fund were declared. In 1824 the stock was sold out for the purpose of investment on mortgage, and D. received the money and paid it into the partnership account of himself and E. A., B. and C. consented to the investment being made in D.'s name, alone, and accordingly D. represented that the money was thus invested, when, in fact it had not been, but D. regularly paid the interest. In 1825, the money was invested in a leasehold security, which investment was adopted by the trustees. In 1828, the securities were realised, and the money was received by D. but was not again invested by him, although he falsely represented that it had been. In 1838, the partnership between D. and E. was dissolved, and thenceforward D. paid the interest by cheques on his private account. In 1844 D. became bankrupt, and the money was consequently lost. A., B. and C. filed a bill against E. to have the fund restored by him, but the bill was dismissed with costs.

Thomas Stokes, by his will bequeathed to his three nieces, Margaret, Jane, and Elizabeth Hitchcock, whom he appointed executrixes of his will, 3,000*l.* Navy Five per Cent. Annuities, upon trust as to 1,000*l.* part thereof, for Margaret, for her separate use for life, and after her decease for her children, as tenants in common, and in case of there not being any children, or of their all dying in their mother's lifetime without leaving issue, upon trust for the executors or administrators of the said Margaret; and as to two other sums of 1,000*l.* part of the said sum of stock, upon similar trusts for Jane and Elizabeth, and their children respectively. The testator died in 1822, and his said three nieces proved the will, and they employed William Bromley, of the firm of William and Joseph Warner Bromley, as their solicitor therein. To answer the legacy before mentioned, the sum of 2,910*l.* Navy Five per Cent. Annuities was purchased. On the suggestion of W. Bromley, his name was associated with the three executrixes as a co-trustee of the legacy, and the stock was purchased in the joint names of the four. By a deed dated the 12th February, 1822, and executed by the four trustees, the trusts of the 2,910*l.* Navy Five per Cents, were declared to be according to the will of T. Stokes, and the three executrixes paid to the firm of W. and J. W. Bromley, a bill of costs for their business as solicitors in these matters. In February, 1822, Elizabeth was married to Thomas Coomer, and in August of the same year Margaret was married to Thomas Trott. The Navy Five per Cents. were, in 1822, reduced, and the 2,910*l.* stock before mentioned was converted into 3,055*l.* 10s. New Four per Cent. Bank Annuities. On the 17th March, 1824, William Bromley, acting under a power of attorney, given to him by the three executrixes, and the husbands of the two who were then married, sold out the stock and received for the same 3,257*l.* 18s. 6d. sterling, the sale having been made for the purpose of investing the money on mortgage security. The three executrixes having, upon W. Bromley's suggestion, consented to the mortgage security being taken in his sole name, the sum of 3,257*l.* 18s. 6d. was paid to the bankers of W. and J. W. Bromley to the credit of the partnership account. On the 4th April, 1824, Thomas Coomer wrote to William Bromley to inquire, in his wife's name, if the stock was sold, what was the price at the time, and if W. Bromley had invested the proceeds on mortgage. On the 31st May, 1824, W. Bromley replied to this letter, enclosing a copy of the broker's note of the sale, as follows:—"I send you above a copy of the broker's ticket of the sale, and the interest is payable on the 19th September and 19th March. The odd 7*l.* 18s. 6d. had better be divided with the first interest. The interest to each will be 54*l.* 3s. 4d. per annum. The property is secured on a freehold estate at Holloway." The money had not, however, in fact, been invested. W. Bromley possessed freehold property of his own at Holloway, subject to an agreement for a building lease for ninety-nine years to John Piper Burnard, on the security of which agreement there was some evidence to show that 3,250*l.* and interest was then due to W. Bromley from J. P. Burnard. W. Bromley did not, however, do anything to appropriate this property as the security for the money which remained in the bank, and in September 1824, W. Bromley paid the interest which he had represented as accruing thereon, and at the same time divided the sum of 7*l.* 18s. 6d. between the parties, as he had suggested should be done, and they signed receipts, dated 20th September, 1824, to W. Bromley, drawn out in his handwriting. After this W. Bromley continued to pay the interest by cheques upon the partnership account. On the 31st July, 1824, Jane was married to Emanuel Newcomb, and, by a letter to W. Bromley, dated July 30, and signed by the three executrixes in their married names, they requested him to invest their money on mortgage on freehold security. By an indenture, dated the 19th March, 1825, certain leasehold messuages and hereditaments situated near the Regent's-park, were underlet by Mortimer William Lewis to J. W. Bromley, as a trustee for W. Bromley, upon certain trusts, to secure the repayment of 3,250*l.* and interest to W. Bromley. Mrs. Coomer, in a letter to W. Bromley, dated the 24th September, 1825, requested him to receive "the half year's interest due from Mr. Lewis," and Mrs. Trott signed a receipt, dated the 22nd March, 1826, for a half-year's interest "on account of Mr. Lewis." In September 1826, Lewis became bankrupt, and thereupon Mrs. Coomer wrote a letter, dated the 27th of that month to W. Bromley, calling his attention to the bankruptcy of Lewis, and stating that it had made her uncomfortable, and begging him to let Mr. Whybrow have a copy of the mortgage-deeds for her. There was some evidence to shew that W. Bromley sent the mortgage-deed and the leases to Whybrow, who, amongst other correspondence between them, wrote to W. Bromley a letter dated the 16th December, 1826, referring to his power of sale under the mortgage-deed. By an indenture dated the 15th of October, 1827, between W. Bromley of the one part, and the three executrixes and their respective husbands of the other part, after reciting the various dealings with the money as above stated, and that part of the said leasehold premises had been sold for 2,000*l.*, which had been received by W. Bromley, who invested 1,000*l.* on mortgage of freehold and copyhold hereditaments at Malden belonging to W. Bell, by indentures dated the 31st of August and 1st of September then last, and the remaining 1,000*l.* on leaseholds belonging to John Claudius Louden by indentures dated the 17th of May, 1824, and the 12th of October, 1827, it is witnessed, and W. Bromley thereby declared himself a trustee of the said sums of 1,000*l.* and 1,000*l.* and 1,250*l.* remaining on the original security upon the trusts of Stokes's will. This deed was executed by W. Bromley and delivered to the plaintiffs. In 1828 the three securities therein mentioned were all realised, and the money was received by W. Bromley. W. Bromley had still the property at Holloway, and as appeared by a memorandum dated the 9th of August, 1825, and signed by Burnard, had advanced at this time to Burnard more than 3,250*l.* upon his aforesaid security. From the evidence it appeared that W. Bromley again represented that this property was the security for the trust-money, but the money in fact was not again secured. In 1834 the partnership between W. and J. W. Bromley was dissolved, and from that date W. Bromley first kept a private account at the bank and paid the interest on these trust moneys by cheques thereon until his bankruptcy, which occurred on the 8th of January, 1844. Shortly afterwards W. Bromley emigrated to New Zealand before obtaining his certificate, and the greater portion of the trust-money was lost. It was admitted that J. W. Bromley had no knowledge of the transactions with reference to these trust-moneys.

On the 9th of July, 1850, the three executrixes and the husbands of two of them, Mr. Trott, who declined to concur, being made a defendant, filed the bill in this suit against J. W. Bromley and W. Bromley, when he should come within the jurisdiction, stating the receipt of the money in 1824, and in effect that it was never invested; that fraudulent representations were made that it had been; and that the partnership had undertaken the duty of investing it, which they had never discharged, and praying that what was due in respect of the said sum of 3,257*l.* 18s. 6d. and interest, might be paid by the said J. W. Bromley, the plaintiffs offering to account for all dividends received under W. Bromley's bankruptcy. The cause now came on for hearing.

Malins and Prendergast appeared for the plaintiffs.

Bethell, Craig, and Hardy appeared for the defendant J. W. Bromley.

Malins, in reply.

The following cases were cited:—Blair v. Bromley, 5 Hare, 557; 2 Ph. 354; Wood v. Hardisty, 2 Coll. 542; Cocker v. Quayle, 1 Russ. & Myl. 535; Fenwick v. Greenwell, 10 Bea. 412; Fowler v. Reynal, 3 Mac. & Gord. 500; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 4 Myl. & Cr. 41; May v. Selby, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 235; Short v. M'Carthy, 3 Barn. & Adol. 626; Sims v. Brutton, 5 Ex. Ca. 802; Sadleir v. Lee, 6 Bea. 324; and Pennell v. Hurley, 2 Coll. 241.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR, in giving judgment, said that by the will of Thomas Stokes he gave a sum of 3,000*l.* to three unmarried women (whom he named his executrixes), upon trust to invest the same in the funds, and to stand possessed of it upon trust for themselves for life, and then for their children, with certain ulterior trusts. The money was invested regularly, as regarded the amount, in 2,910*l.* Navy Five per Cents. in the names of the three women, and in the additional name of William Bromley, as trustees thereof. On the 12th February, 1822, a declaration of trust was executed by the four persons in whose names the stock was placed according to the trusts of the will of Stokes. William and Joseph Warner Bromley were solicitors for all the parties, in that transaction, and they prepared the declaration of trust. It was said that there was an irregularity in associating the name of William Bromley in the trust with the three original trustees, and no doubt there was; but it was not material to the question which arose in the suit. It was an irregularity in which these three women, who were then unmarried, concurred, and therefore they could not complain of it. Some time afterwards the rate of interest was reduced, and that led to an arrangement that the money should be sold out, and invested on mortgage in the name of William Bromley alone. That was extremely irregular, and was a breach of trust. In the first place, the money ought not to have been invested on mortgage at all; and then not in the name of one trustee without the others. Two of the ladies were then married, and they, their husbands, and the third lady, concurred in executing a power of attorney to sell the stock to William Bromley alone. The stock was sold, and the money produced by that sale found its way into the hands of the bankers of William and Joseph Warner Bromley, to the credit of the partnership account; and that was the foundation of the liability sought to be enforced against Joseph W. Bromley in the present suit. It would be necessary to examine with some minuteness upon what grounds of law the case depended. The plaintiffs had suggested two. One was that the firm of William and Joseph W. Bromley undertook a duty with respect to the investment of this fund, which was not discharged, and that on that ground Joseph W. Bromley was now chargeable. The other was, that the money came into their hands as trust money, to the application of which they were bound to see—an obligation from which they could only discharge themselves by the due performance of the trust. With respect to the first of these grounds, their duty appeared to his Honour to have been to invest the money on mortgage security in the name of William Bromley alone: that appeared to have been the duty which they undertook, in order to carry into effect the arrangement made between William Bromley and the plaintiffs. The way in which that was done was the following:—On the 31st of May, 1824, William Bromley represented that the money had been laid out on mortgage of freehold property at Holloway, which it was admitted was an untrue statement, and the only excuse, if it could be called an excuse, for it, was that William Bromley had possibly the means of making good that statement, for he had then freehold property at Holloway, arising from transactions between himself and a Mr. Burnard, which would have enabled him to make such a security. On the 19th of March, 1825, a mortgage was executed from a Mr. Lewis, to secure to William Bromley a sum of money which was within a small fraction of the same amount as the money which was to be invested. The remainder of the sum appeared to have been accounted for to the parties. The defendant's case was, that this security from Lewis was sufficient for the amount, and that it was appropriated by William Bromley, as an investment for the sum in his hands, and that this was communicated to the parties, and the security was adopted by them. If that were so on the evidence, there must be an end of the liability of the firm arising from their professional engagement as solicitors, because, it having been arranged that the money should be under the sole control of William Bromley as a trustee, if it had been invested in his name, and subsequently lost from some cause other than the professional neglect of the firm, they were not liable. How, then, did that appear upon the evidence? The statement in the bill was, "that on or about the month of March, 1824, and in the course of such business as last aforesaid, William Bromley, then being such partner as aforesaid of the said J. W. Bromley, in continuance of his design of defrauding the plaintiffs in respect of the said trust funds, proposed to invest the said trust-money upon mortgage or real security, and in furtherance of such fraudulent design advised such investment to be made in his sole name, under the pretext that he might be able to receive the interest or dividends with facility for the plaintiffs." His Honour observed in this part of the case what seemed to show that there was such an agreement as to the investment in W. Bromley's sole name; and the declaration of trust of October 1827, recited that agreement, and it was communicated to the parties; and it appeared that it had been acted upon by them afterwards. The mortgage-deed was proved. As to the consideration for it there could be no doubt, because it appeared that the whole sum of 2,910*l.* was actually realised against the estate of Lewis, the mortgagor; and there could be as little doubt of the sufficiency of the security as a mortgage security, according to the duty of William and Joseph W. Bromley. Was it then communicated to the parties? His Honour found that very early the parties were in-

